sons to work, and for Relief of the Poor, Arts, Occupations, Works and Labours to be set up in Bridewell, Stock and Tools to be provided. All Vagrants to be brought to Bridewell, that shall be found remaining in this City, after a Proclamation for their Departure to other Places ; where by Law they ought to be provided for : The Diseased to be sent to Hospitals to be cured ; and being cured, to be sent to Bridewell again ; and there to be examined ; and so to be discharged or set on work, in such Work as they shall be found fittest for, and kept with thin Diet only. Such Vagrants as shall be found skilful in any Occupation, the Governors of Bridewell shall use their Endeavours, that some Citizen or other take them into their Service. Such as belong by Law to the Charge of the City, having young Children upon their Hands, and none found by Law to find them, those Children to be sent to Christ's Hospital, so far as the House shall be able to maintain them, the rest to be maintained at the Charge of the Parish : Carriers or others that bring any Children or other into the City, and leave them unplaced or not sufficiently provided for, to be punished by Imprisonment, or otherwise as sharply as Law will permit ; and be bound to convey them back again : Inn-keepers or others that wittingly receive or keep such, either to provide for them, or discharge the City of them. Warning of this to be given by Proclamation. Several Charges to Constables and other Officers concerning taking up Vagrants, with other effectual Provisions against Idleness and Poverty, were now made ; and digested into a Book printed by John Day, the better to be known by all and observed.

RECORDER Fleetwood had set up Privy Searches in LONDON for the better finding out of loose and dangerous Persons, who about these Times exceedingly pestered the City. In these privy Searches he employed trusty Officers to go about secretly into the obscurer Parts, to seek for Rogues and Thieves. By which Course he at last almost cleared the Town of them. In the Year 1581, soon after Christmas, were brought into Justice-Hall above an hundred Persons taken in one Night's privy Search.

AND as they had these Ways to find out and bring to light these idle masterless Beggars and Vagabonds ; so they had divers Sorts of Punishments for them, namely, Imprisonment at Bridewell, and Whipping there ; and such as were strong, were sent sometimes to the Milnes, and sometimes to the Lighters to work.

UPON Occasion of a great Parcel of Rogues encompassing the Queen's Coach near Islington one Evening in the Year aforesaid, when she was riding abroad to take the Air ; (which seemed to put her into some Disturbance) Notice was presently given to the Mayor and Recorder. On that Night and the next Day were taken seventy-four Rogues, and sent to Bridewell.

UPON Twelfth-Day the Lords of the Council gave Charge to the Master of the Rolls and the Recorder of LONDON, touching Rogues and masterless Men, and to have a Privy Search. That very Day the Recorder met the Governor of Bridewell, and they examined together all the abovesaid seventy-four Rogues, and gave them substantial Payment. And the strongest they bestowed in the Milne and the Lighters ; the rest were dismiss'd, with a Promise of double Payment, if they were met with again.

UPON Sunday, the Day after this Twelfth-Day, out of the Dutchy, Westminster, Southwark, Lambeth and Newington, were gathered up a Shoal of forty Rogues, Men and Women. All sent to Bridewell. The same Day Afternoon at St. Paul's were taken up twenty cloaked Rogues, that used to keep their Standings there.

THE next Day, being Monday, in the Morning, the Master of the Rolls, and other Justices for the Places about LONDON, took order with the Constables, for a privy Search against Thursday at Night. And the Mayor and Recorder did the like in LONDON and Southwark.

THE next Day six Fellows were brought out of the Savoy Hospital, entertained there as Poor, who were nothing else but Draymen to Brewers; they were soundly paid, and sent home to their Masters.

ALL Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, came in Numbers of Rogues that were rewarded according to their Deserts; the Strong put to Labour, and the Weaker dismissed into their Countries.

Friday, at the Justice-Hall were brought in above 100; the Master of Bridewell well received them, and immediately gave them Punishment.

Saturday after Dinner, the Recorder went to St. Paul's and other Places, as well within the Liberties as elsewhere, and found not one Rogue stirring.

THE Observations the Recorder made to the Lord Treasurer concerning the Transactions of this Week, were, That of all these Companies there were not, of LONDON, Westminster, Southwark, Middlesex nor Surrey, above 12; the Residue for the most Part were of Wales, Salop, Chester, Somerset, Berks, Oxford, Essex; and that few or none of them had been about LONDON above three or four Months; and that they met not again with any in all their Searches that had received Punishment. So cautious did good Labour and good whipping make them; and further, he observed, That the chief Allurers of these evil People were the Savoy, and the Brick-kilns near Islington.

April 1582, was executed Margaret Harding, a famous Cut-Purse in these Times; the Week before Christmas she pleaded a Pardon for the like Fault; which Pardon was procured by Monsieur de Alphen; and there was now a Gentleman at the Court that she reported had 100 Marks of her; the Woman had before the Benefit of sundry other Pardons, as well general as special; such Prevalency had her Bribes at Court, or so dextrous were her Cheats, that they procured many Friends to intercede for her.

CONCERNING the Over-building in the City before-mentioned, it should have been added, That about the Middle of Queen Elizabeth's Reign great Care was taken, that the City grew not too populous, to prevent the Increase of poor and needy People, and the Danger that might come to the City in Plagues by too great Multitudes: Also Care was taken for the preventing of Drinking-Houses, now used to be much in Cellars. And when old Houses were repaired, that were of good Amplitude, they would make two or three Tenements of them, to increase the Rent. And these were turned, some into Alehouses, or let to such as were of the poorer Sort. Great Houses also were sometimes turned into Alleys, consisting of divers Houses. Many Sheds also were set up to serve for small Shops, which did but harbour poor People. There were also made Holes under the Shops for the poorer Sort of Artisans; which were injurious both to the Beauty and Wholesomeness of the City. Stalls also were set out from the Houses into the Streets upon London-bridge, and in other Places of the City, to the streightening of the Streets for Passage. Moreover, to the further Inconvenience of the City, many were made Free by Redemption, the Lords making Requests for certain People of the City for that Purpose. And hereby it became much filled by such, their Wives and Children. It was looked upon also as no Ways conducing to the wealthy State of the City, for young Men to set up their Trades as soon as they were out of their Time; without being Journeymen for some Time: Nor was it liked by the graver Citizens, that the young Citizens should keep Fairs; which to do was required double Number of Servants, to the Over-peopleing of LONDON. And whereas before, there were many large Gardens belonging to the Houses in the City, especially such Houses as were of the greater Size of Building: Now in these Gardens were Houses builded, and many of them used for lewd and evil Purposes, and many privy Contracts were here made for the Sale of Children. Moorfields, which formerly the Citizens used for their Health and Pleasure to walk in, and to take the Air, began now to be inclosed, to the Hinderance of these healthful and useful Walkings.

For the remedying of all these Things, a Device (by the Recorder Fleetwood) was prepared Anno 1583, to be offered to the Lords of the Council, 1. Against setting up new Buildings in or near LONDON. 2. Against converting great Houses to Alleys, or Multitude of Habitations. And, 3. Against Inmates, in these several Articles following:

To provide for Time to come that her Majesty's Proclamation be better observed.

Some Correction or Blame where Negligence hath been in Execution, and a more severe Charge hereafter,

How lawfully to wache in some exemplary Manner, for the Houses already bylded against the Proclamation, that the same may be some Way redressed, because Lawe wanteth to pull them downe.

That the Offenders, some at least of each Sort, be holden in Imprisonment during her Majesty's Pleasure, and under Assessement of great Fines, 'till they come to Submission to abide the Order of the Lords; upon which Submission and Bonde for observing thereof, the Lords may take Order touching the reforming the Houses already bylded.

That it be ordered and the Parties bound, that where new Houses have been bylded in Place of old, they be put two or more into one, till they be reduced at the most not to exceede the Number that they were before.

That they be also bounde, that in those Houses they shall place none but such as shall not burden the Citie with their Povertrie, and that shall be of good Behaviour.

That the Mayor and Justices of LONDON, &c. be commanded not to allowe any in such House to kepe Alehouse, or other Victualling.

That no Inne of Court of Chancerie receive more than the House can conveniently lodge, and for Execution thereof, that all such as lodge out of the House be judged Inmates.

That her Majesty's Order may be executed as well to Sheds as to Dwelling-Houses, because Men use to lye in those Sheds under the Stalls; where if one dye infected, it is more dangerous than in any House, and such People do commonly sojourne at the Alehouse.

That the Mayor of LONDON be commanded to execute the Citie's Law against Tippling in Cellars, and to put the Bondes in Sute that he hath against such as turne Houses to Alleys, and to Place Poore in their Tenementes burdensome to the Citie.

That making Holes under Stalles for Artisans be taken awaye, which is to be done very well by an undirect Meane to the Beautie and Wholesomeness of the Citie, viz. That the Lord Mayor be commended for the good Reformation made upon upon London-bridge, to take away the Foretelling or setting out of Stalls into the Streete beyond the Postes of their Houses, and that he be commanded to do the like throughout LONDON.

That such as your Lordships doe not choose out to be emprisoned and made Examples, may neverthelesse not be discharged, but remaine in Terror of suffering the like, that they may also submit and be bound.

That your Lordships forbear to make Requestes for Men to be made Free by Redemption; by whome and their Issue and Servants the Citie is much filled.

That your Lordships will command the Mayor, &c. to consult of reasonable Meanes by restraining Excess of Apprentises, by abridging the easie setting up of young Men, without serving as Journeymen, and the Dissolution of good Townes by our running to Faires, in which Case they must have double Number of Servants, that the Over-peopling of LONDON may be remedied.

May it please to pardon this new Devise, to extend to the new Buildinge already made.

That her Majestie will ordaine an Officer in the Citie by her Prerogative, called a Harbinger, for the Plague.

This Harbinger to have Power to take up Lodging in any of these new bylded Houses, to receive the Infected of the Plague, there to be received, lodged and cherished 'till they be Whole.

A Remedic for new Buildinges in Gardens, wherein now are Habitations, and many Times incontinent Actes, and the Sale of Men's Children by privie Contracts, &c. as Bridewell knoweth.

The Citie of LONDON hath ever had, and now most meete it should have, their free and open Walks in the Fields about the Citie, and namely in Moorefields, and some other Fields, where Groundes have ben enclosed for Gardens and new Dwellings there bylded.

Order may be given (as in like Case hath been at Sute of Archers for Shooting) now for Wholesomness of the Citie, by Commission out of the Chancerie, that all those Inclosures made within Memorie, be laid open, as they were before the Enclosure.

IN the Year 1583, one Day in the Month of July, there were two great Feasts at LONDON, one at Grocers Hall, and another at Haberdashers Hall, (as perhaps there was in all the rest upon some publick Occasion) Sir Edward Osborne, Mayor, and divers of his Brethren the Aldermen, with the Recorder, were at Haberdashers Hall, where the said Mayor, after the second Course was come in, took the great standing Cup, the Gift of Sir William Garret, being full of Hypocrase, and Silence being commanded through all the Tables, all Men being bare-headed, my Lord openly, with a convenient loud Voice, used these Words; "Mr. Recorder of LONDON, and you my good Brethren the Aldermen, bear Witness that I do drink unto Mr. Alderman Massam, as Sheriff of LONDON and Middlesex, from Michaelmas next coming, for one whole Year; and I do beseech God to give him as quiet and peaceable a Year, with as good and gracious Favour of her Majesty, as I myself and my Brethren the Sheriffs now being, have hitherto had, and as I trust shall have: This spoken, all Men desired the same." The Sword-Bearer in Haste went to the Grocers Feast, where Mr. Alderman Massam was at Dinner, and did openly declare the Words that my Lord Mayor had used; whereunto Silence made, and all being hush, the Alderman answered very modestly in this Sort: "First, I thank God, who, through his great Goodness, hath called me from a very poor and mean Degree, unto this worshipful State. Secondly, I thank her Majesty for her gracious Goodness in allowing to us these great and ample Franchises: And Thirdly, I thank my Lord Mayor for having so honourable an Opinion of this my Company of Grocers, as to make choice of me, being a poor Member of the same." And this said, both he and all the Company pledged my Lord, and gave him Thanks.

At a Sessions of Jail Delivery, Anno 1584, there were 200 at least, and most of them Pilferers, and no Matters of Importance were then brought. Thus did Idleness prevail in those Times.

At a Sessions in July 1585, this may be worthy to be related, as it was written from Fleetwood the Recorder to the Lord Treasurer, That he and some others that were then upon the Bench, spent a Day about searching out sundry that were Receivers of Felons; and a great many were found in LONDON, Westminster, Southwark and Places about the same. And they got the Names of 45 masterless Men and Cut-Purses, whose Practice was to rob Gentlemens Chambers and Artificers Shops, in and about LONDON; and seven Houses of Entertainment for such in LONDON; six more in Westminster; three more in the Suburbs, and two in Southwark. Among the rest they found out one Wotton, a Gentleman born, and some Time a Merchant of good Credit, but falling by Time into Decay. This Man kept an Alehouse at Smart's-Key, near Billinggate, and after, for some Misdemeanor, put down, he reared up a new Trade of Life; and in the same House he procured all the Cut-Purses about the City to repair to his House. There was a School-house set up to learn young Boys to cut Purse. Two Devices were hung up, one was a Pocket, and another was a Purse: The Purse had in it certain Counters, and was hung about with Hawks Bells, and over the Top did hang a little Sacring Bell; the Purse had Silver in it, and he that could take out a Counter without any Noise, was allowed to be a publick Foyster: And he that could take out a Piece of Silver out of the Purse without Noise of any of the Bells, was adjudged a judicial Nypper, according to their Terms of Art. A Foyster was a Pick-Pocket, a Nypper was a Pick-Purse or Cut-Purse.

It gave great Encouragement to Evil-doers about these Times, and good Men complained of it, that Thieves and Malefactors condemned were so frequently and commonly spared; and this Evil came from the Court, insonmuch that the Recorder aforesaid, a wise and honest Man, observed to the Lord Treasurer, that it was grown a Trade in the Court to make Means for Reprieves; 20*l.* was nothing: And then some Courtier would send his Letter to the Recorder or the Sheriff to stay the Execution of such an one. And they, many Times abused by wrong Information, and that Information carried to the Queen, and then her Heart was moved to Compassion, and a Reprieve forthwith sent away. He reflected likewise upon the City, and the Justices themselves, as well as the Court: And that there was not any in their Commission of LONDON and Middlesex, but were desirous to save, or to stay any poor Wretch, if by Colour of any Law or Reason they could do it. And then he subjoined a Saying of William of Wickham: My Lord William of Winchester, says he, was wont to say, "When the Court is furthest from LONDON, then is there the best Justice done in all England."

THE Transactions with the Mayor and Sheriffs at Michaelmas, in the Year 1584, may appear by this Diary, sent by Fleetwood the Recorder to the Court.

“ Upon Mighelmas Even the Lord Maior, Aldermen and Commons, admitted the new Sheriffs unto their Offices, and swore them. At which Tyme they appoynted Mr. Bland, his Son, the Queen's Skinner, to be their Under-Sheriff of Middlesex, who was then sworn also.

“ Upon Myghelmas Day, the foresaid Assembly met agayne, and did chowse a new Lord Maior, who was Mr. Thomas Pulson, Alderman; at which Tyme he stood up, and gave the Commons great Thanks, disabling himself for it, as the Order is; and after hym the old Lord Maior stood up, and gave them his Thanks in lyke Maner, &c. At after Diner the new Sheriffs received the Charge of the four Prison-Houses from the old, by Indenture.

“ In craftino Michlis my Lord, the Aldermen, and many of the Liveries went to the Exchequer, with the new Sheriffs, viz. Slayne and Billingsley; where I [the Recorder] did present theym in the Name of the whole Citty, who there were admitted by Maister Baron Sotherton, (the Court being full of Officers.) There we did such Services as apperteyned, viz. in bringing a Number of great Horse-Shoes and Nayles, Chopping Knives and litel Roddes. After this is the Maior of Oxford sworn, and is yearly invited to Dinner with the elder Sheriff; and at the same Time we invited all the Officers to Dinner.

“ Thursday, the next Day after, we kept the General Sessions at Westminster-hall for Middlesex: Surely it was very great; we sat the whole Day, and the next after also at Fynsbury; upon Saturday at Bridewel, &c. upon Monday at the Sessions of Gaole Delivery; we had there two hundred at the least, most of them were Pilferers, &c.

IN the Year 1586, at one of the Sessions was but little to do, and very few Criminal Causes; and in the Sessions of May this Year, none were executed; and the Matters in the said Sessions slender, and of no great Importance; the Reason whereof was owing to the great Care of the Recorder Fleetwood, by whose Means they had in Prison in Newgate the most principal Thieves of the Realm; and they lacked none but one Mannerling, who daily gathered into his Society lewd Persons, that committed in all Parts of the Realm most dangerous Robberies. The Thieves being cag'd up, the less Harm was done abroad.

For the better taking up of all masterless and suspicious Persons this Year, 1586, it was now resolved, That strong Watches should be set in every Town and Place about LONDON, in the City and Liberties of Westminster, and in the Hundred of Osulton. Order therefore was sent from the Rolls in April, to every High Constable, requiring and straitly charging them in the Queen's Name, to certify them in Writing, what Number of able Men they should be able to make within every Township, Parish, Village and Hamlet, for strong Watches to be made and prepared within their several Watches: And these Men to be well armed, and furnished with sufficient Armour and Weapon, fit and necessary for that Purpose: And to cause those Numbers of Men presently to be put in Readiness, that both they (the High Constables) and the said Numbers might be ready upon any sudden Occasion to be employed. And to this Order was adjoined another Paper, containing Articles to be executed by the High Constables within their several Watches.

THE Queen had put forth a Proclamation touching the Affize, and carrying of Weapons, which began now to be worn extraordinary long; that is, that they should be of such a Length, and should not be carried, as they had been before, upwards, in a hectoring Manner. And for the better Observation of the Queen's Proclamation in LONDON, the Lord Mayor, in the Month of November, set Watches at every Gate, who were to measure every Man's Sword, and to take Notice of his Way of carrying it; at Ludgate, especially, (through which those of the Court usually came) the Lord Mayor set William Bernard, John Hall and George Monger, Drapers, and others. While they were upon the Watch, there passed a Gentleman through Ludgate into the City, whose Name was Palmer, who said, That he served the Lady Marchioness of Northampton; Trial being made of the Length of the Weapon, it was found reformed; whereof Bernard told the Gentleman he was glad, and warned him not to carry the Point of his Weapon upward, for that it was contrary to her Majesty's Will, and Order of the Council. And Hall bid him, and the rest of the Persons with him, to depart in Peace, and carry their Swords according to the Queen's Order. But if you will carry them up in Despight, at your Peril be it. At parting, the said Gentleman turned his Back, and lifted up his Sword as high as he could carry it. Hereupon he was apprehended, and carried before the Mayor. And when one Sheldon, a young Man in a Green Cloak overtook them, and followed them through Pater-Noster-Row, reproving the Gentleman for going so peaceably, and willing him to resist, and not to go; they seized him, and brought him also to the Mayor, who committed them till the Council's Pleasure were known.

IN the same Year (viz. 1586,) a Dearth was in LONDON, both of Corn, and Wood for Fuel. The Dearth of Corn occasioned, as was thought, partly by the Spoil which certain Dunkirkers made, having taken four or five Ships of Corn coming for LONDON from beyond the Seas; and partly by the great Recourse of People to the City at that Time: And the Corn accustomed to come up from the Countries about, was stopp'd by the Justices of Peace, and not suffered to come. For the Redress of this Dearth, which was in Danger still to encrease, and the Price of Corn likely to be much enhanced, in October the City went to the Lords of the Council, where the Recorder set forth to them the Reasons of this Evil, and the Means to dress it; which was, that in the Counties of Kent, Suffolk, Sussex, Hampshire, Norfolk, and other Counties about LONDON (which were wont to serve the City with Corn) Provision of Corn might be made for the said City, and quietly suffered by the Justices of the Shires without Interruption, to come to LONDON: And for that Purpose the Treasurer was moved for obtaining the Privy-Council's Letters presently, (for that the Bakers much complained) that Order might be taken that no Corn should be carried out of the Land: That the Merchants that brought Corn from Dantzick, and other Places from beyond the Sea, might have Liberty, the Markets here being furnished to carry and convey the rest out of the Realm, for the better Management of the Merchants trading in Corn, as their Lordships had been heretofore moved: And that the Lord Treasurer would take Order, that at Westminster and St. Katharine's, and other Places about LONDON, Billets might be sold and Faggots, at the Price taken and set down by the Lord Mayor within the City of LONDON; that is, Western and Kentish Billets, 13 s. 4 d. the Thousand, Western Faggots, 5 s. 4 d. the Hundred, Kentish Faggots, 6 s. the Hundred.

THE Custom of the Citizens and Officers thereof was to go well habited, wearing some of their Wealth upon their Backs. About the Middle of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, the City was grown very rich, and now endeavoured to get themselves eased of two Statutes made against the Excess and inordinate Use of Apparel; the one of 24 H. VIII. the other of 1 and 2 of Philip and Mary, whereby the antient Habit of the Magistrates would be restrained. The Queen perceiving the Rigour of these Acts, and how they contained overmuch Strictness, by Proclamation dated at Westminster, Feb. 16, in the 19th Year of her Reign, and by other Orders more lately published, did in some Part mitigate the same: Yet the Mitigation was not such as the same Acts could, with that Mitigation, be observed within her Majesty's City and Chamber of LONDON, without Violation of that decent Order and Conveniency that was by Citizens, Officers, and others thought meet to be used and continued; who, though they were not of Substance and Value answerable by the Rates limited by the Book of Subsidy, yet did hold Place of such worshipful Calling otherwise, as required some larger Limitation than was generally prescribed by the Statutes and Proclamation; wherefore Sir George Bond, Mayor, in the Month of April, 1588, wrote a Letter to the Lords of the Council; "That forasmuch as they were desirous that some convenient and comely Order, such as might stand with the Honour of the Queen, might be in LONDON used and continued, which could not without some further Toleration, they thought good to present to the Lords of the Council a Book, which they caused to be drawn, containing a certain Limitation and Order for Apparel of Citizens and Officers of the City in their several Degrees and Callings, and of their Wives; which they prayed them by their honourable good Means to her Majesty, by publick Proclamation, or otherwise to be allowed unto them; and that observing the same, they might not be impeached for Breach of either of the said Acts, by Reason of wearing any Apparel or Stuff, by the same Book desired to be allowed them." This Request was the more necessary, because there were a great Sort of Informers now-a-days running up and down, to see who they were that broke those Acts for Apparel; and many of the Citizens were, or were like to be informed against for their Appearance, and like to be grievously molested by such Informations, in divers of the Queen's Courts, for Offences against the said Statutes and Proclamations. Therefore the Mayor, and in his Name the City, besought the Privy-Council to be a Means to the Queen to extend her Favour so far as to give Order that they might not be molested for any Offences past, and that some Remedy, as afore is said, might be had in their Behalf for the future.

MEASURAGE of Seacoal, and other Things measurable upon the River Thames, was an antient Privilege of the City; but in the Year 1591, it received some Interruption, the Lord Admiral pretending some Right to it; but at length he was brought to allow to the City their Measurement.

AND the City, to have this the more firmly confirmed to them for the future, obtained of the Queen the Ratification thereof, by the Assistance of the Lord Treasurer, who conferred with the Queen's Attorney and Solicitor, about the drawing up of the Book that was to pass from the Queen to the City. They both had viewed the Book presented to them, and reformed it in what Points they thought good, and so returned it back to the Treasurer, who was to give his own Warrant to the Attorney and Solicitor for their Approbation of the same under their Hands, which Sir William Webb, Mayor, requested of the said Treasurer, in a Letter dated the Year above-said.

IN the Year 1592, which was a Plague Year, there were Articles presented to the Lords of the Council to be considered of, for Provision and Order, as well against the Increase of the Plague, as also for Relief of the poor People, whether Lame or Whole, and vagrant People, who daily begged in the Streets; whereof one great Advice was, to remove the Sound from the Sick, so that whensoever any House was infected, then to leave the Sick to the House, and to remove the Sound into Houses to be appointed on Purpose.

IN the Month of June 1595, on a Sunday, a Multitude of rebellious Apprentices got together in divers Parts of the City, and near the Tower; to be sheltered there from the Mayor. These were so formidable, and had so often used these Disorders before, that Sir John Spencer, Mayor, wrote to the Lord Treasurer thereof, and was of Opinion, that they would not be suppressed until some of them were punished according to Martial Law, and their Masters also fined and punished, whom he had by several Precepts commanded to keep their Servants within.

GREAT Care was continually taken in the City for the Poor. In the Mayoralty of Sir Stephen Slany, Decemb. 1, 1595, there was taken the total Number of all poor Householders inhabiting within the several Wards of the City and Liberties thereof, who wanted Relief, which was given up by the said Mayor to the Queen: The whole Number of these poor Householders in the several Wards was 4132, that is to say, in the Ward of ABOUT these Times many Ballads were dispersed in the City, abusing the Government. The Author of one of them was discovered in the Year 1596, when Corn having been dear, a Book of Orders was issued out from the Privy Council for remedying the Dearth. But to ridicule these Orders, and to disaffect People to the Government, a Ballad was printed and dispersed, and soon brought to Sir Stephen Slany, Mayor. It contained a Complaint of the great Want and Scarcity of Corn within the Realm; and it brought in the Queen speaking to her People Dialoguewise, in very fond and undecent Sort; and prescribing Orders for the remedying the Dearth, extracted, as it seems, out of the aforesaid Book. The Author was one Delonie, an idle Fellow, and the same who before had printed a Book for the Silk-Weavers; wherein was also foolish and disordered Matter.

Matter. The Mayor called the Printer before him, and the Party by whom it was put to print; who pretended a Licence: But finding it untrue, he committed him to the Compter, and took Surety of the Printer for his Appearance, and sent the Ballad to the Lord Treasurer. This was in July; and in September following two Libels more fell into the Mayor's Hands, dispersed by some seditious Persons in the City; which he sent also to the Treasurer, together with a Bag, with certain Things enclosed in it, left at one Mr. Kempton's House, Deputy of the Ward, a Citizen of good Reputation. So much were Men now set upon affronting the Government by this Way of Libelling. And before any of the former, viz. in April, there was taken up in the Warders Room before the Tower-gate, by the Under Porter there, another abusive Writing, directed to certain Persons; but mentioning therein a late Execution of Justice against some disorderly Apprentices and others; with an Invective against the Council of the Land. Whereby he meant probably the learned Council and Judges. The Libel seemed to have been devised, by the Stile and Manner of Writing, by some Apprentice of St. Katharine's, or thereabouts. This the Mayor sent also to the Lord Treasurer, and desired to know, whether he should proceed by Examination to find out the Author, with the Advice and Help of the Lieutenant, or rather suppress it till they heard more, considering the Times, and the End and Purpose of such as scattered such infamous Libels, and seditious Writings; who desired nothing more than to have them blazed and scattered abroad.

ABOUT the Year 1593, and before, the City, as well as other Parts of the Kingdom, was grievously pestered with Beggars; and they, many of them poor disbanded Soldiers, become poor and maimed by the Wars in the Low Countries and with Spain; and many more that pretended themselves to be so; who committed many Robberies and Outrages. This caused the Queen to set forth a Proclamation in the Month of February, for the Suppressing of the Multitudes of idle Vagabonds, and avoiding mischievous, dangerous Persons from her Majesty's Court.

It sets forth, "How idle Persons and Vagabonds were manifestly seen wandering in the common High Ways, to the Annoyance of the common People, both in their Goods and Lives; a Multitude of able Men, neither impotent nor lame, exacting Money continually upon Pretence of Service in the Wars, without Relief. whereas many of them never did so serve. And yet such as had served, if they were maimed or lamed by Service, were provided for in the Countries, by Order of a good Statute made the last Parliament.

"For Reformation whereof, She commanded her Justices and Officers to have a better Regard thereto, and to appoint upon certain Days of the Week, Monthly (for some Season) Watches and privy Searches in Places needful. And thereby to attach and imprison such idle Vagabonds; and to send the Lame and Maimed into their Countries according to the Statute, &c. And the Justices of Assize now in Lent Assizes, to confer with the Justices in every County, in the Places where the Assizes shall be kept, and there to charge them, and to direct them in some good Order, how every of them severally in their several Quarters, might see Watches kept, and privy Searches to be made.

"It was found in and about the City of LONDON, and in the Parts near about her Majesty's Court, that there did haunt and repair a great Multitude of wandering Persons:

"Whereof some were Men of Ireland, that had these late Years unnaturally served as Rebels against her Majesty's Forces beyond the Seas; who could not have any good Meaning towards her Majesty, as of late had been manifestly proved in some already taken, that had secretly come into the Realm, with full Purpose, by Procurement of the Devil and his Ministers, Enemies and Rebels on the other Side the Sea, to endanger her Majesty's noble Person: Which Kind of Persons, having so served against her Majesty, were directly to be taken wheresoever they might be found, and proceeded withal, as Traitors.

"And as for the Procurers and Authors hereof being known to be of sundry Conditions; some, rebellious Subjects, Fugitives; some, by Order of their Priesthood, yielding Dispensation and Absolution by Shrift to the intended Mischieves; and some other more able, by Reward to hire the Offenders, being Persons of high Degree * in the World. The Revenge whereof belonged to Almighty God: In whose Hand her Majesty hath of long Time reposed herself; and so intended constantly with Comfort to continue.

"But considering the Discovery of these Irish Traitors could hardly be made, where there were also many others like vagrant Persons of that Nation, that haunted about the Court, by Pretence of Suits, where they had no just Cause to make any; therefore her Majesty willed and commanded, that no Manner of Person born in the Realm of Ireland, except he were an Householder, known in some Town, where he lived in Obedience to her Majesty's Laws, or were a menial Servant with some Nobleman, Gentleman, or other honest Householder, or did reside or were in Commons in any House of Court or Chancery, or a Student in the Laws, or a Student in any of the Universities; or else be sent out of Ireland by her Majesty's Deputy, or some Governor of the Provinces there with Commendation, or about any Service or Suit recommended, should remain in this Realm, but should without Delay repair into the Realm of Ireland, to the Places of their natural Habitation, &c. upon Pain of Imprisonment and Punishment, as Vagabonds.

"There was a Number of like vagrant Persons, both English and others (beside Irish) that haunted about the Court, using a Colour of Suits to her Majesty, or to her Council, and other Attendants on her Majesty, where, in Truth, many of them had no just Cause of Suits. Others, that having Suits, and had received their Answers, did not depart, but lived idly about the Court. For Remedy of this, her Majesty forbade all Persons that were not Servitors to her Majesty, in her Court; or that were not Attendant Servitors upon the Counsellors, or upon other Lords and Ladies, or Gentlemen, attending on her Majesty, to forbear to come to the Court, or near to the Court. But if any Person had Cause to prefer any Complaint or Request to her Majesty, or her Council, being in the Court, it was lawful for any such Person to come to one of the Masters of Requests, to whom a Room was appointed near the Court, to receive daily such Requests, and to prefer them as Cause should require, without coming into the Court; but to depart within twenty-four Hours towards their Dwelling-Places.

"And for the executing of this Order, for the excluding of these Vagrants, either Irish or

* The King of Spain, and Prince of Parma, hired Persons to kill the Queen.

“ English, or of any other Nation, her Majesty “ charged the Knight-Marshal, her Porters, her “ Masters of Request, and her Knight-Harbin“ ger, and every other ordinary Officer in her “ Majesty’s Court, to take every one in these “ Cases, which might belong unto them, and to “ commit the Offenders to Prison; there with“ out Delay to be tryed, and proceeded withal, “ according as Rogues and Vagabonds ought to “ be.

Given at the Honour of Hampton Court, the 21st of February 1593, in the 36th Year of her Majesty’s Reign.

THIS was backed soon after with an Order to be published and executed by the Lord Mayor of the City of LONDON, and other Officers in all Places within three Miles of the said City, for avoiding of all Kind of Beggars, that did wander about contrary to the Laws and Statutes of the Realm: And it was signed by several of the Privy Council. The Order was as follows:

“ Whereas it hath been order’d by Act of “ Parliament, that all poor, aged and impotent “ Persons, should repair to the Places where they “ were born, or where they were most conver“ fant by the Space of three Years, and there to “ be maintained: And likewise that all Persons “ wandering about as Beggars, and being whole “ and strong in Body, and able to work, having “ no Lands or other Means to get their Living, “ should be taken as Rogues and Vagabonds;
 “ and if any impotent Person, being provided “ for, were in the Parish where he was born, or “ had been conversant by the Space aforesaid,
 “ and should without Licence wander abroad out “ of the same, he should be whipt, and return“ ed again to his Parish; and if he should est-“ sion offend, then to be punished as a Rogue.

“ And for that also in this Time of Parliament “ Order hath been taken by a Collection of cer“ tain Sums of Money, that all such as were “ found in and about the City of LONDON,
 “ having been maimed and fore hurt in her Ma-“ jesty’s Service, should have a convenient Re“ lief in Money paid to the County where they “ were born, with Passports for that Purpose, “ (which hath been accordingly performed) and “ there to be maintained with weekly Portions “ of Money for the Space of twenty Weeks: “ Before the End whereof, it was provided by “ an Act of Parliament made in this late Session, “ that such maimed Soldiers were to have a con“ tinual weekly Payment in Places of the Coun“ tries where they were born:

“ For this Purpose, all Officers, to whom the “ Execution of these Statutes do belong, within “ the Cities of LONDON and Westminster, “ and in all other Places within three Miles of “ the City, shall forthwith cause Inquisition to “ be made of all Kind of Persons wandering up “ and down, as Beggars; and being aged and “ impotent, to compel them to depart, and re“ pair to the Places where they were born, or “ were more conversant by the Space of three “ Years past, with convenient Passports, there to “ be maintained according to the Laws, and to “ forbear from their further begging in any other “ Place. And such other as wander abroad, as “ Beggars, being able to work, and having no “ lawful Means whereby to live, to be taken and “ punished as Rogues, according to the Laws in “ that Behalf provided.

“ And further, to suffer no Soldier that pre-“ tendeth to have been hurt and maimed in her “ Majesty’s Service, to whom Relief hath been “ given as aforesaid; or any other pretending “ himself to have been a Soldier, and not thought “ worthy to be Partaker of the Relief lately “ given, to continue near, or about the Cities “ of LONDON or Westminster, the Borough “ of Southwark, or in any other Place within “ three Miles of the said Cities or Borough, but “ to be compelled likewise to depart to the “ Counties where they were born, there to re“ ceive convenient Maintenance.

“ And these Ordinances, conformable to the “ Laws of the Realm, the Lord Mayor of the “ City of LONDON, and all other Officers
 “ to whom it shall belong, within the Limits “ aforesaid, are to see duly and speedily execu“ ted, and the Offenders punished, as they will “ answer to the contrary at their Peril. At the “ Court of St. James’s, the 17th of April, An.
 “ Dom. 1593.

GREAT Crowds and Routs of the baser Sort of People, whereof the City Apprentices made a great Part, would sometimes get together, and make dangerous Disturbances, and use much Violence, such Assemblies as we in these Days call Mobs. These were to be checked. Which caused the Queen in the Year 1595, to issue out a Proclamation, For staying of all unlawful Assemblies in and about the City of LONDON, and for Orders to punish the same. The Purport whereof was,

“ That the Queen was informed of sundry “ great Disorders committed in and about her “ City of LONDON, by unlawful great As-“ semblies of Multitudes of a popular Sort of “ base Condition, whereof some were Appren“ tices and Servants to Artificers; and to such “ like as are not able, or not disposed to rule “ their Servants, as they ought to do. And some “ attempting to rescue out of the Hands of pub“ lick Officers, such as have been lawfully ar“ rested; whereby her Majesty’s Peace hath “ been of late notably broken, to the Dishonour “ of her Majesty’s Government; and chiefly for “ Lack of due Correction in Time of such mani“ fest Offenders, by the Officers of her City, and “ others in Places round about it:

“ For Reformation whereof, she had Confe“ rence with her Council, of the most ready “ Means for their Punishment, and for the Stay
 “ of the like. And for that Purpose straightly “ charged all her Officers, both in the City and “ Places near it, in the Counties of Middlesex, “ Kent, Surrey, and Essex, that had Authority
 “ to preserve the Peace, and to punish Offenders, “ that they should more diligently, to the best of “ their Powers, see to the Suppression of all such “ Offenders, and especially of all such unlawful “ Assemblies.

“ And because such Assemblies and Routs
 “ were compounded of sundry Sorts of base Peo“ ple, some known Apprentices, such as were of “ base manual Occupations; some others, wan“ dring idle Persons of Condition, Rogues and “ Vagabonds: And some colouring their wan“ dring by the Name of Soldiers returning from “ the Wars, &c. Therefore she had notified “ her Pleasure to her Council to prescribe cer“ tain Orders to be published in and about the “ said City, which she would have straightly “ observed: And for that Purpose, that she “ meant to have a Provost-Marshal, with suffici“ ent

“ent Authority to apprehend all such as should “not be readily reformed and corrected by the “ordinary Officers of Justice, and them with“out Delay to execute upon the Gallows, by “Order of Martial Law: At our Manor of “Greenwich, the 4th of July, 1595, in the 37th “Year of our Reign. Here follows

The ORDERS prescribed by her Majesty's Command by the Advice of her Council; published in LONDON, and other Places near the same, for the Observation of her Majesty's Proclamation.

THAT no Person but such as were Officers for Preservation of the Peace, or such as shall assist them, or such as were of known honest Conversation, do walk up and down in the Streets or Fields after Sunset, or Nine of the Clock at Night, upon Pain to be apprehended and committed to Prison.

That no Persons, except publick Officers, assemble themselves in any Company at any Time, in any Place other than in Churches for Prayers or Sermons, or for Appearance afore Officers of Justice, or by their Commandment, or in the common Halls of Companies, upon Pain, &c.

That no Housholder, or any Person that keepeth Inns, or Lodging for any Stranger, do suffer their Servants or their Guests, being not Gentlemen, or others of good Value or Conversation, to go out of their Houses in the Evening after Nine of the Clock, upon Pain to be imprisoned; or if they cannot restrain them, to inform presently the Constable, &c.

That no Person do write, or be privy to any seditious Bills, to be dispersed or set up, upon Pain to be executed by Martial Law. And if any come to the Knowledge of any such Person that hath written, or set up, or dispersed any such seditious Bill, and will reveal the same, and the Party taken, the Revealer shall have 20 l.
 or a better Reward.

All Persons that are not known to be Servants to the Queen's Majesty's House, or not ordinarily pertaining to any Lord or Gentleman, and do wander abroad, either in the Name of Soldiers, or that seek Service, or do come as Suitors to her Majesty, or to any of her Officers for Suits of Law, shall present themselves to certain Persons of Judgment hereafter named, that were appointed by the Council to examine their Condition; according whereto they shall be directed how to leave their Wandring. Or, if they be such, to be received or retained in Service, or come as Suitors to any common, or to any publick Officer, they shall be so provided for as their Cases shall require, and not be suffered to wander abroad, to the Offence or Terror of other good quiet People, that have Cause to travel by the Highways for their lawful Business.

That all Persons that shall be arrested by any Officer lawfully authorized, shall obey the same Officer; and if any shall make Resistance, every other Person being present, and required by the Officer to assist him, shall so do to the best of his Power, upon Pain to be committed to the same Place where the Party that did disobey ought be. And if any Person shall attempt to aid the Party that should be arrested, to be rescued, such Person, and all that shall accompany him, shall be apprehended, and shall be executed by the Provost-Marshal, by Martial Law.

That all Officers of the City, and all other Places near the City, having Authority to apprehend Rogues, and to punish them, shall in that Circuit of their Jurisdiction meet together twice every Week, or oftener, and shall cause Search to be made in all the Common Streets, and in the Highways, by some Company of able Men, to apprehend such Rogues and Vagabonds, and shall take Order for the disposing of the Poor and Lane, to repair to the Places where they ought to be provided for, by the Names of their Parishes, and not to be suffered to wander abroad without Provision or Relief.

THEN follow the Names of those that were to sit at Sessions Hall, to examine the Condition of the Persons that should be taken wandring: They were of two Sorts, some for such as pretended to be Soldiers, others for such as pretended to seek Service, or follow Suits. These last were, Sir Owen Hopton, Robert Wroth, Rich.
 Warren, Will. Fleetwood, Recorder of LON-DON, Arthur Atie, Rich. Skerrington, George Asbby of Westminster, Tho. Fowler, the Town Clerk of the Peace of Middlesex.

UPON the Access of King James to the English Throne, it appeared by his Proclamation set forth in September, Ann. Dom. 1603, that Rogues and Vagabonds increased, notwithstanding all the Provision the Queen by Laws and Proclamations had made from Time to Time against them. The Import of this King's Proclamation, was for banishing the most dangerous Sort of them out of the Kingdom into foreign Countries, mentioning the Statute of 30 Eliz. “For the Repressing “of Rogues, Vagabonds, idle and dissolute “Persons, wherewith this Realm was then much “infected, &c. But that now they swarmed “again, and abounded every where more fre“quently than in Times past. Therefore that “no Impediment might be to the due and full “Execution of that Law, his Highness's Privy-“Council, according to the Power in that Be“half given by the said Law, had by their Or“der assigned Places and Parts beyond the Seas, “unto which such incorrigible and dangerous “Rogues should be banished and conveyed;
 “(which Order is hereunder set down;) his “Majesty purposing to have the same Law duly “and fully executed, required all Justices of “Peace, Mayors, Bailiffs, &c. to see the said “Law, in all the Parts and Branches of the same, “duly and exactly executed. Given at his Ma“nor at Woodstock, Sept. 17.

The ORDER.

FORASMUCH as it hath appeared unto us, as well by our own Views in our Travels in this present Progress of his Majesty, as also by good and credible Information from divers and sundry Parts of the Realm, that Rogues grow again, and increase to be incorrigible and dangerous, not only to his Majesty's loving Subjects abroad, but also to his Majesty and his Honourable Council in and about the Court; which growing partly through the Remissness of some of the Justices of Peace, and other Officers in the Country; and partly for that there hath been no Suit made for assigning some Place beyond the Seas, to which such incorrigible and dangerous Rogues might be banished, according to the Statute in that Behalf made. We therefore of his Majesty's Privy-Council, whose Names are hereunto subscribed, finding it of Necessity to reform these great Abuses, and to have the due Execution of so good and necessary a Law, do according to the Power limited to us by the same Statute, here assign and think it fit and expedient, that the Places and Parts beyond the Seas, to which any such incorrigible and dangerous Rogues shall be banished and conveyed, according to the said Statute, shall be these Countries and Places following, viz. the Newfoundland, the East and West-Indies, France, Germany,

Germany, Spain, and the Low-Countries, or any of them, signed,

Now as to the more modern State and Condition of LONDON, as to its Wealth and Incomes, it must be confessed, that by Reason of the great Fire, and divers Losses and Expences, the City was thrown somewhat behind Hand; but it has now greatly retrieved itself, and is said to be in a very flourishing Condition.

THE annual Receipts and Disbursements of the said City may appear in some Sort, from the following Account of the then Chamberlain, Sir Leonard Robinson, Knt. printed in the Year 1694.

SOME good Citizens, not many Years ago, shewed their zealous Affection for promoting the better State of the Chamber, both in their Common-Council, and other their private Consultations and Devices. And they have taken Notice, how some Expences of the City might be retrenched, and what great Advantage might be made by farming out Places and Offices, which now are wont to be sold for Life. For they have noted in some publick Prints, how many of the Liveries, Fees and Offices are now become useless, by Alterations in the City Affairs, and some of them moreover pernicious, vexatious and burthensome, having little other Pretence for their Continuance, but that the Officers purchased their Places with great Sums of Money. To Instance, (among many others) in the three Clerks of the Markets, who, (reckoned but 20 Years past) have been paid 468 l. per Ann. by 9 l. per Week out of the Chamber; whose Offices for so long a Time were useless, the Markets being farmed, and the Farmers obliged to do the Duty of these Officers. Hence may appear the City's great Damage by these Sales; for it hath been paid for 20 Years last past, so many times 468 l. amounting in the Whole to 9360 l. And the City may have this Payment continued on it for ever, the Officers pretending to Freehold by Virtue of their Purchase, and to have a good Right to sell their Offices, Toties quoties.

AND concerning the buying of Places they further observed, That the Mayor hath 2000 l. per Ann. incident to his Mayoralty, besides his Share of the Sale of Offices, which was about four Fifths; and the Sheriffs had about 1500 l. per Ann. and about one Fifth Share in the Sale of Offices. And that there was a Possibility that a Mayor might get 20,000 l. in the Year of his Mayoralty. They observed moreover, that tho' some Places had been sold for above 2500 l. yet in the Memory of many Citizens living, no Place or Office in the City was worth above 100 l. So that the Purchase of their Offices were many of them 20 Times more than formerly. They set forth likewise the Evil and Inconvenience of this Practice; as, that the Sellers regarded not so much the Ability or Honesty of the Person of the respective Office, but he that could give most was made the Officer. That many of these Places were concerned in the Administration and Execution of Justice; and the Selling of Places having in all Times, by the best Governments, been accounted a Corruption, and of dangerous Consequence to the well-being of a good Commonwealth, it was most reasonable, that in Courts where Justice is to be administered, there the greatest Care should be taken, that no Corruption be. That the Offices of Clerk and Beadle belonging to the Court of Requests, or Court of Conscience, settled by Act of Parliament in 4 Jac. 1. for the Relief of poor Debtors, &c. were sold for 1000 l. each, at least, to the great Oppression of the Poor, and Obstruction of the Execution of Justice there.

It was likewise observed, That the fifteen Coal-Meeters, who paid about 1700 l. each for their Places, and 80 l. per Annum Rent; and the ten Corn-Meeters, who pay about 1400 l. for their Places, and no Rent; if these Officers were admitted to their Places without Money, the first would pay (instead of 80 l.) 350 l. per Ann. each, and the latter about 250 l. per Ann. each, which would bring 7000 l. per Ann. into the Chamber: And the like might be observed in many other Offices and Places.

ALL which Things considered, it was thought a Device very advantageous to the Wealth of the City, that for the future, as Places fell, they might be farmed out for the Benefit of the City: as may appear by this Proposal made by one of the Citizens.

A PROPOSAL humbly offered to the Consideration of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council.

THE Places sold in LONDON, having cost the present Possessors above One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Pounds, as appears by a late List thereof, and supposing they have been allowed 12 and a half per Cent. for their Purchase-Money, which is less than was allowed by Parliament to the Purchasers of Annuities for Life, they do amount to near Twenty Thousand Pound per Annum.

Now if for the future, as these Places fall by the Death of the Possessors, they were Farmed out, and the Money paid into the Chamber for the Use of the Mayor and Commonalty, there would in a very short Time be a plentiful Supply for the Support of the City's Government on all Occasions; as the Place of the late Bailiff of Southwark was, whom Sir Thomas Lane would not suffer to transfer his Place, though he offered Sir Thomas 300 l. The Bailiff dying about a Year after, the City allowed Sir Thomas 300 l. and have since leased the Place at 300 l. per Annum, and may have more when the Lease expires; and if the late Clerk of the Chambers Place, now vacant, were so lett, it would yield another 300 l. per Annum, and what the present Lord Mayor falls short of 4000 l. by Perquisites in his Mayoralty, may be made up out of this Rent.

This Way of Admission would be much easier to the Officers, and will prevent those Corruptions and Exactions, so much of late complained of. But in case the Farming out some of these Places shall be thought unlawful or imprudent, viz. such as are more immediately concerned in the Administration and Execution of Justice, Artificers, Workmen, and such as furnish the City with Commodities and Materials; the other Places will be sufficient to raise Twelve or Fifteen Thousand Pounds per Annum, and Justice in the City will be better administer'd, when all concerned therein are admitted freely.

The City will also save by good Husbandry, more than 30 per Cent. in Things wherein its Artificers, Workmen, and Furnishers of Commodities, &c. are concerned. By these Methods, this Honourable City may soon recover its antient Wealth, Honour and Grandeur.

The principal Objection against this Proposal is, how to support the Government for the present, till it can be reduced to Practice. To answer which, according to the best Account can at present be got; the Profits incident to the Mayoralty of LONDON are now above 2000 l. per Annum, besides the Share in the Places sold; which Sum, with good Husbandry, in retrenching unnecessary Expences, may easily be made up 4000 l. per Annum.

To this may be subjoined an Act of Common-Council made Anno 1703, Sir John Parsons, Kt. Mayor, for a Method to get the City out of Debt, and to prevent its further declining State: Which was, That one third Part of Places sold should be paid into the Chamber, in the Chamberlain's Court.

Commune Concil' tent' in Camera Guibald' Civitat' LONDON' die Jovis vicesimo quarto die Februarij Anno Regni Dominae nostrae Annae nunc Reginae Angliae, &c. secundo, coram Johanne Parsons, Mil', Majore dict' Civitat', Roberto Clayton, Mil', Thoma Stamp, Mil', Galfrid' Jefferies, Mil', & Roberto Beachcroft, Mil', ac ejusdem Civitat' Aldermannis, & Gilberto Heathcote, Mil', Aldermano, ac uno Vicecomit' Civitat' praed' necnon majore parte Communiariorum in eodem Communi Concil' tunc & ibidem assemblat'.

An ACT to prevent the further declining STATE of the City of LONDON.

WHEREAS the yearly necessary Charge of the Government of the City of LONDON and yearly Payment of Eight Thousand Pounds out of the Revenue of the said City to the Orphans and other Creditors of the same City, do amount unto much more than the present Income of the said City, by Reason whereof the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of LONDON are become greatly indebted: Now, in order to make some Provision for Payment of the present Debt of the said City, and to prevent the further declining State thereof: Be it Enacted and Ordained by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, and Commons in Common-Council assembled, and by the Authority of the same, That when, and as often as the respective Interests of all, any, or either of the several Officers or Persons belonging to the said City, or Bridge-House, who at present stand admitted, or who hereafter shall be, into any Office or Offices, Employment or Employments, of or belonging to the said City or Bridge-House, or either of them, shall expire or determine, by Death, Alienation, Surrender, or Removal for just Cause, one full third Part of all the Benefit or Profit which shall hereafter arise to the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs of the said City for the Time being, or any or either of them, by the Sale, Alienation, Surrender, or other Disposition of all or any of the said Offices or Employments, shall for the future redound, be and accrue unto, and to the sole Benefit of the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the said City, for the Increase of the publick Revenue of the same. And in case the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs of the said City for the Time being, or any or either of them, shall give away, permit or allow to be given away by any other Person or Persons whatsoever, any or either of the said Office or Offices, Employment or Employments, to any Person or Persons whatsoever, the said Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, or any or either of them who shall so give, permit or allow to be given away as aforesaid, any or either of the said Offices or Employments, shall pay and make good to the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of LONDON, for the Increase of the publick Revenue of the said City, one full third Part of what such Office or Offices, Employment or Employments, would or might have produced to the Lord Mayor and Sheriff or Sheriffs of the said City for the Time being, or any or either of them, by the Sale, Alienation, Surrender or Removal for just Cause or Disposition of the said Offices or Employments, or any, or either of them; and that hereafter there shall be no new Admission or Admissions of any Person or Persons, to any or either of the said Offices or Employments by the Lord Mayor, or by the Court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen, for the Time being, or either of them, unless and until one full third Part of the Benefit and Profit which shall be made as aforesaid by the Sale, Alienation, Surrender or other Disposal of any of the said Office or Offices, Employment or Employments, be paid to the Chamberlain of the City of LONDON, for the Time being, to and for the sole Use and Benefit of the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of LONDON, for the Increase of the publick Revenue of the same City, and such Payment testified by a Receipt under the Hand of the Chamberlain of the said City for the Time being; and all Admission or Admissions of any Person or Persons who shall hereafter be admitted to any of the said Offices or Employments before such Payment made to the Chamberlain of LONDON for the Time being, to use the aforesaid, and testified as aforesaid, shall be, and is hereby Enacted and Declared null, void, and of none Effect, to all Intents and Purposes whatsoever.

ASHURST.

To know how the City stands in Regard of the Health or Sicknes of the Inhabitants, the Weekly Bills of Mortality were appointed long ago, carefully and wisely; that so if any infectious Disease were found to reign, Means might be used for the stopping it, and preventing the Deaths of innumerable Citizens. Hereby also are many other Advantages gained, as to know the Populoufness of the City, nay, of the whole Kingdom, as some ingenious Men that have made Observations on these Bills, have discovered.

The Beginning of the Weekly
Bill.

THE keeping of them began (saith a Learned Author) Anno 1592, being a great Year of Sicknes; and, after some Disuse, was established by Order Anno 1603, the next Year of Sicknes; the first of the continued Weekly Bills of Mortality, commencing October the 29th the said Year, being the first Year of the Reign of King James the First. Diseases began first to be distinctly taken Notice of, Anno 1629.

THESE Bills are made and composed after this Manner: When any one dieth in a Parish, either the Tolling or Ringing of the Bell, or the Bespeaking of a Grave, intimateth it to the Searchers, who also keep a Correspondence with the Sexton; and thereupon the antient Matrons sworn to that Office, repair to the Place where the dead Corpse lieth: and upon their own View and other Examination, make a Judgment by what Disease or Casualty the Person died: Which Judgment they report to the Parish-Clerk, as he doth every Tuesday Night, the Account of every Christning or Burial that Week, to the Clerk of the Hall. Whence on Wednesday the general Account is made up and printed, and on Thursday published, and brought to the respective Families in every Parish, that pay four Shillings a Year for them, which is the Parish-Clerk's Benefit.

In less than fourscore Years, it appears by these Bills of Mortality, there have been five great Mortalities; that is, from the Year 1592, to the Year 1665. 1. In the Year 1592, between March and December, died 25,886, whereof of the Plague 11,503. The next Year died of the Plague 10,662. 2. Anno 1603, there died from March to December 37,294, whereof of the Plague 30,561. Note, the Plague that began in 1603, lasted eight Years, viz. to the Year 1611. 3. Anno 1625, the Burials were, reckoning from Thursday December the 16th, 1624, to Thursday December the 15th, 1625, 54,265, whereof of the Plague, 35,417. 4. Anno 1636, from April to December were buried, 23,387, (or 23,359, according to another Account) whereof of the Plague 10,400. 5. Anno 1665.

FROM these Bills of Mortality, Observations were taken by an ingenious Citizen in the Year 1662, concerning the Increase of some Diseases, and the Decrease of others. Thus Agues and Fevers increase, supposed to be by Surfeits and Excesses; and so do Abortives, by Reason of the freightning of Bodies, Mixtures of Copulations; and the unwholsome Diet. The Scurvy encreaseth, and so the Consumption with the French Pox, which goeth under that Name. The Stone and Strangury decreaseth, which the Observer makes to proceed from the drinking Ale so plentifully. The Gout stands at a Stay; there dies but one of a Thousand of the Gout, tho' more die gouty; the Reason is, because those that have the Gout, are said to be long Livers; and when they die, are returned as aged. The Rickets encreased from the Year 1634, and the Liver-grown, which is next a-kin to it, thereupon decreased. The Rising of the Stomach since it was first mention'd, Anno 1636, is improved, it being supposed the Green-sickness, goes under that Name. Convulsions were fifty-two in the Year 1629, and in the Year 1636, were 700 and odd, and hath increased since.

APOPLEXIES and sudden Obstructions increase; Bloody Flux, Scouring and Flux increase; and so do Cancers, Gangreen, Fistula, Wolf, Cholicks and Winds decrease. Dropsies, by excessive Drinking, increase; and so do King's Evil and Impostume, and Lethargy, but moderately, sometimes increasing, and sometimes decreasing. Worms and Teeth increase considerably; so Purples and Spotted Fever.

THE Observer further took Notice, that many Times other pestilential Diseases, Purples, Fevers, Small-Pox, the Dysentery, called by some, the Plague in the Guts, forerun Plague-Years; as about 8000 of all Diseases and Casualties in the Year 1622 improved to 11,000 in the Year 1623, and to 12,000 in the Year 1624; the next Year 1625, (the Year of a great Plague) being 54,000 and upwards only of the Plague. There died about 2000 of the Small-Pox from the latter End of 1634, to the Beginning of 1636, when there died of the Plague 10,400.

It was further observed hence, that the City is repeopled after a great Plague in two Years, as is generally asserted. For Christenings in the City are (if the Inhabitants are not Anabaptists) the most certain Standards of the Increase and Decrease of the Inhabitants. Christenings in the Year 1624, that is, the Year preceding the great Plague, were 8299. And the next Year after the Plague, viz. 1626, they were 6,701. But within two Years after, they amounted to 8,408. Such is the Confluence of all Sorts of People to this great City.

It is observed further, concerning the Increase of the City by Computation of the Christenings, that the City increased half in half in thirty Years Space; that is to say, from 1603 to 1633. For the Number of 5,458 christened in the Year 1604, increased to the Number of 9997 christened in 1632.

To these Observations may be joined a few Collections concerning the Plague in the 25th Year of Queen Elizabeth, Anno 1582; in the latter latter End of which Year, the Plague was in LONDON and Westminster; and great Care was taken, as well preventing the Increase of it in both Cities, as against the spreading of it, by infecting such as came out of the Countries to the Term, or on other Occasions, when People usually flocked into the City, and took up Lodgings in publick Houses, which might have been infected, and so carrying it back into the Country. Therefore the Lord Treasurer, in the Month of January, sent Order to the Mayor, Sir Thomas Blank, to make diligent Inquiry into all Victualling Houses, and Houses for Reception of Strangers; and that wheresoever the Plague was, or had been within two Months before, publick Notice should be given, by fixing up in proper Places of the City, a List of those Houses, and in what Streets and Parts of the City they were situate, that they might be avoided by such as should have Need of Harbour and Habitation, when they came from other Parts.

THE Mayor did as was commanded him, and gave Notice of the same to the said Lord in a Letter dated January the 14th, to this Purport: "That he had, according to his Lordship's Direction by his Letters, reformed the Catalogue of Victualling Houses infected within the Liberties of the City, from the 13th of November last, being within the two Months appointed, and that as his Lordship willed, with the Advice of Mr. Norton; and that he had informed him, That he had Regard to two Things: The one, to give such plain Description and Notes of the Streets and Places as might serve for easy Notice to such as repaired to the City: The other, that it should be in such Shortness as might be brought into less than one Side of a Sheet of Paper, to be fixed in Places convenient." The Mayor also in a Note inclosed, signified the Places, with Respect to Westminster (for the better Security of the Court) and the Way thither, and the Entrance also into the City, and desired his Lordship to consider thereof.

AND further, "That he thought good to move his Lordship to the same Intent, that in Term-Time usually in Manner, all Houses, (not only publick Houses) in Fleet-street, and the Streets and Lanes adjoining, as also without Temple-bar, used Lodging, Victualling, or letting out of Chambers; whether it were his Pleasure, that all such Houses in those Parts as did so lodge and let out Chambers, though they were not otherwise usually Victuallers, should be likewise noted, if they had been infected within the Space of two Months.

AND then, like a careful Magistrate and good Subject, added these Words: "I do likewise humbly thank your Lordship for your honourable and loving Care of this City, in the said Matter of Infection, and the Repair of the Queen's Subjects hitherto: And, for my own Part, I will not fail in Diligence by your Directions according to my Duty.

THUS also were Orders taken at Westminster the 21st of December, the same Year by Mr. Dean of Westminster, Mr. Recorder of LONDON, Mr. Humphrey Smith, and Mr. Owen, by the Direction of the Lord Treasurer, to be observed in Westminster, and the Liberties, and also in the Dutchy in Lancaster without Temple-bar; which were these, viz.

First, Diligent Care to be had by Search of every Person, and where any such Person shall be found to die of the Plague, that then that House to be shut up by the Space of 21 Days next following: And that no Person be suffered to go forth out of the same House during the Time aforesaid, unless the same Person do carry in his or her Hand a white Stick, in Length two Foot, upon Pain of open Imprisonment in the Stocks.

Item, If any House being so visited, and the Parties therein not able to live of themselves, that then Consideration to be had by Contribution of the Parishioners for their Relief and Sustentation.

Item, Upon every such House that shall happen to be infected, as aforesaid, there shall be set up and fixed upon the Street-Door in Paper or Parchment, these Words, Lord, have Mercy upon us; and there to remain by the Space of 21 Days together. And if the same shall happen to be taken away, or defaced, within the Time limited, that then the Owner of every such House shall set up and fix, or cause to be set up and fixed, upon the said Door, the like Words, and there to remain as aforesaid.

Item, That no Householder whatsoever, shall take or receive into his or her House, any sick or infected Person, out or from any other House or Place, upon Pain of Whipping, and open Imprisonment, as aforesaid.

Item, That the Streets, Alleys, Lanes, Channels, and all other necessary Places, shall be scoured; and so from Time to Time kept clean, before every Man's several House in the Streets; and also that no Hogs shall be suffered to go or wander in the said Streets, nor any vagrant Person, upon Pain of Imprisonment.

Item, That no Person shall take or receive into his or her House or Cellar, any Inmates, upon Pain of Imprisonment.

Item, That no Upholster, Broker, or other Person whatsoever, shall buy any old Apparel or Bedding whatsoever, unless they make the Bailiff, Headborough, or Constable of the said Ward, privy and consenting thereto, upon Pain of Imprisonment.

Item, That every Headborough and Constable within his Ward, shall see these Articles to be performed. And for such Offenders as will not be reformed accordingly, to be punished openly in the Stocks, as aforesaid.

Item, That if any Officers elected and chosen to see these Articles and Orders executed, do not execute their Office and Charge herein, he shall be punished at the Discretion of some one of the said Justices.

Item, If the Infection happen to be in the House of any Baker or Victualler whatsoever, within any of the Liberties aforesaid, that then the said Baker or Victualler not to sell or utter any Bread or other Victuals within 21 Days after Knowledge had of any such Infection, upon Pain of open Imprisonment, as aforesaid.

Item, If any Ambiguities or Doubts do arise concerning the Orders aforesaid, that then the Officers to repair to Mr. Dean of Westminster for his Directions therein.

C H A P. VIII.

Of the Twelve Principal COMPANIES of the CITY of LONDON.

AS the Government of this City is chiefly maintained by the superior Magistrates before spoken of, viz. Mayor, Sheriffs, and Aldermen; so a necessary Part of the Government thereof consists in the Companies of the Freeman; which Freeman seemed antiently to be called Barons. This Word Baron was brought by the Normans to answer the Word Thane, used by the Saxons. Which, we are told, they used sometimes in a large Signification to mean a Freeman, born of Free Parentage. And so did the Normans take the Word Baron, calling the Free Citizens of their best esteemed Cities and Boroughs by the Name of Barons; and so Bracton means when he writes Per Barones LONDON. i. e. By the Barons of LONDON, that is, by the Free Citizens of that City. There are divers Charters, wherein Mention is made of such like Barons; as, the Barons of Warwick in Doomsday; and in our Time the Burgeses of the Five Ports are called the Barons thereof.

Barones auxilium eorum dant Regi. Non trahatur in exemplum.

OF these Barons or Free Citizens, consist the Companies; and the City of LONDON, consisting of various Tradesmen, that is, of such as make and sell Commodities; for the Regulation of them there must be Laws and Rules, according to which they should follow their Trades, Arts, and manual Occupations: And for this End, those of each Trade or Mystery (as it is stiled) are distinguished into Companies, or Societies, or Fraternities; which have their several Halls and Places of Meeting (generally magnificent Buildings) to confer together Monthly, or oftner, concerning their proper Businesses, as also for Feasting on set Days. They have also Masters, Wardens, Assistants, Clerks, and other Officers to consult for, and to direct and order all Things relating to the good Estate of their respective Societies, and to punish and restrain all Abuses incident to their Trades.

THESE are called also Corporations, because they are incorporated or embodied together by Charters from the Kings and Queens of England, or by Acts of Parliament, with certain Liberties and Privileges, for the better Government of their respective Members: And most of these Companies have weighty Trusts of Charity reposed in them, and are richly endowed with Lands and Livings for that Purpose.

SUCH Respect is given to the Masters and Wardens of the said Companies, that when they meet at their several Halls, either sitting upon Business or Feasting, they take the Precedency at their Tables of all the rest of the Society, though they be Batchelor-Knights, or Baronets.

OF these Companies there are as many almost as there are Trades and Mysteries. practifed and professed; but the twelve first are the Chief, and are by some stiled Honourable. None is capable of being Lord Mayor, but he must be of one of the Twelve Companies; and therefore if any of an inferior Company be chosen to that Honour, he must quit his former Company, and make himself a Member of one of the Twelve.

THE first of these, and which has the Precedency of all the Companies of LONDON, is the

THE Mercers were first enabled to be a Company, and to purchase Lands to the Value of 20 l. by the Year, in the 17th of King Richard II. Anno Domini 1393.

THEY consist of four Wardens, and about 40 Assistants, but the last Number is uncertain: They have 283 on the Livery, for which a Fine is paid of 2 l. 13 s. 4 d. Their Arms are: Gules, a Demi-Virgin, with her Hair dishevelled, proper, crowned, Or, Wainscot Purple, issuing out of Clouds proper, within a Bordure Nebulee, Or. Their Patroness is the Blessed Virgin.

THIS Company, in former Times, consisted chiefly of such as sold rich Silks brought from Italy, and who lived, for the most Part, in Cheapside, St. Laurence-Jewry, and the Old-Jewry; afterwards the Mercers were generally Merchants. And when, in the Year 1585, a great Muster was to be made at Greenwich, before Queen Elizabeth, of the Citizens, to consist of 6000 Men, the Mercers sent out 294 Soldiers, who were out seven Days and a Night, at 16 d. per Day each; which, with all other necessary Expences of Arms, Provisions, &c. cost them 392 l. 10 s.

THIS Company are the Overseers of the flourishing School of St. Paul's, and of that called Mercers Chapel School; of both which see more Book I. Chap. XIII.

OF this Company was the famous Sir Thomas Gresham, Knt. that renowned Merchant, who founded founded the Lectures at Gresham College, and who built the Royal-Exchange; of the first of these see more at large in Book I. Chap. XI. of the other in Cornhill Ward, Book II. Chap. VII.

NONE for many Years successively have been Masters of this Company but Knights, Aldermen, or Sheriffs, or such who have fined for those Places, or other Persons of Distinction. As in the Year 1702, was chosen John Morrice, Esq; Member of Parliament, and Son of Sir William Morrice, some Time Secretary of State, &c.

THEIR Hall stands in Cheapside, near the Poultry, and has likewise a Pair of handsome Gates leading into it, out of Ironmonger-lane: Of which, and their Chapel, formerly known by the Name of St. Thomas of Acre, or Acon: See more in Cheap Ward, Book III. Chap. III.

WHEN any one of this Company is chosen Mayor, to make one of the Triumphs of the Day, whereon he goes to Westminster to be sworn, a beautiful young Virgin used to be carried through the Streets in a Chariot, in all the Magnificence imaginable, with her Hair dishevelled, and hanging about her Shoulders to represent the Maidenhead, which the Company give for their Arms. And the Lady is plentifully gratified for her Pains, besides the Gift of all the rich Attire she wears. Such a Pageant made Part of the Splendor of the Day, Anno 1701, when Sir William Gore was Mayor.

WHEN the Master was chosen, they used to have a very splendid Feast; and Persons of the Court and of the best Quality were present. And after the Feast was over, the new Master was conducted in State by the Company to his own House, where they were treated again. In the Year 1577, in the Month of July, on a Monday, was the Mercers Feast, when Sir Lionel Duckett (who had been Lord Mayor in the Year 1572) was chosen Master. There was then present, among others, the Master of the Rolls, Sir Thomas Gresham, Sir William Damsel, Mr. Sackford of the Privy-Chamber, and the Recorder Fleetwood. Dinner being done, as the Order was, they brought the Master home to his House, where they had a great and royal Banquet.

FROM this Company proceeds a great Benefit to many Widows of Clergymen and others, out of a Fund settled here, having Annuities paid to them at the Rate of 30 l. per Cent. according to the respective Sums that are paid in by Husbands, to commence at their Deaths. It may be worth relating how this Fund began. Dr. Afsheton, Rector of Beckenham in Kent, first proposed it to the Mercers, Novemb. 11, 1698, at a General Court then held; who thereupon appointed a Committee to consider of the same; which Committee, after several Meetings and Discourses with Dr. Afsheton, acquainted him what Estate they had to settle for Security, being in clear Rent 2888 l. 8 s. 10 d. per Annum, (besides the Payment appointed by the Benefactors to be paid out of the same) which by a moderate Calculation would yield them, when the Leases came out, 13,500 l. per Annum clear. And the said Dr. Afsheton considering the same to be reasonable Security, the said Committee made their Report to a General Court the 23d of December, the same Year. Which Court, having read the said Report, did suspend their Resolution of the same for that Time. And another General Court was appointed to be held the 13th of January following; that so all the Members of the Company might have Time to consider of the said Proposal, and the Report of the Committee thereupon. At this last General Court they did accept the said Proposal, and did declare, that in case 100,000 l. should be subscribed and paid into the Company in such Manner as hereafter should be mentioned, the said Company undertook to pay unto the Widows of the Subscribers, according to the aforesaid Propositions, 30 l. per Cent. per Annum, free of Taxes and Charges at Lady-day and Michaelmas. That for the better Security of the Payments, as soon as the said 100,000 l. should be subscribed, they would settle and convey in due Form of Law, the Lands, Houses, and Estate before-mentioned, in Trustees, for the due Payment of the said Annuities. That all married Clergymen, and other married Persons, (except as hereafter excepted) that inhabited in the Kingdom of England, and exceeded not the Age of 60 Years at the Time of the Payment of the Money, and receiving the Company's Bond, and were then in good and perfect Health, and had subscribed any Sum, not less than 50 l. nor exceeding the Sum of 300 l. in case they died in the Kingdom of England, and left their Wives, Widows; the said Widows should receive, as before-mentioned, the Sum of 30 l. yearly, for every 100 l. so subscribed; and so proportionably for a greater or less Sum. Persons that went to Sea, and Soldiers, not to be admitted to subscribe, in regard of the Casualties and Accidents they were particularly liable to.

THESE and other Articles were then published and declared: Pursuant hereupon, the Subscription-Books were laid open March 1, 1698, and several Thousand Pounds were subscribed, but not amounting to the 100,000 l. required. At a General Court, June 16, 1699, it was resolved, that the said Settlement proposed before should be forthwith settled by able Counsel in the Law, in Trustees of undoubted Reputation and Ability, for the Assurance of the Subscribers. And as soon as the Settlement was made, Publication to be made thereof. Then they enlarged the Sums to be subscribed, viz. That all married Men of the Age of 30 Years, or under, might subscribe any Sum not exceeding 1000 l. That all married Men of the Age of 40 Years might subscribe any Sum not exceeding 500 l. And that all married Men, not exceeding the Age of 60 Years, might subscribe any Sum not exceeding 300 l. And the Widows of all such Persons subscribing, to receive the Benefit of 30 l. per Cent. per Annum, according to the former Proposal.

AND they declared further, That any Persons under the Limitation aforesaid mentioned, might subscribe for the Use and Benefit of any Person or Persons, as such Subscriber should by his Last Will and Testament direct, during the natural Life of his Wife, in case she survived him; declaring in his Subscription that it was so intended. [This was first seasonably propounded by Dr. Blackhal, the late Right Reverend Bishop of Exon, that so his Children also might, if he thought good, receive Part of that Benefit with his Widow.]

THE Deed of Settlement was enrolled in her Majesty's High Court of Chancery; and an authentick Copy of it transcribed into a Book, and well attested, may be perused on Fridays every Week, between the Hours of Nine and One in the Forenoon. Therein is shewed what Estates are settled, and the Value of them; who are the Trustees, and to whom these Estates are made over and conveyed, for the Security of the Subscribers, and the effectual Payment of the Widows.

Dr. Afsheton did, in the Year 1698, print a little Book, intituled, A full Account of the Rise, Progress, and Advantage of this Proposal: With Directions for the Widows, how to receive their Annuities without any Delay, Charge, or Deduction. Which Book was given gratis at Mercers Hall. That Reverend Divine did in the Preface to that little Book declare, that he did not for his own private Advantage project this, but but sincerely designed a publick Good: And in like Manner, that the Worshipful Company undertook to manage this Proposal, not from any Prospect of Advantage to their own private Persons, but only out of a generous Design to make the Company more capable to answer the End and Reason of their Charter: which was, To establish and manage Publick Charities, and thereby to enlarge their Capacities of doing Good. And he farther presumed to declare, that the Company of Mercers, by accepting and managing this Proposal, would do a greater and more publick Good to the whole Nation, than they could pretend to do by founding an Hospital for Widows in every County of the Kingdom, inasmuch as it is a much nobler Charity to prevent any from being poor, than to relieve him when he actually becomes so.

THERE have been near an Hundred Lord Mayors of the Mercers Company.

FOR the principal Charities and Benefactions entrusted to the Care and Management of this Company, see the first Chapter of this Book, Page 32.

THE second Company of the City of LONDON, is that of the Grocers, who were first incorporated by the Name of the Grocers, in the 20th Year of King Edward III. Anno Domini 1345. The Arms and Supporters were granted by Thomas Bennoit, Clarencieux, in the Time of King Henry VIII. viz. Anno 1531. Helm and Crest was afterwards granted, and the same Arms and Supporters confirmed by William Hervey, Clarencieux, under the Seal of his Office, and the Seal of his Arms, Anno 1562, 4 Reg. Elizabeth; and approved in a Visitation Anno 1634.

ARMS; Argent, a Chevron Sable between six Cloves in Chief, and three in Base Sable. Crest, on a Helmet and Torse, a Camel Trippant proper, bridled of the second. The Supporters two Griffins per Fess, Gules and Or.

PATRON St. Anthony.

THE Company is govern'd by a Master, four Wardens, and seventy Assistants; there are about 219 on the Livery; the Livery Fine is 20 l. and Steward 10 l.

THE Hall of this Company is situated in the Poultry, in a Lane somewhat West of St. Mildred's Church. In Respect to the Largeness and convenient Situation of it, it hath formerly been made use of by several Lord Mayors; and for many Years last past has been taken up by the Bank of England; but they having lately built themselves a new House, it is now again wholly in the Hands of the Company.

THIS Company of Grocers traded in divers Commodities, some by Wholesale, some by Retail, but chiefly in Fruits of Foreign Growth, as Figs, Almonds, Raisins, Corinths, commonly called Currants; also in Sugars and Spice: But so much in that of Pepper, that they were antiently called Pepperers: Whereof we meet with many Citizens of great Wealth and Substance in former Times. And in the later Times of Queen Elizabeth, some there were called Pepperers, as dealing only in Pepper, which was commonly laid up in Leadenhall.

IN the Year 1589, or thereabouts, a great Spanish Carack, richly laden with Plate and other Commodities, was taken from the Spaniards, and brought into England: Wherein, among other Goods, was a considerable Quantity of Pepper; which the Dealers in Pepper had bought of the Queen at a good Rate: Whereof having sold about eighty Bags, divers Parcels of Pepper were brought in upon them by the Procurement of the Grocers, to furnish themselves at cheaper Rates than they had bought of her Majesty. And a long Time of Sicknefs in the Nation had proved a great Lett to them in the Sale of it. They feared therefore the Hardnefs of the Bargain would greatly impoverish their Estates. Wherefore they petitioned the Lord Treasurer, that the Queen might command, that no Pepper might be brought in for three Years into any of her Dominions, the Time of the Pepper-Vend requiring no less; and they would be ready to satisfy her Majesty the Custom of so much Pepper as by Computation might be brought in during the Time of the Restraint, after such Rate as had been brought in, since the Time of the buying this Pepper; and thereby they should be able to perform their Payment at the Day appointed; promising not to advance the Price of Pepper above three Shillings in the Pound during the Restraint.

Stow mentions the following Passage he had met with concerning the Merchandize of Corinths, or Currants, as they are commonly called; a Parcel whereof were brought in by divers Strangers; which the Company of Grocers meant to have bought at such a reasonable Price as the Retailers might well have sold the same at 3 d. or 3 d. Half-penny the Pound. But others, unskilful, and not traded in the Mystery, hearing thereof, gave 600 l. more for the same than they had bid; and so enhanced the Price, to the enriching the Stranger, and impoverishing our own People. This was made a Matter of Complaint to the Lord Treasurer.

STARCH was first sold by the Grocers; which, as it seems, came in about the latter End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign. For about the Year 1594 or 1595, Sir John Packington procured the Queen's Letters Patents for him only to make and sell Starch. It grew now a Commodity in great Request, and was vended for the most Part by the Grocers, serving the greatest Part of the Chapmen through England. But the Grocers, by this Patent, were cut off, and so molested, that they were fain to make Complaint to the Lord Treasurer, with the Subscription of their Names, to the Number of thirty-nine, viz. William Layer, Richard Denman, Will. Brockbank, Peter Heylin, Henry Parkhurst, John Cason, &c. For the Assigns of the Patentee, minding to enrich themselves very extraordinarily by the Execution of the said Patent, took Courses to compel the Grocers to sell the Patentee's Assigns all such Starch, as the Grocers had, before, or since the granting of the Patent bought, remaining in their Shops and Warehouses; and that at such Prices as the said Assigns pleased to set down, being much less than the Commodity cost, or was worth: Or else the Assigns violently seized and took the same away unpaid for. In case they were withstood by the poor Men, the Owners thereof, they were forthwith sent for by Pursuivants before Commissioners thereunto appointed, where they were required to enter Bonds in great Sums Sums of Money, with Condition to buy all the Starch they should sell of the said Assigns, and of none other; and with Condition further, not to sell Starch to any but to such as were licensed to buy by the said Patentee's Assigns. To the first Part of which Condition, viz. to buy all the Starch they should vend of the Patentee's Assigns, most of the Company, in Regard of their Loyalty to her Majesty, considering it her good Pleasure to grant the said Patent, had purposed to yield unto: But touching the other Part, that they should sell or vend no Starch but to those that were by the Assigns licensed to buy, the most Part of the Company were persuaded they could not yield unto without their Overthrow and utter Undoing. For hereby they might not sell what they bought to their Chapmen.

ABOUT the Year 1580 and odd, the Grocers, as well as many other Companies, suffer'd severely in their Gifts and Charities formerly granted them. Which because the Donors had given them, or some Part of them, for a Maintenance of Chauntries, to pray for the Souls of them and their Ancestors, or for other superstitious Uses, were all swallowed up by the Crown by Virtue of an Act of Parliament in the Beginning of the Reign of King Edward VI. But many of these Gifts, being hitherto concealed, and retained in the Hands of the Companies, Queen Elizabeth granted a Patent of these concealed Lands and Tenements to certain Persons, with a Power to search and recover these Gifts. Now those that were found came to the Crown, or were purchased again by the Possessors. Now there were these Gifts of this Nature found in the Hands of this Company of Grocers, as transcribed from a List brought into the Treasury.

THIS Company of Grocers had the Misfortune to be more in Debt than any of the other twelve, being almost ruined by the Fire of LONDON. For being in Debt before by several great Sums that they were forced to take up, they hoped to repay them by raising considerable Sums in Fines, and renewing of Leases of Houses in LONDON, almost expired; when the Fire came and burnt all down; whereby they were further sunk into Debt.

MONIES formerly taken up by them, which was the Ground of their Debts.

ALL which Sums they took upon their Common Seal: Nor were they singular therein, but necessitated thereunto, in Compliance with all other Companies, and indeed with the whole City.

UPON the taking up this Money, they made a By-Law to levy the same on themselves, if their Stock fell short; and so they continued Payment of their Interest. And as one Creditor call'd for his Money in, they took up others and paid them off, depending upon getting in their Principal; all which failed them; till at last their sole Hope of advancing Money was by renewing of Leases, many whereof were nigh expired. But the great Fire, Anno 1666, consumed their whole Revenue in LONDON, they having paid for Interest between 1640 and 1666, 3000 l. This made them incapable of paying both Debts and Charities.

UPON this they let their Ground to Builders for Fines on long Leases; great Part of which they were compelled to pay by the Decree of the Judges at Clifford's-Inn.

UPON this they set on Foot voluntary Subscriptions. Sir John Cutler, at his own proper Cost, erected the first Building in the Garden, being their Parlour, and entertaining Room over it. For the Repair and Beautifying of the great Hall, Sir John Moor advanced 500 l. Sir John Frederic, Sir James Edwards, Sir Henry Tulse, and several other Aldermen and Members, contributed largely, for an additional Building, to render it convenient and commodious for Habitation of the

the chief Magistrate of this City, both for Ornament and Use.

IN the Year 1682, Sir Henry Tulse, Mr. Box, Mr. Winch, and Mr. Reve, Master and Wardens for that Year; and Mr. Beale and Mr. Bourn, two of the late Wardens, (the Court of Assistants joined with them,) resolved to finish the great Hall; which was done with that Speed as was almost incredible, though enlarged and made more convenient with many Accommodations; so that it far exceeded any Hall that now is, or probably ever was in LONDON: And the Charge amounted to a far greater Sum than was at first propounded, yet it manifestly appeared to have been the only Means left to keep the Company of Grocers upon a Foundation; for that the Apprentices and Freemen of Estate, or Value, who before declined, now daily increased.

BUT now to look backward to the antient State of this Company. In 3 Edw. III. Anno 1329, John Grantham was chosen and held Mayor, by the Name of Grocer (whereas before they are supposed to be called Pepperers;) and this was before they were incorporated. The first Charter of this Company was in 20 Edw. III. Anno 1345, which seems to be long before the Mercers were incorporated. The Charter was renewed several Times afterwards, particularly in 7 H. VI. by the Name of Custodes & Communitas Masterij Grocerij LONDINI, i. e. The Wardens and Commonalty of the Mystery of the Grocery of LONDON. In the Beginning of that King's Reign they purchased the Ground where Grocers Hall now stands, with the Ground belonging to it, of Walter Fitzwalter, bounding the same betwixt the Old-Jewry and Wallbrook.

THE Grocers were so considerable long before that Time, that they were the only Men intrusted with the Management of the King's Beam, peculiar to them, as principally using the same; and had the naming of the Weigh-Master, and also the naming, placing, removing, and governing of the four Porters; all to be elected out of their own Company.

AMONG other Privileges and antient Usages of this Company, it is recorded as high as Edward the Fourth's Days, that this Company had Power of Inspection of Abuses and Irregularities of all Persons in the City or Suburbs, any Way using or exercising any Kind of Groceries, and also to assay the Weights they bought or sold by; and to take Notice of all Defaults, and to return them to be fined at the Discretion of this Fellowship, and to take 4*d.* of every Person for their Labour herein; which Usage was always continued; and in the Charter renewed to the Company 15 Charles I. this Privilege is confirmed and expressed to extend three Miles from the City, as well within the Liberties as without.

THIS Company formerly never wanted an Alderman of their Members, to succeed Master Warden of the Company: And so faithfully did they acquit themselves of those Charities they were intrusted with, that it gave them the greatest Reputation of any Company in LONDON. Infomuch that many well-disposed Persons did covet to make this Company the Treasury of their Charities.

ABOUT the Year 1429, the Grocers had Licence to purchase 500 Marks Land: Since which Time, near adjoining unto the Grocers Hall, the said Company have built seven Alms-Houses for seven aged poor Alms-People. Thomas Knowles, Grocer, Mayor, gave his Tenement in St. Antholine's Church-Yard to the Grocers, towards the Relief of the poor Brethren in that Company. Also Henry Keeble, Grocer, Mayor, gave to the seven Alms-People 6*d.* each, weekly for ever; which Pension is now increased by the Masters to some of them, 2*s.* each, weekly, and to some of them less, &c. Henry Ady, Grocer, 1563, gave 1000 Marks to the Grocers, to purchase Lands. And Sir Henry Peckey, Knight and Baronet, free of that Company, gave them 500*l.* to certain Uses; he built Alms-Houses at Ludingstone in Kent, and was there buried.

FOR an Account of the chief Benefactors and Charities left to the Management of the Grocers, see the first Chapter of this Book, Pages 32 and 33.

EVERY Christmas ten Clergymens Widows receive 40*s.* each, which is paid on the 17th, 18th or 19th of December.

AT the same Time, several poor Freemen and their Widows receive Charities, according to their Conditions.

THIS Company has been dignified by having five Kings, several Princes, eight Dukes, three Earls, and 20 Lords of it.

D R A P E R S.

THE Company of Drapers were incorporated in the 17th Year of King Henry VI. Anno Domini 1439. Their Arms first granted by Garther King at Arms; Crest and Supporters by William Harvey, Clarencieux, Anno Domini 1561.

ARMS: Three Clouds radiated, Proper, each adorned with a Tripple Crown, Or. The Crest on a Helmet and Torse, a Ram lodged as the Second, attired as the Third; Supporters, two Lions as the Last, Pelletee.

THE Patroness, the Blessed Virgin.

THIS Company is governed by a Master, four Wardens, 30 Assistants; There are 178 on the Livery.

THE Livery Fine is 25*l.* but has been more: They never return the Livery Fine.

THEIR Court Days are uncertain, and only held as often as Business requires.

THE Allowance to a Liveryman or Freemen of their Company, if he should come to Decay, is discretionary, as the Master and Wardens think proper, always giving the Liveryman the Preference; they have sometimes 20*l.* and sometimes 10*l.* per Annum.

THIS is no Trading Company; some of the principal Benefactions and Charities intrusted to the Management of the Drapers, may be seen in the first Chapter of this Book, Page 33.

THEIR Hall is in Throgmorton-street.

Stow mentions a new Company set up in the Time of Queen Elizabeth, call'd the New Drapers, of whom he gives the following Account:

THE Strangers Italians, French, Dutch, and Flemmings, that transported themselves into England in the Days of King Edward, but chiefly in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, wove Cloth mixed with Woollen and Linen. And this was called the New Drapery, and the Sellers the New Drapers. For before these Times, this new Drapery was made in other Countries beyond Sea, with our Wool that was transported; and being wove, and wrought into Mocadoes, Grograms, Bays, and such like Cloths and Yarn, were sent over again into England, and spent here. For which (beside the Profit of the Merchant) the Queen had a Custom paid. About the Year 1576, it was found that the Queen was a Loser in her Customs and Benefits made by Wool, by Reason of this new Drapery; which appeared by this that followeth:

THE Sorts of this New Drapery were various: There were

Bays of the double, middle, and single Sort.
Rash or Stannet of the Florens making.
Serche (Serge) of the French Sort.
Says of the Flanders Sort.
Norwich Grograin.
Narrow Woolsteds.
Mocadoes, double, single, and tuft Sort.
Plomets.
Carells.
Fustians of Naples.
Blankets, called Spanish Rugs.
Knit Hose of Woolsted Yarn.

Now they made the Queen's Loss by this Manufacture to appear thus: A Sack of Wool weighed 364 lb. and being transported by the Merchants of the Staple, yielded to her Majesty,

For Custom 6 s. 8 d.

Subsidy 33 s. 4 d. and

Licence 20 s. that is, 3 l.

THE Sack of Wool, being converted into Cloth, would make four broad short Cloths; and every broad short Cloth, by the Statute of King Edward VI. in the 5th and 6th Years of his Reign, having their full Content and Proportion limited, being clean scoured, well milled and thicked, and thorough dry, over and beside all Manner of Waste, must weigh 64 lb. And every broad short Cloth, being transported as before said, yielded to her Majesty 26 s. 8 d. which is less Profit to her than the Sack of Wool being transported as before said yielded, by 33 s. 4 d.

THE said Sum of 3 l. for her Majesty's Duty on the Sack of Wool being divided into 360 Parts, amounts to 2 d. on every Pound Weight of the Sack, saving some odd Pounds.

AND her Duty of 6 s. 8 d. the Cloth being divided into 64 Parts, which is for so many Pound Weight as the broad Cloth weighs, amounts to one Penny Farthing on every Pound.

IN Consideration of the Loss that her Majesty had by the making of this new Sort of Cloths within the Realm, in the Custom and Duty of the Wool, that otherwise would be transported, and in the Custom and Subsidy that should be paid at the returning of the same in Cloths; it was thought reasonable, that there should be paid for all such Cloths, and other like new Sort of Cloth and Crewel, Lace and Fringe, that should be made within the Realm, of Wool, by Englishmen and Strangers - - - - - upon every Pound Weight.

IT was thought necessary also, for the better levying of the said new Duty, and for the understanding of the Goodness of the said Cloths, and what Quantity of Wools should be yearly made into such Sorts of Cloths and Wares, (to the Intent it might be considered what Loss her Majesty thereby should have in her Customs) that all the same should be sealed by special Officers, with Seals made for that Purpose; and that a Book be made thereof, and delivered yearly into the Exchequer; and the same Officers to take for the Sealing of the same, such Fees as were then paid in any City, Town and County of the Realm in the like Case.

THIS City also had some Complaint to make concerning this Matter before us; for this new Drapery made and woven in the Realm, was brought frequently to the City, there to be sold. And because these Cloths were not of the same Names, that the Cloths of Woollen or Linen of antient Time were, altho' they consisted of the same Substance, the Makers and Merchants pretended a Liberty to themselves to make their Markets thereof, and to buy and sell the same in Inns, Chambers and Warehouses, and all other Parts of the City and Liberties, at their Pleasures, to the Deceit of the Queen's Subjects, and the more easy Utterance of naughty and deceitful Wares; and for the more easy intruding upon the Liberties of the City by foreign buying and selling: Whereas by common Usage and antient Custom used in the City, and by old Laws and Ordinances made and executed in the said City, all Manner of Commodities, Cloths and Merchandizes made and wrought within the Kingdom, and brought here to be sold, ought to be brought unto such common Market-Place, as to that Purpose in the same City was appointed; and there only ought to be bought and sold; and the Owners thereof did there pay Hallage and other Duties: Which was so done, that good and lawful Wares should be bought and sold, and corrupt and unlawful Bargains and Contracts, tending to the Deceit of the People, and contrary to the Laws of the Realm, might be avoided; and also, that there might be no foreign buying and selling, in Fraud of the Liberties, Franchises, and Customs of the City, being confirmed and ratified by Acts of Parliament.

THEREFORE the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Common-Council of the City did ordain, that from henceforth no Manner of Cloth of the new Device, Commodities and Merchandizes aforesaid, made of Wool, or of Woollen and Linen together, not accustomed heretofore to be brought to Blackwell-hall, which hereafter should be brought to the City to be sold, should be brought to the common Market-Place, named The Wasted Hall, situate at the North-End of the Old-Fewry, in the Ward of Basinghall, within this City, and there from thenceforth should be bought and sold. And that no Person Free of the City, or any other dwelling within the Liberties, or having any House, or Shop, or Room within the same City, should from thenceforth, there or elsewhere, take in, harbour, or bestow, or suffer to be taken in, received, &c. any of the said Cloths of the new Device, before the same be brought to the Market-Place aforesaid thereunto appointed, and there harboured, taken in, bought and sold. The Market-Days for the said Cloth of the new Device to be every Tuesday and Wednesday, from Eight 'till Eleven in the Forenoon, and from One 'till Four in the Afternoon. And the Officers of the said Hall and Market-Place to be attendant at the said Hall, to receive the Premises from Time to Time, who might take for Hallage and other Charges of the said Cloths, such Rates as follow, that is to say:

Narrow Rash for Doubleting, containing three Yards the double Piece, for Hallage 1 d.

Broad Rash for Cloaks and other Garments, containing from 20 to 25 Yards the Piece, 2 d.

Borratose, wrought with Silk, containing under 20 Yards, ob.

And the double Piece above 25 Yards, 1 d.

Plomits, wrought with Silk, or otherwise, the single Piece, 1 d.

Carells, containing 14 Yards a Piece, qu.

Worsted Hose, the dozen Pair, 2 d.

Norwich Gartering, the Gross, ob.

Stowfe Lace, and Penny Broad Lace, the dozen Gross, 1 d.

Crêwel, or Worsted Yarn, the dozen Pound, 1*d*.
Fringe, the dozen Pound Weight, 1*d*.

AND there being paid, the Officer or his Deputy should strike a Seal of Lead upon every particular Piece of the said Merchandize, as well in Discharge of the Owner from a Re-demand thereof, as also to charge the same Officer with the Money received. This was the Sum of a Proclamation by the Lord Mayor, Octob. 28, in the 18th Year of Queen Elizabeth.

AFTER these Rates, the Hallage was worth to the City of LONDON in half a Year after this Proclamation, (that is, from October to the End of March) after 6*l.* a Month, 30*l.* And if all had been brought into the Hall according to the said Proclamation, it would have been worth, by Computation, 200*l.* per Ann. But there soon followed a Controversy between the City of Norwich and the City of LONDON; those of Norwich asserting, That they ought to pay no Hallage, but were as free as any Citizen of LONDON for such Exactions; and so the Hallage came to little or nothing.

BUT now, as to the Prejudices accruing by these new Drapers to the Queen and the Realm, these Murmurs were made; that the Queen lost her double Customs of Wool; Cloth and Kersey making decayed; for that these new Sort of Cloths for Garments, and Yarn for Hose and otherwise, were so much used within the Realm; and that there was a Decay in the poor Englishmen's Work, Strangers being in a Manner wholly employed in the Working of these Cloths. But Thomas Smith, the Queen's Customer, a Man skilful in these Matters, being required his Judgment, shewed the Lord Treasurer Burleigh, That though there were some Loss by these Manufactures to the Queen in her Customs inwards, yet it was recompenced by her Customs outwards; and also profitable for the Commonwealth; since such Numbers of those Commodities could not be wrought in the Realm by Strangers only, but that they must set on work many poor People, Natives of this Realm. And whereas it was thought, that the making these would prove the Decay of Cloths and Kersies, there were as many made then as had been in Times past, and as much worn within the Realm as had been before Time; and that it appeared by the Custom Books, that there were as many carried out of the Realm as before.

FOR the making the Queen Satisfaction for the lessening of her Customs, an Imposition was propounded to be laid upon this Drapery, as was said before. But here arose a Question, Whether the Queen could lay an Imposition of this Nature upon it? Whereupon Sir Gilbert Gerrard, the Queen's Attorney-General, gave this Answer, That he thought she might set any reasonable Imposition upon any Piece of such Drapery as should be made by any Stranger; and that for two Causes: The one was, for that all the Strangers that made such Things did work here only by her Majesty's Sufferance; and therefore they were to obey such Impositions as should be laid on them, or else not to work at all. And another Cause was this, for that her Majesty did now receive some Loss and Detriment by their great Drapery of Wool; which heretofore was used to be vended out of the Realm, and now was not; and thereby her Majesty did lose her antient Customs that were paid her for those Wools when they were transported. Another Question put to the said Attorney-General was, Whether these new Draperies were not in the Office of the Alnegers, or not? To which he answered, That he thought they were not within the Compass of any Alneger's Office by Force of any Statutes heretofore made. And the Queen's Solicitor, Sir Thomas Bromely, was consulted also, and was of the same Mind.

THE Imposition laid upon these Cloths by the Lord Treasurer, was according to the Weight of them, after the Proportion of 4*d.* for 64 Pounds Weight of Wool, and not otherwise. And if any of them were found to be made partly of Thread-Yarn, or any other Stuff than of Wool, the said Subsidy was to be demanded and paid according to the Weight of the Wool only that the same Cloth did contain.

William Fitzwilliams and George Delves, Esqs; Gentlemen-Pensioners to the Queen, about the Year 1578, obtained to be Collectors of this Subsidy, and Viewers and Alnegers of the said Manufacture, and had the Queen's Letters Patents for seven Years, paying a certain yearly Rent to the Queen.

THE first Lord Mayor of LONDON, Sir Henry Fitzakwyn, who continued so 24 Years, was Free of the Drapers Company, and there is an antient Picture of him hanging up in their great Hall.

THERE have been above 120 Lord Mayors of this Company.

FISHMONGERS.

THE Fishmongers were at first two Companies, namely, Stock-Fishmongers and Salt-Fishmongers, each bearing different Coats of Arms. The Stock-Fishmongers bore, Azure, two Lucies in Saltier, Argent, with Coronets over their Mouths, Or. The Salt-Fishmongers bore, Azure, three Cross-Keys, Saltierwise, Or. On a Chief, Gules, three Dolphins naiant, Argent :) Which Salt-Fishmongers, Ann. 1509, (which was in the Beginning of King Henry VIII.) did bear their Arms as is hereafter set down, somewhat differently to what they bore them before, viz. Azure, three Dolphins naiant, Argent. On a Chief, Gules, three Cross-Keys, Saltierwise, Or. But lastly, in the 28th Year of the same King, Anno Dom. 1536, the said Companies were united in one; and then their Arms were more fully granted, as appears above, viz.

Azure, three Dolphins naiant in Pale, between two Pair of Lucies, Saltierwise, proper, crowned, on a Chief, Gules, six Keys in three Saltiers, the Ward Ends upward, as the Crowns. Crest, on a Helmet and Torse, two Arms supporting an Imperial Crown of the Second.

SUPPORTERS, a Merman and Maid, first armed, the latter with a Mirror in her Left Hand, proper.

PATRON of the Company, St. Peter.

THE Fishmongers are governed by six Wardens, whereof the first is called the Prime Warden, 28 Assistants; there are about 220 on the Livery;

Livery ; their Livery Fine is about 14 l. but not always certain.

Salt-Wharf. A Wharf antiently so called, at Queenhith ; half whereof, and the House, belonged to Thomas Weston, Citizen and Fishmonger, Anno 1435, and given by him in his Will to the Company of Fishmongers for ever. In usum sustentationis operum Artis præfat. infra veterem Piscariam Civitat. LONDON. singulis annis expendend. Under Condition, that the Keepers of the said Art shall hold one Obit, as well for him as for Solomon Festorp and Margaret his Wife, &c. each Year in the Day of his Obit, in the Church of St. Nicholas Cold-abbey.

Antient STATUTES of the FISHMONGERS of LONDON, as they are taken from a Book in the Chamber of LONDON.

DICUNT homines de Halimote, &c. The Men of the Halimote say, that they ought to have two Lagheltotes in the Year, one on the Feast of St. Martin, the other in Lent ; and all Fishermen and those of the Halimote ought to be there ; and he that fails forfeits 20 d.

Moreover, it ought to be forbidden in that Halimote, that no Fishmonger buy a fresh Fish before Mass at the Chapel, upon the Bridge, be celebrated, or at the Church of St. Magnus.

They say also, that the said Fishermen must sell fresh Fish after Mass, and Salt-fish after Prime.

That no Fishmonger ought to go to buy Fish beyond the Bounds appointed : And these are the Bounds, the Chapel upon the Bridge, Baynard's-Castle, and Jordan's Key, unless the Fish be set to sell, as they are at Berkynes, Norfleete, Dartford, and in some other Markets.

None to buy Fish in any Boat, unless brought thence to land.

UPON a Complaint of this Company once to a former King, against one of their Trade forestalling Fish, &c. he issued out his Letters to the Mayor and Sheriffs of LONDON, to this Tenor :

REX Maiori & Vicecomitib' LONDON. Salutem. Ex gravi Querela Johan. de Brakyng, Piscenar' LONDON. pro se & aliis officium illud in ead' Civitat' exercentib' coram nobis de predict' ; accipimus quod Will. de Eere Stock-fishmonger, officium illud ibid' exercens, forstallamenta & abroceamenta, & alias transgressiones & dampna enormia in obprobrium omnium officium vendendi Stokfifs, cepas, allia, nuces wallenses, & alia hujusmodi victualia exercentium, & dedecus manifestum ; necnon contra consuetudinem inter illos, qui officium hujusmodi ibid' hætenus exercerent, & approbatam, multipliciter fecit ; & de die in diem facere, non desistit, in nostri, & Communitatis nostræ predict' ac omnium in dict' Civitat' fluentium hujusmodi victualia ibid. vendentium, dampnum non modicum, & jacturam :

THE Fishmongers Hall stands in Thames-street, and reaches South to the Water-side ; it was new built after the Fire of LONDON, with a spacious and graceful Quadrangle. They keep a Memorial of that famous Lord Mayor Sir William Walworth, some Time a Brother of their Company ; whose Effigies, in full Proportion, stands in a Niche in their great Hall, holding his bloody Dagger in his Hand, wherewith, it is reported in our History, he manfully slew the Rebel Wat Tyler. And they have that very Dagger, if Tradition may be credited, hanging up in one of the Rooms, that did that Heroick Execution ; tho' some Person, who keeps a publick House at Islington, did very lately, in the Year 1731, pretend to be possess'd of it, and did lend it to be publicly exposed in Smithfield, at the Time of Bartholomew Fair, in a Shew or Droll, called, Wat Tyler.

WHEN Sir William Leman, of this Company, was Mayor, which was in the Year 1616, among several Triumphant Shews that adorned the Day of his Entrance into his Office, there rode several Men in Armour, one whereof with the Head of Wat Tyler upon a Spear erected. There was then also a Pageant representing Walworth lying dead in his Monument, and an Angel, the Genius of LONDON, making him arise ; who forthwith sat up, and made a Speech to the Mayor passing by.

THE Representation of an armed Man riding with the Head of Wat Tyler upon his Spear in Memory of Sir William Walworth, was again made when Sir Thomas Abney, Fishmonger, enter'd upon his Mayoralty.

THE Fishmongers, in their Hall, have a handsome Coat of Arms of England, set up to the Honour of King William III. with this Inscription :

Augustissimo, Potentissimo, & Inviçtissimo, Angliæ, Scotiæ, Galliæ, & Hiberniæ Regi, GU-LIELMO Tertio, Fidei a Papismo Defensori & Conservatori, Libertatis Restauratori, Publicæ felicitatis Auctori, seculi Reparatori, SACRUM.

GOLDSMITHS.

THE Goldsmiths were incorporated in the sixteenth Year of King Richard II. Anno Dom. 1392. The Arms antient ; the Crest and Supporters were added and granted by Robert Cooke, Clarencieux, Anno Dom. 1571, 13 Reg. Elizab. approved and enter'd at a Visitation made by Sir Henry St. George, Anno 1634.

ARMS : Gules, a Leopard's Head, Or, quartered with Azure ; a cover'd Cup between two Buckles of the second. Crest, a Dainty Lady holding in her Right Hand a Balance, with her Arms

Arms extended proper ; in her Left Hand a Touchstone of the Third.

SUPPORTERS : Two Unicorns, Or.

THE Patron St. Dunstan.

THIS Company is govern'd by four Wardens, and about 90 Assistants. There are 294 on the Livery. The Livery Fine is 11 l. 5 s.

THE antient Mutiny in the City between the Goldsmiths and the Fishmongers, for Precedency, would not be appeased : The Discord remaining, a Proclamation was made by the Mayor and Aldermen, by their own Authority, without any other Warrant, that the Rebels should return to Peace ; and that none should receive them under Pain of Forfeiture of Life. And Note, That some of them were Bannifati, i. e. Banished and Expelled the City, and deprived of their Freedom, because they would not render themselves to Peace.

IN the Year 1574, one William Sutton discovered and informed the Lord Treasurer of several Frauds used by many of the Goldsmiths in those Times ; being employed to search their Shops for unduly wrought Silver and Gold Plate ; who took away a great deal such, and sealed it up : And there were several Men sworn before Sir Rowland Hayward, Mayor, who were ready to shew, by whom, and when these Deceits were done. The Abuses in Gold Wares were such, that many in buying were wronged five Shillings in the Ounce ; in some Wares eight Shillings ; in some thirteen Shillings ; and in some Wares more. The Abuses in Silver Wares were, when the Loss to the Buyer ought not to have been six Pence, it had been three Shillings in some Things ; in some five Shillings ; in some six Shillings ; and in some more. And this appeared by the Warden of the Goldsmiths Books, wherein the Faults of the deceitful Workers, Sellers, and Putters to Sale were register'd. And also many Biliments, Chains, Tablets, Buttons, and such like, which were commonly worn, or to be shewed, made this also appear. And the Finers also, who proved the same true by their Waste in Fining. And this said Plate, that for its Deficiency was taken and sealed up, was examined before Secretary Smith, who was well studied in the Quality and Nature of Metals ; and he was able to satisfy all Persons, that there was not one Piece but what was against the Laws of the Realm, the Ordinance of the House, and their own Oaths.

MANY had devised Works, wherein they had bestowed Copper, Lattin, Sother, and such like Things, whereby the Buyers might be deceived. These Deceits were practised from the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign to this Time, when it was thus complained of.

BUT the Goldsmiths, in Vindication of themselves, against this Accusation, of using Deceits in making their Plate, and wronging the Buyers, justify'd themselves, Anno 1577, by an Address to the Lord Treasurer, signed by Langley, Mayor, and other Wardens of the said Company, to this Purport :

“ That whereas one William Sutton, of the said Wardens Company, upon sundry false Suggestions, as they were credibly informed, had, of late, exhibited his Bills, as well to the Queen's Majesty, as to his Honour, and other Lords of the Privy Council, craving thereby, that it might please her Highness to authorize, by a Commission, by him devised, some one, meaning himself, to oversee and survey the Doings of their Workmen : Supposing to her Highness, that they, the Wardens, (to whom that Office by Virtue of the Queen's Majesty's Letters Patents appertained) did very remissly neglect their Duty therein : They therefore,

VOL. II.

“ lest peradventure her Majesty, and his Honour, and the rest of the Lords, not knowing how impudent and lewd a Person he was, neither what Care and Pain they daily did take to execute their said Office of Search, might to their great Grievs and intolerable Burthen, upon his untrue Suggestion, without just Cause, authorize so evil a Member, or any other, to search among them, to the great Disturbance of the whole Company, thought it their bounden Duty, first, to signify to his Lordship what he, the said Sutton, was, and in what Disorder he had lived, and yet did, among them, as by Records hereafter cited might appear : But also therewith presented to their Honours, what Order they took for searching throughout the whole Realm.

“ This William Sutton, Anno 1569, for his Disobedience to his Wardens, was sent to the Compter. His Case was thus : The said Sutton then (as he now did) found many Faults ; and when he was called before the Company, could not set forth one particular Workman that should commit the same ; and so, for slandering the Workmen, he was, by the Alderman of the Company, the Wardens, and the whole Assistants, sent to Ward. That another Time he made Report to sundry, that he knew several great Enormities in the Company, and he would have it redress'd. Whereupon, the Wardens hearing of it, sent for him again, and with as good Words as they could, desired him to tell it, and to set it forth to them presently, that they might punish the same, and be forthwith redress'd, that the Queen's Subjects, by Delay, might receive no Loss : But when he should have set down the Faults, he could not set down one. After this, he then secretly (as now he did) informed the Council, what evil Plate there was in Cheapside ; and prayed a Commission for the Search of the same, and had it. And when he had taken the same Plate, and upon the Sudden sealed it up in Bags, being after brought before the Commissioners, each Party had his own Plate again, as good Plate, and undefaced.

“ That this Sutton also procured one John Burton, Gold-Wire-Drawer, to draw him a Wire of fine Silver, and to brace it over with Gold, to make a deceitful Chain thereof ; and so the said Chain had fourteen Ounces in Silver in it, and a thin Plate of Gold on it, weighing three Ounces. Whereupon, the said Sutton was called and examined, and could not deny the same. At another Time, the said Sutton, for his evil Demeanour, was committed to Prison, in that he not only slander'd the Company, but the Wardens ; and would not, according to his Oath, set forth and declare to the said Wardens, as well the Cause as the Parties Names : Whereupon he, by his Adherents, complained himself to the whole Body of the Council, suggesting (as he yet daily doth) what great Enormities were in the said Company, and that he was committed for evil Will and Malice. Whereupon, their Honours directed their Letters to Sir Ambrose Nicholas, Knt. then Lord Mayor, and the Master of the Rolls, who deliberately heard both him and us, with all the Proofs and Circumstances he could bring in touching his Assertions. And in the End, by an Order taken likewise, ready to be shewed under their Hands, it was ordered, that he should eftsones go to Prison again, till the Council's Pleasure, upon their Certificate, was fully known.

“ And after the Lords Pleasure was known, Order by the Commissioners was taken, that he should come openly into Goldsmiths-Hall, and there acknowledge his Fault before all the “ whole

“ whole Company ; there likewise to give them “ to understand, that he was sorry for his Faults, “ and should further promise never after to of“ fend so again.

“ Now our very good Lord, whether this “ Sutton (living idly, and not using the Trade
 “ of the Goldsmiths, but rather seeketh to de“ face the same) be such a one to whom any “ Credit should be given, or a Man meet to “ serve in a Commonweal, we refer it to your “ grave Judgment and Understanding ; humbly “ beseeching your Honour, and the rest of the “ Honourable Council, to stand our good Lords,
 “ and to ayde us in our Service, no otherwise “ than we shall deserve ; and we shall be bound “ daily to pray to God for your prosperous E“ states long to endure.

THIS was wrote upon Parchment, and signed by John Langley, Mayor, and at least ten more of that Company, the Wardens and others.

AND with this Address they sent the Ordinances of the Company, fair written also in Parchment, viz.

A NOTE of sundry ORDINANCES made for the GOLDSMITHS, ratified and confirmed by the Lords of the Privy-Council, and the two Chief Justices of England.

FIRST, There is every Year four Wardens chosen, and solemnly sworne to do their bounden Duties unto the Queen's Majesty ; and justly and truly to deal in the Company, and to perform the Laws, Statutes and Ordinances of the House.

Item, They or three of them sit twice every Week, viz. Monday and Friday, to hear all Causes of Offence in the said Company, and to end the same. And if the Cause be of Weight, then they call to them ten, at the least, of the Assistants : All which Assistants to have been before sworne Wardens ; and these together to hear, end, and determine the same.

We search every Year twice or thrice, or four Times, as Occasion serveth ; and if we find any Things unlawfully made, be it of Gold or Silver, we break it, though it be worth 100 l. or two. We also imprison the Partie, and fyne him. All which, and more, is turned to the Relief of the Poor, which cometh yearly, with other Things given by our auncient Fathers heretofore, to a large Sum.

We four Times a Year call the whole Company together, and then openly in the Hall we read the Ordinances of the House unto them, and especially for good and true Workmanship ;
 and put them in Remembrance what Laws be made therefore ; how they are bound in 40 l. a-piece to work truly ; how they be sworn so to do : And all this we do to urge them to work truly and honestly.

We then earnestly desire them, yea, and charge them, by th'Othe they have taken to the Queen's Majesty, that they consider of this one special Admonition, that as they shall not work untruly, so shall they not keep close or secret any Man of the Company, or any other that shall work for them untruly ; but shall forthwith reveal it to the Wardens.

OUT of this Company of Goldsmiths once a Year a Jury is taken, consisting of 24 Persons, who go up to the Court ; and then, in the Presence of the Lords of the Council, some Pieces of every Sort of Money coined the foregoing Year, and that had been taken out of the Mint, is exactly assayed and weighed ; which Pieces were taken at Adventures out of the said Mint, and kept under several Locks by several Persons till this Time. And hereby special Care is taken that the English Coin want neither Purity nor Weight,

THE Hall of this Company escaped, in Part,
 the great Fire, being a fair Structure of smoothed Brick, with a spacious Quadrangle paved with Free-Stone, situate in Foster-lane, near St. John Zachary's. Here remain the Pictures of Sir Mar- tin Bowes and Sir Hugh Willoughbie, both of this Company, great Benefactors to it, and sometimes Lord Mayor of LONDON. The latter a Man never to be forgotten, for bringing in the New River Water into the City ; for the Rents whereof he gave then 30 l. a Year to this Company, which are now worth to them near 300 l. a Year.

THIS Company obtained Charters from divers Kings and Queens of this Realm. First, Ed- ward III. upon the Suit of the Goldsmiths of LONDON, suggesting to him how that many Persons of that Trade, by Fire, and the Smoak of Quicksilver, had lost their Sight ; and that others of them, by their working in that Trade, became so crazy and infirm, that they were disabled, but by Relief from others ; and that divers of the said City, compassionating the Condition of such, were disposed to give and grant divers Tenements and Rents in the City, to the Value of 20 l. per Ann. to the Company of the said Craft, towards the Maintenance of the said Blind, Weak and Infirm, and also of a Chapel to celebrate Mass among them every Day, for the Souls of all the Faithful departed, according to an Ordinance in that Behalf to be made ; did by his Letters Patents, for the Consideration of a Fine of ten Marks, for himself and his Heirs, grant and give Licence to the Men of the Community aforesaid, that they might purchase Tenements and Rents in the same City of the said Value, for the Statutes aforesaid, the Statute of Mortmain, or any other Statute to the contrariwise notwithstanding.

BUT for want of naming Persons capable in this Grant of King Edward III. the Company again petitioned King Richard II. importing as much ; and the King yielded to their Petition, as follows :

The said King Richard II. granted the same Company, in Consideration of 20 Marks by them paid, Licence, “ That from henceforth they “ might be a perpetual Community or Society of “ themselves ; and that they might for ever yearly “ elect out of themselves four Wardens to oversee, “ cross, rule, and daily govern the said Craft and “ Community, and every Member. And further,
 “ That they might purchase, and have to them“ selves and their Successors, Tenements and “ Rents with their Appurtenances within the “ said City and Suburbs, to the Value of 20 l.
 “ per Ann. for the Maintenance of the Blind, “ Weak, and Infirm Men of the Company, and “ to celebrate Mass. This bore Date at Win- “ chester, February 6, the 17th Year of his “ Reign (A. M. writes the 16th anisf.)

Edward IV. by his Letters Patents, bearing Date at Leicester, the 30th of May, in the 2d of his Reign, allowed all the former Letters Patents, and approved and confirmed the same ; and further granted to the said Wardens and Company of the Craft aforesaid, that they and their Heirs should be a Corporation, or Body Corporate, consisting, and called by the Name of War- dens and Company, &c. and be Persons able and capable in Law to purchase and take Lands and Tenements, Rents, and other Possessions whatsoever, for ever in Fee-Simple ; and to have a perpetual Succession and Common Seal for the Affairs of the said Mystery.

AND

AND moreover, in these Letters were added, That for the Credit of the Men of this Art, dwelling and residing in the said City; and for preventing and avoiding the Damage and Loss that did or might daily happen, as well to the King as to his Liege People, for want of a due and provident Care of regulating certain of the King's Subjects, and others, using and exercising the said Trade, without any Regard to the Credit of the said Company, &c. He granted to the Wardens and Company, that they should and might for ever have the Search, Inspection, Trial and Regulation of all Sorts of Gold and Silver, wrought or to be wrought; and exposed to Sale within the City or Suburbs, and in all Fairs and Markets, in Cities, Towns and Boroughs, and throughout the Kingdom of England; and also should and might have Power to punish and correct all Defects that should be found in the working of Gold and Silver; and that they might call to their Assistance the Mayor and Sheriffs of the said City, and the Mayors and Bailiffs and other Officers whatsoever, in any Fairs, Markets, Cities, Boroughs, Towns, and other Places, where any Search or Trial should happen; and that the Wardens of the said Mystery should and might have full Power and Authority for ever, by themselves, or any of them, duly to search or try all and all Manner of Works touching and concerning the said Craft, found or being in the Hands of the Goldsmiths, or any other whomsoever, selling, making or working any Wares or Works, pertaining to the said Mystery as well within the City and Suburbs, as elsewhere out of the said City, in all Fairs, Markets, &c. And also, according to their Discretion, to punish and correct the Makers, Sellers and Workers of the same.

ALSO Henry VII. granted this Company his Letters Patents, dated at Westminster the 3d of February, the 20th of his Reign. And King Henry VIII. his Letters, dated at Westminster, March the 16th, the first of his Reign. And King Edward VI. his, dated at Westminster the 6th of June, the first of his Reign. And Queen Mary hers, dated at Westminster the 5th of December, the first of her Reign. And Queen Elizabeth hers, dated at Westminster the 3d of February, the 3d of her Reign. And K. James I. his, dated the 30th of March, in the 2d of his Reign.

THE Goldsmiths made and set forth this good Order following, for Prevention and Redress of great Abuses, committed in several Wares, viz.

Goldsmiths-Hall, Feb. 23, 1675.

WHEREAS Complaint hath been made to the Wardens of the Company of Goldsmiths, LONDON, that divers Small Works, as Buckles for Belts, Silver Hilts, and the Pieces thereto belonging, with divers other Small Wares both of Gold and Silver, are frequently wrought and put to Sale by divers Goldsmiths and others, worse than Standard, to the Abuse of his Majesty's good Subjects, and great Discredit of that Manufacture; and that there are also divers Pieces of Silver Plate sold, not being assayed at Goldsmiths-Hall, and so not marked with the Leopard's Head Crowned, as by Law the same ought to be. And whereas the Wardens of the said Company, to prevent the said Frauds, have formerly required all Persons to forbear putting to Sale any adulterate Wares, either of Gold or Silver, but that they cause the same forthwith to be defaced: And that as well Plate-Workers or Small-Workers, should cause their respective Marks to be brought to Goldsmiths-Hall, and there write the same in a Table kept in the Assay-Office; and likewise either their Names and Places of Habitation in a Book there kept for that Purpose, whereby the Persons and their Marks might be known unto the Wardens of the said Company: Which having not hitherto been duly observed,

These are therefore to give Notice to, and to require again all those who exercise the Art or Mystery of Goldsmiths in and about the City of LONDON and Westminster, and the Suburbs of the same, that they forthwith repair to Goldsmiths-Hall, and there strike their Marks in a Table appointed for that Purpose; and likewise either their Names, with the Places of their respective Dwellings, in a Book remaining in the Assay-Office there: And that as well the Workers as Shop-keepers, and all others working and trading in Gold and Silver Wares of what Kind or Quality soever they be, forbear putting to Sale any of the said Works, not being agreeable to Standard, that is to say, Gold not less in Fineness than 22 Carrats; and Silver not less in Fineness than 11 Ounces two Penny Weight: And that no Person or Persons do from henceforth put to Sale any of the said Wares, either small or great, before the Workman's Mark be struck thereon, and the same assayed at Goldsmiths-Hall, and there approved for Standard, by striking thereon the Lion and Leopard's Head Crowned, or one of them, if the said Works will conveniently bear the same. Hereof all Persons concerned are desired to take Notice, and demean themselves accordingly, otherwise the Wardens will make it their Care to procure them to be provided against according to Law.

ONE of this Company deserves here to be remember'd and stand upon Record for his Prudence in securing the Estate he should leave behind him, from the Danger of ever being sold away or alienated from his Name and Family by any that should enjoy it: Which he did by making certain of this Company Trustees of it. This Citizen was one Philip Strelley of LONDON, who, in the Year 1603, left the Manor or Lordship of Ulkerthorpe, alias Ogarthorpe, alias Hogarthorpe, in the County of Derby, to Sir James Pemberton, and others his Trustees and Members of the Goldsmiths Company for ever, in Trust, that they shall lease the same Premises (after several Limitations therein mention'd) to the Heirs of the Body of Henry Strelley; and for Default of such Heirs, then to such Person or Persons successively one after another, as for the Time being shall be next of the Blood, Name and Kindred of the Strelleys: To hold for ninety nine Years, with a Proviso, that the same shall determine at such of the Feasts of All-Saints, and May-Day, as shall next happen after the End of one Year, next after the Decease of the Lessee, at 55 l. Rent per Annum, with such Covenants as are mention'd in a Precedent annexed to his Will. The said 55 l. to be disposed of by the Company in Manner following, viz.

THESE Goldsmiths have commonly (besides Plate) dealt in Jewels and precious Stones ; and in former Times, there being no great Store of them, nor of Gold and Silver, nor Artists in the Company, in making Vessels in Gold and Silver, or in setting of Stones artificially into Jewels, they were fain to send for them upon Occasion from France, and other Places beyond Sea ; as appears by these Letters Patents granted to Sir Edmund Shaw, Kt. and some Time Mayor, Goldsmith to King Richard III. “ To al Maiors, &c. “ That for great Considerations us specially moving, we wol and charge you, that you suffer “ our trusty and wel beloved Edmund Shaw, Kt. “ Alderman of our City of LONDON, and “ Rauf Latham, or any other his menial Servants or Apprentices, to bring out of the Obeisance of France, and out of the Parts beyond “ the Sea, to this our Realm of England, al Manner of Metal of Gold, and al Maner Mettal “ of Silver ; and also al gilt, as wel as Party gilt, “ as otherwise, be they the said Mettals in “ Weight, or in any Maner of Fashion, what it “ be ; and al Maner of Pearls and precious Stones, “ set or unset, polished or unpolished ; without “ any Custom or other Devoir for Us, or for our “ Right or Duty to be demanded of the said “ Edmund or Rauf. Dated the 25 Fevrier.

AN Act was made in the 8th and 9th Years of the Reign of his late Majesty King William, which enacted, That no Silver Vessel, Plate or Manufacture should be wrought or made less in Fineness than 11 Ounces, 10 Penny-weight of fine Silver, in every Pound Weight Troy ; nor sold or exchanged, until the same had been marked with the two first Letters of the Surname of the Worker, and with the Marks of the Company of Goldsmiths, LONDON, being a Lion's Head erased, the Figure of a Woman, commonly called Britannia ; and a Mark denoting the Year, under the Penalty of Forfeiture thereof.

ACCORDINGLY, in September, Anno 1717, the Wardens of the said Company did issue forth a Declaration, that they were resolved to prosecute with the utmost Rigour of the Law all such as should work, or expose to Sale any Vessel or Manufacture contrary to the said Act.

THERE have been about forty Lord Mayors of this Company.

FOR the Benefactions entrusted to the Goldsmiths, see Chap. I. of this Book, Pages 33, 34.

SKINNERS.

THE Company of Skinners were incorporated in the first Year of King Edward III. Anno Dom. 1327, and made a Brotherhood in the 18th Year of King Richard II. The Crest and Supporters were granted by William Harvey, who was free of the same Company, An. Dom. 1561.

THE Arms at this Time are : Ermin, on a Chief Gules, three Crowns with Caps of the First. Crest ; a Leopard proper, gorged with a Chaplet of Bays, Or. Supporters ; a Lucern and a Wolf, both proper.

IN a Visitation Book of LONDON, there is no Helmet, and the Leopard in the Crest is Passant upon a Wreath, and not seiant ; and the Ermins in the Coat are only three two and three ; and the Arms, Crest and Supporters, are said to be granted by Thomas Halley [Hawley] Clarendieux, 4 Edward VI. Which Arms were enter'd and approved in the Visitation Anno 1634 ; at which Time Mr. John Bennet was Master.

THE Name of this Corporation was, Master and Wardens, Brothers and Sisters of the Guild or Fraternity of the SKINNERS of LONDON ; to the Honour of God, and the precious Body of our Lord JESUS CHRIST.

THEY now consist of a Master, four Wardens, 68 Assistants, and 170 on the Livery. The Livery Fine is 16 l. 6 s. 8 d.

THEIR Parroness the Blessed Virgin.

THIS Company flourished in former Times, when Sables, Lucerns, and other rich Furs were worn for Tippets in England ; which were princely Ornaments. Of which Henry Lane, in a Letter to Richard Hackluit, the Collector of the English Voyages, Anno 1567, thus speaks : “ That it was great Pity but it should be renewed, especially in Courts and among Magistrates, not only for the restoring of an old “ Worshipful Art and Company, but also because “ they be for our Climate wholesome, delicate, “ grave, and comely, expressing Dignity, comforting Age, and of long Continuance, and “ better with small Cost to be preserved than “ those new Silks, Shaggs and Rags ; wherein a “ great Part of the Wealth of the Land is hastily consumed.

THE Skinners in those Times were many in Number, kept and maintained great Families, were able to live handsomely, and contribute to the Services of the Realm ; and did set at work great Numbers of Tawyers, and other poor Sort of People. In those Times, Coney-Skins and other Furs, of the Breed of this Realm were, by such as had them of their own Breed, and such as gathered them, as Pedlers, and the like, ordinarily brought and offered to be sold to the Skinners : And the Skinners bought the same at reasonable Rates : And then out of such Skins and Furs, chose out and cull'd those that were fit for Wear within the Realm, and caused them to be dress'd, and set the Poor on work : And so had, by Choice and Plenty, wherewith to serve the Nobles, Gentlemen, and other Subjects of England. The Residue of the Furs and Skins so come to their Hands, they vended to every Man as fitted his Trade, and to the Merchants such as were fit to be sent beyond Sea. But afterwards, about the latter End of Queen Elizabeth's Time, the Skinners were much disabled, it being become common for the wealthy Merchants, English and Strangers, to send abroad into the Shires and Counties of the Realm, and draw unto them the Pedlers, Petty Chapmen, and other like Gatherers of Skins, and thereby procured Skins, which they sent beyond Sea ; and so ingrossing them into their Hands, the Skinners were exceedingly hindered in their Trade.

THIS occasioned them to make a publick Complaint, how they were hereby utterly disabled to set poor Tawyers and others to work, or to maintain themselves but in miserable Poverty, not able as those before them, to contribute to Subsidies and other Services of the Realm ; and by Means whereof the Prices of all such Skins and Furs as came to their Hands, were were greatly increased; and hence Men were driven to leave off the wearing of such Furs, and betake themselves to Foreign Commodities, soaking away the Wealth of the Nation.

AND hence a Controversy arose between the Skinners and the Eastland Merchants. The Skinners about the Year 1592, petitioned the Queen, That whereas they were fallen into great Poverty by Reason of the ingrossing and inordinate transporting of Coney-Skins; and that thereby they could not have Choice of the best Sort for her Majesty's Service, and her Subjects; no Pedlers or Petty Chapmen might gather or ingross any Skins or Furs of the Breed of England, but under Licence of two Justices of the Peace of the County where, &c. And that such Licensed should not make Sale of any such Skins or Furs so gathered by them, but to some Persons known to be of the Trade of the Skinners; and that all others might be restrained to buy and transport them. The Company of Eastland Merchants required, on the other Hand, to have free Licence to buy, provide and engross, in any Place whatsoever, and of all Persons, all Manner of Coney-Skins, raw or tawed, and at their Pleasure to transport them, in any Bottom whatsoever, unto any Place, yielding the ordinary Custom.

THE Mayor and Aldermen wrote a Letter to the Lord Treasurer against the Skinners Petition; urging, That this Practice of the Skinners, that all the Skins of the Breed of England must first pass through the Hands and Property of some Freeman of that Company, before they should be transported, would be to the exceeding great Prejudice, not only of the Liberty of the City, but of all other Traders into Foreign Parts, within this whole Realm. And the Patent being ready drawn by the Advice of the learned Council, and in great Forwardness to be signed by the Queen, they pray'd the Lord Treasurer to be a Means to stay the same, 'till such Time as he should be better informed, touching the great Inconveniencies which would grow thereby; for which Purpose they had appointed certain of the Aldermen, and others, to attend upon him.

THIS Company are Patrons and Governors of an eminent Free-School at Tunbridge, in the County of Kent, founded by Sir Andrew Judd, a Skinner, some Time Mayor of LONDON; which, upon some Trouble and Doubt, was afterwards confirmed by Parliament. The brief Account whereof was as follows, taken from an authentick Paper.

The REASONS and OCCASIONS whereupon the Acte preferred for the Companye of Skynners is grounded.

SIR Andrew Judd, carrying a Minde to erecte a Schole at Tunbridge, and to endowe the same with some competent Maintenance, did to suche Purpose withe his owne proper Money, purchase divers Lands, in the Name of himself and one Henrye Fisher, whome he put in Trust to see the Worke perfected, yf himself sholde fortune to be prevented by Deathe.

Kinge Edwarde the Sixte gave Licence by his Letters Patents for the Founding of the said Schole; and that the Master, Wardens and Comminaltie of the Mysterye of Skinners of LONDON shal be the Governours of the Possession, Revenues, and Goods of the Free Grammar Schole of Sir Andrew Judd, Knight, in the Towne of Tunbridge, in the Countye of Kent.

For the Endowmente of this Schole Sir Andrew Judd afterwards did, by his last Will, to suche expresse Use, bequeathe to the Companye of Skynners, the Lands so as aforesaid purchased.

N^o 22. VOL. II.

And in that Bequest used the saide Companye, by the Name of Master and Wardens of the Fraternitie of Corpus Christi, of the Crafte or Mystery of Skynners of LONDON.

The said Henrye Fisher, to accomplish the said Will, did graunte and assigne the said Lands to the said Companye, to the said Uses; as also certain other Lands of his owne to other godlie Uses. And in this Conveyance used the said Companye, by the Name of Master, Wardens and Comminaltie of the Mysterye of Skinners of LONDON, Governours of the Possessions, Revenues and Goods of the Free Grammar Schole of Sir Andrew Judd, Knight, in the Towne of Tunbridge.

Henrye Fisher deceasing, one Andrew Fisher, his Sonn, endeavored to impeache the said Conveyances, under Pretence of a former Conveyance from his said Father: But the same being sifted and examined in Parliament, in the 14th Year of her Majestie's Reigne, was, together with the Enrollement and Exemplifications thereof, ordeyned to be voide of all Lands assured for the Maintenance of the said Schole, and in that Acte the Companye is used by the Name of Master, Wardens and Comminaltie of the Skynners of LONDON.

Sithence whiche Acte, and in Contempt thereof, the said Andrew Fisher hathe endeavored nowe verie latelie to stripp the said Schole and Companye of the said Lands, under Pretence that the said Companye was not rightlie mentioned by the stricte Name of their verie Incorporation, neither towching themselves nor the said Schole.

For the Relief wherof the said Companye exhibiting their Bill by the Consent of the said Andrew Fisher, to the Lower House of this Honourable Session of Parliament, yt pleased the Committies therof (wherof diuers weare learned in the Lawes) to take greate Paynes in perusing and considering the Premisses, and of the Original and Mayne Charter: And thereupon theye, as seemed best to their Wisedomes and Gravities, did conforme the same Statute in the Manner as nowe it is.

Wherein theye doefirste publishe and declare, that the trewe Name of the Incorporation of the Skynners to purchase or to graunte, hathe been, is and shal be, Maister and Wardens and Brothers and Sisters of the Guilde or Fraternitie of the Skynners of LONDON, to the Honor of God and the pretious Boddye of our Lorde Ihesus Christ (whiche indeede is the verie trewe, mayne and original Incorporation.)

And that the trewe Name of the Incorporation (towching the said Schole) made and created by the foresaid Letters Patents of King Edwarde the Sixte, hathe beene, is and shal be Gouvernours of the Possessions, Revenues and Goods of the Free Grammar Schole of Sir Andrew Judd, Knight, in the Town of Tunbridge, in the Countye of Kent.

And thereupon doe enacte, That all the Letters Patents, Deedes, Wrightings, Assuraunces and Conveyances and Acte of Parliament aforementioned, shal be good and effectual. Stow inferts the following, which, he says, was an authentick Catalogue of the Benefactors to this Company, with their respective Gifts for the Uses of Godlines and Charity, being made about the Year 1588; and was very probably drawn up for the Satisfaction of Queen Elizabeth, in order to stop the Purpose of such, as had gotten Commissions from her for concealed Lands, that had been given to superstitious Uses.

MERCHANT-TAYLORS.

THE first Patent of these Arms were granted by Sir Thomas Holme, Knt. Clarencieux King of Arms, to the Company of Taylors and Linen-Armourers, in the 21st Year of King Edward IV. Anno Dom. 1480; and since then incorporated by King Henry VII. by the Name of the Men of the Art and Mystry of Merchant-Taylors, of the Fraternity of St. John Baptist in LONDON, &c. by Letters Patents bearing Date the 18th Year of his Reign. And after; the same Arms and Crest were confirmed by Thomas Wriothesly, Knt. Ann. 22 Hen. VIII. under their Hands and Seals of Arms. Then being somewhat altered, with a new Crest and Supporters granted by Robert Cook, Clarencieux, confirmed under his Hand, and the Seal of his Office, dated Dec. 23, 1586, and 29 Regin. Eliz.

THE Arms are: Argent, a Tent Royal, between two Parliament Robes Gules, lined Ermin; on a Chief Azure a Lion of England. Crest; a Holy Lamb in Glory proper. Supporters; two Camels, Or.

THE

THE Merchant-Tailors are a numerous and very rich Company, composed of Merchants, Drapers, Taylors, and some other Trades, and are governed by a Master, four Wardens, and about forty Assistants; there are 485 on the Livery; the Livery Fine is 15 l.

Thomas Sutton, Citizen and Taylor of LONDON, by his Will dated May 25, 1432, gave to the Company of Taylors, Omnia illa terra solar. una cum Wharva juxta aquam Thamisie, in the Parish of St. James Garlickbith, in a certain Lane called Gressyngbam-lane, as they lie in Length from Thames-street to the Water of Thames: To have to the Master of the Fraternity and Custodes of the same, and to their Successors for ever: To relieve and maintain the poor Brothers and Sisters of the same Fraternity, to pray devoutly for his Soul in perpetuum.

He gave also to the said Company all his Lands and Tenements in the Parish of Trinity the Less, situate between a Tenement, formerly belonging to John Cosyn, on the West, and a Lane called Trinity-lane on the East, and extend to Knight-rider-street on the North. To have to the Increase of the Alms of the said Fraternity.

THE Hall of this Company is situate in Thread-needle-street, consumed in the great Fire, magnificently rebuilt.

July 16, 1607, (the Day of Election of Master and Wardens of the Merchant-Tailors Company, that used to be kept with great Solemnity and Feasting) King James I. with Prince Henry and divers Honourable Personages, dined at Merchant-Tailors Hall, and were entertained with great Variety of Musick, Vocal and Instrumental, and Speeches. The King dined in the Chamber here, called the King's Chamber. Then the Master of the Company, John Swinnerton, attended with the four Wardens, and other eminent Aldermen and Citizens, after a Speech congratulatory made to him by Sir Henry Montague, Recorder, presented him with a Purse of Gold: And Richard Langley, Clerk of the Company, deliver'd unto his Majesty a Roll, wherein were enter'd the Names of such Kings and Nobles, and other great Persons that had been Free of their Company, viz. Seven Kings, one Queen, seventeen Princes and Dukes, two Dutcheses, one Archbishop, thirty-one Earls, five Countesses, one Viscount, twenty-four Bishops, sixty-six Barons and Lords, two Ladies, seven Abbots, seven Priors, and one Sub-prior, omitting a Number of Knights, Esquires, &c. The King then said, that he was Free of another Company, yet he would so much grace the Company of Merchant-Tailors, that his eldest Son the Prince should be Free thereof; and that he would see and be a Witness, when the Garland should be put upon his Head. And then they resorted unto the Prince, who dined in the Great Hall; and the Company presented him with another Purse full of Gold; and the Clerk deliver'd his Roll. And his Highness said, That not only himself would be Free of the Company, but many other of his Lords, and commanded one of his Gentlemen and the Clerk of the Company, to go to all the Lords present, and to require them that loved him, and were not Free of other Companies, to be Free of his Company: And so were accordingly made Free twenty-two Earls and Lords, and a great many other Knights and Esquires; and of the Clergy, Dr. Montague, Dean of the Chapel, and Adam Newton, Dean of Durham, and the Prince's Tutor, and three Noblemen of the Low-Countries, Ambassadors to the King; viz. John Berke, Lord in Godschalk Coort, Counsellor of Dort; Sir John de Maldere, Knt. Lord of Heyes, &c. and Chancellor of Zealand: Sir Noel de Caron, Knt. Lord of Schoonwel, &c. Ambassador Ledger from the States. The Names of some of the English Nobles, that had their Freedoms of this Company granted them at this Time, were, the Duke of Lenox, the Earl of Nottingham, Lord Admiral; the Earl of Suffolk, Lord Chamberlain; the Earl of Salisbury, Principal Secretary to the King; and several other Knights and Gentlemen, Scotch and English.

THERE have been about 18 Lord Mayors of this Company. For the principal Benefactions and Charities entrusted to them, see the first Chapter of this Book, Pages 34, 35.

HABERDASHERS.

THE Haberdashers, or Hurrers, (as called of old Time) were incorporated a Brotherhood of St. Catharine, in the twenty-sixth Year of King Henry VI. Anno 1447. [There was also Fraternitas S. Nicolai de Haberdasher.] They were confirmed in the seventeenth Year of King Henry VII. Anno 1501, and named Merchant-Haberdashers. Their Arms were antient; Crest and Supporters granted to them by Robert Cook, Clarencieux, King at Arms, by Patent under his Hand and Seal, dated November 8, 1570, and 12 Eliz. and confirmed at the Visitation in 1634. Henry Andrews, one of the Aldermen, Master. In the Book of which Visitation, the Crest is without an Helmet.

THE Arms are: Barry Nebule of Six, Argent and Azure, on a Bend Gules, a Lion passant guardant, Or. Crest; on a Helmet and Torse, two Arms supporting a Laurel proper, and issuing out of a Cloud Argent. Supporters; two Indian Goats Argent, attired and hooped, Or.

THE Haberdashers are governed by a Master, four Wardens, and 90 on the Court of Assistants. There are about 330 on the Livery. Their Livery Fine is 25 l. They may each take two Apprentices.

THE Haberdashers have also been called Milliners, so named from Milan in Italy, whence the Commodities they dealt in chiefly came; such were Owches, Brooches, Agglets, Spurs, Caps, Glasses, &c.

AMONG other Small Wares sold by them, were Pins; which Strangers also brought in formerly to the Value of 60,000 l. a Year. But about the latter End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, Pins began to be made at Home; and in K. James the First's Time, the English excelled all Nations in making all Sorts of them.

THEIR Shops made a very gay Shew, by the various Foreign Commodities they were furnished with. And by the purchasing them, the People of LONDON, and of other Parts of England, began to spend extravagantly; whereof great Complaints were made among the graver Sort. There were but a few of these Milliners Shops in the Reign of King Edward VI. not above a Dozen Dozen in all LONDON. But within forty Years after, about the Year 1580, from the City of Westminster along to LONDON, every Street became full of them. Some of the Wares sold by these Shop-keepers were, Gloves made in France or Spain, Kerfies of Flanders Dye, French Cloth, or Frizado, Owches, Brooches, Agglets made in Venice or Milan, Daggers, Swords, Knives, Girdles of the Spanish Make, Spurs made at Milan, French or Milan Caps, Glasses, painted Cruses, Dials, Tables, Cards, Balls, Puppets, Penners, Inkhorns, Toothpicks, Silk Bottoms and Silver Bottoms, fine Earthen Pots, Pins and Points, Hawks Bells, Saltfellers, Spoons, and Dishes of Tin: Which made a Shew in the Passengers Eyes, that they could not but gaze on them, and buy some of these Knicknacks, tho' to no Purpose necessary. Of which Trade and Trifles, a Writer, in the Middle of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, makes this Complaint: "I mervail no Man taketh Heed to it, what Number of Trifles cometh hither from beyond the Seas, that we might either clean spare, or else make them within our Realm: For which we either pay inestimable Treasure every Year, or else exchange substantial Wares and Necessary for them: For the which we might receive great Treasure.

THE Hall belonging to this Company is situated in Maiden-lane near Wood-street. It is a good Brick Building, particularly that Room called the Hall, is very neat and lofty, paved with Marble and Purbeck, wainscotted about twelve Feet high; and the Screen at the West End, where are two arched Apertures, is adorned with Pilasters of the Corinthian Order, with Enrichments; and round the Hall are several Coats of Arms: There were likewise the Pictures of these Persons in full Proportion, set up in grateful Memory of their great Benefactions, and these Inscriptions underneath, viz.

WILLIAM ADAMS, Esquire.

THERE have been twenty-four Lord Mayors of this Company. For a farther Account of the Benefactions entrusted to the Haberdashers, see Chap. I. of this Book, Page 36.

SALT ERS.

THE Company of Salters was incorporated, and had their Arms granted in the twenty-second Year of King Henry VIII. Anno Domini 1530; the latter by Thomas Benoit, Clarencieux. The Crest and Supporters by Robert Cooke, Clarencieux, in the 29th of Queen Elizabeth, Anno 1587. Approved at the Visitation, Anno 1634, Richard Denham, then Master.

THEIR Arms are: Per Chevron Azure and Gules, three covered Salts, Or, springling Salt proper. Crest; on a Helmet and Torse issuing out of a Cloud Argent; a sinister Arm proper holding a Salt as the former. Supporters; two Otters Argent plattee, gorged with Ducal Coronets, thereto a Chain affixed and reflected over their Loins, Or.

THIS Company consists of a Master, two Wardens, 28 Assistants, and 140 on the Livery, besides Yeomanry. The Livery Fine is 20 l.

THEIR Hall stands in Swithin's-lane, near St. Swithin's Church. There have been ten Lord Mayors of this Company. For the Benefactions and Charities under their Care, see Chapter I. of this Book, Page 37.

IRONMONGERS.

THE Ironmongers were incorporated in the third Year of King Edward IV. An. Dom. 1462, and their Arms first granted by Lancaster, King at Arms, Marthal to Clarencieux, King at Arms, Anno Dom. 1455; and the 34th Year of

of the Reign of King Henry VI, unto the Honourable Craft and Mystery of Ironmongers. Thomas Benoit confirmed the same Arms by subscribing his own Name to the former Patent, 22 Henry VIII. William Harvey, Clarencieux, reciting, That the Arms granted by Lancaster were not granted by good Authority, did ratify and confirm the same again, Anno 1560, 2 Eliz. and were again ratified 1634; at which Time Mr. Thomas Thorold was Master.

THE Arms are: Argent, on a Chevron Gules between three Gads of Steel Azure; as many Pair of Shackles, Or. Crest; on a Helmet and Torse, two Lizards Combatant proper, chained and collar'd, Or. No Supporters.

THIS Company consists of a Master; two Wardens, and 100 Assistants, being all that are upon the Livery, besides Yeomanry. The Livery Fine is 15 l. 12 s. and that for Steward 16 l.

THERE was a Complaint about the Year 1300 of the Ferones, (that is, of such as dealt in Iron) made to Elias Russell, Mayor, and the Aldermen, for that the Smiths of the Wealds, and other Merchants, bringing down Irons of Wheels for Carts, to the City of LONDON, they were much shorter than antiently was accustomed, to the great Loss and Scandal of the whole Trade of Ironmongers; and requiring Remedy upon this. Whereupon an Inquisition was taken of lawful and honest Men; who presented three Iron Rods of the just and antiently used Length of the Strytes, and also of the Length and Breadth of the Gropes belonging to the Wheels of the Carts. Which Rods were sealed with the Seal of the Chamber of Guildhall, LONDON; whereof one remains in the said Chamber; and another Rod was delivered on the Monday before the Purification of the Virgin Mary, Anno 29 Ed. I. to John Dode, and Robert de Padington, Ironmongers of the Market: And the third was delivered the same Monday to John de Wymondeham, Ironmonger of the Bridge. All which, from Day to Day, warned the Merchants bringing these Iron-works to the City of LONDON, as well from the Wealds, as elsewhere, that they should not henceforward bring such Irons, unless of the Length and Breadth aforesaid, upon Forfeiture of the said Iron-works, that should be found against the Assize aforesaid.

THE Hall of this Company is in Fenchurch-street, and had the good Fortune to escape the great Fire.

THERE have been about 15 Lord Mayors of this Company. For the Benefactions entrusted to the Ironmongers, see the first Chapter of this Book, Pages 37, 38.

VINTNERS.

THE Vintonners were incorporated in the Reign of King Ed. III. Anno Dom. 1340, by the Name of the Wine-Tonnars, and confirmed in the 15th Year of Henry VI. Anno Dom. 1436. Their Arms were first granted by Clarencieux, in the 6th Year of King Henry VI. Anno Domini 1427.

THE Account above is given by Anthony Monday; but Strype says this is false in many Particulars; for that Grant of King Edward III. was not for the incorporating them, but only for the Regulation of the Trade, and for the Hindrance of any other to deal in Gascoigne Wines, but such alone as were enfranchised in the Craft of Vintry. Nor were they called any where in that King's Letters by the Name of Wine-Tonnars, but Vintners, and Merchants-Vintners, and Merchants of Vintrie. Nor was their supposed Corporation confirmed by King Henry VI. but he only confirmed and ratified the Contents of the Letters of King Edward III. as will be seen by and by. Nor did this pretended Confirmation bear Date in the 15th of that King but the 8th of November, in the 6th of his Reign. Nor, lastly, were the Vintners Arms granted in the 6th of Henry VI. but, as appears by a Visitation Book of the Heralds, were granted them by Clarencieux, under the Hand and Seal of his Arms and Office, the 17th of September 1447, and in the 20th of Henry VI. which were afterwards confirmed by Thomas Benoit, Clarencieux, October 22, in his Visitation in the 22d of Henry VIII. and again in the Visitation of LONDON 1634, approved and confirmed by Sir Henry St. George, Knt. Richmond Herald; at which Time Richard Davis was Master, Robert Shaw, Robert Child, and Philip Travers, Wardens.

THEIR Patron St. Martin.

THE Vintners are govern'd by a Master, three Wardens, and 62 Assistants; there are 253 on the Livery; their Livery Fine is about 25 l.

Richard Mervail, Citizen and Vintner of LONDON, by his last Will and Testament, gave this Company certain Lands and Tenements in the Parish of St. Edmund's, Lombard-street, on Condition that they were incorporated within two Years after. The Will of the said Mervail bore Date the 17th of King Henry VI. so that it is presumed they were incorporated the 19th or 20th of Henry VI. to preserve to themselves the said Legacy.

KING Edward VI. granted to Gunter and Hobson, four Tenements in St. Michael the Querne; three in Foster-lane; three in Garlick-hith, and one in Soper's-lane; which Gunter and Hobson conveyed the same to the Company of Vintners, Anno 2 Edwardi VI.

Botolph Wharf belonged to this Company, by Virtue of a Grant of King Edward I. in the 10th of his Reign, and in the Mayoralty of Henry de Waleys; whereby he gave his said Wharf to Henry de Kingston, and confirmed it to him for the Use of the Company, paying a Silver Penny yearly to the King, at the Feast of the Nativity of St. John Baptist, for all Services, Customs, Demands Secular, and all other Things. This Wharf was stiled in the same Grant, Our Common Key in the Parish of St. Botolph next Billingsgate.

Sir John Stody, Knt. some Time Mayor, in the Reign of Edward III. gave his Manor in the Vintry to the Company; on Part whereof the Hall now stands. This was confirmed to the Company by King Richard III. who in his Grant mentions, that there was an Inquisition taken at the Guildhall of the City of LONDON, August 26, 17 Edward IV. before Ralph Josselyn, Mayor, Escheator in the same City, and Suburbs of the same, by Virtue of his Office; where it appeared, that John Stody, late of LONDON, Knt. among others, was seized of a Manor in the the Ward of Vintry, LONDON, in his Demefne as of Fee, and held that Manor of King Edward III. in free Burgage.

THIS Company antiently confifted of two Sorts of Traders, viz. The Vinetarii, and the Tabernarii; that is, the Vintners, who were the Merchants that imported Wine from France and other Places, and the Taverners, who kept the Taverns for them, and fold it out by Retail to fuch as came thither to drink, or fetched it to their own Houfes. Of both thefe Sellers of Wine it was a Complaint as long ago as the Reign of King Edward III. that they mixed and corrupted their Wine, and felling that fo mixed at the fame Price with the good; which caufed that King, in the fecond of his Reign, to fend his Letters to the Mayor and Sheriffs, to fee this Abufe corrected; which was, as the Exprefion in the faid Letter is, to the Scandal of the City, and the Danger of the Lives of the Citizens; and that they fhould caufe it to be proclaimed, that no Wine fhould be fold but pure and good. The Patent ran to this Tenor:

“ and Sheriffs of LONDON, Greeting. Whereas “ it is given to us to underftand, That the Vint“ ners of the fame City, and their Taverne-keep“ ers felling Wine at Retayl in the fame City “ and Suburbs, do mingle and corrupt Wines with “ other Wines, and are not afraid to fell the “ Wines fo mixt and corrupted at the fame Price
“ as they fell the good and pure; not permitting “ Men, drinking in their Taverns, or otherwife “ buying Wine of them, to look whether the “ Wines are drawn out of the Hogfheads into the “ Measures, or taken elfewhere; to the Scandal
“ of you and of the Commonalty of the City “ aforefaid, and to the corrupting of the bodily “ Health of thofe that buy Wine by Retail in “ the fame City, and drink in the Taverns, and “ the Danger of their Lives: Whereat we are “ not without juft Caufe offended. We, willing “ to prevent thefe Dangers, command you, that “ in the faid City and Suburbs, in Places where “ ye fhall fee it expedient, ye do on our Be“ half caufe it to be publickly proclaimed and “ prohibited, that none prefume in any Manner
“ to mingle fuch Wines, nor to fell any mixt,
“ but good and pure: And that all and fingular, “ drinking Wine in Taverns, or otherwife buy“ ing Wine thence, may look as they will, whe“ ther the Wines fo fold, as aforefaid, in Ta“ verns, be drawn out of the Hogfheads, or “ taken elfewhere. And if after the forefaid “ Proclamation and Prohibition, ye fhall find “ any doing the contrary, ye fo punifh them,
“ by levying a Forfeit upon them for our Ufe, “ that that Punifhment may terrify others from “ offending in the like Cafe; and that we, for “ your Default, may have no Need to lay on “ heavier Hands for the regulating of this “ Matter.

Witness the King at Westminfter, the 28th
Day of November.

THESE Vintners were antiently Wine-Merchants, that traded chiefly in importing Wine, brought from Gascoigne, and felling it here to the Court and Nobility, or to the Retailers that kept Taverns in LONDON and elfewhere.

GREAT Numbers of Perfons then and ftill depending upon thefe Vintners, as Shipwrights and Mariners, and others that live by the Navy; Retailers, Lightermen, Porters, Coopers, (for great Numbers of Casks are ufed in this Calling) Wharfingers, Carmen, together with thofe that were concerned in letting of Warehoufes, Cellars and Vaults: All which, with their Wives, Families and Servants, amounted to a vaft Number of Souls.

THIS Company had an antient Charter from King Edward III. dated June 15, in the 38th of his Reign, to prevent and forbid any Merchants to trade for Wine to Gascoigne, but only fuch as were free of this Craft of Vintners; whereas before many others did, carrying over their Wares and Commodities, as Cloth and other Things of the Growth of England, into that Country, and bringing home their Wines: Whereby Injury redounded to this Company, and alfo the Gascoigners held up their Wines at dearer Rates, fince there came fuch Numbers to buy. And whereas before the Gascoigners were at the Charge of bringing in their Wines hither, now the Merchants of England brought them in at their own Expences; which was look'd upon as Harm to the King and the Realm. The King therefore henceforth allowed only thofe that were enfranchifed in the Craft of the Vintners to buy Wine beyond Sea, and trade in it: And commanded that the Gascoigners, when they brought in their Wines, fhould not fell them in fmall Parcels, but in great by the Ton or Pipe: Moreover, this Company was to appoint four able fkilful Perfons, of their own Myftery, to be fworn before the Mayor, to overfee all Manner of Wines fold by Retail at Taverns, and that their Prices were reasonable. This Charter of King Edward III. Anno 1363, was infpected and confirmed by King Henry VI. in the 6th of his Reign, that is, Anno 1427, being intended that the Merchants Vintners fhould trade to Bordeaux, to refrain the Multitude, that was thought to be the Occafion why the Prices of Wines were then enhanced. And this being a Piece of Antiquity, and tending to the antient Privileges of this Company, it will be worthy to be here exemplified.

WINE CRAFT of VINTRY.

The Vintners CHARTER from King Edward III. that none Trade to Gascoigne for Wines but the Merchants of the Vintrie, confirmed by King Henry.

In witnessing whereof we have made to be made this oure Lettres Patents. Witnesse ourself at Westm' the viii Dai of Novembre the vije Yere of our Reigne.

By the King and Councell in the Parliament.

IN the Seventh of Edward VI. there was an Act made concerning the Price of Wines, and for stinting the Number of Taverns in each great Town in the Kingdom. By which fourty Taverns or Wine-Cellars only are allowed in LONDON, and three in Westminster. Gascoign, Guien, and French Wines to be sold not above 8 d. the Gallon within any of the King's Dominions; Rochel Wines at 4 d. the Gallon; any other Wines, of no higher Valuation than 12 d. the Gallon.

IN the Year 1569, several Vintners, free of other Companies, and not incorporated of the Vintners, were disturbed in their selling Wine, by Virtue of the aforesaid Act, the Trade of the Vintners being thereby abridged and straitned to a certain Form, (as they complained) abridging the Liberties and Franchises of the great Charter, wherein it is said, Civitas LONDON. habeat omnes Libertates suas antiquas, & Consuetudines suas, quas habere consuevit. And King Edward III. a wise and politick Prince, having ever a special Care, amongst other Things, unto the due Observation of the Liberties of the great Charter of England, did not only by Parliament confirm all the Points of the said Charter, but also did enact, that if any Statute were to the contrary, that it should be holden for none. Now one of these antient Liberties and Franchises was, that every Citizen and Freeman might use and occupy what Trade soever best liked him for his Profit. Notwithstanding the Trade of Vintners and Wine-sellers was of late abridged by that Act of Edward VI.

IN Consideration whereof, Queen Mary, that next succeeded the said King, by her Charter granted to the Master, Wardens and Company of Vintners, a special Dispensation to buy, sell and utter for a certain Time, in such Sort as they were accustomed, according to the antient Liberties, Franchises and Customs of the said City, notwithstanding the same Statute. Yet notwithstanding the said Charter of Dispensation, there were certain Citizens, who being free of other Companies than of the Mystery of Vintners, and being not remember'd at the obtaining and granting of the said Charter, did, after, upon their humble Suit to the said Queen Mary, obtain and get at her Majesty's Hands, an especial Grant of Dispensation of the said Statute. The which Grant was to endure but for their own Times and no longer.

BUT since which Charter of Dispensation, these Inconveniencies arose, that such as had been Apprentices, and spent the best Part of their Youth in the Service of such as had occupied the Trade of Wines, coming out of their Years, and being free of such Companies as their Masters were free of before them, might not by Reason of the said Statute use the same Trade as their Masters did use, while they served them. The which was their utter Undoing; and gave Occasion of Hindrance unto their Masters, as that it was now come to pass, that none would be their Apprentices, by Reason that after they were made Freemen, they could not use their Masters Trade. Hereupon a Petition was preferred to Queen Elizabeth, out of her honourable Inclination of Piety, to provide for the Relief of these her Subjects, according as their learned Counsel in the Laws of this Realm should devise.

SOME Persons in the Year 1594, sue to the Lord Treasurer for a new Office of Survey to be erect'd for the Gauging of Wines and Oils within the City of LONDON and Liberties; upon Pretence of doing it more faithfully and exactly than the common Gaugers did, to the Wrong of the Subjects, and to have 16 d. a Ton Reward. Concerning this the Lord Treasurer sent to the Company of Vintners for their Judgment herein. To which the Master, John Pindar, and Ralph Fitch, and Andrew Goodyere, Wardens, gave Answer, that they did not find any Necessity for such an Office or Officer, especially in or about LONDON, considering the good Ordinances were provided for the same, in most full and ample and sufficient Manner, as well by her Majesty's Laws, as by solemn Oaths and good Bonds taken of the Gauger, for the due and diligent Execution of his Office: So that they did not know that any Man had or could have just Cause to complain of any Want of Duty in that Behalf. And in Case any Error or Default should be committed by any Gauger, or Seller of Wine or Oil, there was so good Remedy already provided by the said Laws, as well for the Gauger, if he gauge not truly, as for the Seller, if he make not Allowance for the Lacks, that the Buyer, if he will, may be satisfied to his full Content. And if the Buyer will not take the Remedy by Law, yet he were better to bear some Loss, than to pay after the Rate of 16 d. a Ton, or to attend the Surveyor in his View and Survey thereof to be had, and Entrance made into the Surveyors Books. The Trouble whereof would be such to the Surveyor, as he could in no wise be able to perform. For at one Instant thirty or forty Bargains are made: So that they thought by this Suit their Charge and Trouble would be encreased, and their Loss no Way redress'd.

AND if Corruption might be in the Gaugers now in Possession, being solemnly sworn, and bound in great Bonds for the due Execution thereof, besides the Penalty of the Laws, what better Assurance might they look for, that the like Corruption be not in the new Surveyor or his Deputies? So they prayed his Lordship's favourable Acceptance of their Answer from his accustomed Goodness in maintaining the Charters and Liberties of the City, and restraining of this and such like Impositions and Innovations; which turned in the End, but to the Burden of her Majesty's Subjects.

AND in another Paper, in Answer to the Suitors Objections against the present Gaugers, they shewed that the Laws contained two principal Grounds, as Matter sufficient for Redress of all such Disorders as might fall out against the Provision made by them. The one was the Forfeiture of four Double by the Gauger in Default of his Care, Diligence and Trust: The other, the full Satisfaction the Seller must yield to the Buyer in Case there be found Want of Number of Measures full. If the Buyer should not take the Benefit of the Law for his Remedy, which hath been of Purpose provided for him, he is to impute his Loss to his own Folly, and not to be relieved by Invention of new Offices; for that were an endless Work in making of Laws, if every private Head should, upon his Conceit, have new Means of Remedy set out for him, whereas there is sufficient provided before.

IN this Matter of Gauging, as in many Cases of the like Nature in the City, the Survey resteth in the Lord Mayor, and Guardians of the Charters and Privileges of the City: Whose Office is to see, that all such Ordinances as are established for the good Government of the City be duly kept and observed for the Good of her Majesty's Subjects, and the supplanting of all Infringers of the same. So that in this Case to require a Surveyor, is in effect to require a Surveyor of the Lord Mayor's Actions and Carriage of himself, and of the Council of the City in their whole Administration. And by the Statute of 16 Rich. II. Cap. 5. no Searcher or Gauger of Wine, &c. shall have Estate in his Office for Term of Life, or of Years, but that the said Offices shall remain in the King's Hand, under the Governance of the Treasurer for the Time being, with the Assent of the Council, when Need is. And if any Letters Patents be made to the contrary, they shall be clearly void, and of none effect.

By the Petition to her Majesty, all Forfeitures due to her Majesty by any Statute provided for the true Gauging, and holding of the lawful Assizes of Wines, Oils, and other Liquors gaugeable, are sued for, to be granted by Patent for Years, together with the Office of Surveying the Gauges at the Rent of 50 l. per Ann. and with a Fee of 16 d. upon every Ton. The Penalty of which which Laws, if they were put in Execution, it is most certain would be of more Profit to her Majesty, than were fit to pass at that Rent; besides the Fee of the Surveyor would exceed the Gaugers 12 d. upon every Ton.

THE Company of Vintners endeavoured about the Year 1580 and odd, to obtain of the Queen a Licence to sell Wine for certain Years, and not Durante bene placito, (for then such a Licence might not be revoked;) for which probably they would have given the Queen a large Sum. This the Retailing Vintners were against, because it would be the Occasion of heightening the Price of Wines, which would bring on a Decay of the Trade, and so the Subversion of the Company: Because in Time, none would Care to buy them at such dear Prices; as it was in other Professions through the excessive enhauncing of the Prices of Commodities, whereby none were able to purchase them; and in the Issue, the Queen would lose her Customs, and other Duties, the Navy would be weakened, and those that might have lived reasonably well, be driven to Beggary, viz. all that Multitude of Callings that had Dependence upon this Trade.

ON the other Side the Company said themselves, That the Vintners, in former Times, were continual Suitors, 'till the latter End of King Henry VII. his Time, to the Lord Mayor of LONDON, for Reformation of Abuses in selling Wine, in Regard of the Goodness of it, and the Restitution of the Gauge and Measure, who neither could nor would remedy the same; whereupon were made Acts of the 28th and 33d of Henry VIII. and the 7th of Edward VI. touching Prices of Wines by Retail and Engros, without any Cause given therefore by the said mere Vintners: But what good ever since by them had ensued, the Heightening the Prices of Wines, and the said Companies utter Undoing taught: As of old Time since before King Edward I. until the foresaid 28th of Henry VIII. his Reign, like Things upon like Occasions came to pass, and never were, nor could be redress'd, but only through the Policy practised by the said Vintners good Ordinance; as by the sundry Grants made in that Behalf unto them by King Edward III. and also by King Henry VI. might appear.

IN these Times, about the Middle of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, some Persons had Licences to sell and retail Wine, independently upon the Company. And they were commonly seen to have kept the most disorderly Houses; a Remonstrance was laid before the Lord Treasurer, by one Lane of the Company, that these licensed Persons should be brought to Order, being no Innovation or new Invention, as was urged by some, which appeared in that they themselves had fought by their own Bonds to stand bound to the Company to observe a certain Order of less Importance, which otherwise they knew they had no Way to reform. The reducing these licensed Men would be great Cause, as he urged, of avoiding Whoredom, Dancing, Dicing, and Banqueting of Apprentices, Serving-Men, and such like, daily used in Taverns, with the better Observation of Days prescribed to be fasted on. And touching the said Company, it would avoid excessive Income and Rents, whereby many had been under, and all unjust Quarrelling at the Law, and all Forestalling and Regrating; and that the Order for decent Apparel might be observed and used; and the over heightening the Prices of any Commodities, whereby Men became Bankrupts, should be remedied.

THERE were certain antient Ordinances for the Government both of the Merchant Vintners and Vintners Retailers, viz.

For the MERCHANTS.

THAT six Persons, being Vintners, sholn be Governors and Counsellors to al Vintners, and to al Vintners Attorneys that shullun pass the Seas to Bordeaux. That after they have landyd and ben there two Days, and partely understood of the Likelehode of the Prices, that or (i. e. ere) eny buy, they al meet and take Ordere what every Man sholn gyve, and none to excede, upon Payne to forf to the King xx l. and xx l. to the Fellowship; and who that can espie eny doing the contrarie, be it Master or Servant, shal have to tell (i. e. pay) twenty Nobles for his Travell. That none make no Servant, no Broker, no Man, Woman, or Child, to buy Wine above that Pryce, upon the Payne aforesaid. And in Case any happen to come upon other, when they have byn taking, that lest they should thereby highen the Market, they do a void. And if after the first Seer be gon, and culde not agree, the second happen afterward to buy; yet if it were the Wines of the first Seer's Customer, he shall have half the Wyne notwithstanding of the Buyer, &c.

For the RETEYLOURS.

TH' Othe of the four Wardens of the Vintners Reteylours is, wel and truly to rule the Company, and to keep th' Ordinaunces that for the Commonwele are or shullen be made, and duely to put them in Execution, doing alweye Evynhode as well to the Poore as to the Riche,

Th' Othe of the Freeman is, To be true to the King and his Laws, obedient to the Wardens and Ordenaunces, to keep good Rule, to obey al Summons, and to pay al Duties after their Power.

Th' Ordinaunce to be rede every Yere twice, viz. at the going to Bordeaux, and at the Beginning of Lent.

The Companie when new Wyne is, shal from the Ryding of the Mayor unto Easter Day, assemble every Fortnight, to let al Disorder, in gredy running and buying of Wines; which if any shullen do contrary ther Orders therin, he shal pay for every Fault ten Mark.

None shal colour Straungers Goods to t' Hurt of the King's Customes, or highening of the Pryce of Wynes.

None shal sel Wynes tyl the Wardeins have given them the Pryce, upon Payne to forfeit 6 s. 8 d. for every Gallon so sold.

None shal utter one Wyne insted of another, upon Paine for every Offence to pay xx s.

None of any other Companie shal use Wynes, except he first be sworn t' obey al the Vintners Ordinaunces, whilest he shal occupie.

None shal discover any Talk, that, concerning the highening of Wynes to be abatyd, shal by eny Person be gyven or counfild, upon Payne of xx l.

Item, That eight Persons onely of the said Company, being of best Experience, were always of old Tyme appointed to tast and buy al Manner of Wynes, after they were brought over, and had byn cellared three Days: So that none after did excede the Pryces by them made, upon grete Penalties to be payed, which caused good cheap.

ABOUT 170 Years ago, the whole Number of mere Vintners, and such as sold Wine by Retail in LONDON, amounted to 128, as appeared by a Paper given in, in the Year 1564, by the Company.

THE

THE Hall belonging to this Company is situated in Thames-street, that Part formerly called the Vintry. This Company reckons these Royal Founders; King Edward III. King Henry VI. King Richard III. King Henry VII. King Edward VI. Queen Mary I. and Queen Elizabeth.

CLOTHWORKERS.

THE Clothworkers had their Arms first granted by Thomas Benoit, Clarencieux, in the 22d Year of Henry VIII. Anno Domini 1530. The Crest and Supporters were granted by Robert Cooke, Clarencieux, King at Arms, Anno Domini 1587. These their Arms were confirmed at a Visitation of LONDON, by Sir Henry St. George, Knt. Richmond Herald, Anno Dom. 1645, Edward Carleton, Esq; being then Master.

THE Arms are : Sable, a Chevron, Ermin between two Habicks in Chief, Argent, and a Tessell in Base, Or. Crest, a Ram passant, Or. Supporters, two Griffins, Or, Pellettee.

THIS rich and eminent Company were governed by a Master, four Wardens, about 60 Assistants, and 166 on the Livery, besides the Commonalty; the Livery Fine is about 20 l.

THEY date their first Charter April 28, 20 Edward IV. in whose Grant they were incorporated under the Name of The Fraternity of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary, of the Sheermen of the City of LONDON. They were again confirmed by King Henry VIII. the Letters Patents bearing Date Jan. 18, in the 19th Year of his Reign. Queen Elizabeth yielded to them another Charter, by the Name of The Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of Freemen of the Art and Mystery of Clothworkers in the City of LONDON. This was confirmed April the 24th, by King Charles I. in the 9th Year of his Reign.

KING James I. June 12, 1607, dined with the Lord Mayor, Sir John Watts, Clothworker; and after went into Clothworkers Hall; and there was made Free of that Company with Sir Patrick Murrey, Gentleman of his Bedchamber, Sir Arthur Arston, and Sir Hugh Carmichael, Knts, and James Medow, D. D. the King's Chaplain.

THE Lord Mayor at this Dinner presented the King with a Purse of Gold; and when he was ready to depart, the said Mayor besought him out of the great Favour which he had before professed to the Clothworkers Society in particular, that his Majesty would vouchsafe to be Free of the Clothworkers; which the King readily accepted, and descending from the Dining-Room went into the Hall, the Mayor bearing the Sword before him; and there he was received by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants, unto whom the King spake kindly, and with Respect; and asking, Who was Master of the Company? The Lord Mayor answered, Sir William Stone: To whom the King then said, Wilt thou make me Free of the Clothworkers? Yes, said the Master, and do think myself a happy Man, that I live to see this Day. Then said the King, Stone, give me thy Hand; and now I am a Clothworker. And after that, he walked into the Garden, and then into the great Parlour, the Lord Mayor bearing the Sword before him. And while he sat there, the Earls of Shrewsbury and Cumberland, being both Free of that Company, presented his Majesty with Bread and Wine. Then rising up, he said, Now I drink unto all my good Brethren the Clothworkers. And I pray God to bless them all, and all good Clothworkers. And for Proof of our special Favour to the Fraternity, I do here give unto this Company two Brace of Bucks yearly, for ever, against the Time of the Election of the Master and Wardens. Then the Master, the Wardens and Assistants humbly thanked his Majesty; and having kissed his Hand, the King departed.

THERE were other Companies incorporated in former Times, which are now sunk and gone, whose Business was chiefly about Cloths, as Fullers, Telars, and Burilers.

FULLERS.

OF these and the Dyers a Complaint was made by some of the Company to King Edward I. that certain of them, namely, John de Oxon, Henry at Watergate, and Elias le Shcreman, concerning Cloths sent to them to be fulled; and which ought to be fulled only within the City; that they sent them to the Mill at Stratford, and elsewhere without the said City, and caused them there to be fulled; in Deceit and great Damage of the Men who owned those Cloths, and also of the Men using the Trade in the aforesaid City, and to the Depression of the said Trade. Whereupon the King, in the 26th of his Reign, sent his Letter to the Custos and Sheriffs of LONDON, to call the Parties before them: Who accordingly did so, and the abovesaid, John, Henry, and Elias, in all the said Matters acknowledged themselves to be faulty. And the said Custos and Sheriffs caused to appear before them the Dyers, Telars, Burilers, Weavers, and Fullers, to appoint and provide for the said Trade of Fullers; how for the Time to come they ought to do, and govern themselves, to amend the said Trade of Fullers.

AND this Ordinance was made for the common Profit of the City, that no Fuller, Dyers or Theslarans, should for the Time to come carry Cloths out of the City, to be fulled or dyed, upon certain Penalties.

TELLARS or TELARS.

WERE Webbers or Weavers of Cloth: These were very antient, and were a Guild or Fraternity, confirmed by King John. And whereas it was a Custom to receive from them, for the King, 18 Marks of Silver yearly, by this Charter of Confirmation the said King required 20 Marks to be from thence yearly paid at the Exchequer, on the Feast of St. Michael.

King Henry III. gave them another Charter, and refers to an Inspeimus of a Charter which his Grandfather King Henry granted the Telars of LONDON. This King Henry III. in his said Charter required of them two Marks in Gold, payable every Michaelmas.

THESE chose two Bailiffs from among themselves to hold Courts of the same Trade; and presented presented the said Bailiffs so chosen to the Mayor Elis Russel; who were by the said Mayor accepted and sworn. And if any Matters could not be determined by them, they were to be brought to the Mayor, to be ended by him.

B U R I L E R S

WERE a Mystery for the inspecting of Cloths woven, as to the well making of them, and measuring of the Breadth of them. For Cloth ought to have been two Ells wide from List to List, (which was called Burrells) according to an old Constitution.

THERE used to be great Contentions between the Telars and these Burilers: Whereupon King Henry III. once interposed his Pardon and Indulgence against the Burilers. Rex concessit hominibus LONDON. quod non vexentur propter Burrellos, vel pannos Burellatos; quamvis non sint in latitudine duarum ulnarum infra Listas, secundum Constitutionem prius factam de pannorum latitudine.

There is this Record remaining in the Chamber of LONDON. "Be it remember'd, that on Thursday next after St. Hilary, the 20th [it should be 28th] of Edward I. John de Caunefeld, and Wauter Payne, Bailiffs of the said Guild of Telers of LONDON, and the whole Commonalty of the same, were summoned before Elis Russel, then Mayor of the same City, to answer to Fouk de St. Edmund, and to Henry le Jofue, and other good

They acknowledged they were faulty, and in some Points did contrary to their Customs and Usages: Whereof they prayed Grace.

And these ordained that the Telers should use and hold certain Ordinances." Which are there set down.

VIII.* Antiently they bore this Coat, impaled with the Arms of Thomas a Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury, that is, first the Arms of the See of Canterbury, then three Choughs, Becket's Arms: And lastly, these Arms for the Brewers, viz. A Chevron charged with three Barrels, between as many Garbs; afterwards they bore the Garbs Saltierwise, as at present.

THIS Company is govern'd by a Master, three Wardens, and 24 Assistants: There are 90 on the Livery, besides Yeomanry. Their Livery Fine is 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

THE following Matters relating to this Company of Brewers, as they happen'd in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, were collected by Stow, out of some authentick Papers.

IN the Year 1580, or thereabouts, Sir Thomas Gorges sued to have the Office of Gauger of Beer; namely, to survey the Gauging and Filling every Barrel; and for the defraying of the Charges and of Officers to be employed, to have a Penny for gauging every Barrel of Beer and Ale; an Halfpenny for every half Barrel; and so for every Vessel after that Rate. And for inclining the Queen to grant this, he shewed in his Petition to the Lord Treasurer Burghley, that there was a Deceit to the Buyer of Beer and Ale, both in the Assize of the Vessels, and in the not filling them up. And that the Buyers, taken altogether, were deceived hereby 30000*l.* a Year: Which by this Expedient propounded, would be saved. And besides, it was promised that the Queen should have 200*l.* a Year for a Rent. And that a great Number of prohibited Wares were daily transported out of the Realm by Stealth, and so easily past, as they had done. And hereby her Majesty's Customs would be encreased. Besides, he would engage to gain her 7 or 800*l.* yearly in the Assize of the Vessels, and filling of Beer and Ale, which was yearly served only to her Majesty's House.

To which the Brewers made this Answer: "That though Vessels were well filled in the Brewhouse, yet such as were carried in Drayes, by that Time they should be laid in the Buyers Cellars, would, by Reason of sparging and working in the Carriage, want near a Gallon in every Barrel: So that the surveying of the filling of them in the Brewhouse would bring small Profit to the Buyer. And Ale in LONDON, and many other Places, being put in Vessels that be open, as the Buyers may easily see whether they be filled or not, the filling of them needs no such Survey of any other Person. That the Sizes of Vessels were limited by Statute, and well known to the most Part of Buyers; and were continually look'd unto by the Clerk of the Market, and by Mayors and other Head Officers of Cities and Corporate Towns, and within Liberties; who

VOL. II.

"were authorized thereunto by Statutes, Charters and Grants; and the Defects might be easily perceived by the Buyer: So as there was no great Need of a Surveyor in that Behalf. And the Correction of the Assize of Beer and Ale, touching the Vessels and Measures, belonging to Head Officers in most Cities, Towns Corporate and Leets, was like to beget many sudden Complaints. That a Penny for gauging every Barrel of Beer and Ale would grow to a great yearly Revenue. It was computed, there would be due for Beer Vessels in LONDON only, 5000*l.* yearly. And it might be thought, that throughout the Realm it would make the Sum up 10,000*l.* a Year at least." But this Business of having a Surveyor for Beer stuck still, and we shall hear more of it by and by.

IN the Year 1585, a Dutchman desired to have Licence to transport Beer. And it was allowed him by the Lord Treasurer, upon Agreement, to import so much Clap-board, according to the Tons of Beer he carried out.

THE Quantity of Beer brewed in LONDON, about this Time, viz. 1585; in a Year, by the Calculation that one made for the Use of the Lord Treasurer, was thus computed: There were at least twenty-six Brewers in the City, Suburbs, and Westminster, whereof the one Half of them, Strangers, the other English. The most of every of them brewed six Times a Week; and ordinarily they brewed twenty Quarters at every Time; which yielded in Small Beer 100 Barrels at the least, and in Strong Beer sixty Barrels at the least. Every one with another of them did brew 420 Barrels weekly a-piece; which amounted to 2496 Barrels yearly. So the whole Number of the Brewers being 26, they did brew yearly 648960 Barrels. And by this Computation the Gentleman that used to be General Surveyor for Gauging, at a Penny the Barrel, and so for every half Barrel proportionably, should receive in LONDON and the Suburbs, 2028*l.* a Year.

VESSELS of Beer and Ale were not gauged by any Statute before 23 Hen. VIII. but the Defects thereof were punishable upon the Presentment of Juries and Aleconners, before the Justices Itinerants, Justices of Peace, the Clerks of the Market, Stewards of Leets out of Cities; and in Cities, by Force of Charters. And in that Year (i. e. 23 H. VIII.) by an Act, Authority was given to the Wardens of the Coopers of LONDON, to search, view and gauge all Vessels of Beer, Ale and Soap in LONDON, and the Suburbs, within two Miles of LONDON, and to take a Fee for the same; and the like Authority was given to the Mayors, Sheriffs, Bailiffs, Constables or other Head Officers out of LONDON, for Vessels there. This was urged to the Treasurer of England, Anno 1586, against any Common Gauger ever having any Authority of gauging Vessels, or used before.

BUT the Coopers were complained of, for that they, by the Statute abovesaid, being to gauge Vessels for the full Contents by that Statute limited, and that those that held due Measure should be sealed with a St. Andrew's Cross; they being in Bargain with the Brewers, would set the Cross upon the Vessels as full Gauge, though they wanted one, two or three Gallons. And the Law had inflicted no Punishment on the Coopers, for not gauging, or for untrue gauging, the Coopers being Judges of their own Work; and having Liberty at their Pleasure to search and gauge, but not commanded so to do.

BESIDES this Want of Measure, there were about this Time divers other Things charged upon the Brewers, which are here set down, together with their Apology and Vindication of themselves. They were charged for their Malt and Hops which they used ; as that they brewed with ill Malt ; and in the End of the Year they commonly brewed with Wyvel Malt, being the Bottom and Sweepings of their Garners, to make room to bring in new Corn. It was also bruited, that they put in Darnel, Rosin, Lime and Chalk, and such like ; which making the Drinkers thirsty, they might drink the more. And that for Cheapness, when Hops were dear, they put into their Drink, Broom, Bay-Berries, Ivy-Berries, and such like Things ; but their Surveyors never found this upon Examination to be true.

Item, It was charged upon them, that with one Mash they used to make two Brewings ; but that also was hardly true, by reason it would taint their Beer, and lose that which would be good enough to utter to most Customers.

Item, That they boiled not their Liquor, as was done in private Houses, to save Fuel, and to make the more Beer with the less Malt ; and such Beer was soon stale. But they answered, Such Beer pleased LONDON best, to drink new small Beer about 14 Days old.

Item, That they brewed foisted Beer and corrupt Beer again, sent home by their Customers, and never would lose any.

Item, That the Beer-Brewers were very unclean in their Brewing, and about all their Vessels ; but if it were so, their Masters had the Loss by it, when their Beer was returned home, and fain to be brewed twice at their Charges.

Item, That they set in the Heads of their Barrels to make them less ; but that wanted Proof.

Item. There was this Deceit in Vessels of Beer that were transported ; that under the Name of these, passed many Barrels stuffed with prohibited Goods, as Pike-heads, Halberd-heads, Pistols and Match, Candles and Soles of Shoes, of new Leather, cut out in Pairs of all Sizes, and the like ; the Bungs of the said Barrels being besmeared with a little Yest ; to the Hindrance of the Commonwealth, and to the Profit of Enemies. Another Deceit that the Strangers, Foreigners, and others practised with the Brewers and their Servants was, packing up Cases and Pieces of Silk, and delivering them as empty Barrels on the Brewers Wharf. The Brewers straight besmeared them with Yest, and so sent them to the Merchants Houses, as Barrels of Beer for the Household, to the Hindrance of the Queen's Customs.

THE Brewers themselves appointed their Surveyor ; and there being now in these Days of Queen Elizabeth, many Strangers and Denizen Brewers, as well as English, the Company set a Penny upon every Barrel of Beer brewed by a Stranger, and an Half-penny upon every Barrel brewed by an Englishman, for the said Surveyor's Salary ; though some said this was done indeed to drive away the Strangers.

BUT when the Suit was so strongly urged for a General Surveyor to be made by the Queen, some about the Year 1586, made these considerable Objections to it ; That if the Queen granted this Survey of the Vessels, then according to Statute the Brewers would withstand the same, and pray they might be surveyed according to Law. That the Mayor and Bench of LONDON could never bring it to pass, that the Vessels should be of the right Sizes, and served out full from their Brewhouses ; nor durst they ever force the Brewers to it, for fear of leaving the City un victualled. That the Ale-Brewers, by their Charter, had Authority to search and survey themselves ; and all Beer-Brewers likewise, both for Vessels, for filling them, and for Wholesomeness of Drink ; and if the new Survey were granted, it would intrude upon their Charter and Authority, to the Offence of the City ; and that if the Queen of her Prerogative should command (which was doubted whether she might) never so little a Fee upon a Barrel to be paid to the Chief Surveyor, the People would say straight, Their Drink was excised, as it was in Flanders, and would be more hereafter ; and so the People and Brewers both would repine at it ; and that if the People had their Measure, the Brewers would exact it again. And, Lastly, that as for the clayed and besmeared Barrels with Yest, the Searchers and Officers of the Custom-house would provide well enough against that.

THE Lord Mayor and Bench of Aldermen did often attempt to make a Reformation among the Brewers, especially in two or three Respects. First, the Beer being brought in while it was purging, many Gallons were lost ; which they endeavour'd to reform by requiring Beer and Ale Carts to carry filling Beer, to make good that which was spilt or purged by the Way, or to give Allowance for the same. Secondly, for the mending of Beer, it being so small, the Mayor and Common-Council would have had two Sorts of Beer, of 4 s. and 6 s. the Barrel ; and to disallow the brewing of Strong Beer, of 8 s. the Barrel, March Beer only excepted. There was a notable Act of Common-Council made the 6th of the Queen, Oct. 25. concerning these Matters ; but neither the Mayor nor Bench could ever bring this Reformation to pass, the Brewers being so headstrong, and ready to leave the City without Provision, by leaving off Brewing suddenly.

IN the Year 1591, Sir John Allot, Mayor, published by Proclamation, that the Brewers should not make any more Sorts or Kinds of Beer or Ale than two, viz. the Strong and the Double ; and that the same should be sold after the Rate of 6 s. 8 d. the Barrel of the best, and 3 s. and 4 d. the Barrel of the Double Beer or Ale, and not above : But all Commodities belonging to the Brewers being now advanced considerably in their Prices, the Brewers made great Complaints against this Order : For Malt was sold at 13 s. the Quarter, Hops at 4 l. 6 s. 8 d. and 4 l. 10 s. the Hundred ; which heretofore was sold at 6 s. 8 d. the Hundred ; and yet one Hundred of Hops then was worth three Hundred of Hops at that present sold : The Price of Barrels being 20 s. or 22 s. the Last, heretofore sold for 9 s. the Last : The Price of Coals, then sold at 24 s. or 26 s. the Chaldron, not long before sold at 12 s. or 13 s. the Chaldron. To which they added the great and excessive Price of all Manner of Victuals, and Charge of House-keeping, and other Necessaries belonging to the Brewers Trade, the large Rent of their Houses, far exceeding the Rents given for the same in any former Age. These Things considered, the Brewers were not able, at the Prices set, to sell such good and wholesome Beer as was fit the City should be served with ; whereupon they were Suitors to the next Lord Mayor, Sir William Webbe, and the Aldermen, to have good Consideration of this Cause ; and to set such reasonable Prices and Rates on Beer and Ale, as they might make and sell good and wholesome Liquor, and live by their said Trades. As they had at sundry Times desired the Lord Mayor and Aldermen to consider two Statutes, viz. 51 H. III. and 31 Edw. I. and the Prices of Malt, Hops, Coals, Barrels, and Kilderkins, Vessels, and other Necessaries belonging to their Trade ; and to make an indifferent Proof and Trial, what and how much good and wholesome Beer and Ale of the best, and how much of the Double, might be made of a Quarter of Malt ; and to consider of all Charges belonging to the said Trade. Also, they offered to shew to them their Books, whereby they might plainly see what and and how much Ale and Beer they had or did make of a Quarter of Malt, and the just Charge expended in and about the same, notwithstanding the Lord Mayor and Aldermen refused and denied; which, as they urged, tended to the great Hinderance of the City, since they were not able to sell and utter such good and wholesome Ale and Beer as was fit; and to the utter undoing of the Brewers, if they continued their said Trades: For many of them should be forced to leave and give over the Trades in which they had been brought up, to the Hinderance, if not Undoing of the Company of Brewers.

THUS made them appeal to the Lord Treasurer of England, by whose Means only they acknowledged they had obtained their Incorporation from the Queen, with divers Liberties and Privileges to and for the said Company, praying to procure such speedy Trial and Examination of the said Cause, and thereupon such reasonable Prices to be assessed for Beer and Ale, as thereby the Commonwealth of the City and Suburbs might be well served, and his Orators have a convenient Living by their Trade; and withal they presented a Paper to the said Lord Treasurer, being the true Assize of Ale and Beer, according to the Prices of Corn, rising and falling, by the Equity of the Statute Anno 51 Hen. III. afterwards confirmed and allowed by Statute An. 31 Ed. I. viz.

THEN by the same Rate a Quarter of Malt being at the Price of 4 s. a Barrel of Ale being thirty-two Gallons, at 1 d. the Gallon, amounts to 2 s. 8 d.

Item, The Kilderkin being sixteen Gallons, after that Rate is 16 d.

Item, The Firkin being eight Gallons, is 8 d.

Item, A Barrel of Beer after that Rate, being thirty-six Gallons, at 1 d. the Gallon, is 3 s.

Item, The Kilderkin, being eighteen Gallons, is 18 d.

Item, The Firkin being nine Gallons, is 9 d.

Item, Then a Quarter of Malt being at 8 s. the Barrel of Ale being thirty-two Gallons at 2 d. the Gallon, is 5 s. 4 d.

Item, The half Barrel or Kilderkin, and Firkin, according to the same Rates.

Item, The Barrel of Beer, being thirty-six Gallons, at 2 d. the Gallon, after the same Rate comes to 6 s.

Item, The half Barrel or Kilderkin, and Firkin, according to the same Rates.

Item, The Quarter of Malt being at 12 s. the Barrel of Ale being thirty-two Gallons, at 3 d. the Gallon, is 8 s.

Item, The half Barrel or Kilderkin, and Firkin, after the same Rates.

Item, The Barrel of Beer, being thirty-six Gallons, at 3 d. the Gallon, amounts to 9 s.

Item, The half Barrel or Kilderkin, and Firkin, according to the same Rates.

The Price of CORN, and other Things, at the making of the Statute Anno 23 Hen. VIII.

A Quarter of Wheat at 6 s. 8 d.

A Quarter of Malt at 4 s. or 5 s.

A Quarter of Oats at 2 s. 8 d.

The C. wt. of the best Hops at 6 s. or 6 s. 8 d.

The Last of Barrels at 9 s.

The Last of Kilderkins at 5 s.

The Price of ALE and BEER then.

And then the Barrel of the best Ale and Beer was sold for 3 s. 8 d. or 4 s.

The Three-half-penny Beer was then sold the Barrel for 3 s.

The Barrel of single Ale and Beer 2 s.

The Price of CORN, and other Things, at the late Proclamation in London, Anno 34 Eliz.

A Quarter of Wheat at 18 s.

A Quarter of Malt at 12 or 13 s.

A Quarter of Oats at 8 s.

The C. wt. of Hops at 4 l. 10 s.

The Last of Barrels 20 s.

The Last of Kilderkins 12 s.

And now by the same Proclamation the Price of the best Ale and Beer is but at the Barrel 6 s. 8 d.

And the Price of the smaller Ale and Beer the Barrel 3 s. 4 d.

It is to be noted, that the Charge of House-Rent, House-keeping, Servants Wages, Victuals, and other Necessaries, do treble and fourfold exceed the Price thereof in those former Times.

ABOUT these middle Times of Queen Elizabeth another Controversy arose concerning Beer, namely, concerning the transporting Beer beyond Sea, which they called Portage Beer. It was observed now a-days, that the Transportation of Corn and of Beer was the Cause of the Dearth of Corn. For the preventing and remedying of which, sometimes Proclamations were issued forth, for the Restraint of Transportation; and sometimes the Brewers were restrained from brewing any Sweet or Strong Beer to be transported by Cocket, as Merchandize. By this Means Corn did once rise and fall sundry Times within two Months. Some Time before Michaelmas Corn was bought and provided to have been transported. Whereupon the Price of Corn was enhanced 6 or 7 s. in a Quarter, which happened within the Space of fourteen Days. Then a Proclamation was published for the Restraint of Corn and Beer, the eighth Day of October; and the Price of Corn within five Days did fall 5 or 6 s. in a Quarter; which caused many joyful Hearts among the poor Commons, and many Thousand Blessings and Prayers for the Author thereof. After this Proclamation, by reason of some Quantities of Beer brewed and transported, the Cornmen then, thinking the Restraint would not continue, began again the second Time to increase their Prices. The Brewer, to thwart the evil Minds of the Cornmen, and bad Dealing of the Merchants, restrained themselves from brewing Strong Beer to be transported as Merchandizes; whereby the Price of Corn did fall the second Time. November 4, one procured from the Lord Treasurer, Licence to brew and transport 500 Tons of Beer, notwithstanding the Restraint and Orders taken against the Brewers. Which Warrant was for Service of her Majesty; whereby the Price of Corn increased the third Time.

THERE was an Estimate made at this Time, [about the Year 1591] what Beer was carried yearly for the Low Countries and other Places, after this Manner: There were twenty great Brewhouses or more, situate on the Thames Side, from Milford-stairs in Fleet-street, till below St. Catharine's, which brewed yearly the Quantity of seven or eight Brewings of sweet Beer or strong Beer, that passed to Stoad, Embsden, the Low Countries, Calais, Diep, and thereabouts. And account but 600 Brewings at 44 Barrels the Brewing, it makes 26400 Barrels, which at seven to a Ton, make 3771 Ton.

THE Hall of this Company is situated on the North Side of Addle-street, near the East End. It is a handsome Building, with a graceful Appearance at the Entrance of Columns and Arches of the Tuscan Order, and Enrichments of Fruit-Leaves, &c. The Walls are Brick, the Window-Cases Stone.

THERE are ten Alms-houses for ten poor Widows of Islington, left by the Lady Owen, to the Care of this Company.

LEATHER-

LEATHERSELLERS.

THE Leatherfellers are the 15th Company of LONDON, and were incorporated in the 6th Year of Richard the III, when Whittington was Lord Mayor.

THEIR Arms and Crest were first granted by John Moor, Norroy King at Arms, May 20, 19 Edward IV.

AFTERWARDS Roger Machado, Clarencieux, confirmed the same, adding Supporters thereto by Patent under his Hand and Seal, in the 21st of King Henry VII. Anno 1505. They were afterwards confirmed by Thomas Benoit, Clarencieux, October 11, 22 Hen. VIII. viewed, enter'd and approved in the Visitation 1634.

THE Arms are : Argent, three Bucks reguardant Gules. Crest ; a Buck, Or, attired Sable. Supporters ; a Buck as the last, and a Ram of the first.

THE Leatherfellers are govern'd by a Master, three Wardens, 26 Assistants, and 167 on the Livery. Their Livery Fine is twenty Pounds, and Stewards twelve Pounds.

THIS Company, by Patent from King Henry the VIII, had the Search of Calves-skins, Sheepskins, and Lamb-skins, Goats and Kid-skins, deceitfully wrought ; and of all other like deceitful Works and Workmen touching that Mystery, in any Part of the Realm ; and were to make such Search by the Survey of the Mayor and other Head Officers of the City and Town where such Search shall be made : And had farther Power to punish the said Offenders, and to seize, as Forfeit, the same deceitful Ware : Whereof the one Moiety to the Use of the King and his Successors, or to the Use of those Cities and Places where the Offence happens, and the other Moiety to the Company ; and the Searchers were to be sworn to make due Search. And such a Power also had the Company of Skinners by Patent.

THE Leatherfellers became great Engrossers of Leather in all Places of England, and did transport it abroad, to the raising of the Price of it : For which the Glovers, within forty Miles Compass about LONDON, feeling the Inconveniency of it, made Complaint about the Years 1593, and 1594, to the Lords of the Privy Council. They complained, that the Leatherfellers did engross continually into their Hands all Sorts of Leather within the several Shires of England, and also Ireland and Scotland, which had raised the Price of White Leather from 20 s. the Hundred, to 50 s. and 3 l. the Hundred. Secondly, that when they had so engrossed it by the Thousand, whereof they bought three or four Sorts at several Prices, they then packed it into Dozens, and put four Skins at the least into every Dozen, scarce worth an Half-penny a-piece ; and yet nevertheless did sell their mixed Dozens far dearer than they paid for the very best ; whereby they, the Glovers, were deceived at the least 16 d. in every Dozen, by four small Skins, in ordinary called Linings, packed in every such Dozen. Thirdly, they further complained, that by Means of this Engrossing, they were constrained to come thirty or forty Miles Compass, round about LONDON, to buy their Leather at LONDON : Whereas were it not for them, they might have had their Leather at home in the Country, and at a far more reasonable Rate, and better. Lastly, that where by their intolerable engrossing (being but four Persons that did it) they were become great Transporters of Leather out of the Land, and under Colour of Licence for one Thousand, shipped away ten Thousand, they prayed their Lordships, that some might be appointed to see, that no more were shipped away than were licensed ; and that a Market might be appointed for all White Leather, and that the Countrymen might be commanded to bring in their Leather to a settled Place ; as at Leadenhall, or such like, before they made Sale thereof to any Leatherfeller or other, whereby to engross it. That they, the poor Glovers about LONDON, might buy the best for their Money, as soon and as well as they ; and then Leather, in short Space, should be sold for 30 s. which was then 50 s. and upwards. And for the Reformation of these apparent Injuries, they thought it convenient that Leather should be sealed, so as the Price exceeded not 2 d. the Dozen. And lastly, that if this were not look'd to, the Leatherfellers would soon become richer than common Subjects, and Thousands of the Glovers forced to beg about the Streets.

By Reason of the Trades of the Merchants in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, to Barbary and Russia, and other Places, there was a great Quantity of Skins of divers Sorts then yearly brought into the Realm, more than in Times past. And towards the latter Times of that Queen, the People had better Experience in dressing, working and making of Leather ; some with Oil, some with Allum, some with Shomack and other Things. By Reason whereof, a greater Number of the Queen's Subjects, with their Families, were set on work and maintained, than in former Times. And by Reason of the good and well dressing thereof, the same was more used than formerly, to the Benefit of the Realm, and the great Store transported by Way of Merchandize : Whereby the Queen had the more Custom, and Subsidy both outwards and inwards.

UPON Pretence of an Act of Parliament, Edward Darcy, Esq; sued to the Queen for her Letters Patents, during his Life, or for twenty Years, for the Searching and Sealing of all Leather throughout England, as was provided in the Statute for Shoe-Leather : For the Leatherfellers had been found guilty of great Abuses practised, in deceitful Dressing, Sale and Uttering of all Leather for the most Part, except Shoe-Leather : The Skin of a Bull, Horse, &c. was sold for right Buff, Rams-skins and Sheep-skins, sold for right Shamways : And so many other Kinds, to the Wrong and Hinderance of the Buyer.

Darcy succeeded in his Suit, and had his Patent from the Queen, but still with a Clause in it for Revocation by six of the Council. This was a very gainful Business to him ; as, for the sealing of a Dozen of the best Stag's-skins dressed, worth 4 l. was paid 8 s. For sealing a Dozen of the second Sort, worth 33 s. 4 d. the same was paid ; and so proportionably for other Skins : So that he received sometimes the tenth Part, the ninth Part, the seventh, the sixth, the fourth, and sometimes, and often, the third Part of the Value of the Commodity.

THEREFORE, soon after this Patent was begun to be executed, which was about the End of the Year 1592, the Leatherfellers, and all that dealt in Leather-cutting, made most grievous Complaints, especially the poorer Sort, viz. that it was like to overthrow them and their Trades, and were minded to repair in a Multitude to the Court to the Lords of the Council. But first they went to Sir William Row, Lord Mayor, with a Petition to him. The Mayor hereupon sent his Letters to the Lords, to prevent the Tumult, together with their Petition. In which Petition joined all these Tradesmen following, viz. Leatherfellers, therfellers, Fellmongers, Glovers, Point-makers, Purse-makers, Sadlers, Girdlers, Coffier-makers, Budget-Makers, Stationers, White Tawyers, Jerkin-makers, Leather-dyers, and all other Dressers, Workers and Converters of Leather, inhabiting within the City. They set forth, That whereas he, the Lord Mayor, had received a strait Charge from the Lords and others of her Majesty's Privy Council, about the Assistance to be given to Mr. Darcy, touching the Execution of his Patent, for the View, Search and Sealing of Leather of what Kind soever: Wherein a new Office was allowed, with Allowance of Fees, to so excessive and enormous a Rate, as the like whereof was never heard of within the Realm, to be imposed upon the Subjects, upon any Occasion of publick Service or Duty whatsoever, to be performed to her Highness and the State of her Realm: Hereby the poor Suppliants were like utterly to be undone, and their Trades overthrown, in Case the said Patent should so take Effect. Wherefore they prayed the Mayor, being the chief Governor of the City under her Highness, and the chief and principal Warden of the said Companies, and of all other Trades within the City, to be a Means to the Queen or the Lords, that the Execution of the said Patent might be suspended, and the Grievances of the said Companies be farther consider'd of, either by their Lordships, or some other grave indifferent Persons, to be appointed by them, who by their Wisdoms might judge and discern of the untrue Suggestion made to the Queen by Mr. Darcy, for the obtaining of this Patent; and also of the manifold Inconveniencies, and intolerable Oppressions, which would fall upon the said Companies, in Case the said Patent should be put in Execution.

So this Business came before the Lords: And Darcy exposed as much as ever he could, all the Deceits of the Leatherfellers, and their monstrous Gains, by selling counterfeited Wares for the best: And in Conclusion, his Solicitor asserted, that the Workmen that dress'd the true Leather were desirous to have all Leather sealed, that thereby the Good might be known from the bad, and that all People might perceive by the Seal what they had for their Money: So should not the Leatherfeller deceive the whole Commonwealth.

THE Leatherfellers, and the Workers in Leather, put in their Paper to the Lord Buckhurst, Sir John Fortescue, and Sir John Woolley, of the Queen's Council, appointed to hear this Business. Wherein they utterly denied any unlawful, counterfeit, or deceitful Dressing of the Sorts of Leather, or that any of it was requisite to have any Search or Seal in such Manner and Form as Mr. Darcy untruly suggested to her Majesty. And they marvelled that he, being a Man of great Experience and Calling, would attempt, or presume to sue unto her Majesty to search any Sorts of Leather which were not appointed to be searched by Parliament (Tanned Leather being only so appointed) and required to search those Sorts of Leather, for which there is no Act of Parliament, nor Law. And her Majesty ruled her Subjects only by the Laws of the Realm, and would not deal with any contrary to Justice. They urged the Bondage the Patentee would bring the Queen's Subjects into, to cause every Leather-cutter, Dresser and Occupier of Leather, to bring his Goods to such Towns and Places, and at such Times as he and his Deputy should appoint, and there and then attend their Leisure; and what an infinite Toil and Loss of Time would be consumed therein in carrying to and fro. They shewed what an intolerable Tax, and what heavy Sums of Money this would amount unto, if it were to be paid by the Law of the Realm. That it would be consider'd, whether it were meet that such Tax should be laid upon the People, not being granted by Parliament, nor warranted by Law. And whether, if it were in her Majesty's Pleasure to grant it, it were meet or requisite to raise a Revenue of fourscore or an hundred thousand Pounds to one Man, to the utter undoing of many Thousands, her Majesty's poor and dutiful Subjects. It was also put to their Considerations, that a Multitude of the Queen's Subjects should be bound in 40 l. yearly, not to sell, or put to Sale, any such lawful Leather, without the Search and Seal of Mr. Darcy, or his Assigns; and that those that refused, should be imprisoned and restrained from their Trades and Occupations, until it pleased Mr. Darcy and his Assigns or Deputies, to remit their supposed Offence; and to compel every Man to pay for the same Bond 4 d. Since that it appeared through the whole Course of the Grant, there was no Law to warrant the same. Lastly, whether it were a meet and convenient Thing, that Mayors, Bailiffs, &c. who were sworn to execute Justice, should be bound, contrary to the Rules of Law, to give Aid or Assistance to the Patentee, or his Deputies.

THIS put some Stop to Darcy's Patent, inso-much that he earnestly applied himself to the Lord Treasurer, that he might have his Patent, or at least a new one, for the Fees for Sealing abated; and professing himself to be satisfied with 200 l. or 150 l. a Year. The said Treasurer (to whom this Matter was left) that he might the better judge of the Leatherfellers Business, made these Queries. First, How many Kinds of Leather were subject to the Sealing? Secondly, Who were the People in Quality that did first work upon them? Thirdly, How many Workmens Hands they passed before they came to the Leatherfellers? Fourthly, How many Kinds there were of this Leather, and what was the Difference of the Prices of them? These Queries he sent to certain knowing Men in Matters of Trade for their Judgment herein, who gave him in a Schedule of all the Prices of Leather, with the Rates they judged fitting for the Sealing.

THE Lord Treasurer at length made some other Propositions to the Leatherfellers; to which nevertheless they would not comply; wherefore he did imprison some of them. Sir Richard Martin, and Sir John Hart, Aldermen, and the Recorder, did advise them to yield to Darcy: But they (whose Names were John Ward, Arthur Parkinson, Anthony Quaplade, and Richard Ironside) did urge to the said Aldermen, that at their first incorporating into this noble City, they were charged with a precise Oath: To be obedient and obedient unto the Mayor and Ministers of the City, the Franchises and Customs thereof to maintain, and this City to keep harmless in that that in them was: And then they bade them judge, if to admit Mr. Darcy's Ministers to search and seal, were not to run headlong into the horrible Sin of Perjury; which the Queen could never abide, nor ever yet left unpunished: And because they might err, they prayed, that the Exposition of their Oath might be referred to the general Censure of a Common-Council of the City. And they prayed God to strengthen them with all Constancy and Patience to endure any Thing rather than by their own Act to dispossess themselves of that which had been enjoyed by them and their Predecessors, Citizens of LONDON, three hundred Years and more; or rather than to yield Mr. Darcy a Jot more than they were bound to do, in 100 l. a-piece, by a Decree made with the most deep Deliberation the 13th of February last, in the Star-Chamber, by the Lords of her Honourable Privy Council, assisted with the Presence of the most Reverend Judges of the Land.

ON the Back-side of this Paper, they in these Words petition the Lord Treasurer.

WE most humbly beseech your good Lordship, that even as you have been hitherto most worthily accounted the very CATO of the Common Weal; and even as your Lordship will not, that her Majesty be inferior in Honour and Princely Integrity to her most noble Father: Who in the seventeenth Year of his Reign uttered these Words, as is reported by Mr. Hall, to his eternal Praise, viz. That his Mind was never to ask any Thing of his Commons that might sound to his Dishonour, or the Breach of his Laws; so we beseech your good Lordship, even for the Love that you bear to God, her Majesty, and your Country, whose Cause this is to read these Reasons; and then to judge, whether we be worthy of Imprisonment, or no: Having no other Choice but to endure Imprisonment, or to damn our own Souls, and to yield to that which is more heavy to us, than eight Subsidies yearly paying during our Lives, without Coertion of the Laws.

THUS stout and hardy were these Leatherfellers, in asserting their Privileges and Rights as Citizens and Free-born Subjects.

To all this may be added, that this Business having Difficulty as to the Matter of Law, so much insisted on by the Leatherfellers, the said Lord Treasurer, a just and wary man, sent to Popham and Egerton, the one the Queen's Attorney-General, and the other her Solicitor, to examine the State of the Case, who found it to stand thus, as they signified to him in Writing: That King Henry VII. did confirm certain Ordinances formerly made by the Mayor of LONDON, touching the Leatherfellers of LONDON, in the Time of King Richard II. concerning how the Defects in the said Mystery in that Time should be surveyed and reformed in some Points: Which Ordinances concerned only Sheeps, Calves, and Lambs Leather. And King Henry VII. by that Charter did farther grant, that the Wardens of the Leatherfellers of LONDON should by themselves, or their sufficient Deputies, have the Search of all counterfeited Calves, Sheeps, and Lambs Leather, and all Workmanship concerning the same Mystery, as well in the City, as in all Places of the Realm, and of all misusing of the same Faculty or Mystery; which by the Confession before them was neglected, and not exercised according to the said Grant. Therefore the said Attorney and Solicitor thought, in Law the Grant was voidable by Non-usans. Yet so long as that Grant stood unrepealed, Darcy could not well have the Effect of his Grant from her Majesty (being, as they took it, the more reasonable for Reformation of Abuses then practised) unless he sued a Scire facias, for to repeal that Patent of King Henry VII. for Non-usus thereof: Wherein being negligent in the City of LONDON, it was to be thought they had been much more negligent in all other Places.

THE Hall belonging to the Leatherfellers Company, is situated at the East End of Little St. Helen's.

ON the North Side of Hart-Street; between Monkwell-Street and Cripplegate, stand Six Alms-houses, erected by Mr. Robert Rogers of this Company, and good Maintenance allowed the Inhabiters for ever. The Oversight whereof is committed to the Leatherfellers.

ALSO in Little St. Helen's are seven Alms-Houses, for seven poor Widows of those of that Company, who have 5 l. 4 s. per Ann. paid every Fortnight, and 15 s. each for Coals.

PEWTERERS.

THE Pewterers were a Company, or Meeting of friendly and neighbouring Men, in the Time of K. Edward IV. and in the 13th Year of this King became incorporated, and from him have ben confirmed by several Princes since.

THEIR Ensigns Armorial are, Azure, on a Chevron, Or, between three Cross-bars, Argent, as many Roses Gules. Crest, Two Arms holding a Pewter Dish proper. Supporters, Two Sea Horses per Fess, Or and Argent.

THIS Company is governed by a Master, 2 Wardens, 28 Assistants, and 103 on the Livery.

THIS Company used to cast into Bars such Tin as was to be transported out of the Realm; whereby the Poor of the Company were wont to have Part of their Living: But after those Bars were made by Strangers beyond the Seas; whereby the Poor were greatly hindered, which occasioned the Company in the Year 1594, to petition Queen Elizabeth, that they might have some lawful Interest in the Trade thereof towards their Living and Maintenance, being two thousand People at the least. This Petition the Queen committed to the Lord Treasurer, and the Lord Buckhurst: Who moving so many Doubts and Difficulties, and inforcing them to give the said Lords Satisfaction therein, three Years and more were spent in hearing and determining the same. As first they examined,

I. How the same might stand with the Good and Benefit of the Tanners of Cornwall and Devonshire: For which Purpose they called before them the Lord Warden of the Stanneries, requiring him to confer with some principal Tanners of those Countries, and to certify their Lordships of their Assent or Dissent thereto. Which was done accordingly with good Allowance of their said Petition, as a Thing very beneficial to them: Provided only, that it might be taken at their Hands at a Price certain; which was accordingly inserted in the Grant of the Queen to them.

II. Afterwards the Lords were desirous to be further advertised, what Benefit or Prejudice might hereby accrue to the Merchant Transporters of the Commodity, or to any other using the Trade thereof. And so they wrote to the Lord Mayor of LONDON, to confer with such Merchants, or other Traders therein, as he should think fit. The Mayor gave Answer to these Lords, certifying that the Pewterers Petition was no Ways prejudicial to any one of the said Transporters or Traders for Tin.

III. Then the abovesaid Lords were desirous to know, whether the same might be hurtful to the Queen's Coinage or Custom, and conferred with some Officers of the Custom-house, and were by them fully resolved, that it would cause not only a Certainty, but an Increase of her Customs, as well for Coinage as for Transportation.

IV. Then their Lordships objected, that this Grant to them, the Corporation of the Pewterers, might be injurious to the Generality of the Pewterers throughout the whole Realm. Of this they were fully satisfied by good Proof and Testimony made before them, that the casting of Bars had not heretofore been used or practised by any Pewterers of England, but only by the Corporation of LONDON.

V. Then

V. Then their Lordships required farther Satisfaction, whether the Wages or Allowance of one Half-penny in the Pound, demanded for the Melting and Casting of the same Bars, were not too great a Sum: And they heard divers Proofs and Testimonies made touching the same, that the Charge of the Melting and Casting of the same into Bars deducted, the Remain thereof was not found so great, but that their Lordships thought it a fit Relief towards the Help of the said Company: And that in former Times more than an Half-penny was used to be allowed by the Merchants.

THEN their Lordships finding a general Exclamation and Discontentment against Patents of Privilege, thought fit to be advised by the Attorney-General, whether this Statute might stand with the Laws and Statutes of the Realm, or not. Of which being resolved, they committed to the said Attorney the Drawing of the Patent; and yet fearing least some Inconvenience might escape them, which Time and Experience might bring forth, they would not let it pass without a special Proviso for her Majesty to revoke, or annihilate it at her Will and Pleasure.

AND so the Patent was engrossed by the Attorney-General, by Order from the Queen: And was reviewed by their Lordships, and signed by them; and by them thought fit to pass the Queen's Signature at her good Pleasure. But she, when it was offered her, thought fit to defer the Signing thereof, till she might receive some farther Information therein, as well from the Lord Warden of the Stannaries, as from Mr. Carmarthen, and Mr. Middleton, who were very knowing Merchants in those Times. From whom the Queen receiving Satisfaction, signed the same. And so it passed both the Signet and Privy Seal.

AFTER all this Trouble, Cost and Charges, sustained in Prosecuting this Suit four Years, the Earl of Oxford wrote to the Queen, to have the Benefit of the said Patent granted to himself. And so would have undone the Pewterers, their Wives and Children. Whereupon the Company petitioned Sir Tho. Egerton in the Year 1598, and in the Month of April, then Lord Keeper, to be a Means to her Majesty, that they might have their Patent to pass the Great Seal according to her Majesty's gracious Grant thereof unto them. All this Fatigue did these Pewterers go through for the Good of their Company.

THE Fellowship of the Craft and Mystery of Pewterers of LONDON, and elsewhere, was before Henry the Eighth's Reign, one of the best Handicrafts within this Realm; and grew and continued by Means of sundry good Acts and Statutes made for the Exercise of the same; as in the 19th of Hen. VII. and 4 Hen. VIII. And the English Pewter was had in much Estimation in strange Regions and Countries, by a good mixing of Pewter, and forging of Pewter Vessels.

THE Hall of the Pewterers Company is situated on the West Side of Lyme Street, of which see more Book II. Chap. IV.

BARBER-SURGEONS.

THE Arms of the Barber-Surgeons, their Crest and Supporters were granted by Sir Gilbert Dethick Garter, Robert Cooke Esq; Clarencieux, and William Flower Esq; Norroy, by Patent under their Hands and Seals, June the 2d, 1569. And are:

The Cross of St. George charged with a Lion of England, the 1st and 4th Quarters Sable, a Chevron between three Fleams Argent; the 2d and 3d Party per pale Argent and Vert, a Rose Gules, crowned with an Imperial Crown, Or, Crest, an Apinacus; Supporters, two Linxes proper, each gorged with a Coronet, and thence a Chain reflected over their Backs, Argent.

THIS Company is governed by a Master, 3 Wardens, 26 more of the Court of Assistants, and 196 Livery Men, besides the Commonalty: The Livery-Fine is 11 l. A Liveryman may take 3 Apprentices, others 2, and none can practise the Trades of Barbers or Surgeons in the City of LONDON, unless free of this Company.

THE Barber-Surgeons, being a Company of no mean Credit and Estate, became a Brotherhood and Fellowship, incorporated by the Charter of King Edward IV. afterwards by the Henrys, the Seventh and Eighth, Philip and Mary, and Queen Elizabeth. Last of all, they were again confirmed by King James, with other Additions also to their Charters. And all those former Charters have been re-confirmed, with large Additions, by King Charles I.

To rectify and explain what is said of these Barber-Surgeons, let this that follows be added.

BARBERS.

THE Barbers, long before they were united with the Surgeons, were an antient Company of themselves; being incorporated in the first Year of the Reign of King Edward IV. Feb. 24. at Westminster. And their Company confirmed by King Henry VII. and King Henry VIII. by sundry Letters Patents. These Barbers antiently practised Surgery also.

Thomas Colard, Citizen and Barber, by his Will dated Anno 1467, gave his Book of Physick and Surgery, called Rosse and Constantine, to the Hall of Barbers, to be laid into the Library.

Robert Scot, Citizen and Barber of LONDON, by his Will dated Decemb. 1490, gave to the Fellowship of the Craft of Barbers, his Tenements in the Parish of St. Bartholomew the Less; and to their Successors for ever.

SURGEONS.

THE Surgeons were not incorporated till the Reign of Henry VIII. yet they were a Society long before. And there was an Act of Parliament for them 3 Hen. VIII. viz. That none should practise Surgery, no more than Physick, but first to be examined and approved upon Pain of 5 l. for every Month. In the Beginning of the said King Henry, there were but twelve Persons that were Surgeons in the City of LONDON (though in former Times many more) and yet they consisted of a Warden and a Fellowship, called Of the Craft and Mystery of Surgeons, enfranchised in the City of LONDON. In the 5th of Henry VIII. they had an Act made in their Favour, to be discharged of Quests, Watch, or other Office; whereby they should use or occupy any defensible Armour, or Geer of War. And the Cause assigned of this was, because Time out of Mind, as well in LONDON, as in other Cities and Boroughs of the Realm, they had been exempt and discharged from all such Offices and Business; for their continual Service and Attendance, that they daily and nightly, at all Hours and Times, gave to the King's Liege People. But they were not as yet incorporated.

BARBERS and SURGEONS.

IN the 32d of Henry VIII. there was an Act passed for the Barbers and Surgeons; importing, That whereas there were two distinct Companies of Surgeons, occupying the Science of Surgeons, the one Company commonly called The Barbers of of LONDON; it being judged necessary that both Companies should be united, and made one Body Corporate, by the said Act they were both united, and made one intire and whole Body Corporate, and one Commonalty perpetual, to be called by the Name of Masters or Governors of the Mystery and Commonalty of Barbers and Surgeons of LONDON for evermore. By this Act those of the Company that occupied Surgery were to be exempt from bearing of Armour, or from being put in any Watches or Inquests. And that they might take every Year four Persons condemned and put to Death for Felony, for Anatomies, at their Discretions and Pleasures: And that none of the Company that used Barbery and Shaving, should occupy Surgery, Letting of Blood, or any other Thing belonging to Surgery, except only Drawing of Teeth. Nor he that used the Mystery of Surgery, should exercise the Feat or Craft of Barbery or Shaving.

THE Surgeons afterwards were complained of, as well for their Ignorance in their Craft, oftentimes hurting their Patients instead of doing them Good; as also for taking great Sums of Money, and doing little therefore: And that it was well known, that the Surgeons admitted, would do no Cure to any Person, but where they knew to be rewarded with a greater Sum than the Cure extended to. For many rotted and perished to Death for Lack of Help of Surgery, and daily died; and that they troubled others well disposed, that minister'd Help for God's Sake to poor People that had sore Breasts, Pin and Web in the Eye, Scalding, Burning, Sore Mouth, the Stone and Strangury, Saucelim and Morpew. In Consideration whereof, and for the Comfort and Relief of the King's poor Subjects, it was ordained, in the 34th and 35th of Hen. VIII. That it should be lawful to every Person, having Knowledge and Experience in the Nature of Herbs, Roots and Waters, or of the Operation of the same, to practise and minister to any outward Sore, uncome Wound, Apostemations, outward Swelling, or Disease, any Herbs, Ointments, Bath, Pultes and Emplaisters, according to their Cunning and Experience.

THIS Company (besides divers Privileges of several Kinds by their Charter granted unto them) have Power at any Time to command the Body of any Malefactor executed at Tyburn, (except a Traitor's) to anatomize the same; which they commonly do, and exercise their Skill thereupon in private at their Hall: Such Body being brought from the Place of Execution to their Hall, is cleansed, and laid out upon a Table, in their publick Theatre built for that Purpose; where, the next Day, a learned Doctor of Physick meets the chief Members of the Company; and the Doctor sitting in a Chair against the Body, and the rest sitting on a Bench about it, reads a Lecture about some Part or Member; and two of the Company (called at that Time Masters of the Body) standing by the Table upon which the Body lies, having all necessary Instruments to put in Practice what the Doctor reads and dictates, the Galleries above being filled with young Students in Physick and Surgery, to hear, and see the Method and Manner thereof, for the Increase of their Knowledge. These Lectures do commonly last three Days, and then they bury the mangled Body in a Place in the Parish Church-yard: But sometimes they make a Skeleton of the Body, or otherwise; and many Pieces of Art of that Kind are preserved, and stand erected about their Theatre.

THE Hall of this Company stands in Monkwell-street, in Cripplegate Ward; of which see more Book III. Chap. VI.

A R M O U R E R S.

THE Society or Company of the Armourers have been a Brotherhood of antient Continuance, and became incorporated about the Year 1423, in the Beginning of the Reign of K. Henry VI. who was pleased to stile himself a Brother of the Society.

THE Arms and Crest of the Brothers and Sisters of the Fraternity or Guild of St. George, of the Mystery of the Armourers of the City of LONDON, as they were termed in their Charter, were antiently borne by the said Corporation; but afterwards declared and confirmed to them by Thomas Hawley, Clarencieux, by Patent under the Seal of his Arms and Office, 3 & 4 Phil. & Mary, 1556, and confirmed in a Visitation 1634.

THE Armourers are a Master, two Wardens, 21 Assistants, and 58 on the Livery, besides Yeomen. In which Company are many Brasiers. Their Livery Fine is uncertain.

Mrs. Joan Doxie, Widow, gave to this Company of Armourers, for the Relief of four poor Widows, for ever yearly, 5 l. to each, and desired to have it called the poor Widow's Mitc.

THE antient Appointment of the just Weight and Quantity of each Loaf of Bread, was confirmed in the latter part of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, by the Lords of her Privy Council, with their Names subscribed thereunto. And was to this Tenor, (according to a Book made by J. Powel, some Time Clerk of the Market in King James the First's Time, called The Book of Assize.)

Antient LAWS, CUSTOMS, and good ORDINANCES, set down for Bakers, in making, sizing, and selling all sorts of lawful Bread, which by the Laws are vendible unto the Queen's Subjects in the Commonwealth, retailing the same.

First, THAT no manner of Person or Persons shall keep a common Bakehouse in Cities and Corporate Towns, but such Persons as have been apprenticed unto the same Mystery, and brought up therein for the more Space of seven Years, or else otherwise skilful in the good Making and true Sizing of all Sorts of Bread; and shall put his own Mark or Seal upon all Sorts of his Man's Bread, which he or they shall make and sell, as before is mentioned.

Item, That no Baker, or any other Persons, do make, bake, utter and sell any Kinds or Sorts of Bread in the Commonwealth, but such which the Statutes and antient Ordinances of this Realm do allow them to bake and sell; that is to say, they may bake and sell Symnel Bread, and Wastel, White, Wheaten, Household, and Horfe Bread; and none other Kinds of Bread, to put to Sale unto her Majesty's Subjects.

Item, They must make and bake Farthing White Bread, Halfpenny White, Penny White, Halfpenny Wheaten, Penny Wheaten Bread, Penny Household, and Two-penny Household Loaves; and none of greater Size, upon Pain of Forfeiture, unto poor People all such great Bread which they, or any of them shall make, to sell, of greater Size, (the Time of Christmas always excepted.)

Item, They shall not utter and sell to any Innholder, or Victualler, either in Man's Bread or Horfe Bread, (which shall retail the same) but only 13 d. worth for 12 d. without any Poundage, or other Advantage.

Item, They shall sell and deliver unto Inholders and Victuallers in Horfe Bread, but three Loaves for a Penny, and 13 Pennyworth for 12 d. (as aforesaid) every one of the same three Horfe

Loaves weighing the full Weight of a Penny White Loaf, whether Wheat be good, cheap, or dear.

Item, That no Bakers, or other Person or Persons, shall at any Time, or Times hereafter, make, utter, or sell by Retail, within or without their Houses, unto any the Queen's Subjects, any Spice Cakes, Buns, Bisket, or other Spice Bread, (being Bread out of Size, and not by Law allowed) except it be at Burials, or upon the Friday before Easter, or at Christmas; upon Pain of Forfeiture of all such Spice Bread to the Poor.

Item. Whereas there are in Cities and Corporate Towns, common Bakers, using the Mystery of Baking there, and within the same Towns common Bakers, which come into the Market with their Bread to be sold, they shall not only bring with them such Kinds or Sorts of sized Bread as the Law and Ordinances do allow to be made and sold as aforesaid; but also shall keep and observe this Order in the Weight of their Bread, as hereafter followeth: Because the said Foreigners do not bear and pay within the same Cities and Towns, such Scot and Lot as the Bakers of the same Towns do.

First, The Foreigners Halfpenny White Loaves shall weigh half an Ounce more in every Loaf than the Bakers of the same Towns Halfpenny White Loaves do.

Item, Their Penny White Loaves shall weigh one Ounce more in every Loaf than the Bakers of the same Towns Penny White Loaves do.

Item, Their Half-penny Wheaten Loaves shall weigh one Ounce more in every Loaf than the Bakers of the same Towns Half-penny Wheaten Loaves do.

Item, Their Penny Wheaten Loaves shall weigh two Ounces more in every Loaf than the Bakers of the same Towns Penny Wheaten Loaves do.

Item, Their Penny Household Loaves shall weigh two Ounces more in every Loaf, than the Bakers of the same Towns Penny Household Loaves do.

Item, Their Two-penny Household Loaves shall weigh four Ounces more in every Loaf, than the Bakers of the same Towns Two-penny Household Loaves do.

Provided always, That the Clerk of the Market of her Majesty's Household, his Deputy or Deputies, Mayors, Bailiffs, and other Officers of Cities, Corporate Towns and Liberties, shall look unto, have diligent Care and Respect unto the due Performance and Execution of these Articles; and they shall and may, from Time to Time, freely give and distribute all such unlawful Bread as shall be hereafter made and put to Sale, being contrary to these Articles before-mentioned, unto poor Prisoners, or any other poor People: Willing and requiring all Justices of Peace, Constables, Bailiffs, and other Officers, to be aiding, assisting, and helping all the aforesaid Officers in the due Execution thereof, as they will answer the contrary at their Perils. AND in the Beginning of the next Reign, viz. that of King James I. the same Care was again taken for the due and exact Assize of Bread, and for the Regulation of the Bakers, upon an Information brought by J. Powel, Clerk of the Market, unto the Lords of his Highness's most Honourable nourable Household: That divers Bakers and other Persons, taking upon them the Mystery of Baking, and Uttering of Bread unto the King's Majesty's Subjects, in the Commonwealth, for their own private Lucre and Commodity, did not only make and sell to the Subjects, Breads of odd Sizes, made by their own Inventions, but also divers Kinds and Sorts of Bread; which were both repugnant to the Laws and good Ordinances of the Realm, and likewise hurtful to the Commonwealth. Wherefore Orders and Articles were made and agreed upon by the Lords and others of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council, appointing what Kinds and Sorts of Bread were to be made and sold. Which Orders were to the same Purport with those above made under Queen Elizabeth, requiring the Clerk of the Market, &c. and all other Officers of Cities, Towns Corporate, and Liberties, especially the Master and Wardens of the Company of BAKERS in the City of LONDON, their Officers and Ministers, to look unto, and have diligent Care and Respect unto the due Performance of these Articles. Memorandum, The Bakers are allowed 12 s. Advantage upon every Quarter of Wheat, for baking and other Charges; as if Wheat be at 20 s. the Quarter, then the Assize is to be at 32 s. the Quarter.

To this may be added what was enacted concerning the Assize of Bread, and the Care and Provision made to prevent all Abuses therein, Anno 8 Regni Annae, cap. 18. That after May 1, 1710, the Lord Mayor of London, the Mayor, Bailiffs, Aldermen, and other Chief Magistrate of any other Place, or two or more Justices of the Peace, where there shall be no such Magistrate, may set the Assize and Weight of all Sorts of Bread, to be sold by any Baker. Having Respect to the Price of the Grain, Meal or Flower, of which it shall be made, shall bear in the Market near the Place; and making a reasonable Allowance to the Baker for his Livelyhood.

The Assize to be set in Averdupois Weight.

No Person to sell or expose to Sale, any other Bread, than the several Sorts of White, Wheaten, or Household, and such other Sorts as shall be publickly lickly allowed by the Lord Mayor, Magistrates, &c. All which Sorts of Bread to be made according to the Goodness of the several Sorts of Grain.

AND the Assize and Weight of the White, Wheaten and Household Bread, to be ascertained according to a Table fixed to the said Act of Parliament. Which consisteth of several Columns: The first and last Columns shew the Price of the Bushel of Wheat, from 2 s. to 15 s. the Bushel, the Allowance of the Magistrates to the Baker for Baking being included. And in the other Columns is the Weight of the several Loaves, so that for Example, when the Price of Wheat is 5 s. the Bushel, and the Magistrates allow 1 s. 6 d. the Bushel to the Baker for Baking, then even with 6 s. 6 d. in the first or last Column, will be found the Weight of the several Loaves. But if the Price is 3 s. the Bushel, and the Allowance 1 s. then the Weight of the said Loaves will be found even with 4 s.

Note, That the White Loaves are one half, and the Wheaten three quarters of the Weight of Household Loaves.

EVERY Baker to mark on every Loaf the Price and Weight of that Loaf; or any other Mark the Lord Mayor, or other Magistrate, shall appoint; who shall have Power to appoint what Mark shall be used. The Penalty to the Baker is Forfeiture of 40 s.

THE Lord Mayor, &c. may in the Day time enter into Bakers Houses, &c. and search for, try, and weigh the Bread; and if wanting in Weight or Goodness, or not well baken, or not truly marked, &c. in such Case the Mayor shall cause it to be distributed to the Poor of the Place. The Baker or other Person not permitting the Search, or resisting, to forfeit 40 s. This Act to continue for three Years, and to the End of the next Session of Parliament.

THERE be also these antient Laws and Orders for Bakers and their Bread; as they are in a Manuscript Book of Robert Brook and Thomas West, Esquires, Clerks of the Market in King Edward the Fourth's Time, about the Year 1468.

Memorandum, The Baker shall be allowed in every Quarter of Whete bakynge, as it is provyd by the Kyngis Bakers, as it shal appere hereafter.

First, he shal have 4 d. and all his Branne to avauntage; and two Lofis for Fornage; and three half-pence for three Servauntes; and for Coles, ob. and for Yeste, ob. and for Salt, ob. and for Wood, 3 d. and for the bultelle, ob. and for sealing, ob. and for Candel, q. Summ 11 d. q. beside his Branne, and the two Loves.

This is proved by Statutis: And also by an Acte maad in William Conquerours tyme; and the tyme of Henry the Third; and in the tyme of King Edward the Third; and never reversid sithen.

Memorandum, It is ordayned bi Statute, that alle maner of Bakers dwelling out of Cities and Burgh Townes, as Bakers dwelling in Villagis, and upon Londe, their Peny Lof, what Corne soever it be, be it white Brede or browne, it shall wey more than the Peny Lof in the Town or City by xs. and the Halspeny Lof by vs. because they bere natliche chargis as Bakers in the Citiees doon and Townes. And yet they shal kepe the Assize truly according unto the Statute upon peyne of 6 s. 8 d. for his Offence, as often as he doth the contrary, beside his Mersment for brekyng of the Size, if his Lof wey nat as they do in Cities and Burgh Towns. And in likewise shal the Ferthing Lof wey after the Statute.

The Assize of BREAD.

This is the Assize of al Maner of Brede of Whete, and of what eting Corne soever it be. It shal be weied after the Ferthing Wastell; for the Symonell shal weye less then the Wastell by 2 s. because of the Sething.

VOL. II.

The Ferthing White Lofe, called the Cocket, shal wey more then the Wastell, by 2 s. because of the Bakynge.

The Half-peny Wheten Lofe, that is to say the Half-peny Cribel Lofe, shal wey three Ferthing White Lofys.

The Lof of al Maner of Corn, that is to say, the Horse Lof, shal wey two Half-peny White Lofis.

It is found also, in the Book Horn, at this Title, Incipiunt Statuta & Provisiones Civium LONDON. de Assiza Panis, that the same Care was taken for the Assize of Bread about Edward II's Reign.

SECUNDUM Consuetudinem Civitatis LONDON. &c. According to the Custom of the City of LONDON. an Assay ought to be made of Bread every Year after the Feast of St. Michael, by four discreet and sworn Men, chosen for this Purpose: And according to the Proportion of the common Weight of that Assay, the Bakers ought to bake their Loaves throughout the whole Year; namely, so, that if afterwards Bread-Corn be sold dearer than it was sold at the making the Assay, then the Bread ought to be of less Weight than it weighed in the Assay: And if it were of less Price, then the Bread ought to weigh more; only we ought cautiously to provide, that according to the Quantity whereby the Corn increaseth in Price, or decreaseth, the Bread increase or decrease in Weight.

The exact Manner of making the Assay was thus: That the said four sworn Men should buy three Quarters of Bread-Corn (or Meal) in the Sack upon the Pavement in the three Markets, one at Grassechurch, another at St. Botolph Billingsgate, and the third at Queenbith; of which they were to make a Wastell, and another Loaf less fine (which they called Coket); and after they had baked these Loaves with the greatest Diligence, then they went and presented them hot before the Mayor and Aldermen in Guildhall; and thus hot they were weighed. And then (saith the Statute) the Buying of the Bread-Corn shall be consider'd; and eight Pence for every Quarter shall be allowed to the Baker for his Charges. The Selling also of the Bran shall be consider'd, and shall be withdrawn out of the Sum that the Meal was bought for: And if (after divers exact Rules for the weighing of the Bread) there be more Loaves in Number than there shall remain Half-pence in the Sum of the Meal bought, when the Charge is allowed, then let there be a Partition of the Weight of those Loaves, remaining over and above. And so every Loaf shall be made of just Weight. And if there be fewer Loaves than the Number of Half-pence in the Sum the Meal was bought for, when the Charge is allowed, then let it be withdrawn from the Weight of each Loaf equally, so far until there result so many Loaves of equal Weight, as there are Half-pence in the Number of the Sum the Meal was bought at, when the Charge is allowed.

If there shall be more Loaves than the Number of Half-pence, let the Part exceeding be taken from the Number of Loaves, and see the how manieth Part it will be of the Number of Half-pence; and according to that Proportion, let the Weight of each Loaf be augmented. For Example Sake, if there be 20 Half-pence, and 24 Loaves, every Loaf of the Weight of forty Shillings, then the Number of Loaves increaseth above the Number of Half-pence, which are but 20; and it is the fifth Part, since five Times four make twenty. Therefore the Weight of every Loaf increaseth by the fifth Parth of its Weight; and the Weight of the Loaf was forty Shillings, whose whose fifth Part is eight Shillings. Therefore 20 Loaves shall be each Loaf of the Weight of 48 Shillings. And so each Loaf shall be of just Weight.

If there were more Half-pence than the Number of Loaves, we must see the how manieth Part was the Number increasing, of the Number of Loaves; and if it were a third Part, a fourth Part is to be lessen'd from every Loaf; and if it were a fourth Part, a fifth Part is to be lessen'd; and if it were a fifth Part, a sixth Part is to be lessen'd. For Example, if the Number of Half-pence were 24, and the Number of Loaves 20, then is the Number increasing 4, as before, which is the fifth Part of 20: Therefore each Loaf decreaseth of the fifth Part of its Weight. If the Weight therefore shall be 40 Shillings, it shall be 33 Shillings and 4 Pence. And so the Number of Loaves is equalled to the Number of Half-pence, and the Weight is the same.

Thus there was formerly extraordinary Care taken in the City about Bread, and for ordering the Bakers in the making and selling of their Bread. For that Purpose there were four principal Halimotes in the Year, when all the City Bakers were bound to meet together: Whereof the first was to be kept after the Feast of St. Michael, for the Profit of the City and the Kingdom. That the Bakers being assembled together, take and know their new Sheriffs, and retain in their Memories the Statutes of the City belonging to the Bakers, and receive the Assay of Bread.

The second Halimote was held after the Nativity of our Lord; that if there be any Transgression made in the first Term of the Year, it may be there without Difficulty more fully amended.

The third Halimote was accustomed to be called together after the Close of Easter; as well for the Coming of the King as of the Nobles of his Kingdom; lest there might seem to fall out a Want of this Kind of Service; that is, in a convenient Supply of the City and Inhabitants with good Bread.

The fourth Halimote was after the Nativity of St. John Baptist; that what should be solemnly appointed by the Common-Council and Providence of the City in the first three Terms, in this fourth Term might be profitably confirmed: So that the Goodness of so great a Work might not turn to Disprofit by Ignorance, or by Negligence.

To these four Halimotes all the Bakers must come; and if they come not, nor excuse and effoin themselves reasonably, they forfeited to the Sheriff 21 d.

Now further as to the Assay of Bread (whereof somewhat was said before) according to which the Price of Bread was to be set: At the Feast of St. Michael, in the 12th of Edward II. were bought three Quarters of Bread Corn, to make an Assay of White Bread according to Custom, for 17 s. 4 d. ob. and 3 s. 4 d. was allowed for all Expences about making the same Bread; whence the whole Sum ariseth to 20 s. 8 d. subtracting thence 12 d. for eight Ounces of Bran, there remains 19 s. 8 d. ob. the third Part is 6 s. 8 d. ob. which makes 157 Halfpence. And so many Loaves shall be made of Wastell, of an Halfpenny; and so many Loaves of Levat Bread, of an Halfpenny; and so many Loaves of Bisse, of an Halfpenny, of the whole Weight of the Bread forth coming of the said three Quarters of Bread Corn. The Weight of the whole Bread weighing together and at once 165 l. 4 s. 6 d.

The Assay according to the Regale of England.

When the Quarter of Bread Corn is sold for	2 s	The Wastell shall weigh	68 s

AND we must know, that the Baker may gain in every Quarter 3 d. with the Bran, and two Loaves of the Furnage; of the Price of 2 d. and to his Servants three Halfpence; and for his two Boys three Farthings; and for the Seal an Halfpenny; and for Yest an Halfpenny; and for Candle a Farthing; and for Brushes Three Pence; and for Bolting an Halfpenny.

Note, That Coket Bread of the same Corn, and of the same Bultel, or Bolting, shall weigh more than Wastels by 2 s. and of Corn of less Price, more by 5 s.

Also Bread of Artocope shall weigh less than Wastel by 2 s.

Also whole Bread, or Loaf of a Farthing, shall weigh Coket and half, &c.

IN the Bakers Halimote were these particular Laws and Charges given to all the City Bakers,

LET two or four Loaves be made for a Penny, and let the Baker make no Kind of Bread of greater Price to sell, but only two or four Loaves to a Penny; and that according to the Assize set for the present Year.

LET no Bran Loaf be made; nor being made of Bran, which is worse in breaking than it appears without.

LET every Baker have his Seal appearing in his Bread; so that it may be the better and more openly known, whose it is: And let this Manner of Sealing be as well in Bisse (Brown) Bread as in White.

LET no Baker sell Bread in his own House, nor before his own Oven; but let him have a Basket with his Bread in the King's Market: So that if his Bread shall not be competent according to the Market of Corn, the Baker's Body be at the Mercy of the Justice.

LET no Baker go into St. Michael Cornhill Church-yard, (where Bread Corn was sold) nor the Market of West-chepe, of Garfecherk, of Billynggate, nor to Botolwes Wharph, nor Queenhithe, nor go aboard any Ship to buy Corn, before the first Ringing. There seemed of old to be Bells rung in several Church Steeples of the City, as Bow for one, at certain Hours of the Day, and that both for Devotion and Business; and before the first Ringing in the Morning none might go out to buy Provision.

LET no Baker make Meal of Felger, of Sticks, of Straw, nor of Rushes.

LET no Baker entertain any one beyond one Night, unless he have him suspected of some Transgression.

Bakers keeping Hogs may safely nourish them for themselves in their own Houses, or elsewhere, without the Streets and Lanes of the City.

Let no Reqrateres pass London-Bridge towards Suthwerk, or elsewhere, to buy Bread, to carry it into the City of LONDON, to sell; because the Bakers of Suthwerk, nor of any other Place, are not subject to the Justice of the City.

Let no Baker draw away his Neighbour's Servant from his Service, as long as he ought to tarry in his Service, whether by Hire, or by Obligation of Trust; and this under Pain of 40 s. for the Use of the Sheriff.

If any Baker's Servant make a Transgression against his Master, so that he hath presumed to depart unlicensed from his Service, we decree under Forfeiture to the Sheriff, that none of the Bakers receive him, and retain him, until he have fully satisfied his Master.

Whereas it is common for Merchants to give Credit, and especially for Bakers commonly to do the same with Reqrateresses; under the Pain before taxed we forbid, that no Baker make the Benefit of any Credit to a Reqrateres, as long as he shall know her to be involved in her Neighbour's Debt.

For the avoiding the innumerable and intolerable Dangers and Scandals which are often wont to arise between Fellow-Bakers; we firmly forbid, that none presume to enter into this Trade, unless of his own, or the Help of his Friends, he can sufficiently fulfil the said Trade to our Lord the King, and the City of LONDON with 43 s. moveable Chattels, and find Pledge to perform it.

Let no Loaf be made to sell, of three Farthings, or five Farthings, nor of an Halfpenny, nor of a greater Price. But in Case such a Loaf shall be found to be carried in one's Arms, or under any Towels, let it be taken to the Use of the Sheriff, without any Recovery.

Bread made out of LONDON, and brought into the City to be sold, we decree to be adulterate; and therefore we firmly enjoin, that no Baker nor Reqrateres presume to buy any such Bread to sell, unless it be of competent Weight according to the Bread made in the City of LONDON, according to that which the Year requireth.

Let no Bread be taken cold, but warm, as it is delivered to the Baker by Assay.

Let no Turtary sell Bread to a Reqrateres, neither in their Shops, but only in their Chests [or Baskets] and in the King's Market; and not in their House, under Pain of 40 s.

Let no Turtary make White Bread to sell, nor on the contrary,

Let no Bread be sold in the King's Market but on Wednesday and Saturday. And if any Bread shall be found to be sold at the foresaid Place but on those said Days, it shall be called a Forfeiture without Recovery.

Six or eight of the Trade of Bakers shall swear before the Sheriff to keep the foresaid Statutes, and to accuse those that go against them.

The true Standard for Weights was once not to be found. Which occasioned great Wrongs for want of right and just weighing of Goods, bought and sold. Sir James Harvey, Mayor, informed the Lord Treasurer thereof, (before whom this Business seemed more especially to be brought) by his Letter, dated Decemb. 12, 1581, importing, "That where there was a great Abuse and Fraud daily used to the Queen's Majesty's loving Subjects, by reason of false Weights, as well within this City as in other Cities and Places elsewhere in the Realm; and whereof, as he was informed, his Lordship had heretofore been made privy, and had taken Care for the Reformation thereof. And that notwithstanding, the Abuse

"did yet continue; for that the true Standard made according to the Statute, for the sizing of all Weights, could not be found. And he [the Mayor] being this Year charged in Conscience, by reason of his Office, and Oath taken, to see that Falshood and Deceit punished, he thought it his Duty not only to remember his Lordship thereof, but also humbly to beseech him, that it would please him, to give him [the Mayor] his favourable Help and Advice, what Order or Course he should take with the City for the Reformation thereof. And so he committed his Lordship to the merciful keeping of the Almighty, &c.

Your Lordship's humble

James Harvey, Mayor.

As this Address had been made to the Lord Treasurer by the former Mayor, concerning the Deceits practised by means of false Weights, for want of the true Standard, and a Verdict touching the regulating the same, delivered into the Exchequer: So it sticking there, Application was made again by the next Mayor, Blank, for an effectual Dispatch of his necessary Affair; and that an Order might be sent to him and his Brethren, the Aldermen, to size Weights; whose Letter to the Lord Treasurer ran in these Words:

"My Duty most humbly done to your Lordship. Having lately entered with my Brethren, and the Common-Council of this City into establishing of Orders for true and upright Use of her Majesties Beam, with the Weights thereto belonging; which upon Continuance do daily wear, and need to be renewed and sized from Time to Time; we have found it necessary to be humble Suitors to your Lordship, that your Lordship will have in your honourable Remembrance the great Want that this City and the whole Realm findeth, for lack of Order to size Weights. Whereby the Commonweal taketh Detriment; and private Men presume without Order to sell, and use unlawful Weights, both in the City and in the Country, that are accustomed to take their assizing from hence.

"We have thought the Time more convenient now to move your Lordship, because we hear, that the later Verdict touching Weights is long since delivered before your Lordship, and the rest, in the honourable Court of Exchequer. It may please your Lordship to take Order with such Speed as your Lordship shall think meet, for Certainty in this Behalf. And that your Restraint be so released, as our Officers may be at Liberty to size accordingly. And so I leave to trouble your Lordship. At London, the last Day of July, 1583.

Your most humble,

Tho. Blank, Mayor.

WAX-CHANDLERS.

THE Company of Wax-chandlers having been a Brotherhood of very ancient standing, and much used in the Times of Superstition, became incorporated Anno Dom. 1484, the second Year of King Richard III.

THEIR Arms, which were granted by Thomas Holland, Clarencieux, are, Azure, on a Chevron Argent

Argent between three Lamps, Or, as many Roses Gules.

THIS Company are a Master, two Wardens, 23 Assistants, 71 Liverymen, and are, in the Whole, about 150. They may take but two Apprentices. The late Philip, Duke of Whar-ton, was a Liveryman of this Company.

THE Wax-chandlers Hall is in Maiden-lane, almost over-against Haberdashers-Hall.

TALLOW-CHANDLERS.

THE Company of the Tallow-chandlers, were a Society of great Antiquity, living, faith Stow, in good Formality among Men, and loving Agreement with themselves. They became incorporated in the second Year of King Edward IV. Anno Dom. 1461.

THE Arms and Crest given to John Prior, John Thirloe, William Blakeman, and Richard Greencroft, Wardens, and to other notable Men of the Fellowship and Occupation of Tallow-chandlers of LONDON, Freemen, and to their Successors for ever (having no Arms before) by John Smart, alias Garter, under his Hand and Seal of his Office, bearing Date Sept. 24. Anno Dom. 1456, 35 Hen. VI. the Motto, Delight in God, and he shall give thee thy Heart's Desire. The Crest is an Angel holding John Baptist's Head in a Charger, with a Glory about it. The Arms, Crest, and Supporters were allowed and granted by William Camden, Clarencieux, with this Motto, Quæ arguuntur, a Lumine manifestantur; and confirmed in the Visitation 1634, when this Company produced an antient Patent for these Arms, but another Crest granted them by John Smart aforesaid.

THE Arms are: Party per Fefs Azure and Argent, a Pale counterchanged; on every Piece of the first a Turtle Dove of the second, with each an Olive Branch in its Mouth, Or.

THE Tallow-chandlers are govern'd by a Master, four Wardens, about 40 Assistants, and 147 Liverymen, &c. The Livery Fine is 15*l.* 8*s.*

THIS Company of Tallow-chandlers, in former Times, dealt not only in Candles, but in Oil, Vinegar, Butter, Hops, Soap, &c. They were in the 3d of Henry VIII. appointed to search Oils, and had a Power to destroy such as were mingled and corrupt: Which was by them executed for a Time, and much Oil thereby destroyed, that might have been employed to good Use: But for that no Fee was granted for the Execution, it was neglected.

IN Queen Elizabeth's Reign, about the Year 1576, and before, Abuses and Deceits were daily used and increased in this Trade. Concerning which, the Chief of the Company had divers Conferences in their Common Hall: And about the said Year 1576, they agreed that Roger Tyler, one of the Wardens, and in good Credit among them, as well for his honest Dealing, as for his Skill in this his Trade, should sue in Name of the whole Company, to her Majesty for a new Grant, to search and destroy corrupt Wares, &c. And hereupon they petition'd the Queen, that whereas much counterfeit Vinegar was made of corrupt Beer and Ale, and the same coloured and mingled with unwholesome Dredges, as well within the Liberty of LONDON, as also in St. Katharine's, White-chapel, Shoreditch, St. John's Clerkenwell, and other such like Places, the same being corrupt were unmeet to be used; and yet the same was sold into the City for good and perfect; the People thereby deceived, besides the Fear of great Infection to be bred therewith:

And also Firkins of Salt Butter, mingled and packed up with old musty Butter in divers Parts of the Firkins: And the like Abuse used in Oil and Hops. For Reformation whereof, the Master and Wardens of Tallow-chandlers of LONDON, who did retail these Things, and finding daily these Deceits, were moved in Conscience to procure Redress: Did most humbly beseech the Queen's Majesty to grant them Authority to have the perusing of these Things, with the Assistance of the Lord Mayor and the Head Officers, for the reforming of these Deceits, and for the seeing of these Things to be good and perfect from henceforth.

THE Dredges used for colouring Vinegar were Elder-berries, Privet-berries, Torne-sole, and such other like Dredges. The musty and mouldy Butter was packed in the Heart of the Vessels of Butter: The Sallad-Oils were mingled with Lisbon Oil: The old and musty Hops were packed in the Heart of the Sacks of Hops, and great Quantity of Red Sand mingled with the same, to make them weigh more: Which Mingling was done in Flander.

THE Queen's Letters Patents to this Company bore Date at Westminster the 15th of April, in the 19th Year of her Reign; naming, appointing and authorizing the Master, Wardens and Commonalty of the Art and Mystery of Tallow-chandlers of LONDON, and their Successors and Deputies, to be Searchers, Examiners, Viewers and Triers of all Sope, Vinegar, Butter, Hops and Oils; and this Office of searching the Premises was granted within London, Southwark, St. Katharine's, White-chapel, Shoreditch, Westminster, St. John's, Clerkenwel, and St. Giles's in the Fields. And Prohibition was given that no Man should put to Sale any of the Premises before they were searched, upon Pain of Forfeiture: The one Moiety of the Forfeitures to the Queen, and the other to the Searchers. And for the Payment of the Searchers there was an Imposition upon every Barrel of good Soap, 2*d.* and so proportionably; upon a Tun of Vinegar, 8*d.* upon a Barrel of Butter, 2*d.* upon a Tun of Sevil Oil, 8*d.* upon a Sack of Hops, 8*d.* and so upon less Quantities proportionably; with a Clause of Revocation of these Letters Patents for Misuser.

BUT the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, October --- 1583, resisted the Execution of this Patent, and made a Declaration, why it ought to be stayed, and utterly void; and that by common Law, and also by Act of Parliament, viz. the Statute of 12 Edw. IV. cap. 8. "Item, whereas the Governours, that is, the Maiors, Bailiffs, and other like Governours of every City, Burgh, and Town of Substance within this Realm, &c." By Virtue of which Law the Lord Mayor's learned Council urged, that of common Right, and by the Laws of the Realm, the surveying of all Victuals, and the Correction and Punishment of the Offenders and Breakers of the Assize of the same, are to be presented, and amerced in the Law-Days, Leets, and Views of Frank-Pledge. And that the Lords of the said Courts are inheritable to the same Amerciaments. But by this Charter made to the Tallow-chandlers, they are to be disinherited for ever. And in all the Places mentioned in the Patent, where the Tallow-chandlers have their Power of Searching, the Lords of the Liberty have Leets or Law-Days. To whom, by Reason of the same Liberty, the Scrutiny and Search of the Premises do justly and of Right pertain. In Southwark, the Lord Mayor and Commons have a Leet, or Law-Day. In Westminster, the Dean and Chapter. In St. Katharine's, the Master and Confreres. In White-chapel, the Lord Wentworth. In Shoreditch, the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. In Clerkenwell, the Queen. In St. Giles's in the Fields, and in High High Holborn, the Lord Mountjoy. So that there was no Place left where the Tallow-chandlers might exercise the said Office of Search, but where other Men were justly inheritable in the same.

ANOTHER Argument against this Patent was, That the Mayor and Aldermen of the City, and all other the Governors thereof, and their Predecessors always, Time out of Mind, had, and used to have the View, Search and Correction of all Mysteries and Crafts within the City, for and concerning all Manner of Deceits and Defaults in all Things touching their Mysteries: Which was to be proved as well by the daily Usage, as also by a great Number of Records and Precedents of the said City. And besides the general Usage and Custom, there were special Grants and Charters made to the City touching these Things in Question; as, Butter, Hops, Vinegar, &c. These were the Arguments and Pleadings of Fleetwood, Recorder, Thomas Wykes, and William Daniel, all learned Lawyers.

THEY urged also, that the Imposition contained in the said Letters Patents was against the Common Law, and the Liberty of every Subject in his Goods, and against the free Traffick of the City of LONDON, granted by Charter, in the 50th of Hen. III. That there was no Need of this Patent; for the Tallow-chandlers searching these Commodities, because the Lord Mayor was bound by his Oath, taken in the Exchequer, to perform the said Search. The Words of the Oath are these: "Good Affize yee shall set upon Bread, Wine, Ale, Fish, Flesh, Corn, and all other Victuals. Weights and Measures in the said City yee shall do to be kept; and due Execution do upon the Defaults that thereof shall be found, according to all the Statutes thereof made, not repealed."

THIS may likewise be added concerning the Tallow-chandlers, which happen'd in the Reign of King Edward VI. Anno 1551. The Tallow-chandlers of LONDON, upon some Disgust, perhaps upon the City's setting too low a Price upon their Commodities, refused to sell any, by an universal Consent: Which came so far, that Orders were taken by the King and Council, commanding them to sell their Candles; and some of them were sent to Prison.

THE Tallow-chandlers Hall is a handsome Building, situated on the West of Dowgate-Hill.

CUTLERS.

THE Company of Cutlers are of great Antiquity, and were incorporated in the Beginning of the Reign of King Henry V. and afterwards confirmed by K. Henry VI. King Henry VIII. King Philip and Queen Mary, and Queen Elizabeth.

And King James I. in his 5th Year, the 8th Day of February, confirmed all.

THE Arms of the Cutlers of LONDON were granted by Thomas Holme, Clarencieux, King at Arms, the 16th of King Edward IV. the Crest by Robert Cooke, Clarencieux.

THE Arms are: Gules, six Daggers in three Saltier Crosses, Argent, banded and hilted, Or, pointing towards the Chief. Supporters; Two Elephants, Argent. Crest; an Elephant with a Castle on his Back, Or.

THIS Company are a Master, two Wardens, 23 Assistants, and 96 on the Livery, &c. The Livery Fine is 10 l. and the Stewards 5 l.

THEY are the 22d Company.

KNIVES for Hundreds of Years (past all Memory) were made in this Kingdom, but coarse and uncomely, till King James I's Time, when

VOL. II.

the best Knives in the World were made in LONDON. Richard Matthew, at Fleet-bridge, was the first Englishman who attained to the Skill of making fine Knives and Knife-Hafts; and the 5th of Queen Elizabeth he obtained a Prohibition against all Strangers and others, from bringing any Knives into England from beyond Seas; which until that Time were brought in by Ship-Loads from Flanders and other Places.

THE same Richard Matthew, about the Middle of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, got a Privilege from her Majesty under her Great Seal, for the making of Knives and Daggers with a new Kind of Hafts: But this was complained to have been, and further would be, the Decay and Overthrow of the whole Company of Cutlers, within this City, besides their Wives, Children, and Apprentices; and the Prices of Knives and Daggers excessively enhanced, prejudicial to the Queen's Subjects.

IN the Hall of this Company, situate in Cloak-lane, is an ancient Picture of one Mrs. Crowthorne, who gave the Bell Savage on Ludgate-hill to the Cutlers, with Trust, out of the Rents thereof to perform several charitable Acts yearly, as two Exhibitions for Scholars in Cambridge, Coals for the Poor of the Parishes of St. Bride's and St. Sepulchre's, and certain Payments to the Prisons, and to St. Thomas's Hospital.

THESE Cutlers formerly were three Companies, according to three different Arts or Trades, viz. Bladers, who were Smiths that forged Blades; Haftmakers, such as made the Hafts for the Blades; Sheathmakers, that made Sheaths for Swords, Daggers, and Knives. Afterwards all, 4 Hen. VI. incorporated into one Fraternity, by the Name of Cutlers. Of these see more in Vintry Ward, Book III. Page 504.

GIRDERS.

THE Company of Girdlers are not much behind-hand (with others) for Eminency and Antiquity, because they have held good Correspondency with the World, and with themselves: They became to be incorporated the 6th Day of August, in the 27th Year of the Reign of King Henry VI. Anno Dom. 1448.

THEIR Armorial Ensigns are: Per fess Azure, and Or, a Pale counterchanged, each Piece of the first charged with a Gridiron of the second. Crest; a demy Effigies of St. Laurence, holding in his Right Hand a Gridiron, the first of the Colour, the latter of the Metal aforesaid.

THEY are a Master, three Wardens, 24 Assistants, and 84 on the Livery. Livery Fine 10 l.

THE Girdlers Hall, is a handsome Brick Building situated on the East Side of and toward the North End of Basing-hall Street, built Anno 1681.

BUTCHERS.

THE Butchers were incorporated by K. James I. under his Letters Patents, bearing date the Sixteenth Day of September, in the third Year of his Reign, in England, and in Scotland the Nine and Twentieth; Anno Domini 1604. They were incorporated by the Name of Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Art or Mystery of Butchers of the City of LONDON; the Fraternity being very Antient.

THEY

THEY are a Master, 4 Wardens, 16 Assistants, and 193 on the Livery; the Livery Fine is 2*l.* and for Steward 18*l.*

THEIR Arms are, Azure, two Axes Saltierways Or, headed proper, between Three Bulls-heads couped Argent Armed Or, on a Chief of the 4th. a Boars Head erased Gules, between Two Garbs of the 5th. Supporters; Two winged Bulls. and a third for the Crest, all as in Chief. Motto, Omnia subiecisti sub Pedibus, Oves & Boves.

Thomas le Bedel, Robert le Bedel, Alan Underwode, Edmund May, Butchers, came before John le Blund, Mayor of LONDON, John de Wengrave, William de Leyre, Richer de Resham, Adam de Fulham, &c. Aldermen. And it was found by their Recognizance, that they held Land de Villinagio of the Bishop of LONDON, in Stebenhethe, and they remain out of the Freedom of the City of LONDON. Therefore it follows, that they lose the Freedom of the City. Yet Bracton saith, Villenagium vel Servitium nihil detrabit Libertatis, habita tamen distinctione, utrum tales sint Villani. And the Law Interpreter writes, that Tenure in Villenage could make no Man Villain, until it were continued Time out of Mind.

UPON Occasion of the Plague in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, continuing in the City for a long Time (either in the Year 1563, or some Plague afterwards) an Ingenious Italian Gentleman, and Physician, as it seems, assigned one great Cause of it to be, the Killing of Cattle within the City. Blood and Garbage lying so long in the Shops, and in some other Corners before it was removed, gave a most unsavory Smell. And this chiefly in East-cheap, and St. Nicholas Flesh Shambles, Places of great Thoroughfare. And carried away by Night thorow the Streets unto the River, spread as it passed a very offensive Scent, leaving it behind. Therefore he propounded, that the Queen should build in some convenient Place in the Suburbs of this, and other Cities, Slaughter-Houses, where the Butchers should kill their Beast; and the Queen to be allowed for every Beast, killed in her Slaughter-House. Specially there being an Act of Parliament in the Reign of Henry VII. for this Purpose.

THE Butchers Hall is situated on the East Side of Pudding-lane, it is a good Building; and in the Stair-Cafe of this Hall hangs the Coat Armour of Mr. James Leverett, of Great-Chelfea, who left 500 l. to the Use of the Poor of this Company: He died the 17th Day of September, 1662.

SADLERS.

THE Sadlers are a Company of great Antiquity, being incorporated in the Reign of Edward I. and confirmed by most succeeding Kings.

THEY consist of a Master, three Wardens, 22 Assistants, 65 Liverymen, &c. Their Livery Fine is 10 l.

THEIR Arms are: Azure, a Chevron between three Saddles, Or. Supporters; two Horses Argent, bridled, Gules, bitted of the second. Motto, Our Trust is in God.

THE Hall of this Company is situated on the North Side, and near the West End of Cheapside.

CARPENTERS.

THE Company of Carpenters, being a Society of antient Standing, were incorporated by Letters Patents, bearing Date the 7th Day of July, in the 17th Year of the Reign of King Edward IV. by the Name of Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the My-stry of Freemen of the Carpentry of the City of LONDON.

THEIR Arms are: Argent, a Chevron engrailed between three Pair of Compasses, pointing toward the Base, and a little extended, Sable.

THIS Company are a Master, three Wardens, Assistants uncertain, 99 on the Livery, besides Yeomanry. The Livery Fine is 8 l.

THE Carpenters Hall is situated on the South Side of LONDON Wall, almost against the East End of Bethlehem.

IN this Hall, in Memory of two eminent Members of this Company, hang up two Pictures representing them. The one is an aged Person, in a Ruff, well drawn; with one Hand putting a Compass upon a Rule, held in the other; and underwrit,

WILLIAM PORTINGTON, Esq;

Master Carpenter in the Office of his Majesty's Buildings. Who served that Place 40 Years, and departed this Life the 28th of March 1628; aged 84 Years. Who was a Well-wisher of this Society. This being the Gift of Matthew Banks, who served him 14 Years, and is, at this present, Master of the said Company, August 19, 1637.

THE other Picture is more modern, and under-written:

This Picture of John Scot, Esq; Carpenter and Carriage-Maker to the Office of Ordnance, in the Reign of King Charles II. was placed here by his Apprentice Matthew Banks, Esq; Master Carpenter to his Majesty, and Master of this Company this present Year 1698.

A Table also hangs up for Richard Wiat of LONDON, Esq; thrice Master of this Company of Carpenters, Anno Dom. 1604, 1605, 1616, and a good Benefactor thereunto. Among other Gifts he gave 500 l. to build an Alms-house near Godalmin in Surrey, for ten poor Men, and 70 l. a Year to maintain them. And his Wife added something, for the Company to go down and visit it.

CORDWAINERS.

THE Company of Shoe-makers or Cordwainers, as they stile themselves, have been of long Continuance, and were first incorporated in the 17th Year of King Henry VI. being afterward confirmed by King Philip and Queen Mary, in the 4th and 5th Years of their Reign: Then again re-confirmed by Queen Elizabeth, in the 4th Year of her Reign: And lastly, by King James I.

THEIR Armorial Ensigns are: Azure, a Chevron, Or, between three Goats Heads erased Argent, attired of the second.

THEY

THEY consist of a Master, four Wardens, 16 on the Court of Assistants, and 104 Liverymen. The Livery Fine is 10 l. They may take three Apprentices.

CONCERNING these Cordwainers there was an Act made in the 4th Year of King Edward IV. (which answereth to the Year of our Lord 1464.) to this Tenour: "That no Cordwainer or Cöbler, be he within Franchise or without, make any Shoes, Galoshes, or Huseaus, with any Pyke or Poleyn, that should pass the Length of two Inches, to be judged by the Wardens or Governors of the same Mystery in the City: Nor sell any upon Sundays or Feasts of the Nativity and Ascension, and Corpus Christi; nor set or put them upon the Feet or Legs of any Person on those Days, upon Pain of Forfeiture of 20 s."

WHENCE we may observe certain Antiquities concerning these Tradesmen and their Ware, about 240 Years ago. First, That the Name of Shoemaker was not yet known for those of this Calling, but Cordwainer or Cöbler, and that the Name of Cöbler was not then a Name of Contempt, for a Man of less Skill in that Mystery, or only a Mender, but for a Maker and Seller of that Commodity. Secondly, That there were in those Times three Sorts of Shoes worn, Shoes, Galoshes, and Huseaus; of whatsoever Fashion they were, 'tis uncertain; but that one of these three Sorts covered the Legs, or at least some Part of the Leg, as others were for the Feet. And those perhaps for the Legs were the Huseaus; somewhat like it may be to the Buskin, or perhaps rather to the high Shoes, which Countrymen wear in some dirty miry Countries. Thirdly, That the Shoes, Galoshes, &c. were with Toes of an extraordinary Length, and sharp, called therefore Pykes, or Poleyns: And that the People, especially the better Sort, so affected the wearing them, that an Act was fain to be made to restrain the Length of those Pykes to a certain Measure; that is to say, not to above two Inches. Fourthly, That these Cordwainers had a Privilege, or at least a Custom, beyond other Tradesmen, to sit and sell their Shoes on Sundays, and the greatest Holidays; which was therefore now prohibited upon a Penalty.

THIS antient Corporation in the Year 1577, built a fair and new Hall for themselves. And on Tuesday, July 23, the same Year, they made a magnificent Feast for their Friends; which they called, their House-warming. Here was present, among the rest of the honorary Guest, the Recorder Fleetwood.

OF the Foreigners born, that flocked over into England, not far off from the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, many were of this Occupation of Shoe-makers. Whereupon Anno 1576, this Company procured a Commission to enquire of certain Aliens born, being of the said Trade; First, Whether they were Denizens, or not. And if they were, then to enquire by whom they were so made. Secondly, Whether those Denizens, being Strangers, had refused to pay to the said Shoe-makers of LONDON every Quarter, in the Name of Quarteridge, 6 d. according to a certain Decree thereof, made in the Star Chamber, and confirmed, as they said, by Act of Parliament. Thirdly, Whether there were any Proviso in the said Denizens Letters Patents, binding them thereby to do and pay, as the Citizens ought to do: And also, what Penalty and Loss the said Strangers ought to sustain thereby, not doing and paying as is aforesaid.

FOR the better understanding of the aforesaid, it must be known, that in the fifth Year of the Queen there was an Act made concerning Tanners, Curriers, and other Artificers occupying the cutting of Leather, That every Stranger born, or other, using to convert Tanned Leather into made Wares, might thenceforth buy all kind of Tanned Leather to the Intent aforesaid, upon every Monday in the Market at Leadenhall in LONDON. Sithence the making whereof, the Shoe-makers and Curriers, being Free of the City of LONDON, exacted 2 s. Yearly, as well of every English, as Stranger Foreign Household, and 12 d. upon every like Foreign Journeyman, within three Miles compass of LONDON, in the Name of Quarteridge; contrary to the Meaning of the said Statute, or any other Grant, And for the better confirming of this Exaction, they practised with certain Foreigners, to condescend in the Name of all the rest, although in Truth without their Consent, to set down the same by an Order in the Exchequer. And thereupon, as was supposed, they made the Foreigners Free of the City: And other Foreigners they persuaded in their Hall to become bound in Obligation of 4 l. for the true Payment thereof.

AND in a Parliament Anno 1575, they exhibited an odious Bill against the said Foreigners, as well English as Strangers; requiring thereby, that the Foreigners might be secluded and avoided from buying of Tanned Leather on the said Monday at Leadenhall-Market, or in any other open Market in the City: To the Intent that all such Leather should be bought at their Hands, and not elsewhere: And the Foreigners should be restrained from bringing or selling any their made Wares unto any Honourable, Worshipful, or Common Person within the City of LONDON, upon Pain of Forfeiture of the said Wares, contrary to former Statutes, and against all antient Usage and Custom.

WHEREUPON the whole Company of Shoe-makers, inhabiting within the Liberty of the City of Westminster, as well English as Strangers, petitioned the Lord Treasurer Burghley, (who was High Steward of Westminster) shewing, how they, all her Majesty's loving Subjects, charged with many Children, Households and Families, should utterly be impoverished, if the said Bill should take Effect; and many Honourable, Worshipful and other People might be disappointed of such Wares, to their great Discommodities, and Enhancement of Prices for the same against the Common Weal. And for that they could not any wise obtain a Sight or Copy of the Bill, whereby to propose any Allegations or probable Matter, to subvert or reject the same. And for that they were poor, and a Number of unskillful Persons, having no other Refuge under her Majesty, but only his Lordship, to defend them; therefore they prayed him to give his Furtherance and Aid in that High Court of Parliament, and that he might continue and enjoy the Benefit of the said Market, and Buying of Leather, as in the late Statute was express'd, without any Repeal of the same; and to occupy and retail their said Wares with Restraint, Exactions, Forfeitures, or Servility.

THIS Controversy between the Shoe-makers of Westminster, and the Company of Shoe-makers of LONDON, continued the next Year. For the Company set forth Articles against those of Westminster; and they, on the other hand, gave in their Answers to those Articles.

ANOTHER particular Contest between them was, That the Shoe-makers of Westminster made great Endeavours, that the Company of Cordwainers of LONDON, should not have the Searching of their Wares, tho' the Queen, by Letters Patent, had granted to the Master and Wardens of the same Mystery, the Search and Correction of all Men occupying the same Art within the City of LONDON, and three Miles Compass; and this confirmed by an Act. To evade this Patent and Act, divers Strangers that that made Boots and Shoes, did sue to Edward Dyer, Esq; to have a Licence to be dispensed with, from all Contempts, Penalties, and Forfeitures, whatsoever, committed or incurred by Reason of Force or any Article contained in that Statute: Which made the Company of Cordwainers in September, 1577, petition the Lord Treasurer, that no such Licence might be granted: That they might not be at Liberty to make and work their Wares contrary to good Laws and Statutes, and hurtful to the Profit of the common People, and dangerous to the Wardens of the Company, by Reason of a Penalty of 5*l.* to be laid upon them, for every Default made by any Shoemakers in their Wares.

THE Heats still grew between them. For the next thing you hear of them was, That the Free Shoe-makers sued the Shoe-makers in Westminster in the Exchequer: And these Shoe-makers on the other hand exhibited a Bill against the Free Shoe-makers in the High Court of Star-Chamber, upon divers Extortions by them supposed to be committed. For which, to be quit with them again, the Free Shoe-makers indicted them at a Sessions of a Peace held in the County of Middlesex, alledging, That the Repair that the Shoe-makers of Westminster had made unto their Solicitor, one Francis Sparry, was an unlawful Rout and Assembly, unlawfully to gather Money to the Maintenance of their Suits, thinking to enforce one to bear the Suit against them. And sithence that Time, they arrested one Edward Tyse, one of the Shoe-makers dwelling at the Savoy, binding him unto the Peace without a Cause of his Breach of the Peace, and without any Oath-taking, only to put him, being a poor Man, to extreme Charge and Trouble. And when the Shoe-makers Solicitor was serving a Subpœna upon one John Lenche, to come to the Star-Chamber, there came running upon him the said Solicitor with a Dagger down to the Ground, and had slain him, had not others present saved him. And not therewith contented, they reported, they would not only undo these Shoe-makers, but all those that would be Aiders. and take Part with them. All this these Men in a Petition laid open before the said Lord Treasurer, praying him to grant, that they might have their Causes as well in the Court of Exchequer, as in their Court of Star-Chamber depending, to be heard and determined with Expedition; and that Justice Southcote, and some other Justice of Peace within the County of Middlesex, might consider upon the said Indictment, and take Order therein, according to Law and Justice.

THE Free Shoemakers, in the Month of October, 1578, put up another Petition to the Lord Treasurer, setting forth their Case, viz. That there was an Order in the Star-Chamber in King Henry the VIIIth's Time, that all Strangers Artificers should be Contributors as the King's natural Subjects were; and should come to the Halls, and take the Oaths to be true to the King and his Heirs. Of which sundry Exemplifications were made and sent to the several Companies in LONDON; and among the rest, one to the Cordwainers: But that certain Strangers of that Art, as namely, Francis Gerers, Daniel Swarts, John Yong, Edward Tyson, Leonard Harman, and many other by their Examples, did not regard the said Decree, nor the Acts and Laws of the Realm. And not contented with the Queen's charitable Protection, did refuse to come to the Assembly, and obey and be governed as her Majesty's natural Subjects. Whereas in their Country the English could not be suffered to get their Living by any Art. And whereas the Queen by her Charter made to the said Mystery, expressly granted and commanded, that all the said Persons should be obedient to the lawful Ordinances of the said Company (which Ordinances were, by the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, and the Lords Chief Justices perus'd, ratify'd and confirm'd, according to an Act of Parliament in that Case provided) the Strangers, for justifying their Contempt, did arrogantly and untruly pretend the Lord Treasurer's Letters in their Favour, written to the Lord Mayor and Recorder of LONDON, before whom the said Company had no Cause depending. Therefore they prayed his Lordship to examine, or cause the Premises to be examined; and to give Order, that her Majesty's Laws, Commissions, Charters, and Commandments, and the lawful Ordinances of the Company, might be duly obeyed.

THE Cordwainers Hall is situated at the Meeting of Great and Little Distaff-lane; it is a Brick Building, with handsome Rooms in it; the Hall is adorned with the Pictures of King William and Queen Mary, given by one of the Members.

P A I N T E R S.

THE Company of the Painters, having the Addition of Painters-Stainers, for their Skill and Cunning in divers mysterious Works, have been a Society of great Antiquity from Time to Time, and were incorporated Anno Dom. 1580, it being the 23d Year of Queen Elizabeth.

THE Armorial Ensigns of this Company are: Azure, three Escutcheons Argent, quarter'd with Azure; a Chevron between three Phoenix Heads erased, Or. Crest; is a Phoenix in Flames, proper. Supporters; are two Panthers crowned.

THIS Company is composed of Face-Painters, History-Painters, Arms-Painters, and House-Painters. They are a Master, two Wardens, about 24 Assistants, and 136 Liverymen; the Livery Fine is 14*l.*

THE Painters-Stainers were a Brotherhood since the Times of Edward III. and a Company, and so continued till the Year 1575, and 17th of Queen Elizabeth, but no Corporation; paying Scot, Lot, and all Kinds of Charges in the Queen's Affairs, and otherwise; as, in Time of War, charged with the setting forth of twelve Soldiers and all their Furniture; they having neither Lands, Revenues, nor any Riches to discharge the same; but only levied among the Brethren of the Company, every Man according to his Ability. Which Brethren were maintained by their good Workmanship in their Trades. But now, about the Time before said, their Trade began to go to Decay, by Reason of other Persons that had not been Apprentices to it, who undertook Painting; as Plasterers and others, intermeddling in the same Science: And the Painters having no Power to restrain them by Virtue of any Corporation, to the great Slander of the Art and Science, and the utter Decay and Ruin of all such as would endeavour to be good Workmen in the same, much slight Work went off, as Pictures of the Queen Noblemen, and others; and all other Manner of Works, which shewed fair to the Sight: And the People bought the same, being much deceived; for that such Pictures and Works were not substantially wrought: A Slander to the whole Company of Painters, and a great Decay of all Workmanship in the said Science; and also a great Discouragement to divers forward young Men, very desirous to travel for Knowledge in the same.

OF this the Painters made Complaint from Time to Time, to the Lord Mayor for the Time being being; and yet could never get any Redress for the same. The Reason whereof, they said, was, that they had no Judgment or Skill in that Science, to discern such fraudulent Workmanship from that was substantial and good. Therefore Anno 1575 and 1576, they addressed to the Queen, that she would consider their Cause, and give Aid and Assistance to them; and desired of her to be incorporated by the Name of Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of Painter-Stainers within the City, Liberties and Suburbs of the City of LONDON, being Freemen and Citizens of the same; and to be enabled to purchase Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments to the Use and Behalf of that Company, in Fee; to have a Common Seal; to choose a Master, Wardens and Assistants, according to Ordinances to be made by them; to execute all Causes pertaining to that Company; to restrain, that none be suffered to use that Trade, but such as have been, or shall be Apprentices to some of that Mystery seven Years; to have Authority to enter into any Shops, Warehouses or Workhouses of Men exercising that Mystery, and to search, examine and survey their Works, Painting, Colours, or other Stuff, &c. This was granted.

ONE George Gower was Queen Elizabeth's Serjeant Painter. Who had a Warrant from her for him, or his sufficient Deputy or Deputies, for the better Execution of his Office, to take up and provide for the Queen, and in her Name, for the only Provision of her Service, all Colour, Oil, Varnish, Workmen and Labourers as well Free as Foreign, and all manner of Necessaries and Stuff whatsoever, meet to be employed for that Service: And also to take up all manner of Carriages, as Barges, Boats, Carts, Wayns, Horses, with their Furnitures, necessary for the Conveyances of the Premises, as well by Water as Land, at reasonable Payments and Prices to be made in that behalf.

THE Art of Painting is now again much decayed, on Account of several Persons making a Property of Part of the Profits the Painters ought to enjoy, as Coach-makers, and Undertakers of Funerals, taking upon them to paint Coats of Arms and other Things, as well as what belongs to their own Trade; and Bricklayers, Plaisterers, &c. undertaking the House-Painting, besides their own Business; for they, to get their Work done at cheap Rates, employ unskilful Men who have never served Apprenticeships to the Trade, and by these Means many thousand Yards of good Wainscot is spoiled every Year.

Painter-Stainers-Hall is situated on the West Side of Little Trinity-lane, of which see an Account in Queen-bithe Ward, Book III. Chap. X.

But at last, about the Year 1590, both Parties came to Articles of Agreement indented. As, That the Curriers should have the Dressing of all the Leather bought in Leadenhall and Southwark Markets, and three Miles compass of LONDON. That the Shoe-makers should give to the Curriers from Lady-Day to Michaelmas, for Currying and Tallowing of Backs, 6*d.* and the Shoe-makers to find Tallow; and from Michaelmas to Lady-Day, 8*d.* so that they shall be well flied. The Shoe-makers to give for the Dressing of all Kind of Skins, 3*s.* 4*d.* a Dozen. But all this upon these Conditions on the Cordwainers Side, viz. That if any Hide, Back, or Skin, shall be found by the Master and Wardens of the Cordwainers for Time being, to be insufficiently Dressed and Wrought by any Currier, then the said Currier shall forfeit to the Party grieved the Sum of 10*s.* And that whensoever any Currier should come into their Markets at Leadenhall, Southwark, Bartholomew Fair, or three Miles Compass, the Master and Warden, of the Cordwainers should commit him that shall be found there to Prison, there to remain 24 Hours without Bail or Mainprize; and forfeit such a Fine to the Chamber of LONDON, as the Lord Mayor and Aldermen should think convenient. And that if any Free Currier should buy or sell any Kind of Leather in their Houses, or elsewhere; then the said Master and Wardens should have the like Authority to commit him to Prison, there to remain during the Time aforesaid, and pay such Fine as the Lord Mayor and Aldermen should think convenient. THESE Arms are: Sable, a Chevron between three Arrows Argent.

THEY are governed by two Wardens, 10 Aſſiſtants, and 18 on the Livery; the Livery Fine is 5*l.*

ALTHO' there is ſmall Reaſon of fundring Bows from Arrows, or Arrows from Bows; yet they divided themſelves into two ſeveral Companies.

BESIDES theſe two Trades belonging to Archers, there were alſo two more, namely Stringers and Arrow-Head-makers. All theſe about the Year 1570 and odd, petitioned the Lord Treasuſer: Wherein they ſtile themſelves, the Decayed Company of Bowyers, Fletchers, Stringers and Arrow-Head-makers, as well in the City of LONDON, as elſewhere through the Realm. They had made a Petition to the Queen before, concerning their own decayed Condition, by reaſon of the Diſcontinuance of the Uſe of Archery, and Toleration of unlawful Games and Exerciſes. Concerning which, Aubrey, Maſter of Requeſts, told them what the Lord Treasuſer had ſaid upon View of their ſaid Petition, viz. That he thought it meet and requiſite a Commiſſion ſhould be granted, to ſome of the Chief of the Companies of Bowyers and Fletchers, Freemen of the City; as well for ſuppreſſing unlawful Games, as alſo for the Enforcement of the the Exercises of the Long Bow, according to the Law and Statute of this Realm, in those Cases provided. Upon this they preferred a Petition to him, to have due and favourable Consideration of the Cause of their Complaint, with their decayed Estates; and to vouchsafe, that the said Commission might be granted to them, according to his Lordship's former Model, and as certain Notes ready to be shewed him did import.

IN the Year 1576 one Rafe Lane, a great Projector in those Times, would have monopolized to himself this Commission for the Restoration of Archery. He shewed in his Paper put in for that Purpose, that Archery depended upon three special Points, provided for in the Statute, for the Maintenance of Archery. First, A strait Prohibition of unlawful Games. Second, An Order for making up and repairing of Butts and Marks, and the Exercise of Shooting at Times convenient. Third, For a Provision of Bow-staves and Arrows at low Prices, rated in the same. He noted also, that the Pains of the Premises rested not, by the said Laws, in the Queen's Majesty, to take Advantage of, or to Pardon, but in the Lords Leets and Franchises. This Man's Suit was to have the Survey of the Premises for 21 Years, with Authority sufficient to enjoin Men lacking the same, to take the Supply of their Lacks of Bows and Arrows at his Hand, at the Prices of the said Laws, and not above: And also like Authority, as far as in her Majesty lay, by taking the Penalties, and the Punishments of unlawful Games, in such as he should find, upon the Survey, to continue the Use of them, or to release the same to such as should conform themselves to the contrary; and would take Bows, as was aforesaid; whereby they might be forced and allured to exercise Shooting at Times convenient; and also to keep up the Butts and Marks, as the said Laws did appoint.

THE Statute for the Maintenance and Exercise of Shooting in the Long Bow, was made Anno 1541, in the 33d of Henry VIII.

The Queen's Commission for Archery.

IT was upon the Ground of this Statute, that the abovementioned Petitions were built; as was also a Commission in the 13th of Queen Elizabeth, Anno 1570; wherein she appointed Commissioners in each County for the Reformation of the Use of unlawful Games, and for the Maintenance and Exercise of Shooting. Which Commissioners were to take due and lawful Search in every Place within each County, as well for such who used unlawful Games, as also whether every Person for himself, his Servants, and other Youth in his, or their several Houses, had sufficient Furniture and Provision of Bows and Arrows, and had not occupied the same according to the Meaning of the said Statute of Henry VIII. But notwithstanding this Commission to see the Abuses reformed and corrected, in many Parts the Use of Shooting was never the more frequented or used; and the Faults, as many as they were wont. Upon this the Queen issued another Commission in the 14th of her Reign, Anno 1571, viz. That these Commissioners should within 40 Days after the Receipt of those Presents, certify unto the Lord Keeper or Lord Chancellor for the Time being, in how many Towns and Parishes in the said County they had executed and performed the Effect of the said Commission, and in how many not; and also the Names of such Persons, whom they had or should find offending in the Premises, together with their respective Offences in that Behalf, in writing under their Hands and Seals, to the Intent that further Order might be taken therein: But this Commission, tho' it was fair transcribed in Parchment, yet was not signed by the Queen; but only examined by Sir Gilbert Gerard, her Attorney-General; whose Hand is set at the Bottom.

FOR the Supply of this Nation antiently with Bow-staves made of Yew, the Italian Merchants by an old Statute, provided in Edw. the IVth's Time, were bound to bring in Bow-staves into England. One Middlemore had a Commission from the Queen, to see to the Performance of this Statute. The Penalty whereof by his Officer, one Wanton, was required now of the Italian Merchants, and particularly of one Diogenes Francischini, and other Merchants of Venice, who were fain to make a Complaint by Way of Petition to the Lord Treasurer; shewing, That this bringing in of Bow-staves was a Matter of long Time not used, and so not provided for by them, the Merchants; and also became impossible; for that the Country from whence Bow-staves were had in King Edward the IVth's Days, had been in the Turks Possession, and none were within any of their Trades; so that they could not perform that which then might have been, nor did know any such Course of Traffick, how to come by them; but was a Matter wholly discontinued, as impossible.

YET in former Times, to supply this Defect in our Country, the Italian Merchants touched at Spain, where they took in Bow-staves: The People of Castile on purpose destroyed their Woods; and provided by Law, that no such Wood as Yew, should be preserved: But notwithstanding it was urged by Wanton aforesaid, that these Italians should be compelled to bring in Bow-staves from the Parts adjoining to Venice, and thereabouts, because the finest and best Yew came from thence; and because their trading for Bow-staves with that People would encourage them to plant and cherish that Wood, as they did Vines and Corinths; that is, for Traffick Sake.

THE Fletchers Hall is situated in St. Mary-Axe.

BLACKSMITHS.

THE Company of Blacksmiths had a Charter, granted Anno 1577, from Queen Elizabeth, confirmed by King James I. and K. Charles, but there are some Records found relating to this Company so antient as Edward the Third's Time.

THEY are governed by four Keepers or Wardens, 21 Assistants, and are 180 on the Livery. Their Fine for Steward is 4*l.* and the Livery Fine is 4*l.* more.

THEIR Armorial Ensigns are: Sable, a Chevron between three Hammers, Argent, handled and crowned, Or, on a Helmet and Torse, a Phoenix firing herself by the Sun-beams, all proper. Motto; By Hammer and Hand all Arts do stand.

THE Blacksmiths Hall is situated on the West Side of Lambeth-hill.

JOYNERS.

THE Joiners, called also Joiners and Ceelers, (and Carvers) were incorporated in the 13th Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, Anno Domini 1570.

THEY are a Master, two Wardens, 24 Assistants, and about 260 on the Livery. The Livery Fine is 5*l.* The Steward's Fine is also 5*l.*

THEIR

THEIR Armorial Ensigns are: *Gules, a Chevron Argent, between two Pair of Compasses, above, and a Sphere in Base, Or, on a Chief of the Third, two Roses of the First, and between them a Pale, Sable, charged with an Escallop-shell of the Second. THE Joyners Hall, which is situated in Thames-street, almost against Dowgate-hill, was given them by a Widow, enjoyning them, in Consideration of that Gift, to procure a certain Number of Masses, to be said for her Soul. The Great Hall is all wainscotted, and King William and Queen Mary's Arms at the upper End, with excellent Carving. Their Skreen at the lower End cost, as they say, 130*l*.

THEIR Parlour is likewise wainscotted with more curious Artifice and Embellishments; and so is the Cieling fretted with Wainscot Work in which are three Circles, wherein are excellent Paintings of Angles, &c. The Middle Circle, which is the largest, hath a Draught of St. James, the Patron of their Company, with a Square in his Hand, as it were giving his Orders to several Persons standing about, and directing their Work.

ON the Chimney-Piece is a very curious Picture, representing several Persons of the Company sitting at a long Table in their Livery Gowns; and Mr. Whiting, (some Time of this Company) and his Man, laying a Model before them, of the Work of their Hall, or some Rooms in it, with some of the Assistants viewing and considering it. This Parlour, they say, cost 300*l*. Wainscoting and Painting.

THIS House was burnt down in the great Fire, and the Hall of it burnt down again Anno 1694. but the Parlour saved, (suffering some little Damage) by the Diligence of Mr. Burroughs, the Clerk, employing Engines, and good Engineers, to throw great Quantities of Water in at a Window in a Parlour, that fronted the Door entering into the Hall.

Charles Hobson, Esq; soon after Knighted, was of this Company, who was employed by the late Queen Anne, about her Works in Whitehall, Chelsea College, and other Places, Anno 1708. He was drank to by the Lord Mayor for Sheriff of LONDON the ensuing Year: He told her Majesty of it; and she seemed pleased, and enjoined him to hold: Which he did.

THE Plasterers Hall is situated on the North Side of Addle-street, near Philip-lane.

VOL. II.

WEAVERS.

THE Company of Weavers (not meaning them which are now called Silk-Weavers) were of very antient Note indeed, as having several Societies of themselves, the Woollen Cloth Weavers, the Arras Weavers, and the Linen Weavers; but the Woollen-Cloth-

Weavers seem the most antient and honourable of this Nation, whose principal staple Commodity is Wool, and its Manufacture Cloth. The Weavers were incorporated in the Reign of Henry II. and confirmed in the 31st of the said King, Anno Dom. 1184. However, the said Company thought it proper to have the Privileges they pretended to, renewed, and confirmed by Charter of Incorporation, the 17th of September 1706, in the 6th Year of the Reign of Queen Anne, by the Name of Bailiffs, Wardens, Assistants, and Commonalty of the Trade, Art and Mystery of Weavers of LONDON.

THEY are, two Bailiffs, two Wardens, 16 more Assistants, and 186 on the Livery. The Livery Fine is 6*l*. 8*s*. 4*d*.

THE Armorial Ensigns of this Company are: Azure, on a Chevron Argent, between three Leopards Heads, having each a Shuttle in his Mouth, Or; as many Roses Gules seeded proper. Crest; a Leopard's Head crowned with a Ducal Coronet and a Shuttle as before. Supporters; two Weavers Ermin, winged, Or; member'd Gules. Motto; Weave Truth with Trust.

DIVERS Freemen of the City of sundry Sorts, under the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, and since the Flight of Strangers into these Parts, had, by their Industry, learned of these Strangers, and otherwise, the Art of Silk-weaving; namely, making of Silk-lace, and such like Things in the Loom; and so did lawfully use the same. But the Company of Weavers, who would not allow any Kind of Weaving to any but such as were Members of their Mystery, about the Year 1583, impeached these Weavers, and exhibited a Bill to the Lord Treasurer, Mr. Chancellor of the Dutchy, and Barons of the Exchequer, against the said Freemen, as using the Art of Silk-weaving, being free of other Mysteries. Upon this a great Number of these Freemen so complained of, brought to the Mayor, Sir Edward Osborn, and the Aldermen his Brethren, their Complaint, that the Bailiff and Company of the Guild of the Weavers, had disturbed their Liberty. Hereupon the Lord Mayor wrote a Letter to the Lord Treasurer, relating the Cause in Favour of those Silk-weavers, against the Company: "Shewing him, that the antient Liberties of the City had ever been, that a Freeman of any Company might lawfully use any lawful Art within the same City, and being free of one, was free of all. And that without which general Freedom, both the Commonweal might receive great Prejudice, and the Order and Governance of the Companies, and of the whole City, should receive such a Confusion, as the State thereof could no Way bear. And that the Weavers themselves did for the most Part live by the Use of other Arts, and took the Fruit of that general Freedom which they denied to others."

THE same Weavers also (and a Note was produced to the Lord Treasurer for that Purpose) took upon them for Money, to admit a Number of Strangers, as well not Denizens as others, to use their Art, to the great Hinderance of the Queen's natural Subjects. Which Matters the said Treasurer by his Letters willed to be enquired upon, by Occasion of a Libel spread, and sent to him. Sir Thomas Blank, the former Mayor, and his Brethren, called the said Weavers, and required them to hold them content with the general Liberty, for others to use their Art, as they might others: And did offer to them, if any Lack were to them in Search, Correction, or good Order, they should be reasonably assisted. This they refused, and, in great Contempt, and to the Peril of the Dissolution of the whole State of the Company, they pursued their Bill before-mention'd.

Osborn, then Mayor, prayed the Lord Treasurer, that by his Order the said general Liberty might be maintained, and the Weavers remitted to the Mayor and Aldermens Consideration, according to the Laws of the City. Wherein he promised, they should, as Citizens, have reasonable Favour, as the State of the Commonweal, and this City, should require.

THE Weavers Hall is situated on the East Side, and near the Middle of Basinghall-street.

IN the Parish of Shoreditch, near Hoxton-square, are Six Alms-houses, containing 12 Rooms for 12 Weavers Widows, who have each 20 s. per Ann. paid quarterly, and each 24 Bushel of Coals. On the Gate is this Inscription:

This Building was erected by the Company of Weavers, LONDON, for the Use and Benefit of poor Members of that Company, towards the Charge whereof Mr. William Watfon, a Member of the same Company, was a good Benefactor, 1670.

FRUITERERS.

THEIR Armorial Ensigns are: Azure, the Tree of Paradise between Adam and Eve, all proper.

THE Fruiterers have no Hall at present, but meet sometimes at Parish Clerks in Wood-street.

SCRIVENERS.

THEIR Arms are: Azure, an Eagle with Wings expanded, holding in his Mouth a Penner and Inkhorn, standing on a Book, all Or.

THEIR Hall is in Noble-street; they parted with it some Years ago to the Coach-makers.

BOTTLE-MAKERS and HORNERS.

AS for the Bottle-makers and Horners, faith Stow, the precedent Times have remembered them to be of Antiquity, and two distinct Companies combined in one; but finds no Record that they were ever incorporated.

THEIR Arms are: Argent, on a Chevron Sable, three Bugle-Horns of the first, between three Leather Bottles of the second.

CONSIDERABLE Quantities of Horns were wont to be transported by these Horners. In the Year 1576, were shipped that Year 140000 Horns, to the Value of 210 l.

QUEEN Elizabeth granted a Patent to Simon Furner, and John Craford, for transporting of Horns, whereby the Horners were hindered from transporting them: Yet by an Act they were allowed to transport refuse Horns, and these were now stopt by the Patentees, which caused a Petition of Complaint to the Lord Treasurer.

FOR in the Year 1592, the Horners made a Petition, complaining, That whereas they and their Predecessors had all heretofore bought all manner of Horns, and wrought the best of them, to serve in the Realm, and sold the Refuse, and some of their wrought Wares, as Blowing Horns, Shoe-horns, and Lanthorns, both to English and strange Merchants: Now one Simon Furner a Merchant, and John Craford a Scrivener, got a Licence from her Majesty for transporting of Horns; and thereby had not only restrained the Petitioners from their former Traffick, to their Undoing in general, but also thereby greatly endangered the Queen in her Customs, almost subverting the same. For whereas heretofore she had 18 d. Custom for a Thousand of Horns, they would suffer none to pass, unless they had 10 s. more to themselves for every Thousand: Which intolerable Imposition took away Traffick, and so consequently her Custom. There was a Proviso in their Licence, That if any Abuse or Inconvenience grew thereby, then the Lord Treasurer of England for the Time, should reform and order the same: So the Petitioners prayed the said Lord, to order the Matter as the Equity and Necessity of the Cause required. Also there was a Proviso in her Majesty's Grant, That the Horners should have their antient Liberties, that had been Time out of Mind, and the Statute allowed them the like; therefore they prayed his Lordship's Letter to the Customers, that they might enjoy their former Liberties.

THIS Matter depended till the Year 1597, when the Treasurer sent to Sir Richard Carmarthen, to call before him these two Patentees before-said, and understand what could be alledged on both Parts, touching the Liberty of the Horners by their Charter, and to End the Question between both, if he could; or else to let him understand his Opinion, what he conceived fit to be done therein. He endeavoured accordingly to end the Controversy between them, but could not; the Question rose upon one Word chiefly, viz. That they had desired of the King (that gave them their Charter) that they might have the Liberty within the City of LONDON, and four and twenty Miles about, to choose and buy the principallest Horns, before the Strangers should buy and transport away: And then after the Company were so furnished, it should be lawful for Them, and all other Persons, to buy and transport the rest. Now the Horners construed the Word Them to pertain to their Company; Furner and Craford

Craford construed the Word Them to pertain to the Strangers, and other Persons upon their Suit; Carmarthen said, that being no Lawyer, he dared not to judge of the Word, but left it to his Lordship's better Judgment.

STATIONERS.

THE Company of Stationers were of great Antiquity, even before the ART of PRINTING was invented. Their Charter of Incorporation was granted the 4th Day of May in the third and fourth Years of K. Philip and Queen Mary I.

THEIR Ensigns Armorial are: Sable, on a Chevron between three Bibles, Or, a Falcon rising between two Roses Gules, seeded of the second; in Chief a Glory in the Shape of a Dove expanded proper.

THIS Company are govern'd by a Master, two Wardens, 30 Assistants, and 211 on the Livery. Their Fine for Livery is 20 l. and there are two Renter-Wardens, whose Business it is to collect the Quarteridge, and treat the Company on the Lord Mayor's Day, for which the Fine is 25 l. each. By their Charter they may take Apprentices, one for the Yeomanry, two for the Livery, and when they are admitted into the Court of Assistants, they may take three.

THIS Company has a Capital Stock of near 15000 l. called the English Stock, employed in Printing Almanacks, ABC's, Primmers, Psalters, and most School-Books, and privileged Ware, as they term it, the sole Printing whereof is granted to them by Patent, and confirmed by several Kings of this Realm. This Capital Stock consists of fifteen whole Shares, each 320 l. which generally belong to those who have passed Master, or have fined for it. The next are half Shares, whereof there are thirty, each of which are 160 l. these are generally belonging to the Assistants. The third are quarter Shares, in Number sixty, each of which is 80 l. and these commonly belong to those of the Livery that have fined for Renter-Warden. This was the original Establishment; but when the Company grew more numerous, they, to oblige their Members, divided some of these of 80 l. into two Parts. The Profits of this Stock are paid to the Widow of him who paid it in, till her Death or second Marriage, then another is chosen in, and that Person so chosen pays the Money over to the Executors of the Deceased; or if she marry again, tho' to one of the same Trade, she is obliged to take the Money, which they that are admitted repay her as before. They make Dividends at Christmas, which is more or less, according to the Expence the Company has been at that Year; but is often about 40 l. per whole Share; besides which Dividend, they give in Pensions to the Poor of the Company, about 200 l. per Annum, 4 l. or under, paid to each quarterly. This Stock is managed by six Stock-Keepers, who are chosen annually, and the Master and the Wardens for the Time being. These Stock-Keepers make up all Accounts with Stationers, Printers, &c. and give Account about Christmas of the State and Condition of the Stock and Profits to the Board, who order the Dividends accordingly; and perhaps there is hardly a Stock of antienter Date belonging to any Company in LONDON.

OF this Corporation are Printers, Booksellers, and such as sell Paper and Parchment, and Blank Books bound up for the Use of Tradesmen and Merchants, and these last are now pecuniary called Stationers. The first of this Corporation who practised the Art of Printing Books, were Wynkyn de Worde (a Dutchman, as it seems) who dwelt at the Sun in Fleet-street, and one Pynson; who both flourished in the Reign of King Henry VII. and in the Beginning of the Reign of King Henry VIII. And Thomas Godfrey, who printed a Treatise, wrote by St. Germain, in the Time of King Henry VIII. concerning Constitutions Provincial and Legatine: And next to them in the said King Henry the VIIIth's Reign, were Richard Grafton and Edward Whitchurch, who had the Honour to print the Translation of the Bible into English, in the Years 1538 and 1540, or thereabouts. These continued in the Reign of King Edward VI. Now also Reginald Wolf, a Switzer, and learned John Day, and William Seres, were noted Printers; whereof Wolf was Archbishop Cranmer's Printer, and printed his Books, and other Books appointed for publick Use in the Church. He was also a great Collector of English History; afterwards digested and printed by Holingshead. Carwood and Jugg printed Proclamations and State Books, in the Times of King Edward VI. and Queen Mary. Richard Totil, in the Time of Queen Mary, was the great Printer of Law Books, of whom more by and by. Seres kept his Shop in Peter-College, a Place so called, situate on the West of St. Paul's Church. Sir William Cecyl, Principal Secretary to King Edward, procured for him, being his Servant, a Licence to print all Manner of Private Prayers, called Primers (containing the Psalter or Psalms, Devotions, &c.) as should be agreeable to the Book of Common-Prayer, established in the Court of Parliament. And that none else should print the same, upon Pain of forfeiting the same: Provided, that before the said Seres, or his Assigns, did begin to print the same, he or they should present a Copy thereof, to be allowed by the Lords of the Privy Council, or by the Lord Chancellor for the Time being, or by the King's four Ordinary Chaplains, or two of them. And when the same was, or should be from Time to Time printed, that by the said Lords, and others of the said Privy Council, or by the Lord Chancellor, or with the Advice of the Wardens of the said Occupation, the reasonable Price thereof be set, as well in the Leaves, as being bound in Paste or Board, in like Manner as was expressed in the End of the Book of Common-Prayer. This Licence bore Date, 4 March, 7 Edw. VI.

Day, the Printer, was not inferior in Reputation for Printing to any in those Times. He had his Printing-House in Aldersgate, and his Shop or Shed, near the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, in St. Paul's Church-yard, by Permission of the Church. He printed the voluminous Books of Fox's Acts and Monuments, of Thomas Beacon's Works, and a great many other good Books, written in Favour of Religion against Popery. His Motto, with Respect to the Night of Ignorance and Superstition newly dispersed, was, Arise, for it is Day. He also 7 Edw. VI. March 25. obtained a Licence for the Printing a Catechism in English, with the Brief of an ABC, thereunto annexed: And also for the Printing and Re-printing of all Works and Books devised and compleid by the Reverend Father in God, John Bishop of Winton, or by Thomas Beacon, Professor of Divinity: So that no such Books, or any Part of them, were any Ways repugnant to the Holy Scriptures, or Proceedings in Religion, or the Laws of the Realm, as the Licence ran.

THERE was a Patent ready drawn for Queen Elizabeth's Signing for seven Years, privileging Richard Totil, Stationer, to imprint all Manner of Books or Tables whatsoever, which touched or concerned Cosmography, or any Part thereof; as, Geography, Chorography, or Topography, writ in the English Tongue, or translated out of any other Language into English, of whatsoever Countries they treated, and whosoever was the Author: But whether this were ever actually signed, or not, is uncertain.

IN the Year 1566, a Sheet was printed, intitled, Ordinances decreed for Reformation of divers Disorders in printing and uttering of Books. At the End were subscribed the Names of some of the Privy Council hereunto, being an Order in the Star-Chamber, viz. the Lord Keeper Bacon, Marquis of Winchester, Lord Treasurer, Earl of Leicester, Lord Clynton, Lord Admiral, Secretary Cecil, and others. Which was occasion'd by a Motion of those of the Commission Ecclesiastical under their Hands. These Ordinances were designed for the preventing the bringing in, or printing Books against the Religion established, and were as follow:

Vpon the Consideration before expressed, and vpon the Motion of the Commissioners: We of the Priuie Counſell haue agreed this to be obserued and kept, vpon the Paines therein conteyned. At the Starre-Chamber the xxix Day of Iune, Anno 1566. and the eight Yeere of the Queenes Majesties Reigne.

IN the Year 1575, some certain Persons endeavoured to obtain from the Queen a Privilege for the sole Printing of all Ballads, Damask Paper, and Books in Prose or Meeter, from the Quantity of one Sheet of Paper to four and twenty. The Company of Stationers made a Petition to the Lord Treasurer, for Stay of this; setting forth, how it would be the Overthrow of a Multitude of Families: And that by the imprinting of these the Company was chiefly maintained. So as if the same were taken from them by way of Privilege, they should be utterly undone. Whereof if the Queen were advertised, they were sure she would not pass such a Grant. Wherefore they prayed the Treasurer, who had aforetime always been favourable to them in all their Causes, that he would acquaint the Queen with the Premises, and be a Means that the said Privilege might not be granted.

OTHER Privileges there were, which the Queen sometimes had granted to some Stationers for their Propriety in certain Copies; whereby all others were abridged from printing the same: And some of these Copies, such as before were indifferently printed by any of that Calling, to the great Sustentation of them and their Families. Which Advantage was by these Privileges taken from them. Thus,

John Fugge, besides the being her Majesty's Printer, had the Privilege for printing of Bibles and Testaments. The which had been common to all the Printers.

Richard Totbil, the printing of all Kind of Law Books, (common before to all Printers) who sold the same Books at excessive Prices, to the Hindrance of a great Number of poor Students.

John

John Day, the printing of ABC, and the Catechism, with the sole selling of them, by the Colour of a Commission. These Books were the only Relief of the poorest Sort of that Company.

James Roberts and Richard Watkins, the printing of all Almanacks and Prognostications. The which was also the chief Relief of the poorest of the Printers.

Thomas Marsh had a great Licence for Latin Books, used in the Grammar-Schools of England. The which was the general Living of the whole Company of Stationers.

Thomas Vautroller, a Stranger, had the sole printing of other Latin Books, as the New Testament and others.

ONE Byrde, a Singing-man, had a Licence for printing all Musick-Books; and by that Means claimed the printing of Ruled Paper.

William Seres had a Privilege for the printing of all Psalters, all Manner of Primers, English or Latin, and all Manner of Prayer-Books; with the Reversion of the same to his Son.

Francis Flower, a Gentleman, being none of the Company, had Privilege of printing the Grammar, and other Things; and had farmed it out to some of the Company for 100 l. by the Year. Which 100 l. was raised in the enhancing of the Prices above the accustomed Order.

THIS, as a Grievance, many of the Company complained of, being now in Number in the City 175; and of these 140 came to their Freedoms since Queen Elizabeth's Access to the Crown. so much did Printing and Learning come in Request under the Reformation.

It was shewn before, that William Seres had a Licence from King Edward VI. to print all Manner of Primers. This was taken away from him in Queen Mary's Days, but obtained again for him under Queen Elizabeth by Cecil's Means. And the Grant now was to him and to his Son William Seres; during the Life of the longest Liver of them, with an Addition to print all Books of private Prayers: For which they had a Patent. This gave Occasion to a great Case: For Seres, the Father, in his latter Years, and being not so well able to attend and follow his Business, assigned the Privilege, with all his Presses, Letters, Stocks and Copies, (which in his whole Life he got) to one Henry Denham; for a yearly Rent. Denham took seven young Men of the Company of Stationers to join him in the same. But certain inferior Persons of the Company, setting up Presses more than England might bear, did print other Mens Copies forbidden to them, and privileged to others by the Queen's Letters Patents. These endeavour'd, for their own Gain, to have the said Privilege taken away; preferring a Petition to the Privy Council, wherein they pretended, that in Justice it stood with the best Policy of this Realm, that the Printing of all good and useful Books should be at Liberty for every Man to do, without granting or allowing of any Privilege by the Prince to the contrary. And they said it was against the Law; and that the Queen ought not to grant any such. Seres, upon this, in a Petition to the Lord Treasurer, urged against these Men, that Privilege for special Books was ever granted by the Prince. For that for the most Part in all ancient Books we read these Words: Cum Privilegio ad imprimendum solum: And that many Records might be found of the same. Whereby it appeared, that the Prince or Magistrate had ever Care to commit the printing of all good Books, especially of the best Sort, to some special Men well known, and tried for their Fidelity, Skill and Ability. Examples whereof might be shewed as well in England, as in other Christian Countries. And that the Reason hereof was, that Printing of itself was most dangerous and pernicious, if it were not straited and restrained by politick Order of the Prince or Magistrate.

THIS grew into a more general Contest between the Stationers, who had from the Queen Licences of Privilege to print certain Books; and the other Stationers, who thought this a great Hinderance to them, that they might not print them; pretending, that by their Freedom they ought to print any lawful Books: Nay, even those Books, the Copies whereof had been bought of the Authors for their Money, or else given to those that had the Propriety in them, to make their Benefit of. They would not allow the Queen to have a Power of granting these Privileges: And would and did take upon them to print what they pleased. The Matter was heard before the Lord Mayor, and afterwards before the Privy Council, who committed the Hearing of this Cause to Dr. Hammond, a Civilian, and Thomas Norton, a Divine, and some others. These, after Examination, found the Complainants Intent to be derogatory to the Queen's Privilege, not only as touching the granting of Privileges for Printing; but also for fundry other Licences; and wished the Complainants no further to attempt that Course, shewing unto them the Inconvenience that would ensue. Whereupon the Stationers seemed to renounce their Suits; affirming, that they meant not to overthrow Privileges, but craved that there might be something appointed for them to print: Wherein they were also satisfied by friendly Agreement, through the Mediation of the said Committees.

THE Expedient was this, that those that had Privileges were to grant some Allowances unto the Company, for the Maintenance of their Charge and their Poor. Thus Seres for his Part, who had the Privilege of Printing Primers and Psalters and all Books of Private Prayer, he and his Assigns yielded the best Part of the said Privilege for the Relief of the whole Company: And out of that Privilege only reserved to themselves the Little Primer and usual Psalter. And divers other eminent Stationers in like manner granted many of their Copies for the same Intent. This was about the Year 1583.

BUT shortly after, one John Wolf, a Fishmonger using Printing, taking upon him as a Captain in this Cause, was content with no Agreement, but generally affirmed that he might and would Print any Lawful Book, notwithstanding any Commandment of the Queen. And to that End had incensed the Popularity of LONDON, as in a common Cause, somewhat dangerously: And with him several of the rest changing their Minds, were associated, and laboured to overthrow those Privileges the Queen had granted, or could grant. Whereupon the abovesaid Committees finding them so disordered, would have bound them to appear before the Queen's Council, which they promised to do, but after Conference with their Abettors refused: And still prosecuted their Complaints to her Majesty, garnishing the same with Pretences of the Liberties of LONDON, and the Commonwealth of the said Company; and saying, the Queen was deceived by those that were Means for obtaining such Privileges.

Seres after all this, prayed the Lord Treasurer, that since the said Complaints did still intrude upon his Privilege, and did more obstinately print his Books than afore, some Redress might be had therein.

As Wolf was one of these unruly Printers, so one Roger Ward was another, who would Print any Book however forbidden by the Queen's Privilege, and made it his Practice to print all Kind of Books at his Pleasure. The Master and Wardens of the Company going to search his Printing-House, according to the Power they had, were resisted by his Wife and Servants: Of which a Complaint was made by the said Master and Wardens to the Court. And again in the Year 1583, the Master and Wardens preferred a Petition against this Man, to the Lord Treasurer; shewing his contemptuous Demeanour, doing contrary to all Order and Authority; and withal his Insufficiency to use the Art of Printing. The Commissioners appointed by the Council could bring him to nothing: But still he continued to print what he pleased without Allowance, by his own Authority; and such Books as were warranted by her Highness's Letters Patents to other Men: And sold and uttered the same in City and Country, to Men of other Arts. Whereby the Company sustained great Loss, in taking the Sale of them; and particularly to the Decay of Seven poor young Men, who executed a Privilege granted to William Seres for a yearly Rent. This Man notwithstanding had given two several Bonds to the Queen, the one, not to print any more disorderly; the other, to bring in such Books as he had so printed; but none performed. All this was laid open in the said Petition, the Signers of it were, John Harrison, Master; and Richard Watkins and Rafe Neubery, Wardens; and besides them, Christopher Barker, John Day, William Norton, George Bishop, John Judson, and Francis Caldock; all Bookfellers in these Times of the chiefest Reputation.

THIS Practice of some Printers printing of Books, which others had Grants from the Queen only to do, was not yet laid aside; which caused the Queen's Patentees Anno 1586, to petition the Lords of her Majesty's Council in behalf of themselves, who seemed now to be in some Danger of having their Patents revoked: And withal presented a Paper for maintaining of Privileges for Printing, to this Import, "That all Princes in Christendom, where Printing was Used, granted Privilege; sometimes for Years, sometimes for Life, and sometimes in Fee. That in this Realm the Queen's noble Progenitors had from Time to Time granted Privileges, ever since the said Mystery was first used in the Land; which were always held good. And that her Majesty's Prerogative being no less than the Prerogative of her Predecessors, it seemed great Boldness in those who now impugned her here in: And that without Petition to her Highness, with Declaration of the Inconveniences, if any were. Seeing also that heretofore her Majesty's Patents for Printing had not only been allowed of, but fortified also by a Decree made in the Star-Chamber in the sixth Year of her Majesty's Reign, by inflicting Punishments to the infringers of them. But that for the Convenience of Privileges, it were very necessary for the Commonwealth, that none should print at all, but such as were authorized from her Majesty, being known Men. For, that if every Man might print that were so disposed, it might be a Means that Heresies, Treasons, and seditious Libels should often be dispersed. Also, that Privileges were Occasion that many Books were printed which were more beneficial to the Commonwealth, than profitable to the Printer. For the Patentee being benefited otherwise by Books of profitable Sale, was content to bestow Part of his Gains in other Books, which were within the Compass of his Patent, very beneficial for the Commonwealth; and yet such whereby the Printer should scarce reap the tenth Part of his Charge: Which Books would never be printed, if Privilege were revoked. That further, if Privilege were revoked, no Books at all should be printed within short Time. For commonly the first Printer was at Charge for the Author's Pains, and some other such like extraordinary Costs; whereas any other that would print it after him, come to the Copy Gratis, and so might he sell better cheap than the first Printer: And the first Printer should never utter his Books. Besides, the second Printer might better the first Impression by Notes, Tables, Difference in Paper or Volume (as it is easier to amend than first invent) which would also hinder the Sale of the first Printer's Books to his utter Undoing. These Inconveniences seen, every Man would strain Courtesie who should begin; so far, that in the End all Printing would decay within the Realm, to the undoing of the whole Company of Stationers. Then for the Price, if the Patentee should exact out of Reason, because no Man might print the Book but himself, that would be remedied by the Statute of 25 Hen. VIII. If the Workmanship of the Patentee were worse than it ought to be, it seemed to be a Condition in Law annexed to the Office, whereby he should forfeit the same: And as well for these Reasons as many others, which their Honours could best conceive of, they hoped their Honours were persuaded that these Privileges were to be upholden.

ABOUT these Times the Company of Stationers put up a Petition to the Lord Treasurer, (who was their great Patron) that, towards the Maintaining of their poor Company, he would be a Means to the Queen to grant them, for their Relief, the Privilege of Printing those two little Books of Introduction into the Latin Tongue, used in Schools by her Authority, viz. the Accidence and Grammar: For which they offered to yield somewhat yearly into the Receipt of her Majesty's Exchequer. They set forth in this Petition, what a very poor Company they were, and not able to bear the Charge that lay on them: That they paid excessive yearly Rents, for Farming of such Books, pertaining to their Art, as had been obtained from them by Means of Privileges: Their good Deserts from the Commonwealth, in searching for, and suppressing of Popish and Seditious Books, and executing several Warrants directed to them for such Purpose by the Queen's Commissioners in Causes Ecclesiastical. And finally, that they should be driven to dissolve their Company, unless the Treasurer stood their good Lord, as on former Occasions he had done, as the special Patron of their Company, and Favourer of the Art of Printing.

THE Printing-Presses now-a-days took too much Liberty; and the Printers being many, made bold to print sundry Books that created great Disturbances, as well to the Church as the Civil Government; whereof Complaint was made to the Queen. At length certain Decrees were made in the Star-Chamber concerning Printers, Stationers, &c. in the 28th Year of the Queen, and in the Year of our Lord 1585.

IN the Act against Merchant Strangers, in the Reign of King Richard III. Cap. 19. there was a Proviso for the Encouragement of bringing Books into the Realm by Strangers; and for the Encouragement of such as should print, it was provided, "That an Act, or any Parcel thereof, should not extend to the Prejudice, Disturbance, Damage or Impediment of any Artificer, or Merchant Stranger, of what Nation or Country he be, for bringing into this Realm, or selling by Retail or otherwise, any Book written or printed, or for inhabiting within this Realm for the same Intent: Or any Scrivener, Alluminer, Reader or Printer of such Book, which he hath or shall have, to sell by Way of Merchandize; or for their dwelling within this Realm, for the Exercise of the said Occupation.

YET this Proviso was repealed Anno 25. Hen. VIII. It appears by the said Act of Henry VIII. that upon the Act made of Richard III. for bringing in Books and Printers, there came into into the Realm since the making of the same, a marvellous Number of printed Books, and daily did. And that the Cause of making the same Proviso under King Richard was, for that there were but few Books, and few Printers within the Realm at that Time, which could not well exercise and occupy the said Science and Craft of Printing: But since, many of the King's natural Subjects had diligently learned and exercised the same Art, that at that Day there were within the Realm, (as that Statute of 25 Henry VIII. set forth) a great Number, cunning and expert in the said Science and Craft of Printing, as able to exercise the Craft in all Points, as any Stranger. Whence we see how long Printing hath been used in England, even from the time of King Richard, who reigned in the Year 1485. And how well stocked the Nation was with them about the Middle of the Reign of King Henry VIII. which was little more than 40 Years after.

THE Stationers, Anno 8 Regin. Annæ, 1709-10, presented a Bill to the Parliament, to have a Right to their Copies confirmed to them, and the sole Power of Printing their respective Books. For it was now become common for others to be Interlopers, as they called them, and to print upon them, that is, to print again the Copies that they had bought, and that usually of a worse Paper and less Letter, that it might be afforded cheaper. By which Means, the first Printers (who were at great Charge in purchasing of Copies and Printing the same) received great Damages.

THEY set forth to the Parliament, that when the Author had conveyed over his Copy to any of them, they had a just and legal Property thereunto: And that they had given Sums of Money for Copies, and had settled those Copies on their Wives at Marriage, or on their Children at their Deaths: And that at this Time many Widows and Orphans had none other Subsistence; and that the Copies then in Use, had cost the present Possessors (exclusively of all other Charges of Print and Paper) at least 50000 l. urging further, that this Property was the same with Houses and other Estates, being agreeable to common Law and good Reason. To which might be added, that unless this Liberty of Printing upon the Owners Copies were stopped, it would prove a great Discouragement to the Printing of many good Books, offered by Authors to the Booksellers, who would not care to meddle in such uncertain Gain, and thereby might ensue great Prejudice to Knowledge and Learning.

THIS produced an Act of Parliament Ann. 8 Regin. Annæ, to this Import: It was enacted, That after the 10th of April, 1710, the Author of any Book already printed (who had not transferred the Copy thereof) or the Bookseller, or other Person, who hath purchased any Copy to print or reprint, shall have the sole Right of Printing it for 21 Years. And the Author of any Book not yet printed, or of any Book hereafter to be composed, shall have the sole Liberty of Printing it for 14 Years, to commence from the Day of publishing thereof: The Offender against this, who shall publish any such Book without the Consent of the Proprietor under his Hand, with Witnesses, to forfeit the Book to the Proprietor; who shall forthwith damask them, and make them waste Paper, and forfeit 1 l. beside for every Sheet found in his Custody.

THE Title to the Copy of the Book to be published, to be entered in the Register-Book of the Company at the Hall of the said Company, and the Consent of the Proprietor entered.

IF any Proprietor after the 25th of March, 1710, shall set an unreasonable Price upon any Book, any Person may complain to the Archbishop of Canterbury, to the Lord Chancellor, the Bishop of LONDON, the Lords Chief Justices, or Chief Baron, &c. who may call the Bookseller before him, and enquire into the Cause of the Dearness; and upon Examination may reform and redress, and settle the Price. And if after such Price set, the Bookseller shall expose to Sale, or sell any Book at any higher Rate, he forfeiteth 5 l. for every Book so sold.

NINE Copies of each Book printed on the best Paper, after the 10th of April, 1710, are to be delivered to the Ware-house-keeper of the Company of Stationers at their Hall, before the Books shall be published, for the Use of the Royal Library, the Libraries of the Universities of Cambridge and Oxford, for the Libraries of the four Universities of Scotland, of Ston College in LONDON, and the Library of the Advocates in Scotland. And the Warehouse-Keepers shall deliver the said Copies within ten Days after Demand, upon Forfeiture of the Value of the Book, and 5 l.

At the End of 14 Years, the sole Right of printing or disposing Copies shall return to the Author for another 14 Years.

Mr. Buckley, who has lately printed a new Edition of Thuanus's History in Latin, obtained an Act of Parliament the last Session, 1733, to prohibit the Importation of the said Work from Foreign Parts, where it might have been printed at much less Expence than he was at, and if not prevented by the said Act, have been sold even in his own Country, at a less Price than it cost him; who was at 2350 l. Charge in collecting Materials, and barely paying the Duty on Paper imported for his Work; for as the Duty now stands, the Blank Paper to be used by our own Printers at Home, pays a great deal more than what is already printed by Workmen abroad, the first paying by the Ream, the latter by the Hundred Weight. This is a Matter, which, for the Encouragement of the Natives of Great Britain, who, in the Advantages of Trade, ought always to have the Preference to Foreigners, it is to be hoped the Legislature will soon look into.

THE Stationers Hall is situated near the North End of Cock-Alley in Ludgate-Street, where anciently stood the House of the Duke of Britanny, afterwards the Earl of Pembroke's Inn, then Abergavenny House, and lastly the Ground was purchased by this Company. The Hall is a handsome Brick Building, and at the Entrance is a fine Pair of Iron Gates, set up in the Year 1732.

THEIR Armorial Ensigns are: Gule, three Horse-shoes Argent.

THESE Farriers, Stow saith, pretended to have their Rise from Henry de Ferraris, a Norman, who was Master of the Horse, or Farrier, to William the Conqueror, which Prince gave him the Honour of Tutbury in the County of Stafford, which was the first Honour given to the Farriers in England.

Browne, Knt. being then Mayor of LONDON, certain Ordinances, made by the Guardians of the Mystery of the Lorimers of LONDON, were confirmed by the Mayor and Aldermen of the City at Guildhall. Wherein it is mention'd, that the Fraternity had then been of long Continuance. And the 3d Day of December, in the 10th Year of Queen Anne, the said Company were incorporated by the Name of Master, Wardens, Assistants, and Commonalty of Lorimers of LONDON. In procuring of which, Sir James Bateman, Knt. afterwards Lord Mayor of LONDON, a loving Member of the said Company, was very assistant.

THEY are a Master, two Wardens, about 50 Assistants, but no Livery.

THEIR Arms are: Azure, on a Chevron Argent, between three Curb-bits, Or; as many Boses Sable.

THIS Company's Hall is a neat, tho' small one; it is situated on London-Wall, almost over-against the North End of Basinghall-street. It is now let out to the Glasiers, and for a Meeting-House.

BROWN-BAKERS.

THE Company of the Brown-Bakers, a Society of long Standing and Continuance, prevailed to have their Incorporating granted the ninth Day of June, in the 19th Year of the Reign of K. James I.

[Fraternitas Sancti Clementis Pistorum LONDON, Anno 1380.]

WOODMONGERS or FULLERS.

THE Company of the Woodmongers being a very antient Fellowship, and of good and amicable Agreement together for long Time, came to be incorporated the 29th Day of August, in the third Year of the Reign of K. James I. Anno 1604.

THEIR Arms are: Argent, a Sword crowned with a Ducal Coronet Or, on a between two Faggots Sable. Supporters;

St. Katharine holding a Wheel, and St. John Baptist, with a Coat of Camels Hair: Creit; a Lyon Or, issuing out of a Thicket, proper. Motto; Now is the Ax laid to the Root of the Tree.

WHETHER some of these Woodmongers were called Billeters, from dealing in Billets, is not certain; but in the LONDON Register of Wills, mention is made of one William Burford's Will, Citizen and Belleytere of LONDON.

THE Woodmongers in former Times had intrusted to them by the City, the Government of the Cars and Carts to be employed in the City, and Liberties; because, as may be supposed, they made use of so many in a continual Carriage of Fire-Wood and Coals, of Timber, Boards, &c. to the Inhabitants for their necessary Supplies. Sir Richard Brown, Knight, who was the Loyal Lord Mayor, when King Charles II. came in, was of this Company: And in their Behalf procured an Act of Common-Council, Anno 1661, for them to order and dispose of the Carts; that Trust having been before in the President and Governors of Christ's Hospital. But in the Year 1665, Laurence, Mayor, this Power was by another Act taken from the Company, and committed again to the said Hospital, where it still abideth: A further Account of these Carmen will follow by and by. In that Act were several Rules and Orders made for this Company, viz.

FOR the Prevention of the Deceit of Woodmongers, in the Sale and Measure of their Coals, it was ordered, "That all Sea-Coals shall be filled and brought home to the Buyers in the Sea-Coal Meeters Sacks, or such other Sacks as contain the full Measure of the Sea-coal Meeters Sacks; and shall be marked by the Keeper of Guild-Hall, for the Time being, according to an Order of the Court of Aldermen, made the 25th of October, in the Mayoralty of Sir Tho. Cambel, Knight.

"ALL Persons vending and uttering Sea-coal by Retail, shall, when they carry or send any Coals within LONDON or Liberties, carry along with their Coals a good lawful Bushel, sealed according to the Bushel of the Guild-Hall, allowed for measuring of Sea-coal; which agreeth with the Fat antiently used for measuring Sea-coals: Which Bushel shall be and contain in Breadth from Out to Out, (the Ring not exceeding half an Inch) 19 Inches and an half, and in Depth with the Bushel seven Inches and an half. If they bring Coals without such Bushel, to forfeit 10 s. for the first and second Offence; and for the third, the Car or Carrs of the Offender so to be seized, and carried to the next Store-Yard.

"AND whereas the Woodmongers and others, using to sell and utter Coals by Retail, have commonly gone or sent down the River Thames, or otherways travelled, or employed their Agents, to meet the Ships or Vessels coming from Newcastle, and other Parts; and at distant Places from the City, or by their Contract with the said City and Liberties, have bought up and forestalled, and engrossed great Quantity of Coals, which should have been brought to the City by the Owners and Sellers thereof, to be there sold at reasonable Prices; and the same have conveyed and brought to the City, to sell again at high and excessive Prices, against the Custom and Privileges of the City, to the Publick Detriment and Oppression of the Poor: It was enacted, That no Person inhabiting within the City, or Liberties, provide by Barge, or Contact, for any Sea-coals, Scotch-coals, Pit-coals, or any other Coals, coming towards the City to be sold, other than such as shall be provided to be spent within their own private Houses; nor shall sell or utter the same by Retail or in Gross; but that the Owners and Sellers thereof shall and may bring the same Coals to the City themselves, here by them to be sold, upon Pain of forfeiting 5 s. for every Chaldron, and the like Sum for every Ton of Scotch-coals or Pit-coals.

"THAT the Yeomen of the Wood-Wharfs of this City diligently oversee, that all Persons, coming or repairing to this City with any Coals aforementioned to be sold, do observe the Orders and Rules before going; and do use Diligence for the Discovery and Punishment of all Offenders in and about any Particulars thereof.

"AND that all Pains, Penalties, and Forfeitures in and by this Act limited, may be recovered by Action of Debt, Bill, or Information, in the Name of the Chamberlain of the City, and in his Majesty's Court holden before the Mayor and Aldermen in the said City, in the Chamber of the Guild-Hall: And after Recovery thereof, one Moiety to the Informer, after Charges deducted, and the other Moiety to the Poor of Christ's Hospital.

THE Carmen would make themselves an antient Fellowship, and joined in the same Corporation with the Woodmongers. And of later Times fell out with the Woodmongers, who kept their own Carts for carrying out their Wood and Coals, to the great Prejudice of the Free Carmen of LONDON. Whereupon they brought their Case before the Court of Common-Council against the Woodmongers, for working unlicensed Carts; and for procuring 140 Carts by an Act of Common-Council, to 420 old licensed Carts, to the impoverishing of them. The Case by them stated was as followeth:

The CASE of the Antient FREE CARMEN of LONDON, humbly offered to the Consideration of the Honourable Court of COMMON-COUNCIL.

THE Carmen of LONDON were made a Fellowship by the City in the Reign of Henry VIII. and in the third Year of K. James I. were incorporated with the People called Fuel-lers, by the Name of Woodmongers, and so continued till the Year 1668; about which Time several Complaints being made to K. Charles II. by divers great Personages, of the Woodmongers Frauds in buying and selling of Sea-Coal and other Fuel, his Majesty recommended the Redress thereof to the City of LONDON: Upon which a Committee of Common-Council was chosen, who reported their Frauds and Abuses in the Measure of their Fuel; and amongst divers other Matters, That no effectual Course could be taken for redressing thereof, but by prohibiting the Woodmongers from keeping and working Carts of their own for carrying abroad their Fuel. Upon which Report, the Court of Common-Council passed an Act to effect the same.

THAT the Woodmongers still continuing their evil Practices, particularly their grand Abuses done to the Carmen, Application was made to the King in Council for the Carmens Relief; upon which the Woodmongers appealed to the Parliament, where their Abuses were so apparent, that, for Fear of Prosecution and Punishment, they surrendered their Charter: And hereupon the Carmen were made a Fellowship by the City, by Name of The Free Carmen of the City of LONDON, Anno 1668.

THAT the Woodmongers contemning the aforementioned Act of Common-Council, several Suits were brought against them for working unlicensed Carts; and the Act being found to be deficient in Matter of Form, upon Argument in the Courts at Westminster, the Judges gave particular Directions how it should be amended; which the Common-Council having done, it was by them passed into an Act in the Year 1681. And the Woodmongers still refusing to conform, Actions were brought against them in LONDON; which they removed into the Court of Common-Pleas, and Exchequer; where the Validity of the Act was argued by Council learned, and the Honourable the Judges of both Courts pronounced the said Act to be a good By-Law, and granted Procedendo's thereupon.

THAT the Woodmongers, after having put the City, Christ's Hospital, and the poor Carmen, to the Expence of thirty Years Time and Treasure, finding the said By-Law to be binding, did apply themselves to the City, and by their crafty Insinuations, have obtained an Act of Common-Council for allowing them 120 Carts, over and above the 420 old licensed Carts, which they now work; so that near 200 old licensed Carts stand idle daily for Want of their rightful Labour, to the Impoverishing and Undoing several Hundreds of the antient free Carmen.

" And now, may it farther be offered to your " Considerations, That we the said poor Carmen
" of LONDON, have paid, Time out of " Mind, 400 l. a Year, for the Relief of the poor " Children of Christ's Hospital. And tho' we

AN Act of Common-Council was made for the licensing of Carts for these Woodmongers, in the Mayoralty of Sir William Ashurst; which may not be amiss here also to insert.

An ACT for Licensing CARTS, to be used by the Freeman Woodmongers, or Traders in Fuel, that inhabit within the City and Liberties thereof.

WHEREAS there was formerly assigned, allowed and appropriated, by the Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of LONDON, unto the Woodmongers or Traders in Fuel, inhabiting within the said City and the Liberties thereof, a certain Number of Carts, for carrying of Sea-Coals and other Fuel, which have been Part of the Number of four hundred and twenty Cars or Carts allowed, marked and appointed for the general Service of this City: But of late Years the Number of Inhabitants being greatly increased, and by Reason thereof the necessary Use of Street-Cars or Carts is much increased also; and therefore all the said four hundred and twenty Cars have been used only for Street-Cars and Carts, whereby the Woodmongers and Traders in Fuel, within this City and the Liberties thereof, are in a great Measure disabled to manage and carry on their said Trade and Employments: The which they have humbly represented unto this Court of Common-Council, and prayed Relief therein.

AND this Court having taken the same into serious Consideration, do find it necessary to increase the said Number of four hundred and twenty Cars and Carts, so allowed and appointed as aforesaid, so far forth as may be necessary for the said Woodmongers or Dealers in Fuel, only for the Management and carrying on their said Trades and Employments; and also for enabling them to furnish the Citizens and other Inhabitants of this City and Liberties, with Coals and other Fuel, at as cheap and easy Rates and Prices as they or any others may or can.

BE it enacted therefore by the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Commons in Common-Council assembled, and by the Authority of the same, That there shall be allowed, marked, and appointed to and for the sole Use and Employment of the Woodmongers, or Traders in Fuel, (being Freeman, and inhabiting within the City of LONDON and the Liberties thereof, and no other) a fitting and convenient Number of Cars and Carts, not exceeding one hundred and twenty, other than and besides the aforesaid Number of four hundred and twenty Cars and Carts, now used as Street-Cars and Carts, as aforesaid:

THE which Cars and Carts so to be allowed, marked and appointed, shall be appropriated unto them the said Woodmongers, or Traders in Fuel, for the sole Use, Management and Carrying on the Trade or Employment of Woodmongers, or Dealers in Fuel only; and shall be divided and distributed to and amongst them from Time to Time, as may be most convenient for them, and least to the Annoyance and Destruction of the publick Streets and Passages of this City, and the Liberties thereof; any Act of Common-Council, or other Law, Usage, or Custom of this City, now in Being and in Force, to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding.

AND be it farther enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the said Cars and Carts so to be allowed, marked and appointed by Virtue of this Act, shall not be, nor taken or esteemed to be, appurtenant to the several and respective Wharf or Wharfs, to which the same or any of them are or shall be so allowed or appointed, nor shall be, sold or disposed of by such or any other the Woodmongers or Traders in Fuel, in any Manner howsoever.

AND that the Cars and Carts so to be allowed and appointed to the said Woodmongers or Traders in Fuel, shall be burnt with a Faggot-Mark on both the Outsides thereof, and shall have also thereupon a Piece of Brass, with the true Number of such Cars or Carts; and the Raves thereof shall be higher than the Raves of the Street-Cars or Carts, to keep the Fuel the safer from falling off and hurting the People in the Streets, and also the better to distinguish them from the said other Cars or Carts.

AND

AND that the said Wharf-Carts, nor Cars, nor any of them, shall work in the Streets in any other Work than only in carrying of Coals and other Fuel; to and from the respective Wharfs, belonging to such Persons to whom the said Cars or Carts shall be allowed; upon Pain, That for every Time such Wharf-Car, or Cart, shall work, or be otherwise employed for Wages, Hire, or Reward, the said Car or Cart shall forfeit and pay for every such Offence the Sum of Five Pounds.

AND all and every the Licences that shall be given to any such Woodmonger or Trader in Fuel, whose Carts or Cars shall be so hired and employed, contrary to the true Intent and Meaning of this present Act, shall from thence be suspended, 'till such respective Penalty or Penalties shall be paid and satisfied: And every Person so offending, shall ('till the said respective Sums be paid) be disabled to work any of his said Cars or Carts; notwithstanding any Licence or Licences, to such Person or Persons, granted by Virtue of this Act.

AND for the better putting this Act in Execution, and for the more equal and impartial Distribution of the said Wharf-Cars, or Carts, to and amongst the said Woodmongers or Traders in Fuel, with due Respect to their several and respective Wants and Occasions in the said respective Trades: Be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the Right Honourable Sir Thomas Lane, Knight, Lord Mayor Elect, Sir Thomas Stamp, Knight, Sir James Houlton, and Sir Francis Child, Knights and Aldermen of this City; and Mr. Caddon, Mr. Deputy Eyre, &c.

U P H O L S T E R S.

THE Company of Upholsters, or Upholders, were of elder Times a Brotherhood and Fellowship among themselves of good Esteem; but there is no Record of the Time of their Incorporation: They are a Master, three Wardens, about 31 Assistants, and 121 on the Livery. The Livery Fine is 4*l.* 10*s.* and for Steward 11*l.*

THEIR Arms are: Sable, three Tents Gules.

IN the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and perhaps before, great was the Deceit by these Tradesmen, used in their Feathers, in their Quilts and Coverlids, in their Cushions for Chairs and Stools: And from 1578, and forwards, most Feathers that were in Sacks came out of the Low-Countries, so packed up, out of the Spoil of Houses, with Lime, Dirt, Dust, Stones, and all heavy Rubbish, to make them Weight: that when they did drive a Sack, to make Beds of them, they did garboil out of every Hundred, the Half of such Baggage and refuse Stuff; and yet the Feathers still remained unmade clean, for the Purpose, the Lime would cleave so fast on them. A better Sort of Sacks of Feathers came out of Eastland; but near Hand as faulty, which in Driving fell out a little better, but not much.

ALL made Stuff that came out of France, for Quilts and Coverlids, for Inns, and Husbandmen of the Country, came all stuffed with Cow-Hair, taken from the Head by the Tanners. And such Stuff made as came from thence or Flanders, in Cushions, or for Chairs and Stools, were filled with Thistle-Down, naughty Flocks, and all Baggage in them that would breed Worms, and eat the Stuff, and stink. And so did they fill all their Mattraffes.

ONE Cordel, about the Year 1585, sued to the Queen, That considering these Abuses in the Trade of Upholsters, he might be appointed to search and seal their Commodities, and to have the Place of a Searcher, and accordingly to seize such as were thus abused, as Forfeit by Law. The Lord Treasurer Burghley privately sent Peter Osborn, his Remembrancer, a discreet and honest Man, into the City, to get Information, the best he could, in this Matter; who, without mentioning Cordel's Suit, asking an Upholster, Whether a Search would not help? He said, All Retailers were then undone; for all their Stuff of that Kind was such, and forfeited by the Statute; but if it began with the Merchants that brought it in, they would bring no more such, as he thought, 'till they might have better.

THEN the Upholster, complaining how the Upholsters were no Corporation, Osborn moved, whether Incorporating them would help, putting the Search thereof into their Hands; he thought it would, if they had Authority: And tho' there were but six of their Company of any Substance, they would bestow 100*l.* to have it; that this Suit of the Search, which then they heard of, might stay. The Issue was, That Osborn sent the Warden of the Company of Upholsters to the Lord Treasurer; and his Advice was, That Cordel should have some good Sum to procure their Corporation, and some Part of the Forfeitures upon Searches; and the Queen adding some little Portion on her Part, would advance well Cordel's Suit, and bring a Reformation of a great Inconvenience to the Commonweal.

AGAIN, in the Year 1594, publick Complaints were made to the Lord Treasurer, of divers Frauds and Mischiefs in Upholsters Commodities; as of the Badness of the Feathers, of their Smelling, of Fen-Down, of Squib and Strick Hair, of Stuffing French Quilts with Cows Hair, of Wares made up of Flocks, and Part of Wooll: And for the Redress of these Things, Petitions were put up by several of the Upholsters; and they (as it seems) the honestest of them. The Lord Treasurer upon this sent his Letters (together with the Petition offered him) to certain of the eminentest, and of them to know, if those Informations were true; and if they were willing a Searcher should be appointed to look into them.

THESE, in their Answer (excepting two or three of them, who dissented) acknowledged the Abuses committed in the said Trade were very great, and rather greater than was express'd in the Petition. And that altho' several Laws had been made before the Times of King Henry VII. and King Edward VI. for Reformation of the said Abuses; yet for Want of good Execution, the said Deceits were much more encreased; that in Respect whereof, because they that were Traders in the said Occupation, consisting of divers Companies, namely, Upholsters, Drapers, Merchant-Tailors, Skinners, and Clothworkers, could not conveniently reform the same among themselves, their Desire was, If her Majesty passed any Grant for the Oversight and Correction of the same Abuses, that then the Person to whom the said Grant should be made, should call to his Aid and Assistance, as oft as he should oversee any of these Abuses, two or three honest Subsidy Men, of some of the aforesaid five Companies, whereby no Wrong might be done to any Man, but that the Commonwealth might receive thereby such Benefit as was desired. In the which Course, they assured his Honour, there would be a Reformation of intolerable Abuses, and a general Good done.

BUT whatever Answer they gave, this was opposed by a great many others: Who, in another Petition to the said Lord Treasurer, alledged these these things; that of Feathers were divers Sorts, and that they did much vary in their own Nature; and that it was not possible to make those good, that of themselves were bad. That those that smelled could not be made sweet, but by some Continuance of Wearing. That the Dust that was in them, was by reason of the Dryness and Sandiness of the Soil wherein they were bred. That as for the Rubbish and Quills, they might be put into them by the Parties who had the using of them, and the other by the Negligence of them that had the Making of them. Which they humbly beseeched his Honour might be looked into by Men experienced in such Cases, of the Company of Upholsters, and not by such as only sought for private Gain. For unless they underhand agreed with the Merchant (which would breed great Inconveniences) it was to be feared that the Merchant, seeing his Wares tossed, garbled and ript up, at length they should have neither good nor bad. That there were none to be found, but Exceptions might be taken against them in some Case; and that the Prices at that Day were so excessive, that where they had been in their Remembrance at Five Pence, now they were at Eight Pence the Pound, and not so good. That if they spake of good, there was but one Country, which was France, from whence they came; where they did once a Year pluck their Geese alive, and let them go again. And this was the Cause that no other Feathers would be sweet. Which French Feathers would be but few, if they had no others.

Secondly, For the Down, in some Cases they found it to be tolerable: that is, for Stuffing of Cushions, and Making of Bedding for the Poor, whose Ability might not reach higher. And as for the Stuff it self, they knew it would breed nothing that was hurtful to the Body's Health: Only in the first Year that it was gathered, it would breed a Worm, while it was green: but being a Year old, the Stuff was as sweet and clean as any Feathers. And for this, Order was taken by them, that none should be used, until it were a Year old; as also by the Parties that gathered them, which were the poor People in the Isle of Ely: For, the mingling of this Stuff with Feathers, or any other Stuff to deceive any, was a Thing which they never heard of or knew.

Thirdly, As touching Squib and Strick Hair, they were of Opinion it was not to be used (Cow Hair excepted) and they thought was not used of any: For Down was come in the Place of it. Neither could they see, that it could altogether be taken away, Flocks being of so high Price, that the Poor could not reach them: Neither could the Quantity of Flocks be gotten in all England to serve for this Purpose: Whereby many poor People should lye in the Straw, or full hard. And it was used for Mattresses to lye under Featherbeds, to keep them from the Cords.

Fourthly, For French Quilts which were stuffed with Cow-Hair, there had not any Quantity come over in four Years: Neither did they look for any Quantity, although they were much desired of many; and especially of Inn-keepers, who knew that they were stuffed with Cow-Hair; nor could find any Thing for that Price so convenient to serve their Purpose.

Fifthly, That whereas some sued, that all Wares, wherein there was any Cow-Hair, might be forfeited, it was a Thing unreasonable. For so should the most part of our Coverings, that come out of Flanders, called Varder, and a hundred a Week that came out of Glocestershire, be forfeited. And it being reported, that Buckrams which came out of France, and Ticks which came out of Flanders (whereof they then had but few, and those dear) were intended to be sealed: The Rumour of which Sealing and Garbling their Commodities was so noised among the Merchants, that they should want that which otherwise would have been brought over in some reasonable Sort, to the great Prejudice of the Commonwealth.

Sixthly, Wares made Part of Flocks and Part of Wool, as Dornix and certain Coverings made at Sudbury, whether mixed with Flocks or not, they were not able truly to say; but for these, Sealers were appointed; and yet never were they so bad, nor so dear.

AND these were their Answers to the pre-supposed Abuses in their Trade: And in Conclusion they beseeched his Lordship, That by his Authority there might not any such Thing or Grant pass against them as was required: Which if he should permit, it would be to the utter Overthrow and Impoverishing of the Trade, and the great Hinderance of her Majesty's Subjects.

NOTWITHSTANDING this Petition of the Company of Upholsters, the other Party (who called themselves also the Company) presented their Petition against the former, with their Answers to each Article above-mentioned; which they called False Suggestions; and craved Leave to unfold to the Lord Treasurer the true Reasons, why they withstood the Reformation of the same Abuses, viz. That they ordinarily bought Fen-Downe and Thistle-Downe for an Half-penny a Pound, and sold the same among Feathers for 6 d. the Pound, and amongst Feather-Downe for 16 d. the Pound. That they took coarse Canvas Cloth, being worth about 2 s. and 6 d. for a Tick of a Bed, and stuff'd the same with Fen-Downe mingled with Squib, Cow-Hair and Strike, which cost them about 6 d. and sold the same for a Bed to the Poor, for 10 or 12 s. and sometimes more, which in very short Time turned all to Worms. And it was most filthy and corrupt. That by these deceitful and wicked Means, they did only enrich themselves, being not many, and undid almost all the whole Company, and abused the whole Realm. And, which greatly discomforted all honest Men, the greatest Custom came into the Hands of these Abusers; and therefore desired the Lord Treasurer to further the said most honest, reasonable and lawful Request, for the Overseeing and Correction of the said Wares.

THE Upholders Hall is situated in Leadenhall-Street, almost over-against St. Mary Axe.

T U R N E R S.

THE Company of Turners had long continued a loving Fellowship or Brotherhood among themselves, to the good Example of others, and became incorporated in the second Year of King James I. Anno Domini 1603. They are a Master, two Wardens, 24

Assistants, and 118 on the Livery: Their Livery Fine is 8 l. the Steward 12 l. Those under the Livery may take one Apprentice, the rest two.

THEIR Armorial Ensigns are: Sable, a Catharine-Wheel, Or, between two Pillars, with an Imperial Crown in Chief, and an Axe in Base.

THESE Turners antiently were Measure-makers: And there is this Record in the Chamber of LONDON, concerning an Oath some of them took before the Mayor about making Measures. Henry le Tournour, dwelling in Wood-Street, Richard le Tournour, John le Tournour, in Swithin's-lane of Candlewike-street; Rob. le Tournour, living at Flete; William le Tournour, without Bishopsgate; Richard le Corveiser, Tournour, living in Wodestrete: All these were sworn on on Saturday next before the Feast of St. Thomas the Apostle, An. 4 Edw. II. before the Mayor and Aldermen, that for the future they make not any Measures but Gallons, Pottles and Quarts: And that they make no false Measures; as Measures called Chopines and Gylles; nor to make them after the Manner of Boxes, or Glasses, or after any other Manner. And that all such false Measures, of what Sort soever they be, and where-soever it shall happen they find them, they shall attach in the Hands of the Turners, or in any other Place, as well in the Hands of Strangers as of Freemen; and shall cause them to come to Guildhall before the Mayor; and shall present them, under Pain of heavy Forfeiture.

THE Turners Hall is situated on the East-Side of Philpot Lane, near East-Cheap.

GLASIERS.

THE Company of Glasi-ers have been a Society of antient Memory, and maintained a League and Brotherly Affection together: They were incorporated in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, and are a Master, two Wardens, 21 Assistants, and 75 on the Livery; their Livery-Fine is 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

THEIR Arms and Crest were confirmed to them by Robert Cooke, Clarencieux, King at Arms, Anno Domini 1588. And in the Visitation of LONDON, made by Sir Henry St. George, Richmond, Deputy to Sir Richard St. George, Knt. Clarencieux King at Arms; the Demy Lion in Chief, at that Time, was altered to a Lion passant, Or, 1634. The Master being Mr. John Addison; William Hide and Eusebius Palmer, Wardens.

THEIR Arms are: Argent two crossing Irons saltierways between Four closing Nails Sable, on a Chief Gules, a Lion of England. Crest; a Lion's Head erased Or, between two Wings Azure. Supporters; Two Finals, or Boys, each holding a Torch proper. Motto; Lucem tuam da Nobis, O Deus!

THIS Company have had no Hall since the Fire of LONDON, but meet at Lorimers.

CLERKS.

THE Company of Clerks, commonly termed Parish-Clerks, are of very long Continuance; they were incorporated in the 17th Year of the Reign of King Henry III. Anno Domini 1232, and confirmed by several Kings since.

THEY are a Master, two Wardens, 17 Assistants, as Governors, besides one of every Parish.

THEIR Arms are: Azure a Flower de Lis Or, on a Chief Gules; a Leopard's Head between two Books closed of the Second.

A Composition was antiently made between the Chamberlain of the City, and the Parish-Clerks, for having the Liberty of the City.

THEY were a Guild or Fraternity for 400 Years and upwards, known then by the Name of the Brotherhood of St. Nicholas; whose Hall was near Little St. Helen's by Bishopsgate-street, within the Gate, at the then Sign of the Angel, where the Parish-Clerks had seven Alms-houses for poor Clerks Widows, as Stow shews. Unto this Fraternity Men and Women of the first Quality, Ecclesiastical and Others, joined themselves: Who, as they were great Lovers of the Church-Musick in general, so their Beneficence unto Parish-Clerks in particular, is abundantly evident by some antient Manuscripts at their Common-Hall in Great Wood-street, wherein Footsteps of this great Bounty appear, by the large Gifts and Revenues given for the Maintenance and Encouragement of such as should devote themselves to the Study and Practice of this Noble and Divine Science; and in which the Parish-Clerks did then excel, Singing being their peculiar Province.

KING Charles I. renewed their Charter, and conferred upon them very ample Privileges and Immunities, and incorporated them by the Name of Master, Wardens, and Fellowship of Parish-Church Clerks of the City and Suburbs of LONDON, and the Liberties thereof; the City of Westminster, the Borough of Southwark, and the fifteen Out-Parishes adjacent. And of which Privileges this is not the least, viz. That in Respect of their great and continual Service, and the Charge which they undergo, they should be free from all Offices, unless they desired or yielded themselves thereunto. Which Privilege was confirmed to them by the Order of the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, in the Mayoralty of Sir Robert Viner, in the - - - - Year of King Charles II. in these Words, viz. "All Parish-Clerks to be exempt from all Parish-Offices, as by their Charter, and by an Order of the Mayoralty of the City of LONDON." But if any Parish-Clerk within the Bills of Mortality shall happen to live in any other Parish than that of which he is Clerk, he may not expect that Privilege, but must take his Lot, and bear his Office as well as other Parishioners. Another Privilege is, that they are allowed to have a Printing-Press in their Common-Hall, for the Printing of their Weekly and General Bills of Mortality. And a Printer for that Purpose is appointed them by the Archbishop of Canterbury for the Time being.

By their Charter also they are enjoined to make Report of all the Christenings and Burials, which do happen in their several respective Parishes, on every Tuesday Weekly by Six o'Clock in the Afternoon at the farthest, (but according to the By-Laws, by Two) that the King or Queen may have a true Account thereof upon Wednesday following. For whom, a Book is drawn up by the Clerk of the Company, and sent to his Majesty, and another Book prepared for his Lordship's own Use.

THEY are by their Charter empowered to administer an Oath to the Members of their Corporation, upon their first Admission: "To be observant of, and obedient unto all such wholesome Rules and Orders made or to be made, which may conduce to the common Profit and Benefit of the said Company or Fellowship." And before the Oath be administer'd to one newly chosen a Parish-Clerk, he must procure a Licence under the Seal of the Office of the Bishop of LONDON. Upon producing which, the next Court-Day he may be sworn, and received as a Brother of the Society of Parish-Clerks. Notwithstanding, if the Person have not obtained his Licence as aforesaid, he may not be refused his Admittance, provided he produce a Certificate under the Hand of the Minister and Church-Warden of such his Election into the Place of Parish-Clerk.

RULES and Orders are printed and given to every Parish-Clerk, when he is sworn; the same with those that are appointed to be hung up in a Frame in the Common-Hall, where all that are concerned may take Notice of them: They chiefly relate to direct the Clerk in his Care concerning the Bills of Mortality, and to take a careful Account of all that die in his Parish, or are christen'd; with their Names, Diseases, Places of Dwelling, &c. and to bring all in duly to the Hall, in order to the printing the said Bills: But again, to look a little upon them in Times foregoing.

FORMERLY this Society of Parish-Clerks used to attend great Funerals, going before the Hearse, and singing, with their Surplices hanging on their Arms, till they came to the Church.

SOME certain Days in the Year they had their publick Feasts, which they celebrated with Singing and Musick, and then received into their Society such Persons as delighted in Singing, or were studious of it. These their Meetings and Performances were in Guildhall College, or Chapel. Thus the 27th of September 1560, on the Eve thereof, they had Even-Song, and on the Morrow there was a Communion; and after, they retired to Carpenters-Hall to Dinner. And May the 11th, 1562, they kept their Communion at the said Guildhall Chapel, and received seven Persons into their Brotherhood, and then repaired to their own Hall to Dinner: and after Dinner, a goodly Play of the Children of Westminster, with Waits, and Regals, and Singing.

THE Parish-Clerks Hall is situated on the West Side of Wood-street.

ANTIENTLY there were divers other Mysteries which are now abolished and gone, or swallowed up in other Societies, as,

WHITAWERS, FUSTARERS, or FUSTERS.

FUSTERS, or Seelers of LONDON. They seem to be Saddle-tree-makers. These came before John le Blund, Mayor, (in the Reign of Edward II. about the Year 1307) and the Aldermen, and prayed, that the Points or Articles of the Mystery de Fuste [of Fusters] which were used in the Times of their Ancestors, might yet be held and used, and by six honest Men of the Mystery might be searched and tried; that is, that no Fustier make Arzsons de Seels, i. e. Bows or Trees of Saddles, but of Quarter; and that le Fust, i. e. The Staff, be dry before it be painted; and that each Fuster have one certain Mark to mark all his Arzsons, i. e. Saddle Bows, that he makes; and that no Painter put Paint or Colout upon an Arzson made out of the City.

MEGUSERS.

THESE were a Company who dealt in the Skins of dead Horses and other Creatures, and flawed them; which they sometimes did within the City; which was such an Annoyance, that it seems it was complained of to the Mayor and Aldermen. And in the Mayoralty of Richard de Resham, Ann. 4. Regni Regis Edw. fil. Regis Edw. Walter le Whitawyer, Richard de Hundesdich, John le Megucer, Richard le Megucer, were sworn, that they shall never hereafter flaw, or cause to be flawed, dead Horses within the City or Suburbs, by themselves or others, under Pain of Danger to fall upon them. And if any of the aforesaid sworn Persons should hereafter see any flawing any Horse within the City or Suburbs, presently to inform the Mayor for the Time being.

CAPPERS.

Capellarii, Cappers. Hugh Fitz-Otonis being Custos of the City, 54 Hen. III. were made certain Ordinances for the Trade of the Cappers, in the Presence of the Aldermen, and by their unanimous Consent, viz. That none should make a Cap but of good white or grey Wool, or black. That none dye a Cap made of white or grey Wool, into Black; because there is very great Deceit therein; for coming into the Rain, they fall, or lose Colour, &c.

THERE was an Act 13 Eliz. in Favour of these Cappers, which Trade began then to grow into Decay. In this Act was declared, what Abundance of poor People, with Women and Children, were employed; as also Halt, Decrepit, Lame, in sundry Exercises belonging to that Trade; as, Carders, Spinners, Knitters, Parters of Wool, Forcers, Thickers, Dressers, Walkers, Dyers, Battelers, Shearers, Pressers, Edgers, Liners, Band-makers, and other Exercises; who have thereby maintained themselves and their Families. And the said Act mentioneth, how the wearing of these Caps were very decent and comely for all Estates and Degrees, especially for such as inhabit Cities, Boroughs, Towns, Villages and Hamlets within the Realm. The Act also specified what Sort of Persons must wear these Caps, and when, viz. All above the Age of six Years, except Maidens, Ladies and Gentlewomen inhabiting within Cities, Boroughs, Towns, &c. and except Noble Persons, Lords, Knights, and Gentlemen of the Possession of twenty Marks by the Year; and except all that have borne Office of Worship in any City, &c. These shall wear upon the Sabbath and Holidays (unless they travel out of the City, Towns, &c.) upon their Heads one Cap of Wool, knit, thicked, and dressed in England, upon Pain of Forfeiture of 3 s. 4 d.

WATERMEN.

THE Company of Watermen on the River of Thames, LONDON, were made a Company by Act of Parliament, the 2d and 3d of Philip and Mary: Wherein it is expressed, that there shall be Yearly appointed, chosen, and elected, by the Mayor and Aldermen for the City of LONDON, for the Time being, the Number of eight Persons of the most Wise, Discreet, and best Sort of Watermen, being Householders, and occupying as Watermen upon the said River between Gravesend and Windfor: Which Election shall be Yearly at the first Court of Aldermen, to be holden within the said City, next after the first Day of March. And the same eight Persons so elected, shall be named and called The Overseers and Rulers of all the Wherry-men and Watermen, that from and after the first Day of March shall Use, Occupy, or Exercise, any Rowing upon the said River of Thames, between Gravesend and Windfor aforesaid. Which said Overseers and Rulers shall keep and maintain good Order and Obedience amongst the said Watermen, according to the true Meaning of this present Act.

AND the 11th and 12th Year of King William III. an Act of Parliament past for uniting the Lightermen upon the said River to the Watermen, viz. That all and every Person and Persons, who shall be employed in rowing, or any ways navigating any Lighter or Lighters, or other great Craft on the River of Thames, (Trinitymen, Fishermen, Ballastmen, Western Barges, and Mill Boats, Chalk Hoys, Faggot and Wood Lighters, and other Craft carrying the same excepted) shall be duly and truly registered in a Book or Books for that Purpose, to be kept by the Company of Watermen and Lightermen; and shall likewise be liable to such Orders, Rules, and Constitutions made, or to be made, for the better Rule and Government of the said Society, or Company of Watermen and Lightermen; and the Pains and Penalties, to enforce due Obedience thereto.

THIS

THIS Company are more particularly under the Dominion of the Lord Mayor; they have besides the Rulers, three Auditors of Accounts, and 60 Assistants, but are no Livery, not having any Freedom of the City.

THEIR Arms are: Barry Wavy of six Argent and Azure, a Boat Or, on a Chief of the second, a pair of Oars Saltierways of the third, between two Cultrions of the first. Crest, a Hand proper holding an Oar as the former. Supporters; two Dolphins proper. Motto; At Command of our Superiors.

MR. Strype saith, he was told by a Member of the Company, that there were 40,000 Watermen upon the Rolls of the Company; and that upon Occasion, they could furnish 20,000 Men for the Fleet, and that there were then 8000 in the Service.

THERE is a Book (the Original whereof is in the Town-Clerk's Office) intituled, The Constitution of the Company of Watermen and Lightermen, as amended by the Right Hon: the Court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen: And afterwards confirmed and approved by the Right Hon. the Lord Chief Justice Holt, whose Approbation ran in these Words: I have seen and perused these By-Laws, and do approve, allow, and confirm the same. Dated the 16th Day of April, Anno Dom. 1708.

THE Watermens-Hall is situated in Cold-Harbour in Thames-street, near the Thames.

A P O T H E C A R I E S.

THE Company of the Apothecaries, that divided themselves from the antient Society of Grocers, grew so highly favoured by K. James I. that he called them his Company; and granted them Order for Incorporation the sixth Day of December, in the fifteenth Year of his Reign, Anno Domini 1617.

THEY are a Master, two Wardens, about 32 Assistants,, 143 on the Livery, and the whole Company are about 420.

THE Fines for Livery-Men are 15 l. for Steward 15 l. and for Herbalizing 5 l. The may take two Apprentices, and if they take the second before the first has served seven Years, they must at that Time pay their Livery-Fine; but it may happen to be several Years before they have the Privilege of Livery-Men, because they take it by Turn. Those bound Apprentices to this Trade are always to serve 8 Years.

THE Office of the Men of this Mystery is to make up and prepare Physick for the Sick or Diseased, according to the Prescriptions and Directions of the Physician; and so are to be Men skilled in Plants and Herbs, in Roots and Drugs, and to understand and exercise Chymistry. And hereby they become Assistants to the Physician in helping Men in Pain and Misery, and in the Recovery of Life and Health, "Which being, (as "a learned Physician writes) the most valuable "Thing in the World, that Art whereby the first "may be prolonged, and the other preserved "or restored, must needs challenge the Esteem

"and Regard of all. These are the proper and "genuine Ends of the Art of Physick; an Art "to which, under God, some owe their Con- "ception, others their Birth; and which is "helpful to Mankind in all Periods of Life. It "easeth the Pained, and comforteth the Sick "and Languishing; it giveth Sight to the Blind, "Hearing to the Deaf, and Feet to the Lame; "it cheareth the Melancholick, restoreth the "Use of Reason to the Distracted, and procureth "Sleep and Quiet to the Restless. It extin- "guisheth the Flame of Fevers, draineth and "drieth up the Deluge of Dropsies, and putteth "Life and Beauty into the Faces of the Fair Sex. "In Short, it cureth Diseases almost innume- "rable; and if not all and always, 'tis because "Sin, that hath made Death certain, must needs "also make some Diseases incurable: But tho' this Commendation primarily belongeth to the Physician's Learning, yet the Apothecary's Art, which is so subservient, and such an Handmaid thereunto, must not be deprived of its Share in it.

A Controversy happened of late between these Apothecaries and the Physicians; the Physicians complaining, That the Apothecaries did exceed their Office and Trade, in taking upon them to administer Physick; and so intruded into the Physicians Province: and also that they wanted some Skill, and some Care, in making and preparing their Physick: Wherefore they not long ago sued one Rose, an Apothecary, for several Months Practice: In which Time he had by his own Advice, ministred Medicines to one Man, to a considerable Value. This was proved in Court: But yet the Jury hesitated, as to the finding for the Plaintiff; whereat the Court wondering, the Lord Chief Justice asked them, Whether they did not believe the Evidence? To which the Foreman replied, That the Defendant had done only what other Apothecaries did: Whereupon my Lord set the Jury right; and then they brought in a Verdict for the Plaintiff.

It is thought by some, that LONDON, and the Suburbs, are overstocked with Apothecaries; reputed the Number of them to be near 1000; whereas in Paris there were but 51; in Stockholm and Copenhagen, but four or five a-piece; and in Hamburg, but one Apothecary's Shop: For it is said, that one Apothecary is sufficient to make up the Prescriptions of at least three Physicians, and those too of good Business.

IN the fourth Year of James I. the King incorporated the Apothecaries with the Grocers, to be one Body Corporate and Politick. They were again divided from the Grocers, and made a Body Corporate of their own by a Charter of the same King: In which Charter are all the Apothecaries Names inserted, beginning with William Bessé, amounting to 104. Which we may conclude to be all of that Calling in LONDON and the Suburbs at that Time.

THIS Company have a Physick Garden in Chelsea, replenished with various Plants. Those who have the Privilege of going into it, have a Ticket given them, which hath the Impression of a Phœbus on it, and round it is this suitable Motto, Herbarum est subjeta potentia nobis; taken out of Ovid, and follows immediately after the Words the Company chose for the Motto to their Arms.

Anno 16 Reg. Annæ, 1712, An Act passed for reviving and continuing several Acts therein mentioned. One whereof was, for exempting Apothecaries from serving the Offices of Constable and Scavenger, and other Parish and Ward Offices, and serving upon Juries, This Act referred to, was that made 6 and 7 Reg. Guliel. 3. which was to continue for the Space of seven Years:

Years: Which Act was continued by an Act made 1 Regin. Annæ, for a further Time of seven Years; and to be in Force, after the Expiration thereof, for the Space of 11 Years.

THE Apothecaries Hall is situated on the East Side of Black-Fryars,; for a further Account of which see Vol. I. Page 701.

SILK-THROWERS.

THEIR Arms are: Argent, three Bundles of Silk Sable, on a Chief

THE Supporters and Crest of this Company are as follow: *The Supporters are two Turks in Habit, with Turbants upon their Heads. FOR the Crest; Upon a Hill, Vert, a Mulberry-Tree, proper; Silk-Worms hanging about the Tree, and on the Leaves of the Tree, crawling.

THIS Company of Silk-Throwers, or Silk-Throwsters, having gained their Trade and Skill of Silk-Throwing from the Strangers, since Anno quinto of Queen Elizabeth, and being for the most Part Freemen of this City, were made a Fellowship of this City, 4 die Junii, Anno 19 of King James I. Sir Francis Jones, Knight, being then Lord Mayor. And 23 die Aprilis, Anno 5 Charles Regis, they were incorporated by the Name of The Master, Wardens, Assistants, and Commonalty of the Trade, Art, and Mystery of Silk-Throwers of the City of LONDON.

THERE were several Tradesmen, called Silk-Twisters, Foreigners, towards the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, living in St. Martin's Liberty; who seemed to be of the same Art and Calling. Among the trading Strangers that came over into England from Flanders and those Parts for their Religion, in the said Queen Elizabeth's Reign, there were divers of this Sort that dealt in dressing and preparing Silk for other Trades.

THO' this Craft of Throwing Raw Silk is generally thought and said to have been but of late Standing in England, viz. in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth; yet it is plain, that Thrown Silk was known in England long before. For in the 12th of Edward IV. it was enacted, that no Silk nor Colein Silk, thrown or wrought, should be brought in upon Pain of Forfeiture thereof. Which Act was renewed and confirmed in the First of King Henry VII. Which Acts suppose it had been brought in before: But the Throwing of it in England was not known nor practised 'till many Years after.

AN Order was entered and register'd in the Archives at Guildhall, LONDON, concerning the Silk-Throwers, petitioning to be made a Corporation, which was as follows: "Anno 1621, April 17, Anno Regis Jacobi 19. Johannes"

"Maïor, Benet, Low, Leman, Cockain, Barkham, Prescot, Proby, Gore, Cotton, Hacket, Johnson, Hearne, Hamersley, Dean, Cambel, &c. Aldermen, Allen and Duce, Sheriffs."

"This Day Mr. Alderman Barkham, Mr. Alderman John Gore, Mr. Alderman Haliday, Mr. Alderman Hearne, and Mr. Alderman Cambel, Committees, among others formerly appointed to take Hearing and Consideration of the Petition of the Silk-Throwers, did deliver to this Court a Report in Writing under their Hands, of their Doings and Opinions therein. The Tenor whereof is as followeth, viz.

To the Right Hon. Sir Francis Johnes, Kt. Lord Mayor of the City of LONDON, and to the Right Worshipful his Brethren, the Aldermen of the said City.

MAY it please your Lordship and Worships to be advertised, That according to an Order of this Honourable Court, We whose Names are hereunder subscribed, Committees, among others in the same Order named, have met about the Petition of the Silk-Throwsters, recommended by the same Order to our Consideration: And upon the full Hearing and Debate of the Cause, and Conference had sundry Times with the Petitioners themselves, and with sundry Strangers that use the Trade of Silk-throwing, it appeared unto us, that it is very necessary, that this Company should be made a Fellowship, as well for the Governing themselves and their Servants in the Matter of their Trade, as for the Reforming many Abuses, now used among them. And it will be a Means, as we conceive, that Silk may be throwed, as heretofore Silk was that came from Bruges, and other Places beyond the Seas: The doing whereof doth and will tend unto the Benefit of the Commonwealth. Those that now use the Trade of Silk-throwing in and about this City, are increased within forty Years past from three or four to above fifty in Number: Of which Number above three Parts are Englishmen; and of them the most Freemen, and the rest Strangers. By which Silk-Throwsters, about 7000 or 8000 poor People in and about this City are employed and set to work, in winding and throwing of Silk (as we are informed). For the bettering therefore of this Workmanship, and reforming Abuses, and to have a settled Government among themselves touching their Trade, by Order of this Court; and, as much as may be, to prevent the setting up of Intruders, such as have not duly and orderly served at the Trade, as Apprentices, according to the Laws of this Land, and Customs of this Honourable City, the Silk-Throwsters humbly desire to be made a Fellowship, and to have Orders and Ordinances made and confirmed to them by this Court, for the free Use and Exercise of their Trade, and for the better Government of them and their Servants. Which Fellowship they desire may be termed and called, The Fellowship of Silk-Throwsters of the City of LONDON; and that out of the same there may be yearly chosen two Rulers and six Assistants, for the more orderly and better Government, as well of those that now do, or hereafter shall use the same Trade; whereby good Work may be made, for the general Benefit of his Majesty's People.

THIS being the Sum and Substance of the Silk-Throwsters Petition, we have taken the same into our Consideration, and have also advised with Mr.

Mr. Stone and Mr. Pheasant about the Premises : And both we and they do conceive, that their Requests are moderate and reasonable, and no wise in Prejudice of the City-Government ; and we hold, that the Petitioners are fit to be aided and relieved in this Court in this which they desire, being in Point of Government of their Trade ; considering that this Manufacture is grown of very great Use ; by which many Thousands of poor People are employed and set on work.

HOWBEIT we hold it meet, that such as are already Freemen, shall continue of the Companies whereof they are now free ; and that they bind their Apprentices at their Halls, as they have accustomed : And that the Ordinances by which they are to rule and govern be first read, ratified and confirmed by this Honourable Court : And the same Fellowship to have Continuance during the Pleasure of this Court only, and no longer ; to the Intent the same may be again dissolved by this Court, if any Inconvenience shall hereafter be found to arise thereby ; which yet appears not. All which we nevertheless submit and leave to the Judgment and Consideration of your Lordship and Worships, this 23d Day of March, 1620. And then the Aldermens Names are subscribed, Edward Barkham, &c.

THE which Report being openly read, was allowed of, and order'd to be enter'd into the Repertory, and to be performed accordingly.

THE Orders of the Company were also entered in the Book and Register of the Court at Guildhall, dated May the 15th, 1621, Jones Mayor, in these Words : " This Day certain Orders made and devised to be observed by the Fellowship of Silk-Throwsters, within the City of LONDON and Liberties thereof, were here openly read, and ordered to be entered into the Repertory, and to be performed." The Tenour whereof is as follow. [And then follow the Orders at Length.]

THIS Fellowship the Court of Aldermen granted and confirmed under their Seal, the 4th Day of June, Anno Regis Anglie Jac. I. 19. & Scotie 54.

AFTER this, they obtained King Charles I's Patent under his Broad Seal, in the Fifth of his Reign, to establish them a Fellowship. It set forth, " That whereas sundry Persons, his well-beloved Subjects, using the Trade, Art or Mystery of Silk-throwing within the City of LONDON, had by their Petition shewed unto him, that above fifty Years past, the Trade began in the same City by some few Persons skillful therein ; who having entertained divers Persons, trained them up in the Use and Exercise thereof ; insomuch, as they being for the most Part Freemen of the City of LONDON, and Natives born, were now become a great Company : And that about ten Years past they were Suitors to the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, that in Regard the Trade was grown into great Use and Consequence, they might be made a Brotherhood as other Companies in like Cases had been : Which upon mature Deliberation was accordingly granted — And that now the said Silk-Throwsters finding themselves too weak by the Power they yet have, to rectify such Enormities, as daily happen among them, or to establish such Ordinances for the true working in the Trade as were requisite, without which they could not well subsist : And that the Number of 6 or 7000 Poor were daily relieved and set on Work in the said Trade. For Redress of these Enormities, they humbly besought his Majesty, that he would be graciously pleased to make them a Corporation or Body Politick ; for that the same might tend not only to the particular Benefit of the Company, but also to the general Good of the Commonwealth — KNOW yee, that of Our special Grace — We have Granted, Constituted or Ordained, and by these Presents for Us, Our Heirs and Successors, do Grant, that Our well beloved Subjects, Robert Bolling, Thomas Lord, Hugh Loble ; Christopher Dover, George Garret, &c. now using the Trade, Art and Mystery of Silk-Throwing, and all and every other the Freemen using the Trade, which now use, or hereafter shall use the same, in the City or Liberties, or within any Place or Places within four Miles of our said City ; Be, and shall be from henceforth for ever one Body Politick and Corporate in Deed and Name, by the Name of Master, Wardens and Assistants, and Company of the Trade ; Art and Mystery of Silk-Throwsters, &c. And we do grant, that from henceforth for ever there shall be one Master, two Wardens, and eighteen Assistants, &c. Robert Bolling to be the first and present Master ; and so to continue till the first Thursday, which shall fall to be in the Month of May in the Year 1630, &c. And Tho. Lord and Will. Hart the two Wardens till the said Year, &c. That no Foreigner or other Person, not being free of the said Trade, other than Englishmen born, which have already been trained up, taught and experienced in the said Art and Mystery, do at any Time hereafter attempt, &c. to use or exercise the said Trade, or any Thing thereunto belonging, within the said City of LONDON or Liberties, or within any Place within four Miles, unless it be the Widows of Freemen that have used in the said Trade — Yielding and praying to Us, Our Heirs, &c. for the Premises a Fee Farm Rent of 20 s. yearly at the Feast of St. Michael, &c. Witness Our Self at Westminster the 23d of April, in the fifth Year of Our Reign.

THE Company also obtained an Instrument from the Lord Keeper Coventre, and the two Lords Chief Justices, Sir Nicholas Hyde, and Sir Thomas Richardson, to confirm a Book of Constitutions and Orders made by the Company, and offered unto them by Petition, by Virtue of a Statute made 19 H. VII. That no Masters, Wardens, or Fellowship, of Crafts or Mysteries, should take upon them to make any Acts or Ordinances, or to execute them, in Disinheritance or Diminution of the King's Prerogative, nor of any other, against the common Profit of the People : But unless the said Acts or Ordinances be examined by the Chancellor and Treasurer of England, or Chief Justices of either Bench, or three of them, upon Pain of Forfeiture of 40 l. for every Time they should do the contrary.

AND lastly, This Company obtained an Act of Parliament in 14 Car. II. intitled, An Act for regulating the Trade of Silk-throwing : Which seems to be the first Act of Parliament made in their Behalf. Which Act setteth forth, That the Company of Silk-Throwsters were incorporated 5 Car. I. and made a Body Politick. That the Trade was of singular Use, and very advantageous to this Commonwealth, there being employed by the said Company in and about the City of LONDON, (as was express'd in their Petition) above 40,000 Men, Women and Children. That they prayed an Enlargement of their Charter, whereby they might be better enabled to avoid the many Deceits and Inconveniencies they daily met withal by Intruders, who had not been brought up Apprentices to the said Trade ; and others who settled themselves beyond the Limits of the said Charter (which was within four Miles of LONDON) on Purpose to avoid the Searches and Supervision of the said Governors. It was enacted, that from the 25th of December 1662, none should exercise the Trade of a Silk-Thrower within the Realm of England, unless such as were Apprentices to the said Trade, upon Pain of 40 s. for every Month.

ALL now using or exercising the Trade in LONDON, or within twenty Miles of it, to enter themselves into the said Society or Corporation: And to be subject to the Statutes, Orders, and Ordinances thereof.

THE Master, Wardens, &c. to have and enjoy all such Grants, Privileges, &c. as by this present Act, or by the Letters Patents of Corporation were given and granted them.

WINDERS and Doublers, that pawn, sell or detain Silk delivered to them, and the Buyers and Receivers of such Silk, to make the Parties grieved, Recompence and Satisfaction for their Damage, Loss and Charges, as by the Justices and Officers should be ordered and appointed.

IF not able to make Recompence and Satisfaction, then to be Whipt and set in the Stocks, where the Offence is committed, or in some Market Town in the County, for the first Offence; and for the second, to make the like, or further Punishment, as the Justice shall think fit,

THE Receivers and Buyers also to make Satisfaction, or such as take to pawn any Silk embezelled.

It is lawful for any Freeman of the Company to set on Work any Person, being a native Subject to his Majesty, and no other, whether Men, Women or Children, to turn the Mill, tie Threads, double Silk, wind Silk, as formerly they used to do; altho' such Persons have not served as Apprentices to the Trade, by the Space of seven Years.

THE Corporation shall not make any Orders or Ordinances, to set any Rates, or Prices whatsoever, upon the Throwing of Silk, to bind and enforce their Members to work at; but therein the Members shall be left at Liberty to contract with their respective Employers.

THE Silk-Throwers having no Hall, do sometimes meet at the Bricklayers.

GLOVERS.

THE Company of Glovers were incorporated the 10th Day of September, 1639, in the 14th Year of K. Charles I. by the Name of Master, Wardens, Assistants, and Fellowship of the Company of Glovers of the City of LONDON; and by their Charter empowered to have one Master, four Wardens, 16 Assistants, or more, at the Discretion of the Master and Wardens for the Time being; and they are to be chosen Annually the 8th of September, the Nativity of the Virgin Mary. They may take two Apprentices.

THE Company of Tin-Plate-workers were incorporated by Charter the 29th of December, in the 22d Year of the Reign of King Charles II. by the Name of Master, Wardens, Assistants and Commonalty of the Art and Mystery of Tin Plate-workers, of the City of LONDON. They have no Hall, and are no Livery.

THEIR Armorial Ensigns are: Azure a Fess wavy Argent, between a Sun drawing up a Cloud distilling Drops of Rain proper, and a Distillatory double Armed Or, with two Worms and belt Receivers Argent. Crest; on a Helmet and Forse, a Barley Garb wreathed about with a Vine Branch fruited all proper. Supporters; a Russ and an Indian in their respective Habits. Motto; Drop as Rain, Distill as Dew. Deuteronom. 32. v. 2

THESE were such as Distilled Aqua Vitæ, Aqua Composita, Vinegar, and the like. In the Year 1593, one endeavoured to get a Grant from the Queen, for the taking care that these Liquors should be well made, against the pretended great and dangerous Abuses commonly practised in the making thereof: He shewed (taking the Opportunity of this before-named Year, wherein was a Plague) that the ordinary Makers of these Liquors made them of Hog-wash, and Dregs, and the Washing of Coolbacks; which might occasion many infectious Diseases. The Lord Treasurer, the better to inform himself, sent to Alderman Anthony Radclyff, a Person knowing in such Matters, for his Opinion: Who informed him, that it was a thing long since moved to be reformed by Parliament, as a Matter the abusing whereof caused great Inconvenience. That he had Conference with the best and substantiallest Men of that Calling, who made their Strong Waters for the most Part of good Ale and Beer; and that they wish'd all other Makers were debarred by some good Means, for the more exact Making thereof. But that they that were Poor, and found more Sweet by making it of weak Beer and Ale, or of worse Stuff, no doubt would repine at any new Grant to restrain them. He added, that when he enquired and sought to understand how so many bought this Hog-wash and Dregs of the Coolback, he was told it was only the Felt-makers and Weavers, till at last he found it indeed, that even the Distillers of Aqua Vitæ, and Vinegar-makers, did engross it up, and with it work secretly in their Houses, or so littered it, or happily mixed it with weaker Beer, where the best and strongest was fittest to be used for the Queen's Subjects. That he found, that in making of Vinegar, the Brewer ought to brew good Malt, as they did brew the best Sort for the Subject. The Prices of which Sort of Beer was from five to eight Shillings and the Barrel would continue and hold out, when the smaller would putrify and decay. That touching Aqua Vitæ and Aqua Composita, it was wont to be made only of Wine and Wine Lees, and of Ale made on Purpose; but of later Years since Wines grew dearer, certain Strangers practised to Still the Dregs and Washings of Coolbacks of Beer; And now usually bought by the greatest Numbers of Distillers, from whence to his Understanding were very corrupt Stuff. That the aforesaid Vinegar did not hold his Strength as it ought to do in the Service of long Voyages in Navigation. That in the Beginning of the Wars in the Low Countries, the Flemings bought great Quantities of this Kind of Beeregre for the cooling of their Ordinance, and was sold at good Prices to the Spaniards, and to the contrary Part; but afterwards it was not in that Request. That he himself coming by chance into the Yard of one of the Vinegar-makers, found a Brewer's Drayman bringing unto him a Barrel of Dreggs, gathered out of divers Men's Houses; and confess'd that he sold the same to the Vinegar-makers sometime for 20*d.* and 2*s.* the Barrel. And lastly, the same Alderman Radclyff advised, that if the Parties who should have the brewing of this Beeregre and Alegre should not be put in good Bonds, to amend the Fault, and be tyed to sell their Beer at such reasonable Prices as now, or heretofore the best hath been sold, the Abuse would remain all one or rather worse.

HOWEVER, soon after, Richard Drake obtained a Patent from the Queen, for the brewing and providing of all wholesome Liquor or Stuff for the making of Beeregre, Alegre, Aqua Vitæ and Aqua Composita.

BUT in the Event it proved, that this Patent remedied not this Evil: So that in the Year 1596, those that were concerned in the Trade, petitioned against this Drake to the Lord Treasurer, That he under a Colour and subtil Suggestion, that the Liquors whereof Aqua Vitæ, Vinegar, &c. were made before this Grant, were of Draggs, Laggs, and such like unmeet and unwholesome Stuff; which the Patentee pretended to reform, had notwithstanding, since the obtaining of the said Patent, wrought no Reformation; but every Liquor before occupied was still used, only the Benefit of the poor Artist was wholly turn'd to the peculiar Profit of the said Drake, and of his Assigns; who bound every one of these Makers in great Bonds to buy the Stuff of themselves only, and they of the Brewers exacting to themselves great Commodities from the Hands and Labours of others in such grievous Manner and extream Sort, as appeared by certain Articles which they annexed to their Petition. They prayed therefore that these Extremities might be redress'd, and the Grant recalled, which tended only to the private Gain of the said Drake, and the Subversion of the Suppliants and their Wives and Families.

THE Sum of which Articles were, That the same pretended unmeet and unwholesome Stuff, as Draggs, Laggs, &c. were made Use of after this Grant, and allowed by the Patentee or his Assigns, as were before; nay far worse than heretofore. That the poor Traders that bought and sold Vinegar, and those other Commodities, were compelled by Threats and Imprisonment, to enter into Bonds, to buy of none, but of the Patentee only, or his Assigns, and to pay for making of their own Bonds, 3*s.* a-piece. That they forced the Brewers to sell unto them their Grounds, which themselves before, in the Suggestions to her Majesty, had in very foul and odious Terms named Draggs, &c. That they compelled the Tradesmen to compound with them for 2*d.* the Barrel, and would not permit them to buy where they would for their best Ease and Profit, as where they had best Credit, and might be assured of good and wholesome Stuff; except they would pay 3*d.* a Barrel, which would amount to a great Sum by the Year; Which Payments being made, the said Tradesmen might do what they listed. That the Patentees, under Pretence of their Letters Patents, had stay'd divers Hogsheads of Vinegar, after they were Customed and Shipped: Whereby the Ship-masters lost their Voyage, and the Merchants greatly hindered for the Sale of their Lading. And that they had entered into divers Merchants Houses, and took away Hogsheads of Aqua Vitæ, ready to be sent over Sea, and Custom paid; until one had paid 3*l.* and another 30*s.* according to the Quantity they had.

TWENTY Years before this, one Dr. Baily fought to have the Survey of corrupt Vinegar, Beeregre, and Alegre, among other corrupt Things; as Oil, Soap, and Butter: But it was answered, that this was granted by the Queen's Letters Patents about the 7th or 8th Year of her Reign, to the Company of Tallow-Chandlers in LONDON; and therefore could not be granted to him. And the making of Aqua Vitæ, Aqua Composita, and Ufquebaugh; and the Survey of the corrupt Sorts thereof, was granted to one Mr. Candishe of the Court, by Letters Patents under the Great Seal; and so ungrantable by her Majesty during Candishe's Life. Besides, it was thought, and much objected by divers Laws, that the Queen by her Licence under her Great Seal, could not grant the sole Trade of any one Occupation or Mystery to any one Man alone, that had been of Use in the Commonweal before her Majesty's Grant; nor yet impose a Fine or Imprisonment upon them that should withstand her said Licence. Finally, That the Trade concerned so many poor Mens Livings, that it was impossible to bring it into one Man's Hand by Licence. These Things were argued in Point of Law against Drake, who by his Patent assumed a Power over the whole Distillers Trade.

THE Distillers have no Hall.

FELT-MAKERS.

THE Company of Felt-makers were incorporated by Charter the 2d Day of August, in the 2d Year of K. James I. by the Name of Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Art and Mystery of Felt-makers of LONDON; and again by Charter of Incorporation and Confirmation by the same Name, bearing Date the 27th of June, in the 19th Year of King Charles II.

THEY are a Master, four Wardens, 21 Assistants, but no Livery. Their Arms are: A dexter Hand and Hat.

THE Fashion of wearing Hats or Felts (as they formerly called them) began to take great Place in Queen Elizabeth's Reign: And they were of two Sorts, viz. Fine Felts and Coarse: The former were made of Wool brought from Spain, called Spanish Wool, and the latter made of Esbridge Wool, brought from the East Countries. These were for the Wearing of Country-People, and of the meaner Sort: And sometimes they were covered with Velvet, Taffata, or such like.

IN the Year 1576, the Felt-makers sued to the Lord Treasurer to befriend them in their Supplication to the Queen, to be incorporated; being, as they set forth in their Petition, the ancient and discreetest Sort of them. That those of this Trade were 400 Householders, dispersed and resident in sundry Parts of the City and Suburbs, as Southwark, St. Katharine's, and other Places. That they had no Government of themselves, as other Companies; and that they made their Felts for the most Part very deceitfully, and of corrupt and unlawful Stuff, brought out of Spain, and other Places; bought up by such as had no Skill or Knowledge, whether they were good or bad, and by them retailed to such Felt-makers as for Lucre were content to make deceitful Wares, to the Deceiving the Wearers thereof, to the Breach of the Queen's Laws, and the Slander and utter Reproach of the whole Company; Which, if it were not in Time foreseen and reformed, would be the Overthrow of the whole Company, and the utter Impoverishment of their poor Wives, Children and Families. Therefore they sued that they might be made a Body Corporate by her Majesty's Letters.

BUT it seems the Haberdashers (of which Company these Feltmakers were) proved too hard for them. So that the Lords of the Council would not then allow their Petition: But after much Contest between them, they came to an Agreement; and the Felt-makers were to submit themselves to the Haberdashers, to be searched, ruled, and governed by the Master and Wardens, and that there should be certain Rules drawn between them, for the better Government of the said Trade of Felt-making, and of their Servants. At length Orders and Rules were by their own Consents made and devised, and on both their Parts promised and agreed to be performed and kept; and which were required to be set down in the Star Chamber between them.

THE Hat-makers or Felt-makers, in the Year 1583, endeavoured to get a Patent from the Queen to put that Statute in the 8th of her Reign in Execution, which was made about their Trade, that none should occupy the same, but such as had been Apprentices to it seven Years. For afterwards, divers that had not served that Time, and others that had never been Apprentices to it at all, enticed divers young Apprentices and hired Servants from LONDON from their Masters, and maintained and kept them at work at the same Trade; and would keep, some three, four or five Apprentices, and for less Years than the Statute limited: Whereby they were grown to so great a Number of Felt-makers in the Country, that the Felt-makers in LONDON living within the Compass of the Statute, and keeping all other Duties and Observances within the City of LONDON, were not able to live upon the said Trade, and to maintain themselves and their great Families, without some present Remedy. Richard Seckford, one of the Queen's Masters of Requests, July 3, 1583, moved the Queen, then at Greenwich, in this Suit: Who then referred the same to the Lord Treasurer. Thomas Blank, Lord Mayor, and Master of the Haberdashers Company, wrote to the said Seckford, March 27, the Year above said, that a Motion having been made by the Felt-makers to them, for the Furtherance of their Suit, they thought the Suit very reasonable, and needful to be granted for all Offenders against the said Statute: But forasmuch as the Felt-makers and all within three Miles of LONDON, were under the Government and Correction of the Company of Haberdashers, the Company prayed him, that there might be a Proviso in their Book, that they should not, by Force of their Grant, intermeddle with any Hat-makers, inhabiting within the City, or three Miles Compass, than, to the Master and Wardens of the said Company for the Time being, should be thought meet and expedient. And that when any Occasion should be, to use their Grant for the Punishment of any Offender within the Limits of the said Company, the Patentees to have the one Half of all Forfeitures coming in that Behalf, and the Company to have the other Half, towards the Relief of the poor Felt-makers.

THE Felt-makers bought their Wools, Flocks, and other Stuff for their Hats, of the Merchants, both Strangers and English, which Wools were brought from Spain, France, the East Country, and other Foreign Countries: But these Commodities were often very bad, being fallen May Wool, rotten and other ill Wool, not apt, meet, nor capable to be wrought or used in making of any Hats or Felts; and partly unwashed, and full of Sand, Filth, Dross, corrupt and unlawful Stuff, most deceitfully packed up in Sacks, and other close Things, and wound up in Fleeces, being neither such merchantable nor staple Wares, as it had been, nor in Truth, Conscience, Justice and Equity it ought to be: By which deceitful Wools and other Stuffs, the Felt-makers sustained great Loss and Damage, and many Times a Number of them, their poor Wives and Families, utterly undone. Whereupon in January, 1579, they made a Petition to the Queen, under the Names of Thomas Cauntton, Thomas Bradford, and others, who had subscribed their Names in their own Behalf, and in the Behalf of more than 3000 of her Majesty's Subjects in the City of LONDON, Bermondsey-street, and St. Catharine's, and elsewhere, to authorize one of her Majesty's Subjects, or his Assigns, for Indifferency's Sake, to search, sort, and cleanse the said Wools, Flocks, and other Stuff.

THEY likewise petitioned the Lord Treasurer to the same Purport; and in their Addresses to him, they shewed, that in their Wool, it was so bad, that they commonly lost one Half, or a third Part; and in the best of it brought into the Realm, they usually lost a fourth Part. And that the Making of Felts, then much increasing in England, and thereby great Numbers of the Queen's poor Subjects set on Work, they were constrained to buy great Quantities of the said said evil and deceitful Wools, because they could get none other; the same being brought into the Realm, most by English Merchants, Aldermen, and the best Commoners of LONDON, and other Cities and Towns in the West Parts. Which Foreign Wools, 'till within these few Years, were brought in only by Strangers, and then the same was washed, and void of May Wool, and other rotten and ill Wool, Dross, Dust, Sand, &c. And if any were found contrary, the Buyer did usually return it to the Merchant, or else had Allowance for the same. And then the Merchant by Certificate made Return thereof into the foreign Countries, and to the Persons by whom it had been bought, and had like Allowance for the same.

THE said Felt-makers drew up their Desire in several Articles, presented to the Queen. The Chief whereof was, That she would grant them one of her Servants, and his Assigns, to search, sort, and cleanse these Wools and Stuffs; and a good Fee to be allowed him: And tho' it were a large Fee, yet it would be well deserved; for that two Men could hardly discharge and dispatch a Hundred Weight in a Day, to do it well; adding, that the Merchants would not lose hereby, but only would hereafter take Care to import better and cleaner Wools; for which they might have a better Price.

To these Petitions and Desires of the Felt-makers, the Merchants, in February following, gave their Answer, first in some Heat and Anger, accusing the chief Agitators in this Business, viz. Caunton and Bradford, as if they were of slender Credit, and of the worst Sort of Felters, and Haunters of Taverns, where they entered into Devices not to do any Good to the Commonwealth, but to maintain their idle Lives with other Men's Goods. That many whose Hands were set to the Petition, did disallow the Matters contain'd in it. They added, that the Merchants brought those Wools from Spain, without any falsifying, corrupting, or mingling by the Way; and therefore were not to be punished with new Charges of needless Officers: Which Charges must not be raised upon the poor Workmen and Buyers: That it was true, the Wools of England were washed and picked, but the Usage of Spain was not so. That touching the Tare of gross and weighty Bags of Spanish Wool, whereof the Felt-makers said they had no Allowance, they abused the Lords of the Council: For those Wools were not brought in gross and weighty Bags, but commonly such as were carried two Sacks upon an Horse, and seldom exceeding one Hundred and half, or an Hundred and three quarters: And yet how small soever they were, the Felters were allowed eight Pound for the Tare of every Bag; that where they spake of May Wool, they spake ignorantly, or on Purpose untruly. For those Spanish Wools for Felters, were not Fleece Wools wherein May Wool could be, but altogether Lamb Wool, or such as could have no May Wool, unless it were by great Hap; very rarely a Lock of an old Lamb, or such like long Wool. That it was Reason, that Wools in England, serving for Cloth, should be washed and cleansed and wound, or else they would not serve the Clothiers, but contrariwise, the Spanish Wools for Felting could not be wound, but lye loose in Locks, because it is Lamb Wool, or very short. Neither ought they to be washed or cleansed; for they must be kept in their Fatness, as they come from the Sheep, or else they would not felt, or meet together, or serve for the Use of Felting. And so those new Officers should do more Hurt than Good. Besides, that the sorting was a vain Work; for no Felt-maker could discern the Wool good for Felters, however it were sorted, till they had try'd it. And therefore the best Workmen of them did use to take Samples for Tryal, afore they bargained for it: That where they said, Spanish Wools, by the Merchants Deceitfulness and Corruption, have often been returned by Certificate, it was wholly untrue: Their Honours were desired also to consider that the Means which her Majesty's Subjects had to bring Oyls and those Wools, being the natural Commodities of those Countries, made that People favourable to the English: And if that the said Device of the Felt-makers should take Effect, it might not only be a great Hindrance to the Merchants, but also to the Navy of the Realm, daily employed in bringing Home those Wools, and a great Hindrance to her Majesty's Customs. To this three Aldermen subscribed their Hands, Thomas Pullison (afterwards Mayor) Francis Bower, and George Bond, and several other Merchants, as Hewyt, Haidon, Whitmore, Folkys, and thirteen more.

By Bradford's and Caunton's stirring so much in this Business, it was seen, that they endeavoured to get themselves to be Garblers of the Spanish Wools

THESE Contests made the Lord Treasurer enquire into the Quantities of Wool imported, and Smith the Queen's Customer sent in this Account from March 1578, to March 1579. Spanish Wool brought into the Port of LONDON, by George Bond, William Bond, William Hewyt, and others, to the Quantity of 729 Bags, which did contain an Hundred, or an Hundred and a Quarter a Bag. The Eastridge Wools, that is, the Wools imported from the East Countries, a coarser Sort, amounted not to two Hundred Weight:

BUT to prevent this Office of Garbling Wools, the Haberdashers interposed; alledging this as an Infringement of an Argument formerly made between the Company and the Felt-makers: Whereof Woodroff, Mayor, and Master of the said Company, wrote an Account to the Lord Treasurer to put a Stop to it, if he could. "That whereas Suit was made by some light Persons, for an Office of Garblership of Foreign Wools to be erected, with several great Allowances for the Garbling of every Bag of Wool, to the great Charge and Trouble of the Owners, and to the enhauncing of the Prices of Wool: By the Ordinances lately confirmed to the Company of Haberdashers of LONDON, (according to a Decree set down by him, the Lord Treasurer, and others of the Privy Council for the Government of the Felt-makers) there was Authority expressly given to the Master and Wardens of the said Company, with five, four, three, or two of the Felt-makers, to search all Foreign Wools put to Sale by any Persons within this City, or three Miles Compass of the same; and to punish by Fines, any Person that should offend in Utterance of corrupt Stuff, with sundry other like Authorities, for the better Government of the said Hat-makers. In the Execution of all which Ordinances, there were joined yearly to the said Wardens five Felt-makers, who had hitherto dealt as effectually as they could, in reforming all Abuses; and had not spared to do any Thing (to the great Charges of the Company) which was required of them to do by the said five Felt-makers. In all which Time they never required the Master and Wardens to search Foreign Wools, or complained of any Necessity of Search therein to be made; which the Wardens and others, if Need had been, either known to themselves, or informed by others, would not have failed to have done what had been requisite. And he moved his Lordship, that if by any Reason he thought it needful that this Garbling should

“ be put in Execution, then that he would be “ a Means, for Indifferency sake between the “ Merchant and the Hatmaker, that the Master “ and Wardens for the said Company, with “ some other such skilful Persons as they should “ thereunto appoint, might, upon Information, “ deal in the same in such Manner and Sort,
 “ as should be thought needful and expedient.”
 And in this State were these Hatmakers before they were a Corporation.

It was not before the Year 1604, An. 2 Reg. Jac. I. that these Felt-makers were incorporated, by Letters Patents from King James I. by the Name of Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Art or Mystery of Felt-makers of LONDON: Granting unto them divers Privileges and Liberties for the good Government of the same Corporation; being the first Company incorporated by this King; and was obtained by the humble and earnest Suit of Richard Banister, John Sandes, Hugh Philips, Robert Brown and others, Feltmakers of LONDON.

THE Hat-makers have had no Hall since the Fire of LONDON.

SOAP-MAKERS.

TOWARDS the Middle of Queen Elizabeth's Reign three Sorts of Soap were made. First, Coarse Soap made of Train Oil, and Danske Soap-Ashes. Secondly, Sweet Soap, made of Seville Oil, and Danske Soap-Ashes. And Thirdly, Speckle Soap, made of Tallow and the said Ashes: This was commonly called Gray Soap. This last was forbid by the Common-Council of LONDON; and that by Order from the Board. The Reason was, it would so waste, in short Time, the Tallow of the Realm, that the Poverty would have no Candles, but must pay 6 d. or 7 d. yea and more, for a Pound of Candles. And besides, it smelt worse than the Soap made with the Train Oil.

THIS Speckle Soap, if allowed, would have endanger'd the making Soap with Oil, because they made their Soap cheaper with Tallow: And the Common People more desired this made with Tallow, than that made with Oil; because the Specks in this Soap shewed fair and white in Winter by the congealing of the Cold. And the Makers of Soap with Oil would be fain to corrupt their Soap, to make it as good, cheap as the Speckle Soap, to be able to sell with them in Cheapness of Price. And then the Realm should have neither good Soap nor sweet Soap any more.

THERE were now about eight or ten Soap-makers in LONDON, and they able to serve the whole Realm, yea, and send beyond Sea also, if they might have Vent. They had four, five, or six Men a-piece, and some more, besides their Household, that tended their Fats, and the beating of their Ashes. And besides, set many Men at Work in the Realm, as Coopers, Labourers, Carters, &c. and made use of all Manner of Carriages both by Land and Sea, being a Trade that sent weekly out of LONDON great Quantities of this Commodity over the Realm, and most Northward: Yet there was Soap-making also already at York, at Hull, and at Bristol. These Things were urged before they were a Corporation, to recommend them to the Countenance of the State.

THE Arms of the Soap-makers are: Argent, a Dolphin naiant between three Broad Arrows Heads, two in Chief, and one in Base.

THEY are no Livery, and have no Hall.

GLASS-SELLERS.

THESE are no Livery, have no Hall, nor do I find when they were, or if ever, incorporated; yet I thought it not improper to preserve the small Matter that Strype notes concerning them.

ONE James Verselyn, a Stranger, a Venetian, about the Year 1580, or perhaps somewhat before, was the first that set up a Glass-house in LONDON; for making Venice Glasses. For which, the Queen granted him a Privilege under her Great Seal. But the Glass-Sellers in LONDON were much aggrieved at this, and shewed the Lords of the Privy Council, That it was the Overthrow of fifty Householders, using only the Trade of Selling of Glasses, besides the Hindrance of the Merchant-Adventurers, bringing Glasses into this Realm beyond the Seas, the Loss of her Majesty's Custom, and the consuming of 400,000 Billets every Year in burning the same in one Glass-house, and the enhancing of the Prices of Glasses, prejudicial to all the Queen's Subjects; there being a Prohibition in the same Patent, that none should sell such Glasses, but the said Verselyn only.

POTTERS.

THE same may be said of this Company as the last.

ABOUT the Year 1567, Jasper Andries and Jacob Jansan, Potters, came away from Antwerp, to avoid the Persecution there, and settled themselves in Norwich, where they followed their Trade, making Gally paving Tiles, and Vessels for Apothecaries and others, very artificially. Anno 1570 they removed to LONDON, with the Testimonial of Isbrand Balckius, the Minister, and the rest of the Elders and Deacons of that Church; and desired, by Petition to Queen Elizabeth, that they might have Liberty to follow their Trade in that City without Interruption, and presented her with a Chest of their Handy-work. They set forth in their Petition, that they were the first which brought in and exercised the said Science in this Realm, and were at great Charges before they could find the Materials in this Realm: And that the same Science was so acceptable to King Henry VIII. that he offered to the same Jasper's Father good Wages and House-room to come and exercise the same here; which then came to none Effect. They beseeched her, in Recompence of their great Cost and Charges, that she would grant them House-room in, or without, the Liberties of LONDON, by the Water-side, and Privilege for the Time of twenty Years, that none but they, their Wives and Children, and Assigns, might exercise the same Science in this Realm; and to sell and transport the same, as well outward as inward, to all Men, free of all Custom.

COACH, and COACH-HARNESS-MAKERS.

THE Company of Coach-makers and Coach-harness-makers, were incorporated by Charter the 31st Day of May, in the 29th Year of the Reign of K. Charles II. by the Name of the Master, Wardens, Assistants, and Commonalty of the Company of Coach-makers and Coach-harness-makers of LONDON.

DON. Their Privileges to extend to the Cities and Suburbs of LONDON, and Westminster, and twenty Miles round.

THIS was confirmed by King James II. by Charter dated the 12th Day of May, in the 3d Year of his Reign.

THE Coach-makers are a Master, three Wardens, 27 Assistants, and 40 on the Livery. Their Livery Fine is uncertain.

THEIR Armorial Ensigns are: Azure, a Chevron between three Coaches Or. Crest; Phæbus drawn in a Chariot all of the Second. Supporters; two Horses Argent, harnessed Or. Motto; Surgit post nubila Phæbus.

THEIR Hall is the same with the Scriveners, on the East Side of Noble-street; it is a Brick Building, where the Entrance into the Hall is by a spacious arched Aperture, in a stately Screen, adorned with Columns and Pilasters of the Corinthian Order.

PINNERS and NEEDLERS.

THERE was antiently a Company of this Name, whose Hall stood in Augustin Friars; but little more is to be remember'd of them.

FOREIGN Pins and Needles being brought in about the Year 1597, did much Prejudice these Callings; which employed abundance of poor People, who were put off their Working, because these Foreign Pins and Needles could be afforded cheaper than by those who made them here at Home: Therefore in the aforesaid Year, in the Month of December, they petition'd the Lord Treasurer, for Restraint of these Pins and Needles, the bringing in whereof was the Cause that so many idle Persons perished and miscarried for Want of Work: For that in foreign Lands these Commodities were wrought in Hospitals, which found the Workers of them in Meat, Drink, and Cloathing; and the Artists had the Work only for instructing them. But in this Land (for that there was not such Provision for the poor Suppliants using this Trade) they could not live to sell their Wares at so low a Rate, as those foreign Wares were sold: But if they were restrained, many Thousands would be set on Work, and made Commonwealth's Men, that now died in the Streets. The Premises consider'd, and for that there were above 40000 l. Worth of Pins and Needles yearly brought into the Realm, and which were nothing so good and well wrought as those were, which were made and wrought within the Land, and that the Restraint of bringing them in, would be the Means of setting many Thousands of our Poor on Work; and that lame Soldiers, tho' they had no Legs, and Children, might work at this Trade. They prayed his Lordship therefore to give his Furtherance for reviving a Statute for Restraint of Foreign Wares, of 3 Edw. IV. 4. 1 Rich. III. 12. 5 Eliz. 7. 14 Eliz. 11.

PATTEN-MAKERS.

THE Patten-makers Company were incorporated by Charter the 22d Day of August, in the 22d Year of K. Charles II. by the Name of Master, Warden, Assistants, and Fellowship of Patten-makers of the Cities of LONDON and Westminster, and the Liberties and Sub- urbs thereof: And also the Patten-makers of all

Towns, Villages, Hamlets, and Places whatsoever, within the Compass of ten Miles, every Way distant from the said Cities.

THEY are a Master, two Wardens, 24 Assistants, no Livery: The Stewards Fine is 6 l.

PATTENS and Clogs were antiently worn by Persons of Quality, as well as others; and the Makers of them were an antient Company; and there is a Parish-Church in LONDON, denominated from them, viz. St. Margaret Pattens; those of that Trade probably having their Shops chiefly there. In an Act of Edw. IV. cap. 9. they are called the Mystery of Patten-makers of LONDON. These had an Act of Parliament made in their Behalf, upon a Complaint which they made of the grievous Hurt and Damage which they and other Persons in Time past of the same Occupation, had suffered by an Act of Parliament of Henry V. that abridged them the using of Timber of Asp in making Pattens and Clogs, upon a Penalty; for the Benefit of the Fletchers, who used that Wood, that they might sell their Shafts at easier Prices. But they shewed, how that this Wood was the best and lightest Timber for Pattens and Clogs, and most easy for the Wearing of all Estates, Gentlemen and other People: And that Persons of other Crafts and Occupations, as Turners, Carpenters, Woodmongers, and Cole-makers used this Wood, and had no Restraint put upon them; and that there was much Asp-Timber, and fit for the Fletchers Use to make Shafts, which they should not use. Hereupon the Parliament enacted, That it should be lawful from thenceforth, that the Patten-makers might make Pattens of such Timber of Asp, as was not apt nor convenient to be made into Shafts.

NOTARIES.

THESE are a Branch of the Scriveners, but their Business being distinct, and different from them, they may deserve to be considered by themselves.

THERE were sixteen Notaries in the Mayoralty of Sir James Haws, who was Mayor 1574, viz. Humfrey Brook, George Keval, &c. These made a Complaint to the said Lord Mayor against one Richard Chandler, who had got a Patent under the Broad Seal, that none but he and his Deputies should make and register Insurances, and Policies, and other Instruments relating to Merchants; which would be the Impoverishing, Overthrow, and utter Decay of all these Notaries Publick of the City, with their Children, Servants, Apprentices and Families, to the Number of 120 Persons, and above; who lived upon making of Policies, Intimations, Renunciations, and other Writings granted unto the said Candler. They shewed the Lord Mayor, that they were Freemen of the City, and examined and admitted, and allowed to their Function by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and his Antecessors, by Force of an Act of Parliament An. 25 Hen. and confirm'd by Act of Parliament 1 Eliz. That they were brought up from their Infancies, all or the most Part, as Apprentices; and since poor Householders, having none other Trade to live by, but only by making of such Writings. They also added, that they were lawfully admitted to their Function: That it was a Function that Time out of Mind was lawfully used, and reputed as expedient and necessary within this Realm, like as in all other Regions in Christendom, into which Regions the Suppliants had made divers and sundry Instruments of great Weight, whereunto good Credit was, and had been granted. That if this Grant should take Place, it would also be a great Prejudice to the Notaries Servants succeeding them, and in the End of their Terms be forced to seek new Trades of Living. In fine they prayed the Lord

Lord Mayor and Aldermen to be a Means to the Queen and her Privy-Council, that this Patent might be called in, that the Faculty of Notaries might still be exercised.

THEY moreover shewed their Reasons against this Patent in seven Articles: One was, touching the Office of a Notary, that it had been frequented Time out of Mind. And the Prerogative of Admission of Persons meet to the same Function (after the Exoneration of their Predecessors from Exactions and other Things from the See of Rome) was granted by Act of Parliament to the Archbishop of Canterbury. And since that Time ratified and confirmed by Act of Parliament also, in the fifth Year of the Queen's Majesty: From whom they, the Suppliants, had their Authority. The which according to the expresse Words of the former Statute of King Henry VIII. ought to be accepted, approved and allowed, and admitted, good and effectual in the Law, in all Places, Courts and Jurisdictions, as well Spiritual and Temporal within this Realm, as elsewhere within her Majesty's Dominions, without any Revocation or Repeal to be had thereof: And all Acts to be done, had or executed according to the Tenour of that King's Grant, made by Authority of the said Act of Parliament, ought to be firm, permanent, and remain in Force, as by the same Statute appeared. Which Premises would be abridg'd and taken from them, if the Queen's Letters Patents granted to Candler, should not be revoked.

BROGGERS or BROKERS.

THEY were called Broggers in a Statute 10 Ric. II. and in Latin they are stiled Abrocarii or Brocarii, an Office of Antiquity and Credit. Formerly they were to be recepti ac jurati. Again, none to be Brokers in any Mystery, unless chosen by the same Mystery. Further, none of them to make Contracts of Usury or Bargain, unless he bring the Seller and Buyer together, &c. Now Brokers are such as are Assistants to the Merchants in buying and selling, and in their Contracts; concerned also in the Writing of Insurances and Policies, and such like. And therefore formerly they had their Dwellings near the Exchange, and were Freemen of the City. And so much depending upon their Truth and Honesty, they were sworn and bound with Sureties and divers Sums of Money, for their honest and true Dealings in their Faculty. About the Year 1574, there were thirty of them in Number, and no more.

THE Practisers of this Calling were, about the said Year, like utterly to be undone, as the Notaries before were, and upon the same Cause, viz. by a Patent obtained by Candler, that none but he, or his Deputies, should make and register Policies and Instruments of Assurance. Which Time out of Mind were done by Notaries Publick, and by the sworn Brokers of the City. These Brokers therefore petitioned the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, to be a means to the Queen, that the Premises might be revoked, otherwise it would be their utter Undoing. That it would also be an Infringement upon the Liberty of every good Citizen, who before might make his Writing and Assurances himself, and use neither Broker nor Notary, except he pleas'd himself. Nor was it good, that one Man should have an Office of divers Men's Livings. They urged moreover, that the old Freedoms, Liberties, and Customs of this City might be maintained, kept and continued; and that every Freeman ought to be free, and occupy his Trade in all such Things, as for the Maintenance of his Living he might by good Order.

THEY shewed likewise the Discommodities and Dangers of this Patent to the Merchants. That the Merchants had good Choice of Notaries and Brokers: Who upon a sudden might be ready, and diligent to serve their Turns, as well in making their Policies, as in procuring Subscriptions of the same, as also in making Intimations and other Writings incident thereunto. By which speedy Dispatch divers Losses and Inconveniences, which otherwise might happen, were prevented. That if all this serving Merchants Occasions should be committed to one peculiar Person, it were not possible but great Discommodities and Losses would happen to many for Lack of Dispatch. That the Merchants found great Commodity and Surety by dealing with Notaries and Brokers, known, to be secret, careful and diligent, in using and doing their Offices with Expedition: That it would be a great Bondage to Merchants to be tied to one particular Person, who might either for Favour or Reward dispatch one Man, and for Displeasure or ill Will delay another. That Merchants who intended some Secret, and yet lawful Voyage, would be glad to pass their Writings privately by such Notaries and Brokers, as they knew would be secret to them in that Behalf: Of which Convenience they must utterly be deprived, if they should be forced to come to a publick Officer to pass the same. That the Credit and Fidelity of the Broker is Occasion of divers Assurances, which otherwisewould not be made, &c.

OF late many Jews follow the Calling: Insomuch that Endeavours have been made to restrain their Number, as appears by this Paper following.

REASONS humbly offered to the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, and Court of Aldermen, against a Jew (who is a known Enemy to the Christian Religion) his being admitted a Broker.

I. THAT the Act of Parliament to restrain the Number and ill Practice of Brokers and Stock-jobbers, only limits the Number of Brokers to be one Hundred, and makes no Mention of Jews, or any other Foreigners whatsoever.

II. That of the Jews, who are already sworn Brokers, not above one Half are of Advantage to the Merchants in any Branch of Trade whatsoever.

III. That for the drawing and remitting of Money by Exchange to and from Foreign Parts, in which the Jews might be serviceable, if Need required, there are already more than sufficient, which has occasioned almost one Half of the Jew Brokers to run into Stock-jobbing: Which, with the great Number of other Jews employed to act under them as Brokers, contrary to the true Intent and Meaning of the aforesaid Act of Parliament, has been the Occasion of great Irregularities committed in dealing in Stocks.

IV. That there is no one Branch of Trade, which will receive any Detriment by not admitting a Jew to be a Broker at this Time.

V. That the Jew Brokers are, for the most part, neither free of this Honourable City of LONDON, nor any Livery Company, and pay very little towards the Support of the Publick: Whereas the other Petitioners are most of them Housekeepers, Freemen, and Liverymen, who pay Scott and Lott, and are otherwise Contributors to the Publick Charge, and have a native Right to the Immunities and Privileges of Englishmen and Citizens, which the Jews have not.

VI. That the Jews have not any Right to the Immunities and Privileges of this City, nor deserve any Incouragement from this Honourable Court;

Court, will evidently appear by the many Statute Laws now in Force against them, contain'd in a Book, printed Anno 1703, dedicated, To the Reverend the Clergy, and particularly to the Members of the Convocation: Which Book is ready to be produced. And if duly consider'd, 'tis humbly hoped, this Honourable Court will find no Reason to admit any more Jews to be sworn Brokers.

THERE was another Sort of these, which they called Retailing Brokers, or Hucksters; and they were such as used to buy old Apparel, Household-stuff, Bedding, Books, Ends and Remnants of Silks and Velvets, Linnen and Woollen Cloth, &c.

OF this Trade there were many Abuses discovered in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, as well as of the latter Times. As the receiving and concealing of stolen Goods, and buying them at under Rates; much of the Queen's own Plate and Jewels, Chains, Bracelets, &c. and of the Nobility's also, were stolen away from them, and brought to these Men to pawn or sell; of which Complaint seems to be made to the City. This caused an Act of Common Council, Anno 1525, and 30 Eliz. Wherein a Register was appointed to be of their Names that followed this Calling, written and kept by four honest and sufficient Persons, Freemen of the City, to be appointed and sworn by the Mayor and Aldermen. And these to enter the Names of every such Retailing Brogger, or Broker, with the Place of their Dwelling, who should receive, buy, or take to Pawn any such Plate or Goods: And likewise their Names, with the Place of Abode, that should deliver, sell, or empawn the same: Also a particular Note of the Things so delivered, sold or laid to Pawn; with the Prices or Sums of Money, for which the same was so delivered. To the Intent that any Person from whom any such Things have been unlawfully taken or conveyed, might make Search in the said Register Books for the same. Also, no Broker to buy, receive, or take to Pawn these Things, before he had presented to the Registers the Parties who should offer them to Sale, keep or pawn; and shewed to the said Registers all such Things so offered to Pawn or Sale: A true Note also first to be registered of the Names of those that should buy the same; and another Note describing the Nature, Colour, and Quality of the Things, and of the Prices and Sums of Money, for which the same were to be sold, or empawned. If they were empawned or left to be kept, then for what Time of Redemption: And if absolutely sold, yet it should not be lawful for any Brogger to make Sale, or put away those Things within the Space of seven Days next after. To the Intent, that if they had been stolen, the right Proprietors might freely view and see the same: The Broker to pay the Keeper of the Register one Halfpenny, when the Thing so entered to be kept or empawned, be for 5 s. or under; but if it be above, then one Penny, and no more.

No Broker or Huckster, after Notice given to him by any of the Registers of any Plate, Goods, &c. affirmed to be stolen, should buy or receive the same, but make Stay of such Things so offered to Sale or Pawn; and cause the Party so offering, the same to be apprehended and brought before some Justice of Peace, to be examined concerning the same Felony supposed. And at every such Apprehension, to give Knowledge to the said Register, who left the said Warning, as well of the Party so taken, as of the Goods by him so offer'd. To the Intent that the right Owner might be advertised by the said Register. No Broker to receive, buy, or take to Pawn any Plate, Jewels, Goods, &c. on Sabbath-Days, Festivals, or any Holidays, being not open Market-Days. Every Broker offending in any Article, Clause, or Point aforesaid, to forfeit for every such Offence 5 l. the one Half to the City, the other to the Keepers of the Register; and to pay to the Party grieved the full Value of the Thing so bought, received, or taken in Pawn, and concealed or untruly entered.

THE Modern Pawn-Brokers are such as take Plate, or any other Goods, and lend Money upon them at unreasonable Consideration; and to be returned back upon a Day, or otherwise the Commodities left in Pawn to be forfeited. Which hard Condition poor People are fain to comply with, to supply themselves with ready Money upon some Extremity: These, 'tis pity, the State hath not thought fit to take Notice of, to redress their evil and unconscionable Practices.

REFINERS of SUGARS.

ABOUT the Year 1544, refining of Sugar was first used in England. And the first Dealers therein were Cornelius Buffine, Ferdinando Points — Mounsie or Mounstow, John Gardiner, and Sir William Chester. Then there were but two Sugar-Houses, and their Profit was but very little, by Reason there were so many Sugar-Bakers in Antwerp; and Sugar came thence better cheap than it could be afforded at London: And for the space of Twenty Years together, those two Sugar-Houses served the whole Realm, both to the Commendation and Profit of them that undertook the same. Whose Benefit was occasioned by stopping of the Inter-course between England and Antwerp.

AFTERWARDS many entered into that Trade; namely, John Alden, Henry Topsfield, Nic. Barnesly, Thomas Cordal, Richard Oldfield, Francis Fleming, Richard Patton, Will. Holmen, Ric. Bateman, and others, who made small Profit by it, and some proved Bankrupts. In the Year 1596, Sir Tho. Mildmay, a Courtier, (and before him one Henry Nowel, who died in the Suit) petitioned the Queen that he might have a Licence granted to him for Years, to refine Sugars, for which he would pay a Rent to the Queen. And to prevail in his Petition, he endeavoured to shew, that it was no Hinderance to her Majesty's Customs, no Prejudice to any Merchant Adventurer, no Damage to the Grocers of London, no Inconvenience to the Commonwealth, altho' it might be called a Monopoly. But the Lord Treasurer (who would never consent to any such Things without hearing what could be said by others against it) received Reasons why the refining of Sugars should not be granted to one, two, or three private Persons only, but be used generally, as had been accustomed, viz. That the refining of Sugars was an antient Faculty, and had been used in divers Countries for a general Commodity of the Commonwealth, by all such as had Skill by true Workmanship to exercise the same, without Rejection. And whereas these Petitioners objected, that the former Refiners of Sugar added thereunto corrupt Mixtures, to their own private Gain, and to the deceiving of the Subject; a great Number of honest Men would depose the same to be false and untrue. And this being privately in a few Hands, would be a principal Cause of the Decay of true Workmanship, and would also be the advancing of the Prices of all Sorts of Sugar, to the enriching of a few covetous and ill-minded Persons, and to the great Hinderance of the Commonwealth in general. That if the refining of Sugars should be forbidden, then her Majesty would lose her Customs; which were no small Sums: And that whereas

whereas England had been accustomed to be served with fine Sugars from Antwerp, now England was sufficient to serve itself, and did daily transport great Quantities into other Countries.

Mr. Strype, in his SURVEY, after the Company of the Refiners of Sugars, has placed the PLAYERS.

THESE, we think, cannot properly be called a Comany in Trade, however we shall give our Readers what he has said of them.

ACTING of Plays for the Diversion and Entertainment of the Court, the Gentry, or any others, is become a Calling, whereby many get their Livings. How lawfully, is another Question. Players in former Times were Retainers to some Noblemen, and none had the Privilege to Act Plays, but such. So in Queen Elizabeth's Time, many of the great Nobility had Servants and Retainers, who were Players, and went about getting their Livelihood thatway. The Lord Admiral had Players, and so had the Lord Strange, that played within the City of LONDON. It was not unusual then, upon any Gentleman's Complaint of them, for Abuses or undecent Reflections practised in their Plays, to have them put down. Thus once the Lord Treasurer signified to the Lord Mayor Hart, to have these Players of the Lord Admiral and Lord Strange, prohibited, at least for some Time; because one Mr. Tilney had utterly, for some Reasons, disliked them: Whereupon the Mayor sent for both Companies, and gave them a strict Charge, and required them in the Queen's Name, to forbear Playing for some Time, till further Order might be given for their Allowance. The Lord Admiral's Players obeyed, but the Lord Strange's in a contentious Manner went away to the Cross-Keys, and played that Afternoon, to the great Offence of the better Sort, that knew they were prohibited by Order from the Lord Treasurer; so the Mayor committed two of them to the Compter, and prohibited all Playing for the future, till the Treasurer's Pleasure was known; this was in the Year 1589. Of these see more, Vol. 1. Pages, 228, 229, 230.

THERE were two Acts of Common-Council made about the Middle of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, concerning these Actors of Plays: The first was in the Mayoralty of Sir James Haws, Anno 1574. Great Complaints were made by sober Citizens against them, as, for their corrupting of Youth, Frays and Quarrels, increasing the Infection by great Companies meeting together, this being also a Time of Sicknes; Acting on Sundays and Holidays in the Afternoon, hindering the People going to the Prayers, and divers other Inconveniencies and Sins, which the Citizens would not bear; and therefore made a very good Act for the Regulation of these Players, which is transcribed from the authentick Act in Writing; made the 6th of December, 17 Regin. Hawes Mayor, Present the said Mayor, Fleetwood Recorder; Offley, Ducket, Alleyn, Knights; Nicolas Bond, Barnekam, Box, Pipe, Woodroff, Osborn, Aldermen; Barnes, Gamage, Sheriffs; & immens. multitudin. Commun.

WHEREAS heretofore sundry great Disorders and Inconveniencies have been found to ensue in this City, by the inordinate haunting of great Numbers of People, especially Youth, to Plays, Interludes and Shews; namely, Occasion of Frays and Quarrels, evil Practices of Incontinency, in great Inns, having Chambers and secret Places adjoining to their open Stages and Galleries; inveigling the Maids, especially Orphans, and good Citizens Children under Age, to privy and unmeet Contracts; the publishing of unchaste, uncomely, and unshamefaced Speeches and Doings; withdrawing the Queen's Majesty's Subjects from Divine Service on Sundays and Holidays (at which Time such Plays were chiefly used;) unthrifty Waste of Money of poor and fond Persons; sundry Robberies by picking and cutting of Purfes; uttering of popular, busy and seditious Matters; and many other Corruptions of Youth, and other Enormities: Besides, that also sundry Slaughters and Maynehemings of the Queen's Subjects have happened by Ruines of Scaffolds, Frames and Stages; and by Engines, Weapons and Powder, used in Plays.

AND where in Times of God's Visitation by the Plague, such Assemblies of People in Throngs and Prefs, have been very dangerous for spreading of Infection: For the same and other great Causes, by the Authority of the Hon. Lord Mayor of this City, and the Aldermen their Brethren; and especially upon the severe and earnest Admonition of the Lords of the Most Hon. Privy-Council, with signifying her Majesty's express Pleasure and Commandment in that Behalf, such Use of Plays, Interludes and Shews hath been, during the Time of this Sicknes, forbidden and restrain'd: And for that the Lord Mayor, and his Brethren the Aldermen, together with the grave and discreet Citizens in the Common-Council Assembled, do doubt and fear, lest upon God's merciful withdrawing of his Hand of Sicknes from us (which God grant) the People, especially the meaner and most unruly Sort, should, with sudden forgetting of his Visitation, without Fear of God's Wrath, and without due Respect of this good and politick Means, that he hath afforded for the Preservation of Commonweals and People in Health and good Order, return unto the undue Use of such Enormities, to the great Offence of God, the Queen's Commandment and good Governance.

Now therefore, to the Intent that such Perils may be avoided, and the lawful, honest and comely Use of Plays, Pastimes and Recreations in good Sort only permitted, and good Provision had for the safety and well ordering of the People there Assembled: Be it enacted by the Authority of this Common-Council, that from henceforth no Play, Comedy, Tragedy, Interlude, nor Publick Shew, shall be openly play'd or shewed within the Liberties of the City; wherein shall be uttered any Words, Examples, or any Doings of any Unchastity, Sedition, nor such like unfit or uncomely Matter, upon Pain of Imprisonment, by the Space of fourteen Days, of all Persons offending in any such open Playing or Shewing; and 5 l. for every such Offender. And that no Inn-keeper, Tavern-keeper, nor other Person whatsoever, within the Liberties of this City, shall openly shew or play, nor cause or suffer to be openly shewed or played, within his House, Yard, or any other Place within the Liberties of this City, any Play, Interlude, Comedy, Tragedy, Matter, or Shew that shall not be first perused and allowed in such Order and Form, and by such Persons, as by the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen for the Time being, shall be appointed: Nor shall suffer to be enterlaced, added, mingled, or uttered in any such Play, Interlude, Comedy, Tragedy, Shew, or any other Matter, than such as shall be first perused and allowed, as is abovesaid.

AND that no Person shall suffer any Plays, Interludes, Tragedies, or Shews to be played or shewed in his House, Yard, or other Place, whereof he then shall have Rule or Power; but only such Person, and in such Places, as upon good and reasonable Considerations shewed, shall be thereunto permitted and allowed by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen for the Time being: Neither shall take or use any Benefit or Advantage of such Permission, before, or until such Person be bound to the Chamberlain of LONDON for the Time being being, with such Sureties, and in such Sum, and such Form of the keeping of good Order, for avoiding the Discords and Inconveniencies above-said; as by the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen for the Time being, shall seem convenient. Neither shall use or exercise any such Licence or Permission at or in any Matters, in which the same, for any reasonable Consideration of Sickness or otherwise shall, by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, by publick Proclamation, or by Precept to such Persons, be restrain'd, or commanded to stay and cease: Nor in any usual Time of Divine Service in the Sunday or Holiday, nor receive any to that purpose in the Time of Divine Service to see the same, upon Pain to forfeit for every Offence 5 l.

AND be it Enacted, That every Person so to be licensed or permitted, shall, during the Time of such Continuance of such Licence or Permission, pay, or cause to be paid, to the Use of the Poor in Hospitals in the City, or of the Poor of the City visited with the Sickness, by the Discretion of the said Lord Mayor and Aldermen, such Sums and Payments, and in such Form, as betwixt the Lord Mayor and Aldermen for the Time being, on the one Part, and such Person so licensed or permitted on the other Part, shall be agreed: Upon Pain, that in want of every such Payment; or if such Person shall not first be bound with good Sureties to the Chamberlain of LONDON for the Time being, for the true Payment of such Sums to the Poor; that then every such Licence or Permission, shall be utterly void: And every Doing, by Force of Colour of such Licence or Permission, shall be adjudged an Offence against this Act, in such Manner, as if no Licence or Permission had been had or made; any such Licence or Permission to the contrary notwithstanding.

AND be it likewise Enacted, That all Sums and Forfeitures to be incurred for any Offence against this Act; and all Forfeitures of Bonds to be taken by Force, Mean, or Occasion of this Act, be employ'd to the Relief of the Poor in the Hospitals of this City, or the Poor infected or diseased in this City of LONDON; as the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen for the Time being, adjudge meet to be distributed. And that the Chamberlain of LONDON shall have and recover the same for these Purposes afore-said, by Bill, Complaint, Action of Debt, or Information, to be commenced and pursued in his own Name, in the Court of the utter Chamber of the Guild-hall of LONDON, called, The Mayor's Court. In which Suit no Effoign, or Wager of Law for the Defendant, shall be admitted or allowed.

PROVIDED always that this Act (otherwise than touching the publishing of unchast, seditious and unmeet Matters) shall not extend to any Plays, Interludes, Comedies, Tragedies, or Shews, to be played or shewed, in the private House, Dwelling or Lodging of any Nobleman, Citizen or Gentleman, which shall or will then have the same there played, or shewed in his Presence, for the Festivity of any Marriage, Assembly of Friends, or other like Cause, without publick or common Collection of Money of the Auditory, or Beholders thereof; referring always to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen for the Time being, the Judgment and Construction, according to the Equity, what shall be counted such a Playing or Shewing in private Place; any Thing in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

UPON this Act the Queen's Players made Petition to the Lords of her Majesty's Privy Council, to this Purport: "That whereas the Queen's Poor Players (as they stiled themselves) their Time of Service drew near, so of Necessity they must exercise, to enable them the better for the same, and also for their better Help and Relief in their poor Livings the Season of the Year being past, to play at any of the Houses without the City of LONDON (as in their Articles annexed to their Supplication might more at large appear.) Their Petition therefore was, That it might please their Lordships to vouchsafe the Reading of their Articles sent herewith, and in tender Consideration of the Matter therein mention'd, containing the very Stay and good Estate of their Living, to grant unto them the Confirmation of the same, or of as many, or as much of them, as should be to their Honours good Liking: And therewithal their Lordships favourable Letters unto the Lord Mayor of LONDON, to permit them to exercise within the City, according to the Articles: And also that the said Letters might contain some Orders to the Justices of Middlesex, as in the same Articles are mention'd, whereby they should cease their continual troubling of their Lordships. Subscribing,

Your most bounden and daily Orators,

Her Majesty's Poor Players!

THIS Petition, and the Articles annexed, were answered by the City; and the Answer delivered, as it seems, to the Lord Treasurer against them. And, in fine, the Remedies (as they are stiled) for these Players, and for the more orderly Performance of them (sent also to that Lord) were as follows:

"THAT they hold themselves content with playing in private Houses, at Weddings, &c. without publick Assemblies.

"If more be thought good to be tolerated, that then they be restrained to the Orders of the Act of Common-Council, Tempore Hawes.
"THAT they play not openly, till the whole Death in LONDON have been come by twenty Days unto fifty a Week; nor longer than it shall so continue.

"THAT no Plays be on the Sabbath-Day.
"THAT no Playing be on Holidays, but after Evening Prayer; nor any received into the Auditory, till after Evening Prayer.

"THAT no Playing be in the Dark, nor continue any such Time, but as any of the Auditory may return to their Dwellings in LONDON before Sun-set, or at least before it be dark.

"THAT the Queen's Players only be tolerated, and of them their Number and certain Names to be notified in your Lordships Letters to the Lord Mayor, and to the Justices of Middlesex and Surrey: And those her Players not to divide themselves into several Companies.

"THAT for breaking any of these Orders, their Toleration cease.

BUT notwithstanding, these Orders were not duly observed, and the lewd Matters of Plays increased; and in the Haunt unto them were found many Dangers, both for Religion, State, Honesty of Manners, Unthriftness of the Poor, Danger of Infection, &c. And the Preachers daily crying against them, Suit was made, that they might be banished not only in the Liberties of the City, but in Places adjoining. And since that, namely, upon the Ruin at Paris Garden, Suit was made to the Lords to banish Plays wholly in the Places near LONDON. And Letters were obtained from the Lords to banish them on the Sabbath-Days;

THESE Corporations had sometimes such Members, as by Success in their Trades and Callings, had come to great Wealth, and Chief Magistracy, and had raised Families. In Acknowledgement of which Goodness of God; and partly out of a superstitious Care of their Souls departed, according to the Religion of those Times, they gave Part of their Estates to their respective Companies, in Trust for the Building and Maintaining of Hospitals, for annual Relief of the Poor; to which was commonly added certain Rents upon those Lands or Tenements so given, given, for the Celebration of their yearly Obits, and for Priests, called Chauntry Priests, to sing Mass at set Days in the Churches where they were buried, for their Souls Deliverance out of Purgatory, and for the Souls of some of their particular Friends and Relations deceased. Now this being such a Nursery of Superstition, and a Maintainance for idle Priests, by an Act made in the Beginning of King Edward the VIth's Reign, all such Gifts were granted to the Crown. And accordingly all such Lands and Possessions were seized into the King's Hands; and so such Portions of the Rents of them as were appropriated for superstitious Uses, were as Rent Charges paid by the Companies to the King. This was a great Blow to the Corporations of LONDON, which were extreemly weakened in their Incomes and Revenues, by the taking so much from them, and brought their charitable Donations almost to an End: Nor was there any other Way for them but to purchase, and buy off these Rent Charges, and get as good Pennyworths as they could of the King. And this they did, 3 Edward VI. by selling other of their Lands, to enable them to make these Purchases. This cost them 18,700 l. Which Possessions, when they had thus cleared again, they employed them to good Uses, according to the first Intent of them, abating the Superstitions. A very exact Account of which appears in this Table following: Which was drawn up long after, viz. in the Year 1587, and presented to Queen Elizabeth and her Council, upon a new Vexation of them by certain Persons who had got a Patent from her to look and search into all such Collegiate and Chauntry Foundations concealed hitherto: For which the Companies were again called to Account, of which we shall hear more by and by. Here are specified the Lands purchased by each Company of King Edward VI. and what Lands they sold to purchase the same, and how the Profits thereof were bestowed; which is transcribed from an Original.

A particular Note of suche charitable good Uses, as are performed by divers of the Companies of LONDON, out of suche Rents as they purchased of King Edward VI.

A Proposal for every Company to send a Ship to Sea with their own Manufacture.

ONE Thomas Barnaby, a Merchant in Edward
VI. his Days, urged to some great Lord of the Court the vast Usefulness of Shipping to this Island, of which, at that Time, there was a great Deficiency. And, for the promoting of Shipping, he advised this Way: That every Company of the City should provide, and send out one Ship at least, laden with the Commodities proper to their own Trade or Manufacture; which might considerably advance Navigation in this Realm, and the Riches also of each Society. "There
"be (said he) so many rich Halls, that may "spend 800 l. some 600 l. some less and some "more, yearly. And great Revenues come to "them yearly for Quarteridges and Forfeits;
"which rise to no small Sum, and nothing done
"withal, but making great Feasts every Month
"or six Weeks at their Halls, and causing Vic"tuals to be dear. But it might be turned to a "more honourable Use; also, it would be a "great maintaining to the King's Subjects, for "every Craft to have a Ship to carry their Mer-
"chandizes to and fro, to the great Advance"ment of the King's Honour, and to their "own Commodities: And if Chance should fall
"(which God forbid) that a Ship should be "lost, the Halls might easily bear the Smarts
"thereof.

A Bill that none should exercise any Trade but he that had served an Apprenticeship to it.

THERE was an Endeavour made in March 1575, to obtain an Act of Parliament that no Person should exercise any other Trade than what he was Apprentice to. The Bill was drawn up and intituled, A Bill prohibiting the Exercise of any Art or Mystery, saving to such as have been Apprentice to the same; or, to prohibit, that no Person of one Art or Mystery shall intermeddle with the Art or Mystery of others. It set forth, How in the 37th Year of King Edward III. it was enacted, That Artificers and Men of Mysteries should hold themselves to one Mystery, and that none should use the Mystery or Trade of others, but that which he had chosen. And in the fifth Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, it was enacted, That after the first of May then next ensuing, it should not be lawful for any other than such as did then lawfully use or exercise any Art, Mystery, or manual Occupation, to set up, occupy or use any Craft, Trade, Mystery, or Occupation, except he was brought up therein Seven Years; nor to set any Person at work in such Mystery, except he should have been an Apprentice as aforesaid.

Records shewed
the Lord Treasurer relating thereto.

THE City offered to the Lord Treasurer a Paper, shewing, that it appeared by antient Records, that several Companies in LONDON were incorporated, as well for the good Government of their Companies, and to see that true and perfect Wares were made and sold in the Realm, as to punish the disordered Persons, and banish the deceitful and corrupt Wares. At which Time every several Company might occupy no other Trade but that whereunto the Person was Apprentice. Which Order kept the foreign Commodities at far lower Prices than at that present they were; and yet the Stuff and Wares better made than now they were. That Ignorance was a great Occasion of making and maintaining evil and corrupt Wares, and also of enhancing and raising up the Prices of Foreign Commodities.

That if every Man occupied his own Trade, that these Abuses might easily be espied, and ordered either by the Governor of the Corporations, or by some other Device made by her Majesty and the Honourable Council. That there were in LONDON, of several Companies, far greater Numbers that retailed Silks, than were free of the Mercers; and therefore no good Order could be kept.

IN the Times of King Richard II. Sir Nicholas Brambre, Mayor, divers were disfranchi-sed and lost their Freedom; for that they occupied other Trades than they were Apprentices unto, viz. John Lynne and Nicholas Merchant, free of the Haberdashers, for that they occupied Merceries: Geoffrey Prestbery, for that he knew the said Nicholas Merchant to occupy Mercery, and procured him to be free of the Haberdashers.
William Southbrook, free of the Weavers, for that he occupied Drapery. Richard Cross, for that he procured the said Southbrook, occupying Drapery, to be free of the Weavers. Richard Skinner, being a Taylor, lost his Freedom, for that he used Drapery. Six several Taylors, at that Time, lost their Freedom, for that they knew the said Skinner occupied Drapery; and yet procured him to be free of the Taylors.

FROM the Year 1582, and some Years after, the Companies were again put to great Trouble, a great Part of their Lands and Tenements being in Danger to be forfeited and taken from them, by Reason of Sir Edward Stafford, and others, who had obtained Patents from the Queen for finding out Obit and Chantry, and Collegiate Lands concealed. Many of these Lands, given by Act of Parliament to the King and his Heirs, 1 Edw. VI. the Companies were fain to purchase again of King Edward VI. according to the Rent Charges upon them, as was shewn before. But some other Chantry Lands there were, which they held concealed hitherto, till certain prying Fellows (hoping thereby to make some Gains to themselves) had made Discoveries of them to these Patentees, commonly called Concealers; who examined narrowly into all these Conceal-ments. And what was discovered became the Patentees, the Queen having some small Part in Fee Farm.

THUS, Anno 1582, two of these Concealers, named Adams and Woodshaw, discovered, That whereas divers of the Companies had, upon the Act for Chantries, bought of King Edward VI.
the Lands belonging to the Chantries, and given to the respective Companies, and so enjoyed the said Lands as they had done before, they had concealed some of the Chantry Lands, and retained them in their Hands, paying nothing for them. As for Example, the Grocers bought of King Edward VI. 67 l. 1 s. 8 d. per Annum; for which they gave 1341 l. 13 s. 4 d. and built the Weigh-house, which cost them 1100 l. But these Men found, that the Lands belonging to Chantries, in their Possession, amounted to 147 l.
4 s. 8 d. What therefore remained of the Sum besides 67 l. 1 s. 8 d. was by Right the Queen's.
Which she gave to the Patentees: Out of which the Queen had 4 l. 10 s. per Annum as a Fee Farm.

AND so the Skinners bought of the said King, Rents of their Chantries to the Value of 30 l. 16 s. 6 d. per Annum; for which they paid 615 l. 10 s. whereas there was now discovered to be Lands of that Nature in their Possession of 101 l. 8 s. 8 d. per Annum.

The Salters bought of the King
Rents out of these Lands per Ann.	33	18	03
For which they paid to the King	688	05	00
Their Lands now discovered to be per Annum	82	01	08
The Vintners bought Rents of the King, as before, per Annum	09	15	00
For which they paid	195	06	08
Their Lands now discovered to be per Annum	30	00	00
Besides their Hall and 14 Alms-houses passed to the Patentees as concealed.
The Drapers bought Rents of the King as before, per Annum	37	05	10
For which they paid	746	13	04
Their Lands now discovered to be per Annum	110	07	00

And so of divers other of the Twelve Companies. All these Lands and Tenements of the Companies of LONDON so concealed, the Queen passed by her Letters Patents to the abovesaid Adams and Woodshaw.

So that the Total Sum of the Lands so passed was per Ann.	838	04	06
Rents out of the same bought of the King by the Companies per Annum	312	16	03
Monies therefore paid to the King by them	5640	00	08
To the Queen for all the same Lands by the Patentees in Fee Farm per Annum	22	12	04

Note, That the Value of the said Lands were here set as they were charitably lett by the Companies, (which was one great Portion of their good Deeds) but would be much more by Improvement. Also the whole yearly Value aforesaid, and the whole yearly Value of all the rest of their Lands, the Companies shewed that they did bestow upon the Poor, and upon Scholars, and other publick good Uses; without employing any one Penny thereof in their Dinners, or other like Charges. But the same were wholly borne of their Quarteridge, and the Wardens Charge out of their own Purfes; as appears by this one Example of the Grocers here following:

	l.	s.	d.
The whole Rents of the Grocers per Annum	216	14	04
Whereof:
To the Poor weekly, by divers Wills and otherwise in Alms
To the School-master, Usher, and Almsmen at Owndel	165	16	00
To poor Schloars in the Universities
For Fees and Pensions of poor Servants of the Company, whereof they live	46	00	00
Reparations of the School Alms-houses, and other the Premises	40	00	00

Sum 251 16 00

Beside setting forth, entertaining and training of Soldiers, Provision of Armour always in Store, and 444 Quarters of Wheat ever aforehand; wherein the poorer Sort bear no Burden.

And so in like Sort and Proportion is to be said of all the rest of the said Companies.

Note also, That the said Companies are set by their Lands in Subsidy, 638 l. and so do pay at every whole Subsidy 128 l. 10 s. which, accounting every fourth Year to pay a Subsidy, amounteth yearly, communibus annis, to 31 l. 7 s. And so if the Companies lose their Lands, the Queen shall lose more in Subsidy than the Whole that the Patentees do give her for the Lands.

Item, If the Land be taken away, and so the Purchase of the Rents void, if her Majesty in Equity repay the Sums that the King received for the Rents, it amounts to 5640 l. 8 d.

In fine, There was no Way for these Companies to enjoy these concealed; but now discovered Lands, unless they would lay down Money and buy them of the Patentees: Nor would the Patentees be contented to have them valued according to the old Rents they went at formerly, and as lett by the Companies, but according to what they might be rented for at that present; and so set the Value upon them at twenty Years Purchase. But several Companies contended with these Concealers; for many of these Lands were dubious whether they came under the Statute for Chantries. At length some Matters of Law in this Cause were put to the Lords Chief Justices, Sir Christopher Wray, and Sir Edmund Anderson.

Wherein they gave their Judgments under their Hands, That albeit Messuages were demised to Corporations of Mysteries in LONDON, yet being appointed to Chantries, Obits, &c. they were given to the King by the Statute Anno 1 Edw. VI. And then they gave their Judgments, that the Queen was intituled to certain Messuages in Controversy; and others they left doubtful, and cleared some others.

	l.	s.	d.
I. William Calleys's Lands, being of the old yearly Rent of	26	06	08
The Patentees reckon'd them worth yearly	80	00	00
So as worth to be sold at twenty Years Purchase	1600	00	00
II. Dolphin's Lands, old Rent yearly	04	06	08
Now worth to be let by Year	13	06	08
Worth to be sold as before	266	13	04
III. William Brothor's Lands, old yearly Rents	06	01	08
Now worth yearly	20	00	00
Worth to be sold at that Rate	400	00	00
IV. Again, William Brothor's Lands, of old yearly Rent	20	00	00
Now worth yearly	70	00	00
Worth to be sold as before	1400	00	00

The Sum of the old yearly Rent of all the said Lands and Tenements

The Sum of the Rents they would at that present lett for,

The Sum that the said Tenements will be sold for, after twenty Years Purchase, according to the said new Valuation

Deducting the annual Rents of 21 l. 2 s. purchased out of the said Tenements by the said Drapers Company.

BUT to make this Matter clearer, and to shew what the City pleaded for itself against these Concealers, this Plea, which they put in to the Lord Treasurer, may deserve to be considered.

I. IN the firste Yeare of Kinge Edward the vijth, Chauntries, Colledges and divers Lands, Tenements, Rents, &c. employed in superstitious perfitious Ufes, were geven to the Kinge, his Heires and Successors.

2. In the fame Statute are divers Claufes, limiting in what Cafes the Kinge fhould have all or Parte, or Rente, or the Land it felfe.

3. Among other, there is a Claufe to this Effecte; That all Profiters employed by Corporations of Mifteries, to fuch fuperftitious Ufes, fhould bee to the Kinge as Rentes-charge, whereunto all thofe and other the Landes of fuch Corporations fhould be liable.

4. Hereupon the Lawe was then taken and put in ufe, that in fuch Cafes where Landes were geven to fuche Corporations, with lymitinge of Profiters to bee fo fuperftitiously employed, the Kinge fhould not have the Landes, but the Profiters fo employed, as Rentes-charge.

5. Upon this Statute, Commissions were directed for LONDON, to certen Perfons of the Kinge's Counfell learned, and other greate learned Men in Lawe, and fuche as were of Parliament, and prevye to the makinge of the Lawe, and fo beft underftanding the true Meaninge of the Statute.

6. Thefe Commissioners came to the Halles of LONDON, and there had all the Evidencies of the Companies laide before them, that they mighte accordinge to their Underftandinge, fett downe the Rightes of the Kinge.

7. They, accordinge to the faid Exposition, did fett downe and certifie thofe Profiters to bee the Kinges, as Rents-charge, and did not entitle the Kinge to the Landes themfelves.

8. The Certificates were fo accepted and allowed in the Kinges Courts, no doubt with the Advife of the Kinges Officers and Judges, and Counfel learned.

9. Thefe Rents were accordingly paid to the Kinge by the Space of certen Yeres; without Question.

10. Afterward the Kinge in the thirde Yere of his Raigne, having Occafion to levie a great Maffe of Money, did require the Companies to purchafe thofe Rents, which they were lothe to doe; but beinge urged by their Dutie of Love and Service to the Kinge.

11. The Companies accordingly purchafed thofe Rents, for which they paid to the Kinge almoft xix thoufand Pounds.

12. For the raifinge of this Somme of 18700 l. they were enforced to fell divers of the faide Landes and Tenements, to paye for the reft.

13. The Kinge moft gratiouflye meaninge that both the Companies and the faid Purchafers fhould reteyne bothe the faide Landes, and enjoye their faide Rentes accordinge to their Bargaynes, did in the fifth Yere of his Raigne, in a Seflion of the fame Parliament, paffe an Acte of Parliament for their Affurance againfte Reversions, Remainders and other Incombrances.

14. In the Preamble of the faid Acte is recited, howe the Kinge was by the faid Statute in the firft Yere of his Raign, intituled to the faid Profiters, as Rents-charge, and not to the Landes in the Landes of thofe Laye Corporations.

15. So by the Judgment of the Kinge, his Nobles, Judges, Counsaile learned, and whole Court of Parliamente, in the faid late Seflion, who had bene alfo of the former Seflion, and beft underftandinge their owne Meaninge, it was confefled and recited, that the Kinge in this Cafe, had the Rents, and not the Landes.

16. In the Bodie of the faid Acte is exprefly fett downe, that the faid Companies and Corporations fhall quietly enjoye and holde both the faid Rents, Manors, Landes, Tenements and Hereditaments.

17. Accordinge to this Exposition, they have ever fince quietly enjoyed the fame.

18. They have made fundrye Sales, Grauntes, and Leases of their faid Landes and their Grauntees, have likewise done. Upon which Grauntes are fundrye Warrantifes, Bondes and Covenants.

19. Many of the faid Leases are become Portions of Widowes and Orphanes.

20. Many have beftowed great Buildings upon the fame, to the beautifying of her Majesties Citie.

21. Many, but efpecially poore Men, have their Habitations and onely Settlinges of their livinge in the Premiffes.

22. The Arrerages of the Profits are very greate Sommes.

23. The Companies having purchafed the faid Rents, though they mighte have turned them wholly to their owne profite, have employed the fame to publike ufes, viz. reliefe of poore Perfons, of Almes, Exhibitions, of Schollers in the Universities, Provisions of Grayne and Armour, fetting forth and Entertainments of Soldiers, and other Service of their Sovereignes from time to time.

24. Nowe of late there hath bene founde out a newe Opyinion upon the faid Statute, contrary to the forfaid Exposition and Underftanding thereof. And it is fuggested, that the Kinge is entitled to the faid Landes, and not to the Profiters; and fo the faid Companies have neither Lande nor Rente, notwithstanding their Purchafes bona fide, and by the Judgment of the Kinge, his Councils learned and Parliaments.

25. Upon this Suggestion, Informations of Intrufions are brought againft the faid Companies, all for concealed Landes.

26. Yf the faid Informations fhould prevaille, and the faid newe Opyinion holden for Lawe, infinite Inconveniencies would enfue: Viz.

27. The Companys beinge bonæ fidei Possessores, and having truly purchafed for greate Summes at the Kinges Requefte, fhould be defrawd of their lawful Bargains.

28. The Arrerages fhould be to them a greater Burden then they are able to fusteyne.

29. The Warrantizes, Covenants, Bondes and Forfeitures, are an infinite Somme, and a moft unfpeakable Confufion.

30. The Charge of their Buildinge fhould be wholly loft.

31. Multitudes of Widowes and poore Orphanes fhould be thruft out of their Portions, and utterly undone.

32. The Testaments and Laft Willes of many Perfons fhould be utterly defeated.

33. Infinite Numbers of poore Inhabitants fhould at an Instant be expelled from their Dwellings.

34. Marvellous Numbers of Poore fufteined by thofe Revenues of Companies, fhould be put from their Reliefe, and caft to Miferie, and burden of the State more than LONDON fhall be able to fusteyne.

35. Many poore Schollers muft lofe their Exhibitions.

36. The Companies fhall not bee able to furnifhe hir Majesties Service from Time to Time as they have done, and defire to do; much leffe to mainteyne the good contynuanee of her Citie to her Majesties Honour.

37. Finally, the Confufion and Tumbling up of the whole State and Order of this Citie would be incredible.

38. Her Majestie fhould hereof, by the faid Suggesters, receive little or nothinge, and in no waye comparable to the losse that her Highnefs may fusteyne in her Cities Difabilitie.

It may therefore please your honourable Lordship of your Goodnefs,

To be favourable to the said Citie and Companies in their most humble Petitions to her Majestie, and Council for their Relif, and to bemeane,

That her Majestie will allowe the said true Interpretations of the Statutes, whereby they have hetherto enjoyed the said Landes.

That her Majestie will commaunde such Sutes, Informations, and Molestations, to cease.

And that her Highness, if need should be, will by her moste gracious Graunts, or Royal Assente to an Acte of Parliament hereafter for that Cause, ratasie the Possessions of the said Companies in playne and expresse Forme.

For the Final compounding and adjusting these Controversies arising between the Patentees and Companies, certain Lords of the Council were made Arbitrators between them; whereof one of them was the Lord Treasurer of England.

THE Offers of the Patentees before the Lords Arbitrators, April 4 1585, to the Companies, were as follow:

“THEY require the Inheritance and Fee-simple of so much of the Lands in Question, as they shall be found to have Right unto by the Opinions of the Judges: In consideration whereof, they will grant unto the said Companies and their Successors for ever, out of the same Tenements, so much Annual Rent, in Nature of a Rent-Charge, as the same Tenements are now demised for, and remit unto them besides all the Arrearages, without offering Disturbance to the Tenant for the Lease or Term of Years granted them bona fide, before the Date of the Patent.

“THEY demand 5000*l.* and Leases in Reversion for an hundred Years, of all the Lands that they shall have Right unto by the Opinions of the Judges, remitting to the Companies absolutely the Inheritance of the Lands, the whole Arrearages, and suffering the Tenants quietly to enjoy their Estates

“THEY are contented to depart with a third Part of so much Land as shall be thought to be their Right by the Opinions of the Judges, reserving only to themselves two Parts of the same Land, being rated and cast up according to the Yearly Value in Rent, or as it is worth to be Sold.

“WHERE it is alledged by the Companies, that they paid for the Rent-Charges out of these and other Lands 19000*l.* or thereabouts; the Patentees, to save the Companies from Loss and Prejudice, are contented to repay unto them so much Money ratably for the Rents out of the Lands to be adjudged for the Patentees, as it shall appear they disbursed for the same, remitting unto them the Arrearages and mean Profits: The said Companies to resign over to the Patentees all their Interest, both in the said Lands and Rents so by them purchased; and the Tenants to continue out their Leases made bona fide before the Date of the Patent.”

In short, the Rents in Adams's and Woodshaw's Patent were compounded for in the Year 1587, which amounted to 227*l.* 16*s.* 10*d.* The Mercers Companies Rents, which they had before compounded for the Queen, amounted to 196*l.* 15*s.* 3*d.* and there remained much more to be compounded for.

KING James I. in the Seventh Year of his Reign, Anno 1609, for the Ease of these long complained of Grievances, set forth a gracious Proclamation, intituled, A Proclamation signifying his Majesty's Pleasure to confirm by all means the Estates of his Subjects against all Defects in their Assurances, and all concealed Titles; importing, “That it had pleased him, as a Pledge of greater Favour intended towards his Subjects, than ever they received from his Predecessors (setting apart all Considerations of Profit to himself, or Power over his good Subjects in this kind) by this Proclamation to declare, that he was fully resolved, that all his Subjects should partake of this Grace, to have all the Estates of their Lands confirmed and made perfect, and to be discharged of all mean Profits and Issues whatsoever heretofore due, or acknowledged, notwithstanding any Defects, or Imperfections, &c.

BUT it was not before the 21st of K. James I. that this great Vexation of the Subject, by Reason of Concealments, was put a full and satisfactory End to; when an Act of Parliament was made against these Concealers, and all Pretences of Concealments whatsoever. The Contents of the said Act was, “That the King, his Heirs, and Successors, shall not at any Time hereafter sue, impeach, question, or implead any Person or Persons, Bodies Politick or Corporate, for, or in anywise concerning any Manors, &c. Secondly, or for or concerning the Revenues, Issues or Profits thereof. Thirdly, or make any Title, Claim, Challenge, or Demand, &c. And that every Person or Persons, Bodies Politick or Corporate, their Heirs and Successors, and all claiming from, by, or under them, or any of them, for and according to the several Estates and Interests, which they have or claim to have in the same respectively, shall hereafter quietly and freely have, hold, and enjoy against his Majesty, his Heirs and Successors, &c. And furthermore, that every Person or Persons, Bodies Politick and Corporate, their Heirs and Successors, &c. shall quietly and freely have, hold and enjoy all such Manors, &c. as they now have, claim and enjoy, &c. against all and every Person and Persons, their Heirs and Assigns, having, claiming, or pretending to have any Estate, Right, Title, Interest, Claim or Demand whatsoever, &c. by Reason or Colour of any Letters Patents, or Grants, upon Suggestion of Concealment, or wrongful detaining, or not being in Charge, or defective Titles, or by, from, or under any Patentees, &c. of, or for which Manors, &c. no Verdict, &c.

C H A P. X.

Of MERCHANTS and FOREIGN TRADE.

WE have not yet told all the Myſteries and Trades in LONDON, as diſtinguiſhed into their ſeveral Companies. There is yet another Rank of conſiderable Traders, whoſe Traffick and Commerce lieth chiefly abroad, and who employ Shipping; exporting the Products and Manufactures of England into foreign Parts, and importing the Commodities of foreign Growth hither. Theſe we call Merchants, in great Credit and Reputation among us, as well as of Wealth and Opulency. Of theſe there be divers Companies alſo, according to the Regions and Countries of the World to which they trade, being incorporated by divers of our Kings and Queens. But notwithstanding they are of theſe Companies of Merchants, yet moſt of them are Freemen of the City, and belong to ſome one, either of the Twelve, or the other Companies of the Myſteries of LONDON. But firſt to ſpeak ſomething of the Trade in general:

WHICH is that which makes LONDON to be LONDON, that is, makes her flow with Wealth and Honour, and able to deſerve the Name of The Chamber of the Kings of England; and, finally, which influenceth the Proſperity and good Eſtate of the whole Nation: For ſhe is the Spring of Wealth, whence, as in ſo many Channels, it is derived throughout all the Parts of the Kingdom.

AND the Trade and Commerce of this City cannot but be great, if we conſider the vaſt Sum paid into the King's Treasury, ariſing from the Customs, which amounts to about 2,000,000 l. per Annum.

MOREOVER, its great Trade may be gueſs'd at by the Shipping lying at Anchor in the River Thames, inſomuch that paſſing down the ſaid River, the Maſts reſemble a Wood, or Foreſt, beſides thoſe conſtantly going out, or coming from foreign Parts of the known World. Its great Trade may alſo be computed by great Numbers of well furniſhed Shops and Warehouſes, and by the great Port and Splendor the Merchants and Tradeſmen live in; their Houſes richly furniſhed; their Apparel coſtly; their Equipage noble, and their Tables plentiful; and many of them honour'd by the Prince with Knighthood: Inſomuch, that LONDON may not improperly be reckon'd a Grand Magazine of Money, and Commodities of all Sorts, neceſſary for the Uſe and Pleaſure of Mankind. And for Horſes, Ammunition and all Sorts of Arms, it may be ſtil'd a Storehouſe for War. And laſtly, for Men of all Ranks and Qualities, as Nobility, Gentry, Courtiers, Divines, Lawyers, Phyſicians, Merchants, Tradeſmen, Artificers, Seamen and Foreigners, is a vaſt Rendezvous of People.

FOR Exportation, this City (as the Storehouſe of the Kingdom) ſupplies other Nations with Lead, Tin, Copper, Iron, Pewter, (both wrought and unwrought) Shot, Guns, Allum, Seacoal, Saffron, Tallow, Hides, Leather, Calves-skins, Lamb-skins, Coney-skins, Hops, Corn, (when under ſuch a Price per Buſhel, as ſet by Act of Parliament) Pilchards, Herrings, Barrel-Cod,

VOL. II.

Poor Jack, Ling, Shoes, Stockings, Hats, Caps, Ruggs, Honey, Soap, Madder, Butter, Cheeſe, all Sorts of Haberdashery Wares; as, Gloves, Ribbands, Needles, Pins, Tape, &c. But, above all, with Cloth and Woollen Manufactures made into Serges, Norwich Stuffs, Says, Bayes, Perpetuanoes, Druggets, Kerſies, Raſhes, Cottons, Fuſtians, Flannels, Worſteds, Frizes, Peniſtons, &c. and that in vaſt Quantities. All which ſaid Commodities, with divers others, not here named, find great Vent beyond Seas.

THE Importations are alſo as conſiderable, the Merchants bringing in from all Parts of the Earth their Wares and Riches; which, after we have ſufficiently ſupplied ourſelves with, in great Quantities, to the Enrichment of the Importers, and others that deal in them, are again transported to other Countries. And as our American Plantations take off prodigious Quantities of all Sorts of the aforeſaid Commodities; that is, as well thoſe of our own Growth and Manufacture, as thoſe imported; ſo likewise by the Plantations, as Barbados, Jamaica, Virginia, New-England, Maryland, New-York, Carolina, Pennſylvania, Bermudas, St. Chriſtopher's, Nevis, &c. no leſs Advantage is made by their Sugars, Tobacco, Indico, Ginger, Piemento, Cotton, Cocoa, Furrs, Fuſticks, and other Woods, which is enough, not only for our Nation, but to ſupply moſt Countries with.

THE Commodities imported, are, Oils, Wines, Brandy, Spices, Fruits, as Raiſins, Currants, Figs, Prunes, and Prunelloes, Callicoës, Pintadoes of ſeveral Sorts, Saunders, Tamerines, Spicknard, Aloes, Myrrhe, Rhubarb, Opium, Druggs of ſundry Sorts, Precious Stones, Gold, Silver, Pearl, Amber, Frankincenſe, Caſſia, Camphire, Borax, Mirabolans, Benjamin, Rice, Chryſtal, Porcelane, Cabinets, Coffee, Tea, China-wares, Cornelian Rings, Muſk, Civet, Ambergreafe, Saltpetre, Grograins, Turkey Carpets, Silks, Raw and Wrought into ſeveral Fabricks, as, Taſſaties, Sarſnets, Tabbies, Velvets and Pluſh, Diaper, Damask, Cambricks, Hollands, Ghentings, Muſlins, &c. alſo Caviare, Catchope, Pot-aſhes, Firs, Pipe-ſtaves, Oars, Deals, Clapboards, Cordage, Cable-yarn, Cotton, Cotton-yarn, Redwood, Log-wood, Fuſtick, Cedar, Pitch, Tar, Roſin, Iron, Steel, Wire, Laten, Elephants Teeth, Cochineal, Flax, Hemp, Wax, Tallow, Furrs, Goat-skins, Cordovants, Hides, Sturgeon, Camels-hair, Mohair, Camblets, Grograms, Yarn, Galls, Glaſs, Slood, Allum, Iſinglaſs, Hogsbristles, Beaver-wool, Woombs, Colours for Painters, Pictures, Paper, Rice, Annifeeds, &c. And, indeed, all Commodities whatſoever find good Vent here.

FOR the Management of Trade in Shipping off and Landing Goods, and for the Entering of them, in order to the Payment of the King's Duties, there is a Custom-Houſe in Thames-Street, below the Bridge, commodiouſly ſeated and ſupplied with Wharfs and Cranes for the Landing and Unlading of Goods; and as convenient within, by ſeveral Apartments for Offices belonging thereunto, beſides a very large and spacious Room, where the Clerks and others sit for the Dispatch of Business.

IN this Office of the Custom-House is a great Number of Officers employed, in their several Stations; many whereof have very large and noble Stipends, besides other Advantages. The principal Officers are the King's Commissioners, who have the whole Charge and Management of all his Majesty's Customs in all the Ports of England, as well as LONDON; and the Oversight and Ordering of the numerous Officers and Servants belonging to them. These Commissioners, as several other Officers do, hold their Places by Patent from the King. Many others there are that are appointed by Warrant from the Lord Treasurer, or the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury for the Time being. The Officers also for the Out-Ports, some are Patent-Officers, and others Warrant-Officers, to a great Number. Of all which, see more Vol. I. Pages 303, 304, 305, 306.

OTHER great and necessary Appendages of Trade, are Weights and Measures, which by the Magna Charta, ought to be one and the same throughout the whole Kingdom; and those must be according to the King's Standard; of Weights and Measures kept in the Exchequer, by a special Officer of the House, called, The Clerk, or, Comptroller of the Market. And for the preventing of Deceits in so important a Matter, there are Officers appointed to inspect the same; as the Jury of Inquests in the several Wards and Parishes of LONDON, and the like for the Parts without the City-Liberty. And in the County there is a Clerk of the Market, for the Verge of the King's Palace, (which some say is twelve Miles Circuit round the Court) whose Care is to look after the same: And to that End he keeps his Courts half-yearly, at convenient Places for the Inhabitants, who bring or send their Weights and Measures to be tryed, by the Standard kept by him. And what Weights and Measures are by the Jury found to be faulty, the Owners thereof are presented, and fined by the said Clerk, more or less, according to the Offence, or returned into the Exchequer; and accordingly to be estreated for the King.

BUT, within the City-Liberties, the Lord Mayor hath the looking after the same: And the like hath the Steward, or Head Bailiff, for the Liberty of Westminster: And so for other Liberties, which by some old Privileges claim such a Power, as St. Katharine's, &c.

CONCERNING the Weights and Measures used in LONDON, and all over England, and the particular Practice of weighing and measuring Commodities, Recourse may be had to Books of Commerce, and Merchandize; and for a brief and succinct Relation thereof, to The Present State of Great Britain.

AFTER the Union of England and Scotland, it was enacted, That the same Weights and Measures be used throughout Great Britain, as were before used in England: And the Standard of those Weights and Measures (antiently kept in the Exchequer at Westminster) to be kept also in those Burghs in Scotland, to which the keeping of Weights and Measures are now in Use; and all the Standards to be sent down to the respective Burghs from the Standard kept in the Exchequer.

THERE antiently was, and still is a publick Ballance, or Beam, belonging to the City, for weighing of Commodities between Buyer and Seller, and a Master-Weigher appointed; and there was all possible Care used for the just keeping of this Beam: For which Purpose, these Orders of old Time may be taken Notice of.

Quia sepius, &c. In English, "Because often before these Times, many and sundry Contentions have arisen betwixt the Merchant-Strangers selling, and the private Merchants buying different Commodities of Averdupois, and Spices; which were weighed as well by the great Ballance as the small; so that it was uncertain upon the Tract of Weighing; for the Weigher gave to some more, and to some less, as was reported.

FOR the avoiding of such Contentions, and for the removing them for the Time to come, it was agreed by Thomas Romayn, Mayor, and the Aldermen, and by the Assent of Luke de Haveryng, William de Byderik, Rafe le Balauncer, Peter Adrian, William Furneys, Roger de Arcubus, William le Boteler, William le Barber, John Godelinyng, Richard de Dorsete, Richard de Ispania, Citizens and Merchants of LONDON; and John le Lang, Hildebrand de Nova Curia, Jacob Fisk, John Pope, Richard Sware, Bertram de Coloign, John de Sterneberwe, &c. Merchants of Lombardy and Provence: THAT all the Merchandizes of Averdupois, as of Wax, Almonds, Rice, Copper, &c. and such like, which are to be weighed by the Beam, for the Time to come be weighed equally: That the Weigher remove his Hands thence; so that he seem neither to the Seller, nor to the Buyer, to yield any Thing, or to take away more than what is just, after any Manner whatsoever. And that every Hundred of such Grosses of Averdupois, contain five score and twelve Pounds; and every Hundred of small Spices, viz. Ginger, Saffron, Sugar, Maces, and other of such Sort, which are sold by the Pound, contain fivescore and four Pounds. And it is enjoined the Weigher, that he weigh no otherwise, under Pain of Imprisonment.

AND moreover it is forbidden, that no Merchant, Stranger, or private Merchant, sell or buy, but by the Ballance; and not by Detail, under Pain, &c. Yet always saving the State of the Lord the King, and of his Wardrobe, when they will weigh. That they weigh as before hath been used, if they please; until something else be appointed by him and his Council. And this Ordinance was made on Monday in the Eve of St. Martin, Anno Regn. Reg. Edwardi fil. Reg. Edw. tertio.

AND the Weigher shall receive, for the Use of the Sheriff, of every thousand Weight weighed, 1 d. and the Weigher shall have for his own Labour of every hundred Weight a Farthing.

WHAT the antient Manner of appointing a Weigher of the great Beam was, may be seen by this Extract out of the Records of the Chamber; when one Andrew Goddard, 6 Edw. II. was put and sworn in that Office.

Memorandum, &c. Be it remembered, that on Wednesday next after the Feast of St. Michael, Ann. Regni Regis Edw. fil. Edw. sexto, came honest Men of the Commonalty, viz. of the Trade of the Pepperers, Corders, or Ropers, Farriers, or Ironmongers, Apothecaries, and of divers other Trades, who used to weigh their Commodities by Averdupois; and in the Presence of Nicholas de Farndon, holding the Place of Mayor that Day (because the Mayor [John de Gisors] was before the King's Council at Westminster for the Business of the City) and of Richard de Glocester, &c. Aldermen, and of Richard de Welleford, one of the Sheriffs; they presented one Andrew Goddard to the Office of Weigher of the great Ballance, whom they chose for a good and faithful Man to do the said Office, and prayed that the Sheriffs would admit him to the said Office; and that they would let it to Farm, because that it would

“ would be to the great Detriment of the afore“ said Office.

“ AND the foresaid Richard the Sheriff admit“ ted the foresaid Andrew: And the said Andrew “ was sworn, well and faithfully to weigh, as “ well for the Seller as the Buyer, as well for the “ Poore as for the Rich, and all other who shall “ come to the Ballance; and at the End of every “ Week shall render up to the Sheriff all the Pro“ fit coming of the said Office, &c. And the said “ Weigher shall take of every Thousand weighed “ 1*d.* for the Sheriff, for the Farm of the City;
“ and for his Labour for every Hundred, a “ Farthing.

THE antient Affize of Weights and Measures, were as follows:

Per Ordinationem totius Angliæ Regni fuit Mensura Dni. Regis composita. &c. “ By the “ Ordinance and Discretion of the whole King“ dom of England, was the Measure of the Lord
“ the King settled, viz. That the English Pen“ ny, which is called Sterling, round, without “ Tonsure or Clipping, shall weigh 32 Grains of “ Bread Corn, in the Middle of the Ear; and “ twelve Ounces make the Pound of LON-“ DON, to wit, Twenty Shillings: And eight “ Pounds of Sterlings make one Gallon, and “ eight Gallons make one Bushel of LONDON:
“ And eight Bushels make a Quarter of LON-“ DON: And twelve Pounds and an half make “ a Stone of LONDON. And a Sack of “ Wool ought to weigh twenty eight Stone, and “ in some Parts thirty Stone.

ADD this Extract to the rest, concerning weighing of Wool, and rectifying of the Trone, and appointing a Weigher, and the Fee for weighing.

“ Memorandum, &c. Be it remembered that on “ Thursday, in the Eve of the Purification of the “ blessed Virgin Mary, in the Sixth of Edward
“ the Son of Edward, came John de Bureford, “ Simon Abyndon Draper, John de Codynnton “ Wooler, Walter de Chesewyk Wooler, John de “ Hamme, and Richard de Hakeneye, Woolers
“ also, and very many other honest Men, “ Woolers and others of the City, at Gybold, “ LONDON; before John de Gisorz, Mayor, “ John de Wengrave, William de Leyre, Henry “ de Durham, John de Wyndesore, William Ser- “ nade, William de Combmartin, Anketine de “ Giscetie, Stephen de Abynton, and Roger de “ Paris, Aldermen; and there before the same “ Mayor and Aldermen, forsomuch as it was given “ to the said Mayor and Aldermen to understand, “ that the Trone of the City, wherewith Wools “ bought and sold were weighed in the same City, “ was defective, and not well kept; because that “ one John Powel, who had the Custody thereof, “ had not sufficient Insight to execute such Office;
“ the foresaid John de Bureford and others “ abovenamed, were sworn, touching the Holy “ Gospel; that they would cause the said Trone, “ well and faithfully to be kept, and, if it were “ necessary, to be amended; and that to keep “ the said Trone, they would choose some faith“ ful and diligent Person: And hereupon one “ Thomas Le Anselma Kiere, being sworn, assayed
“ the said Trone by the Weights of Gybold, and “ made it certain and competent. And the “ Woolers being sworn, chose a certain Weigher, “ to serve the said Trone in the Place of John “ Powel; to wit, one William Gyri, who there “ presently swore, that he should weigh well and “ faithfully, by the foresaid Trone, between “ Merchant and Merchant, doing Justice and E“ quity as well to Foreigners, as private Men [i. e.
“ Freemen,] sparing or favouring none by Fear or “ Affection, Prayer or Price: And that he should “ not take of the Free-Merchants of the City, “ but of both, that is, as of the Buyer, as the “ Seller, an Halfpenny only of every Sarpalar “ weighed; and of the Foreigners Merchants, “ weighing after the same Manner, of both one “ Penny only: And if perhaps a private Mer“ chant and a Foreigner have weighed on account “ of Merchandize made between them, he shall “ take, for every Tract, of the Foreigner 1*d.*

“ and for the private Man one Halfpenny only,
“ and not more.

CONCERNING the Abuse of Weights in England, and the Complaint and Regulation thereof in Queen Elizabeth's Time, it may not be unworthy to be Noted: That in the 16th Year of that Queen, Information was given unto the Lord Treasurer, Under-Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, that the Weights used throughout the Realm were uncertain, and varying one from another; which tended to the Slander of the same, and Deceiving of many, both Buyers and Sellers:
So that no true and just Standards were then extant for the Sizing of true Weights as in former Times had been used: Whereupon they caused nine Merchants, and twelve Goldsmiths of the City to come before them, and charged them to enquire upon their Oaths on certain Articles, containing in Effect, how many several Sorts of Weights were then lawfully in use within the Realm; and to try and consider upon certain Weights delivered to them by the said Lord Treasurer, Under-Treasurer and Barons: And out of those Weights, and otherwise, with all their Diligence and Understanding, to size one certain of all Sort of Weights, lawfully to be used from thenceforth. And this Jury accordingly caused one certain Standard, as well of Troy-weight, as of Averdupois, and presented it to the said Treasurer and the rest, together with their Verdict in Writing under their Hands and Seals; declaring the several Poizes of the said Standard, and their Proceedings touching the Charge that was given to them.

IN the 25th of the said Queen, some Persons of good Understanding objected, and alledged unto the said Treasurer, that the said Standards, so by the said Jury sized, were not agreeable with the antient Standards, allowed and appointed by the Laws of the Realm, nor were so profitable to the Commonwealth, as were convenient: Whereupon the Treasurer caused another Jury of 18 Merchants, and 11 Goldsmiths, Citizens of the said City, to appear before him in the Court of the Exchequer; and they were charged upon their Oaths to enquire and try, by all lawful Ways and Means that they could, whether the said Standards so newly sized, were agreeable unto the antient Standards, allowed and appointed by the Laws of this Realm; or whether they might be allowed and appointed to be the Standards, for the Sizing of all other the Weights of the Realm by, without Hurt to the Commonwealth. And for their better instructing and understanding of the Truth herein, the Lord Treasurer and the rest charged them to hear and consider all such Objections, as should be made against the Sizing of the said Weights, or the said Verdict, by any Person or Persons; and to hear and consider the Answer of the former Jury, to the same, and their Reasons for their said Doings in that Matter:
And if they should find their Doings good and allowable, then to certify the same by Verdict in Writing under their Hands and Seals, and if not, then to cause other better and more true Standards of Weights to be sized, according to the true Meaning of certain Articles to them delivered by the Treasurer.

THESE Men at length did, upon Deliberation and Conferences had with the former Jury of the Matters given to them in Charge, say and present unto the Treasurer, and the rest upon their Oaths, as follows, viz. That the said Standards or Weights so lately sized by the former Jury were not agreeable to the antient Standard, according to their Judgment and Understanding; and that the same might not be allowed and appointed to be the Standard for the sizing of all the Weights of the Realm, without Hurt to the Commonwealth of the same. And furthermore, they caused to be new sized, according to the true Meaning of their Charge, so near as they could by their Diligence, Wit, Skill, and Understanding, two certain several Standards; that is to say, one which did agree with the true Proportion of the Pile, or Standard, remaining in Goldsmiths Hall; to size all other Troy Weights by, which had been of antient Use; and the other of Averdupois, which did agree with the true Proportion of the Queen's antient Standard of lvi lb. remaining in the Exchequer, as it seems, since the Time of King Edward III. to size all other like Weights by, and was in present Use. And that the same two Sorts of Weights might be used and continued for Standards to size all Weights by, throughout the Realm, without Hurt to the Commonwealth of the same, to their best Knowledge and Understanding. This last Verdict, and the several Standards, were presented, and remained in the Court of Exchequer.

THESE same Standards sized, and presented by the last Jury, were found by the Lord Treasurer and Barons, to be more agreeable with the Weights of long Continuance and Use in the Realm, and with the Standard allowed, appointed, and used, both for our Monies and Plate, of Silver and Gold, and such like Things sold by Weight, and agreeable also to the Laws of the Realm, for any material Thing that had been found or objected to the contrary.

HEREUPON the Queen, by the Advice of the Privy Council, and others of Knowledge and Experience, determined and ordained, that the said first Verdict and Presentment, and the Standards sized and presented with the same, should be, and remain utterly frustrate, and of no Force. And that the last Presentments, and said Standards, sized and presented by the Jury of the same, should be, and remain and continue and should be holden, used, allowed, and accepted as lawful, good, true and profitable for the Commonwealth, to all Intents and Purposes: And she commanded the Treasurer to cancel and make void the first Presentment, and the Standards offered by that Jury, to be broken; and that the latter Presentment should be entred upon Record in the Court of Exchequer; and the Standard, sized and presented by the Jury of the same, to be laid up and safely kept in that Court, and to be accounted, used, and followed as the Standard of the same Court, for the Sizing of all Weights of the Realm by; and to cause other like Weights and Standards to be made and sized by the same; and to be sent to the Cities and Towns, mentioned in the Statute touching Weights, made in the 11th Year of her Grandfather Henry VII. there to remain, and be used as true Standards and Weights, according to the Meaning of that Statute. And it was the Queen's further Will and Pleasure, that the same Treasurer, and the rest, by the Queen's Process and Proclamation, or otherwise by their Discretion, should cause like Weights and Standards to be provided in every other Corporate and Market-Town, within the Realm of England and Wales; and to cause all other Weights, varying from these, to be forthwith destroyed, or made agreeable with these by the Clerks of the Market, or any other to be by them thereunto assigned: So that from henceforth there should be but one Weight throughout all the Realm, according to the Laws and Statutes. This was one of the most worthy and useful Acts of that excellent Queen, for the Good of her Subjects.

Now follow the Companies of Merchants. The Merchants of the Staple, were the first and most antient Company of English Merchants, trading in Wools. They were incorporated by Edward III. in whose Time they had their Staple of Wools at Calais. Merchants of the Staple.

THEIR Arms were: Nebule of six Pieces, on a Chief a Lyon Passant. Supporters; two Rams. Their Motto; God be our Friend.

MERCHANTS ADVENTURERS.

THIS is the antientest Company of Merchants in England, who were incorporatad in the Reign of King Edward I. Anno 1296. They obtained Privileges of John Duke of Brabant, to establish themselves and their Trade, under Government in the City of Antwerp for those Countries. Then King Edward III. finding them so settled, and observing the great Trade in Flanders, by the Clothings there made, did (when he joined League with the Flemings, against the King of France) encourage the English Merchants in these Parts, to deal with Clothiers of that Nation, to come over into England to erect their Looms and Manufactures: Which accordingly was performed; and took such Effect, that the said King, by the Advice of his Parliament, first prohibited the Exportation of English Wool; next by Privileges, and Acts of Parliament, invited Clothmakers and Workers, over into England; and at last so prevailed, that he prohibited all Foreign Cloth to be imported into the Realm.

AFTERWARDS King Henry IV. Anno 1406, taking Notice of the Service of this Company, in the Rise and Increase of the Manufactures of Clothing, and the Benefit of the Government of the said Company, did establish the same by Grant under the Great Seal: Which said Grant hath been confirmed, and enlarged by his Successors (except Edw. V.) And Queen Elizabeth, in the sixth Year of her Reign, being fallen in Breach with Philip the Second of Spain, Lord of the Netherlands, did, for the Issuing and Vent of the Clothing of this Land, (which daily increased) add, under the Great Seal, all the Parts of Germany, unto those of the Netherlands, and authorized the said Fellowship to treat with the Princes, Potentates, States and Cities of Germany, for a Staple, or Residence, and Privileges, as enjoined in the Netherlands. Which so happily succeeded, as that the Clothing found ample Vent; first in England, then in Hamburg; afterwards in Stade; and then again in Hamburg; where it continues, being commonly called, The Hamburg Company.

AND now the said Fellowship have two Marts, the one in Dordrecht, or Dort, for the Netherlands; the other in Hamburg, for all Germany; and is the chief Court of all the Fellowship, residing both in England, and beyond the Seas; and through their Integrity, fair Dealings, and excellent Laws and Customs observed amongst them, they are of no small Splendor in the Eyes of Men. Which said Company is now much enlarged, all new Draperies being therein comprised.

THIS Company is governed according to their Charter, by the major Part of the said Fellowship residing beyond the Seas; where annually, in the Month of June, they elect out of the Fellowship, a Governor, and Deputy-Governors, for all their other other Residencies and Courts, both in those Foreign Parts, and within England; as, at LONDON, York, Hull, Newcastle, &c. together with Assistants, Treasurers, Chaplains, and other convenient Officers, for the Management of their Affairs, and preserving the Government thereof, who keep Courts as often as their Occasions serve.

THIS Company have by their Charter, several Privileges and Immunities granted unto them; as, Power of making Acts and Ordinances, for the good Government of the Trade, so as not repugnant to the Law of the Land. They have Power to implead, fine and punish Offenders; Power to hear and decide Causes; to use a Common Seal, and to bear a Coat of Arms.

THE Blazon of the Arms of this Fellowship is: Nebule of six Pieces, Argent and Azure. On a Chief quarterly, Or and Gules. In the first and fourth, two Roses, Gules; and in the second and third, a Lion of England. For their Crest, on a Helmet and Wreath, a Pegasus, Argent, charged on either Wing with two Roses, proper. And for Supporters; two Pegasus's, as the Crest. Their Motto: Dieu nous donne bonne Adventure.

THE Commodities that this Company exports, are Clothes, dressed and dyed, of Glostershire, Somersetshire, Kent, &c. in great Quantities; also Lead, Tin, Oils, Worsted and Woollen Stockings, Silks, Fruits, Spanish Wines, &c. And for these and the like, they import Linens; as, Cambricks, Hollands, Lawnes, Diaper, &c. in great Abundance. Also Tapestries, Rhenish Wines, Mather, Hoops, Laten, Sword and Knife Blades, Soap, Wire, Copper-Plates, Brasses, Steel, Iron, Quicksilver, Arms, Gun-powder, Hemp, Allum, Wax, Minerals, Salt, &c.

MERCHANTS of Russia, call'd, Muscovy MERCHANTS.

THE Company of Merchants of Russia were first incorporated by the Letters Patents under the Great Seal of England, in the first and second Year of the Reign of King Philip and Queen Mary, granted to the Right Honourable William Marquis of Winton, then Lord High Treasurer of England; Henry Earl of Arundel, John Earl of Bedford, William Earl of Pembroke, and divers others of the Nobility, and to divers Merchants. And, amongst other Privileges, the said King and Queen granted to the said Company and their Successors, That the said Company should have and enjoy the sole Trade to all the Lands, Ports and Rivers of the Emperor of Russia; and to all other Lands, Ports, Creeks and Arms of the Sea, before the Adventure in the said Letters Patents mentioned, not known, or by English Merchants and Subjects, by the Seas, not commonly frequented, lying Northward, North-Eastward, and North-Westward; with Prohibition to all others, not free of the said Fellowship, unless by their Agreement, to trade to the Places aforesaid, on Pain of forfeiting Ship and Goods, so trading, or traded with.

AND after twelve Years Trial, and upwards, of the good Services they did the Nation, the said Company, and all the Franchises and Privileges, granted them by the said Letters Patents, were confirmed by Act of Parliament, in the 8th Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth.

AND upon further Trial of the Diligence of the said Company, their Privileges were enlarged by King James I. by his Letters Patents, bearing Date the 30 Day of March, in the 11th Year of his Reign.

THE Company, since the Grant of the first Charter and Act of Parliament, have been at vast Charges in fitting out great Numbers of Ships, for the Discovery of New Countries and Isles; and, in Fact, have discovered several Countries, the Trade whereof is of very great Advantage to this Nation, viz. Cherry Islands, Greenland, Nova Zembla, Davy's Straights, Groenland, Hudson's Bay, Newfoundland, the North of America; as will at large appear by the Journals kept by their Commanders in the said Voyages, and register'd in the High Court of Admiralty.

THE said Company have always permitted all Persons freely to trade to all the said Lands and Places discovered, and to all other Places whatsoever, except to Narve and Archangel in Russia. And permitted all Persons, freely to export from England to the said Port of Narve, all Goods whatsoever, and have taken but One per Cent. (according to the Value in the Book of Rates) for their Licence, on what Goods of the Growth of Russia have been imported by others to England, from the said Port of Narve; and the Company themselves pay Half per Cent.

THE Company admitted into their Freedom the Sons of Freemen, and such as had served Apprenticeships to the Freemen of the said Company, and any other Merchants whatsoever, paying the usual Fine of 50*l.* for their Admittance.

THESE Merchants have by their Charter many Privileges and Immunities granted them; as to raise Arms for the seducing of Countries, in the Limits aforesaid, and to enter thereon, and set up English Standards; to make Acts and Ordinances for the Good of the said Trade, provided they be not against the Law of the Nation: To punish Offenders by Fine, or Imprisonment; to use a Seal, and to bear a Coat Armour, which is thus blazoned:

Barry wavy of six Pieces, Argent and Azure; over all a Ship under Sail, proper, having on each Sail a Cross of England between three Bezants. For their Crest, on a Helmet and Wreath, a Lizard's Head erased proper, gorged with a Crown, Gules. And for their Supporters, on the Dexter Side, a Lizard; and on the Sinister Side, an Apres, both proper, and gorged with Crowns, Gules. Their Motto; God be our Guide.

THE Commodities by them exported, are Cloths of all Sorts, both dressed and dyed, Kerfies, Bays, Cottons, Fustians, Perpetuanoes, Norwich Stuffs, Lace, Thread, Lead, Tin, Pewter, Allum, Copper, much defective Wines and Fruits, not fit to be spent in this Kingdom; together with most Sorts of English Commodities. And for these and the like they import Pot-ashes, Cordage, Tar, Tallow, Cable-yarn, Coarse and Fine Linen Cloth, Bees-wax, Singlafs, Hides of several Sorts, both tanned and raw; Hogs-bristles, Linseed, Slood, Beaver-wool, and Combs; several Sorts of rich Furs, Seal-skins, Rhubarb, Train-oil, Castorū, Agarick, Flax, Hemp, Caviare, Stock-fish, Cod-fish, Salmon, &c.

THIS Company is governed by a Governor, four Consuls, and twenty-four Assistants, who are annually chosen out of the said Fellowship, on the first of March, and keep their Courts for the Negotiation of their Affairs, monthly, or as Occasion requires. The usual Place of Meeting was in a large Room, in the old East-India-House in Leadenhall-street.

THIS Company was settled and established by Queen Mary, Anno 1555; and the Patent bore Date February 6. The first Governor was Sebastian Gabota, an antient Gentleman, sprung from Genoa in Italy, but had lived long in England, and skill'd very well in Maritime Affairs.

BUT King Edward VI. first opened the Way of a Trade, by his Letters to the Emperor of Mosco, in May 1553, which that Emperor answered, granting the English a free Trade into his Dominions.

A few Years ago, an Act was made for enlarging the Russia Trade, Tobacco being allowed by the

the Czar Peter of Muscovy, (who was personally in England) to be imported into his Country, which was never allowed before. This Company had assumed a Power to set what Fine they pleased, upon those that should desire the Freedom of their Trade, which usually was 50 l. a Thing complained of, as injurious both to the Company itself, and to the Trade into those Parts; the Company being observed very much to decay, and the Trade becoming inconsiderable; which otherwise was of very great Consequence to the English Nation, in respect of Shipping, and Naval Stores. This Matter coming before the Parliament, Nathaniel Tench, Esq; Governor of the Eastland Company, a Merchant of great Knowledge and Experience, shewed this at large before the Parliament in the House of Lords, in order to gain a Liberty of Trade into Russia, to the said Eastland Merchants and others. And whereas it was pretended, by those of the Russia Company, that this would be to infringe the Privileges granted to them by Act of Parliament; he answered, that no such Thing was intended, but that the said Russia Company might still remain as they were before; only that the Trade might be enlarged, by abating the excessive Fines for Licence to Trade, from 50 l. or what they pleased to impose, to 5 l. And with this the Parliament was satisfied, and enacted the Fine at 5 l. and no more; by which Means that Trade to Russia is very considerably advanced already: For whereas before there were not above four, five, or six Ships at the most, sent into those Parts in one Year; now there go sixty or seventy Sail yearly.

It was observed, that the Russia Merchants, when the Cause came before the Parliament, had the learnedest Lawyers in the Land to manage it on their Side; the English Company had none but Mr. Tench, their Master; who notwithstanding answered distinctly all the Lawyers Arguments, so fully and satisfactorily, and spoke to the Matter with so much Evidence and Conviction, that he carried the Cause, and that with much Applause to himself, and Admiration of all that heard him.

ABOUT the Year 1698, the Emperor of Russia, (since stiled the Czar) being in England, there were some Merchants in LONDON, who entered into a Treaty with him, for a free Importation of Tobacco into his Dominions; and they paid him 12,000 l. immediately upon signing the Contract; and it cost them above 1000 l. more in other Charges to obtain it. And this they did before one Half of the Sum was subscribed that was intended for a Stock sufficient to carry on the Trade.

To this so gainful a Traffick for England, this Russia Company put an Impediment, by requiring such large Sums for Licences to trade thither, having Power otherwise to seize their Ships and Goods: Therefore they laboured for an easy Admission into the Freedom of this Company, by Means of a Bill, then depending in the House of Commons, for enlarging the Trade to Russia: But this being not for some Time obtained, several fell off; and the whole Burthen of this Undertaking, fell upon the Shoulders of 70 or 80 Persons, who were the first Subscribers. These thought it needful to send some Tobacco; thereby to shew their Willingness to comply with that Part of the Contract, lest the Czar should take an Advantage by their Neglect; and so they might lose the 12,000 l. paid him, and all their other Charges, and the Nation the Advantage of that Liberty, which had been so desired. Therefore they ordered about 11,000 Pounds of Virginia Leaf, to be sent from Holland thither; and more of Roll and Cut Tobacco.

In fine, there being afterwards another Sessions of Parliament, they shewed, that if they could not obtain their Freedom of the Russia Company upon moderate Terms, they should not be able to comply with their Contract with the Czar, but must be forced to throw up their Patent, or dispose of it to the Dutch, on the best Terms they could.

At this Time they set forth some of the Advantages this Nation might enjoy, by encouraging the Tobacco Trade to Russia; as, that First, We might probably in a short Time vend in Russia 5000 Hogsheads a Year; which might yield there 120,000 l. over and above the Czar's Customs; and would be so much new Addition to the Nation's Stock. Secondly, The Spinning and Manufacturing that Tobacco here in England, would give new Employment to above 1500 People, besides those that would be employed in Planting, Packing, &c. of it in Virginia; and Ships and Seamen to bring it thence. Thirdly, the Manufacturing of it here, and other petty Charges, upon 5000 Hogsheads, will amount to upwards of 26,000 l. which will be distributed amongst our labouring People. Fourthly, the carrying off so much Tobacco to Russia, and bringing Returns from thence for it, will give a new Employment to a great Number of our Ships and Seamen. Fifthly, his Majesty's Revenues will be increased between 5 and 6000 l. per Ann. by one Half of the Subsidy that will not be drawn back; besides, 'tis certain the greater Vent we have for Tobacco here, the better Price it will yield; and consequently encourage the Planting of more in Virginia; where there is Land enough to produce more Tobacco than all Europe can consume. And Sixthly, if this Trade be encouraged, we shall bring the greatest Part of our Naval Stores from Russia in our own Shipping; whereas now we have almost all those Stores brought us from Sweden, and in Swedish Ships; by which this Nation suffers several Ways. As we give the Swedes a greater Price for Naval Stores, than they can be bought for in Russia, the Nation loseth all the Freight we pay the Swedes. The Swedes take little of our Manufactures, &c.

Mr. Styke adds this Passage, that when the late Sir Gilbert Heathcote, then Mr. Heathcote, Master of the Eastland Company, was at a Meeting of that Company with the Czar in LONDON, and knowing how averse the Priests in Russia were to the Taking of Tobacco, he mentioned it as like to prove an Impediment to the Trade in his Dominions; but the Czar reply'd, He would do well enough with them when he went home.

The Eastland Company: sometime called Merchants of ELBING.

THE Company of Merchants trading to the English Country, called commonly in Queen Elizabeth's Time, the Merchants of Elbing, because there they first seated themselves, became incorporated by the said Queen Elizabeth. Elbing oweth a great Part of its Beauty and Splendour, and the great Resort of People to it, to the Commerce and Trade of the English. In the said Town is yet to be seen, in a publick Hall, the Coat of Arms of an English Agent, as a grateful Remembrance of the Trade brought thither by this Nation: But the Place having but a small River coming up to it, and being found not so commodious as other Places in those Parts, the Merchants have long since left it, and removed themselves to Dantzick, Koningsburg, Riga, and other Towns.

THIS Company (by the Name of Governor, Assistants and Fellowship of the Merchants of England) were first incorporated by Queen Elizabeth's Charter, dated August the 17th, Anno Regni 21, with Liberty to Trade from any of her Majesty's Dominions through the Sounds, into the Realms, Dominions, Dukedoms, Countries, Cities and Towns of Norway, Sweden, Poland, Littaw, Liesland, and Prussen, with the Territories of the same; also Pomerland from the River of Odera Eastwards, with Ryga, Revel, Konningsburgh, Elbing, Brownsborough, Dantzick, Copenhagen, and Elsenore, Finland, Gotland, Ewland, and Burntholme, or any of them; the Narve excepted, that Port being within the Charter of the Russia Company.

AND by the Charter, the said Eastland Company, and the Hamburg Company, may severally Trade with all Denmark: The Trade to Copenhagen and Elsenore, and with Mackleburgh, Jutland, Slesia, Moravia, Lubeck, Wismer, Rostock, Stetin, Strael-sound, and the whole River of Odera.

THIS Company was confirmed by the Charter of King Charles II. dated the 20th of February, Anno Regni 13.

BUT by a late Act of Parliament, Norway and Sweden were left free for any to Trade to, though not of this Company.

THIS Company is found very advantageous to the Publick, by their great Trade, in transporting of our own Commodities, and importing great Quantities of rich Merchandizes. Our Commodities exported are Woolen Cloths, Kersies, Sergies, Perpatuanes, Norwich Stuffs, Cotton, Lead, Tinn, Pewter, Hats, Stockings, together with several other of the Southern and Eastern Commodities: And for these they import Deals, Mafts, Timber, Oars, Clapboards, Balks, Bomspars, Cantspars, Pipestaves, Wainscot and Quarters; also Flax, Hemp, Linnen-Cloth, Cordage, Cable-Yarn, rich Furs, Bees-Wax, Sturgeon, Stockfish, with several other Commodities.

THE Atchievement belonging to this Company is thus blazoned: Or, on a Point wavy, a Ship under Sail proper: On a Chief Gules, a Lyon, Passant Gardant. And for their Crest; on a Helmet and Wreath of their Colours an Ark, on which stands a Raven with displayed Wings, or as some vary it, an Elke proper. The Supporters are; two Bears Sable. Their Motto; Despair not.

FOR the Management of the Affairs of this Company, they have a Governor, Deputy Governor, and Court of Assistants, consisting of 24, annually chosen out of the said Fellowship in the Month of October, viz. the first Wednesday after Michaelmas-Day; and have their Meetings to keep Courts Monthly, or as Occasion requires, at Founders Hall in Lothbury.

Nathaniel Tenche, Esq; a very grave, intelligent and worthy Citizen and Merchant, who had been for Alderman; was for many Years their Governor, and so remained to his Death.

WHILE he was Governor, there being an Endeavour to lay open the Trade of the Woolen Manufacture to every one that would, so injurious to this as well as other incorporated Societies of Merchants; he wrote and published in the Year 1689, a very rational Tract against it, tho' modestly without his Name set to it; it was Entitled, Reasons, humbly offered by the Governor and Assistants, and Fellowship of Eastward Merchants, against the giving a general Liberty to all Persons whatsoever, to export English Woolen Manufacture, whither they please: It was occasioned by a dangerous Misapprehension, that a general Liberty to all Persons to export the said Manufactures where they pleased, would conduce much to the Interest of the Nation, under a Supposition that it would encrease the Vent thereof: The Error whereof this learned Merchant shewed, by undertaking to prove these Assertions, or Affirmations:

I. That a general Permission of Exportation, as before mention'd, would be a Means to debase the Reputation of our English Manufacture, and consequently render it less desirable and sought after abroad.

II. It would overthrow all the incorporated Companies of Merchants in England, as the Hamburg and Russia, (tho establish'd by Parliament) the Eastland, the Turkey, the East-Indian, and the African; the Mischief consequential upon which would be as followeth: First, The Trade of England would thereby be lost, and come to be all, or at least the greater Part, in the Hands of Foreigners; as it formerly was before the said Companies were erected. Secondly, All the Privileges obtained by the said Companies from the Princes, States and Governors of the Places of their respective Residences, (which are of great Advantage to the vending of our English Manufactures) would be utterly lost. Thirdly, The Navigation of England by degrees would be very much impaired and discouraged.

III. And lastly, A general Permission would be so far from answering the End proposed by it, of vending a greater Quantity of our Woolen Manufacture than was before; that in all Probability it would in the End prove the Cause, and be the Occasion of vending a great deal less;

IN this Treatise against a general Permission of Traders, the Writer set down what he found recorded under Queen Elizabeth, viz. That the English in her Reign, had for a good while together a profitable Trade, and good Sale for their English Manufactures, at Narve in the Baltick-Sea, until at length in the Year 1565, a Number of straggling Merchants, and unskilful Traders, resorted thither out of this Realm, with their Commodities; by which Means in a little while the Trade, which before was good, was utterly spoiled: Infomuch that many of them went about the Town with Cloths upon their Arms, and a Measure in their Hand; and so Sold the same by the Arfine (a Measure of that Country) to the great Embasing of that excellent Commodity, the Discredit of our Nation, and the final Impoverishment and utter Undoing of the same straggling Merchants. All which being made known to her Majesty, and her Privy-Council, Order was taken at the next Parliament, that the Town of Narve, (then under the Jurisdiction of the Moscovite) should be comprised within the Charter of the Russia Company; to prevent the like ill Kind of Dealings for the future, and making vile the principal Commodity of the Nation: And it was so done accordingly by Act of Parliament.

THIS Gentleman was very instrumental in procuring the Act for the Enlargement of the Trade of the Russia Company, the Bill for which stuck a great while, the said Company opposing it vigorously, as infringing their Charters and Privileges: And who, after a full Hearing of their learned Lawyers in the House of Lords, made a Speech himself in Person, in Answer to all their Objections; and that with such an Evidence and Conviction of the Publick Benefit of this Bill that lay before them, that he carried the Cause, and the Bill passed. Which Speech, communicated by Sir Fisher Tenche, Bart. his Son, to Mr. Strype, was to this Tenor:

I Shall not trouble your Lordships with a Repetition of what was argued by the learned Council at the last Hearing before your Lordships, no further than is necessary to lead your Lordships to a better Understanding of what we shall further alledge on the Behalf of the Bill.

THE Intent of the Bill is for the enlarging of Trade to Russia, a Trade most certainly as capable of an Enlargement, as any Trade that is driven out of England: Whether we respect the Greatness of the Czar's Dominions, or the present Management of that Trade, in the Hands of those few Persons (being not at most above ten or twelve) who are at present the Managers of it.

THE Largeness of the Czar's Dominions is known to all, as also that the Coldness of the Climate, is proper for the Vent of our Woollen Manufactures, and the Commodities of our Plantations.

THAT those few Persons that have now the Trade, by Virtue of their Charter, neither do, nor can carry it on, by many Degrees, to the Extent it will admit, it is evident; for their Stock (tho' some of them are able Men) is no Way adequate to the carrying that Trade to its full Extent. And that they do not, appeareth by the great Difference of the Shipping that is employed thither by us and our Neighbours: For in the Year 1697 there were at Archangel only 50 Sail of Ships; of which there were but 6 or 7 English at the most. And whereas they alledge, that the Trade at present is carry'd on to its full Extent, and bring for Proof, that they have more Goods there than they can vend, it is no more than what all Merchants have where-ever they Trade: And doth from hence arise, not that the Country will not take off more Goods, but that they being few in Number, can agree together to set what Price they please upon them.

BUT I shall not further insist upon this, but confine myself to two Arguments which the Council either wholly omitted, or slightly insisted upon, and then endeavour to remove that great Objection they seem to insist so much upon; as, that the pressing of this Bill is an Invasion of their Property, vested in them by Act of Parliament; which we doubt not to prove to your Lordships is no such Thing.

THE first Argument we do insist upon, is the Matter of the Petition, as to the late Contract made with the Czar, to import Tobacco into his Dominions.

THERE being a Bill depending in the Honourable House of Commons, to open and enlarge the Russia Trade, upon an easy Admission, divers Merchants and others took the Opportunity of the Czar's being in England, to attain, if possible, what had been long desired; but could as yet, by no Endeavours, be obtained, viz. the sole Trade of carrying Tobacco to Russia, and selling it there. A Privilege it is of that vast Advantage to this Nation, that it would take up too much of your Lordships Time to set it forth in its several Branches. For, besides the venting of so great a Quantity of our own Growth and Manufactures (for I look upon the Growth of our Plantations to be equally such as what grows here in England) it will contribute to the enlarging of our Navigation, both as to the importing from one Plantation so great a Quantity over and above what is now imported for England, as the large Extent of Russia will take off; so likewise by Consequence, the bringing of a much greater Quantity of Goods from Russia, as the Produce of it; which being, as we call them, Gruff Goods, will take up a very great Quantity of Shipping to bring them hither; and thereby very much enlarge our Navigation; which renders it in every Respect very advantageous to this Nation.

To which may be added, the Manner how this great Advantage to the Nation was obtained. In which may be observed, that what in all Probability could not have been obtained by an industrious Application, in a splendid Embassy to a great Expence, was flung into our Laps by a Capricio of Fortune. For, may we not well stile it such, to see an Emperor of Russia here in England? and that what was endeavoured by our Neighbours with great Application, while he was with them, and was denied them, was by the Means of his Personal Estimation and Respect to one present, graciously conceded to us.

My Lords; when our late King Charles II. sent the Earl of Carlisle thither in a splendid Embassy, but to regain the Privileges the English Nation formerly had there; notwithstanding all the Expence and the wise Conduct of that noble Lord, he was forced to come away Re infecta. By which it appears, that the Russes are not so easy in their Concessions, as some may think. So that it may be truly said in this as in another Case, What Art could not, Chance hath obtained. And if by the flinging out of this Bill, this Opportunity should be now lost, in all Probability the greatest Industry and Application would never re-obtain it.

To which may be added, the Danger thereby of losing our whole Trade for Russia. For the Czar, by his Actions, seems to be a Person of Humour, (if we may have Leave to speak so of so great an Emperor) and we all know his Power is Despotick: His Will is his Law. So that should he be disappointed in what he believes is so fully agreed upon, he would look upon it as a Breach of Faith. And he who values himself so much upon his Word, would thereby be so far distast, as to forbid the whole Commerce of England with Russia: Which would not only be a great Advantage to our Neighbours, but an irreparable Loss to England in general; but in a more particular Manner to those Gentlemen, who now labour so much to have the Bill flung out; but, as we humbly conceive, do not sufficiently apprehend the Consequence thereof.

Then he proceeded to Arguments, drawn from the Advantages arising to our Navigation by the Opening and Enlargement of this Trade.

THAT the Wealth and Strength of this Kingdom is supported by our Navigation, no Man will deny, and consequently that whatsoever doth contribute to the rendering that most secure and easy, is our national Interest. That the opening and enlarging this Trade (which is the Purport of the Bill) doth contribute to the securing our Navigation, and rendering it most secure and easy, will appear in what followeth.

THAT we have not those Commodities, of Hemp, Pitch, Tarr, Masts and Plank (which are absolutely necessary to the carrying on of our Navigation) of our own Growth, no Man will deny. That we are at present supply'd with them from Sweden and Denmark, is evident: And that the same Commodities may be had, both in greater Quantities, and at easier Rates from the Empire of Russia, if there were Need, we are ready to make out by Proofs.

THAT the present Russia Company, doth not bring home these Commodities (some little Quantity of Hemp excepted) is likewise clear by their Entries at the Custom-House: Whereas the Hollanders and Hamburgers bring home every Year great Quantities, both of Masts, Pitch and Tarr.

THE last Year the Dutch had in their first Shipping, two Ships laden of Tarr, and their second Shipping, Masts; but we none at all.

WHEREAS our Merchants, being but ten or twelve, having other Commodities, which yield them more certain Profit, and are of themselves sufficient to employ all their Stock, do wholly neglect the bringing home of these necessary Com-

Commodities for the Support of our Navigation. And by such their Neglect, have given our Neighbours Opportunity to engross them; and to make Contracts with the Russes for the sole Trade in them. Which, as it is at present, very detrimental to this Nation, so in Time may become fatal to it.

FOR these necessary Commodities of Pitch, Tarr, Hemp, Masts and Plank, being to be had only from Denmark, Sweden, and Russia, if there should at any Time happen to be a War between the two Northern Crowns and this Kingdom, that, by Consequence, must necessarily obstruct our being supplied with them from thence. And then we have no Place left us, to be supplied with those Commodities, but Russia. In which Exigency, if this Bill doth not pass, we are clearly in the Hands of ten or twelve Persons for the said Supplies; who have already by the Neglect of Trade in those necessary Commodities, given our Neighbours Opportunities of engrossing them; and if they would then bring them home, could not. But were that Obstacle removed, if such an Exigency should happen, as a Difference with the Northern Crowns, Could it be expected, that so few Persons, as are at present in that Trade, with their small Stocks, should supply this Kingdom with naval Stores, sufficient to support our Navigation? So that it appears, it is absolutely necessary for our Self-Preservation, that the Bill pass, and the said Trade be opened and enlarged, thereby to secure us of those necessary Provisions for the Supply of our Navy, in Case of any War with the Northern Crowns.

To which Necessity I shall add one Word more of Conveniency, as to this Part of the Argument, and then conclude it.

WE at present labour under several Difficulties in our Commerce with Sweden. [Here the Paper of Grievances was read.] And we are now upon a Commercial Treaty with the Crown. If they come to understand, that by the Passing of this Bill, and Opening the Russia Trade, we are not under the same Dependencies upon them for our Naval Stores, as we hitherto have been, but that we can fetch them from Russia, and upon easier Terms than we do from them, they will then court our Friendship, and give us much easier Terms of Trade in our Commercial Treaty now on foot, than otherwise they will. But if they find that by the Rejecting of this Bill we are still under the same Dependencies upon them for those necessary Commodities, as we hitherto have been, they will then continue those Hardships upon us, if not lay greater.

Then he came to answer to the Objections of Property. This Bill doth not invade their Property, since it leaves them their Incorporation intirely. They are still, notwithstanding this Bill, an incorporated Company; their Laws, Rules, and Regulations, as to Trade, are intirely preserved to them; no Man can come into that Company, notwithstanding the Bill, but must come to them for their Admission, must take the Oath of the Corporation, must subject themselves to their Laws and Rules of Trade, must pay what Impositions they shall think fit to lay upon the whole Community, and thereby bear all Burthens relating to the Company, equal with themselves. True it is, that if this Bill did give Liberty to a free Trade thither, it might be construed an Invasion of their Property: But that is not the Case here; and so far it cannot be denied, their Property is preserved to them, notwithstanding the Bill passes.

BUT then it is objected, That this Bill is to compel them to admit Persons into their Freedom at the Fine of Forty Shillings; whereas they have by their Charter a Liberty, if they please, to exclude all Admission into their Freedom, save by Service and Patrimony, (as they not long since did by a By-Law of their own) or to set the Price of Admission at Sixty Pounds, (which they alledge they do at present); and this, they say, is an Invasion upon their Property. To which we answer,

THAT their being oblig'd by the Bill to admit Persons into their Freedom barely in itself, can by no Reason be said to be a Violation of their Property, since their Act of Parliament doth direct them (if not enjoin them) to that.

So that as before, a bare Obligation to an Admission cannot be said to be a Violation of their Property.

BUT then they object further, That the setting of their Fine of Admission at Forty Shillings, as the Bill doth, is a Violation of their Property. To which we answer,

THAT since there is no Sum specified, as the Fine for Admission, setting it at 40 s. is no more a Violation of their Property, than the setting it at 60 l. Because the Difference of the Sums can no way alter the Matter, as to their Property. For if the setting of the Fine be the Violation, whether it be 40, 50, or 60 l. the Violation is equal. But forasmuch as the Terms of Admission are not in the least expressed either in their Charter or Act of Parliament, the adjusting of the Fine of Admission, as is done in this Bill, can by no Means be said to be a Violation of their Property.

TRUE it is, That if their Fine of 50 or 60 l. had been expressed in their Act of Parliament, we must have admitted, that the lessening of it so little might have been interpreted a Violation of their Property. But this is not the Case here, the Act of Parliament hath vested them in a Property of no particular Sum, but a bare Power of Admission; which this Bill doth no way violate.

If they can pretend to any Thing of a Property in this Business of Admission, they must alledge that they have a Property to an arbitrary despotick Power; to admit, or not to admit, when they please; either to exclude all Purchasers, as they have confessed they did lately by a By-Law of their own; or to set what Sums they will upon them, either 50 or 60 l. or, if they please, 500 l. For being not restrained by a Law, they may set it at what they please. But we hope your Lordships are of Opinion, they have no arbitrary despotick Power vested in them, as a Property, by Act of Parliament; or if there was any such Thing, your Lordships would think it not only convenient, but necessary to regulate it. For, we humbly conceive it cannot well be allowed, that the Parliament would ever vest an arbitrary Power in any Company of Men whatsoever by Way of Property: But the Construction arising from the not expressing the Fine in the Act of Parliament, doth certainly lie much fairer on the contrary Side. For we appeal to your Lordships, which is the most rational Consequence from the not expressing the Fine, either that (as they would interpret it) they may lay what Fine they please, or (as it is most rational to believe) they should lay none at all, but admit gratis. For, by their having it in their Power to lay what they please, they may elude the Act by laying it so high as none will come to them. By the other, of admitting gratis, the Intention of the Act is secured. And which of these two Constructions are most rational, we submit to your Lordships.

BUT this, without Controversy, is clear and evident, that no Fine being prescribed, either in their Charter, or their Act, it is in the Power of this present Parliament, without Violation of Property, Property, to adjust the Fine (if any be to be taken) to what Sum they in their great Wisdom shall think fit: Which is the only Thing desired.

THIS was the Substance of what was spoken by the aforesaid Gentleman, before the Lords, June the 7th, 1698. He spoke also effectually to the same Arguments before the Lords at another Session, February 1, 1698-9, when the Bill passed.

MERCHANTS of Levant; or, Turkey MERCHANTS.

THE Company of Merchants of Levant, or more commonly termed Turkey Merchants, being first incorporated by Queen Elizabeth, were afterwards confirmed and enlarged by King James I.

THESE Merchants, by their Discoveries, made the first Trade into the Seignior of Venice, and then into the Territories of the Grand Seignior, including the Trade of the East-Indies, which then was unknown to us by Sea; their Goods being brought by Caravans of Camels to Aleppo and other Parts of Turkey. But since the Discovery of the Indies by Sea, there is another rich and potent Company of Merchants incorporated, trading thither; which is to be spoken of by and by. And this Company doth in a great Measure deprive this Turkey Company of all East-India Goods. Notwithstanding the Traffick of these Merchants is great and very considerable, exporting yearly about 30,000 Cloths, both dyed and dressed; also Kerfies, Lead, Tin, Pewter, Iron, Steel, Wire, Starch, Sugars, Hides, Elephants Teeth, Brazil, several East-India Commodities, as Spices, Callicoes, Logwood, Indico, Red and White Lead, and Pieces of Eight. And for these and the like are imported Raw Silk of several Sorts, Camblots, Grograins, Yarn, Mohairs of Angor, Wools, Cottons, Cotton-Yarn of Smyrna and Cyprus, Galls of Mosolo and Toccat, the Currants and Oils of Zant, Zephalonia, Morea, &c. the Druggs of Egypt and Arabia; also Turkey Carpets, Cordovants, Boxwood, Rhubarb, Wormseed, Sena, Cominseed, together with several other rich Commodities.

THIS Company was first incorporated in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, and confirmed by her Successors. They have several Privileges and Immunities granted them, as the making of By-Laws and Orders for the well-governing of the Society. They have Power to determine Controversies that may arise in the said Company, concerning their Trade, giving of Oaths, imposing of Fines, or Imprisonment of Offenders, the using of a Seal, and the bearing of a Coat of Arms. Which is thus blazoned: Azure, a Ship in full Sail, all proper, each Sail garnished with a Cross, Gules, in a Sea betwixt two Rocks, and a Chief ingrailed, Argent. Crest and Supporters they have none, neither a Motto.

THE Government is committed to a Governor, Deputy-Governor, and a Court of Assistants of Eighteen; who are Annually chosen by a general Consent, in the Month of February. They keep Court Monthly, or as Occasion requires, for the Management of the Companies Affairs; as to appoint Consuls, Vice-Consuls, Factors, &c. to such Places where their Factories are kept; as at Smyrna, Aleppo, Constantinople, Cyprus, &c. who are answerable to the said Company for what they do or act under them.

Out of this Company, seven discreet and able Persons are to be successively Trustees of an ample Estate, for the Maintenance of the College at Blackheath, founded by Sir John Morden, Bart.

some Time a Member of this Company, for the Reception of poor decayed Merchants: And to be Visitors of the said College Yearly, according to the said Morden's last Will and Testament, who died Anno 1708.

MERCHANTS of Spain.

THERE was a Company called, The Merchants of Spain; or, Spanish Merchants, incorporated by Queen Elizabeth; but these are now extinct.

MERCHANTS of EAST-INDIA.

THE Company of Merchants, called Merchants of East-India, were incorporated by Queen Elizabeth, in the 42d Year of her Reign, Anno Dom. 1600.

SINCE confirmed by her Successors, with several other Privileges added to their Charter, so that now they have ample Privileges and Immunities as any incorporated Company of Merchants whatsoever.

THIS Company is managed by Joint Stock, which makes them Potent, Rich, and Eminent; and is found several Ways beneficial to the Nation, as in their Building of Ships, in the Employing and Maintaining of many Hundreds, not only in their Shipping but in their Factories; to whom they allow good Salaries, and according as they are found Industrious and Ingenious, they are raised to a higher Degree, with larger Salaries: The like may be said of their Servants here at Home. Again, they are found very beneficial to the Nation, by their great Trade into the several Parts of India, China, Arabia, and Japan; Exporting, and Importing so many, and so great Quantities of rich Commodities.

COMMODITIES Exported; Broad-Cloths in a good Quantity, Perpetuanoes, Pieces of Eight, Dollars, Powder, Lead, Elephants Teeth, Amber, Looking-Glasses, Beads, Bracelets, Feathers, Coral, Quick-silver, Vermillion, Allum, Brimstone, Knives, Scissars, &c. And for these they import, Cotton, Cotton-Yarn, Spices, as Nutmegs, Cloves, Mace, Pepper, Cinnamon, &c. Muslin, Collicoes, Pintadoes of several Sorts, amongst which were some of excellent Workmanship; Sanders, Tamarins, Spikenard, Bezar-stone, Aloes, Myrrhe, Rhubarb, Opium, Frankincence, Cassia, Borax, Calamus, Green-Ginger, Sugars, Sugar-Candy, Camphire, Sandal-Wood, Benjamin, Rice, Indigo, Musk, Civet, Ambergrease, Silk both raw and wrought in divers Fabricks; many of which are exceeding curious and rich, with Sprigs and Flowers of Gold: Several Sorts of precious Stones, Pearl, Mother of Pearl, Christal, Cornelian Rings, Agats, Lacque, Furs, and Skins of Wild Beasts, Porcelane, Sealing-Wax, Copper, Coffee, Tea, curious Cabinets, Sanguis Draconis, China Roots, and China Wares of several Sorts, Salt-Petre, with divers Drugs and other Commodities too tedious to Name.

THE Arms belonging to this Company of Merchants is thus blazoned: Azure, three Ships under Sail, Or, each Sail garnished with a Cross of England, on a Chief, Or, between two Roses proper; an Additament out of the Arms of England, Quarterly; Azure and Gules, in the first and last a Flower de lis, Or, and in the second and third, a Lyon Passant and Gardant, of the same. And for their Crest; on a Wreath of their Colours, a Spkere, or Celestial Globe, between two Standards of St. George: And for their Supporters; two Sea Horses, or rather Lyons, Or an Azure. And for their Motto, above the Crest; Deus indicat: And below, Deo Ducente, nil nocet.

THIS Company, for the better Negotiation of their great Affairs, is governed by a Governor, Deputy,

Deputy, and Court of Assistants, consisting of 24, who about the Middle of April are Annually elected by Adventurers of the said Company, amongst which there must be eight New ones chosen; the rest may be again elected as also the Governor, and Deputy-Governor. And these accordingly meet at their House in Leadenball-street, now called the East-India-House; generally Weekly, and keep Courts for the Management of their Affairs, as the Vending their Goods, Making of Dividends, raising of Money, Viewing their Accounts from their Presidents, Factors, &c. Buying in of Goods, Setting forth Shipping, Sending over Factors and Servants; and for Ordering of Factories kept at Camboya, Bombay, Surat, Curwar, Baticale, Calicut, Fort St. George, Pentapoli, Masolipotan, Ougeley, Gonru, Ormus, with several other Factories in the Isles of Asia, in China, and Japan.

IN the Year 1690, there came forth a little Piece, called, A modest and just Apology for, or Defence of the Present East-India-Company, against the Accusations of their Adversaries. Wherein the Crimes alledged against them are fairly examined, the Calumnies confuted, and all submitted to the Judgment of impartial and unprejudiced Persons. This Tract was written (tho' no Name be set to it) by that discreet and knowing Merchant, Nathaniel Tenche, Esq; mention'd before; and was occasioned (as the Writer expresseth in the Beginning) by Calumnies daily inculcated in all noted Coffee-Houses, wherein this Company was not only set forth as Bankrupts, as to their present Condition, but represented as vile and odious as Malice itself could invent Aspersions thrown on them: Whereby the Enemies endeavour'd, not only to impose upon the unthinking Vulgar, but upon the Members of the Honourable House of Commons; and by putting Papers into their Hands, wherein were many things notoriously untrue. This was in order to the Compassing of an Endeavour now made for a New East-India Company; and new Subscriptions with a Preamble were printed; and the very Terms of an Act of Parliament for that Purpose, propounded to the Legislative Power of the Nation, King, Lords, and Commons.

THIS was chiefly set on Foot and managed against the Company, by those they called Interlopers; who Traded into the Places of their Privileges, and were not Free of the said Company; whose Ships and Goods the Company stopped, and used other Ways and Means to hinder their Trade.

THERE was afterwards a New East-Indian Company set up by Act of Parliament, whereby the Old was to be dissolved after some Years; which might suffice to bring forth their Effects: But after much Endeavour and Meetings of Persons appointed out of both Companies, to confer and concert Matters, they were both amicably United into one. This new Company held at first their Meetings at Skinners-Hall, but now, and for some Years past, they have been held at their House in Leadenball-street. They have a Governor, Deputy-Governor, and 24 Directors, to manage the Companies Affairs; elected Annually in the Month of April.

IN short, the Trade to the East-Indies lay open from the Year 1653 to 1657; then this Method of private Trade, proved so very Destructive to the several private Traders thither, that the governing Power at that Time, found it necessary to unite them all into one joint Company, with a joint Stock. But in the Year 1698, an Act of Parliament was obtained, for laying the Trade open in a Method of a regulated Company: But upon Trial, the separate Traders, who procured that Act, found it necessary to unite themselves, so as to trade only with one Joint Stock. And tho' there was seemingly an irreconcilable Contest between the New and Old Company, yet both of them became so sensible of the destructive Consequences of Trading by a divided Interest, that they are now happily joined into one Company again, having the same Joint Stock, Interest and Design.

THE East-India Company export great Quantities of Bulloin, Lead, English Cloth, and some other Goods, the Product or Manufacture of this Kingdom; and import from China and India, Tea, China-Ware, Cabinets, raw and wrought Silks, Coffee, Muslins, Callicoes, and other Cotton-Cloths; of which Josbua Gee, in his Book of Trade, supposes they sell as much to Foreigners as repays all the Bulloin Shipped for India, and leaves us besides a considerable Ballance upon that Trade.

Bengal raw Silk, he observes, is bought at very low Prices there, and is very useful in carrying on the Manufactures of this Kingdom.

China Silk is of excellent Staple, and comes at little above one Third of the Price of Italian Piedmont Silk: The Duty of Bengal raw Silk being one Third more, and China near three Times as much as that of Italy, hinders our being supply'd so fully as we ought, and is of great Damage to the Nation; for we pay the Savoyards all ready Money for what we have from them, which as effectually drains us of our Bulloin as the India or China Trade does, with this Aggravation, that almost three Pounds of China Silk may be purchas'd for the Money that one Pound of Piedmont Silk cost us.

ALTHO' Silver is not sent out directly to Piedmont as it is to India, yet, in Fact, it is the same Thing; for the Ballance of some other Trade is carried thither, which otherwise would be remitted to us.

THE Silk of China will answer in most Respects the Use of Italian Silk, provided we could be supply'd with the fine raw Silk of which they make their Damasks, Sattins, and other fine Manufactures, which by the Curiosity of those Silks, must come up to the Goodness of Italian Silk.

THE China Silk that we commonly receive is purchas'd at Canton, the nearest Port we trade to in China; but their fine Silk is made in the Provinces of Nankin and Chekiam, where their fine Manufactures are carried on, and where prodigious Quantities of raw Silk are made, and the best in all China: We have never imported any of the Superfine here, but two or three Ships have brought extraordinary good, the best of which, we are inform'd, was brought from Amoy; and doubtless if Encouragement was given for the Importation of that fine Silk, it might be thrown here, and our Manufactures carried on at a small Expence to the Nation.

It may not be improper to insert in this Place the following Abstracts of the several Charters granted to the East-India Companies.

An ABSTRACT of the CHARTER granted by his Majesty King CHARLES II. to the EAST-INDIA COMPANY, under the Great Seal of England, the third Day of April, in the Year 1661, and the 30th of that Prince's Reign.

CHARLES II. by the Grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all to whom these Presents shall come greeting: Whereas our well-beloved Subjects, the Governor and Company of Merchants trading to the East-Indies have been a long Time a Corporation, to the Honour and Profit of this Nation, and have enjoy'd, and do still enjoy divers Liberties, Privileges and Immunities, by Virtue of Letters Patents and Charters, heretofore granted them, by our our late Royal Progenitors, Queen Elizabeth, and King James of Blessed Memory. But of late, divers Disorders have been committed, as well by our own Subjects as by Foreigners, to the great Detriment and Interruption of the Trade of the said Company, they having humbly besought us to confirm their Charters, and to grant and allow some Alterations and Additions, tending to the Benefit and Advancement of their Traffick:

Know ye, That we taking the Premises into our Royal Consideration, and well considering how much it imports this our Realm, the Grievances of the said Corporation be redressed, the better to remove all Incumbrances and Inconveniencies that may have hitherto obstructed their Trade; have granted and confirmed unto the said Governor and Company, for Us, our Heirs and Successors, that they from henceforth be, and for ever shall be, one Body Corporate and Politick; in Deed and in Name, by the Name of the Governor and Company of Merchants of LONDON trading to the East-Indies. And we do ordain, That by the Name aforesaid, they shall have perpetual Succession, and that they and their Successors by the said Name, be now and at all Times hereafter, Persons able and capable in Law, and a Body Corporate and Politick, capable in Law, to have, purchase, receive, possess, enjoy and retain Lands, Rents, Privileges, Liberties, Jurisdictions, Franchises and Hereditaments, of what Kind, Nature and Quality soever they be, to them and their Successors; and also to give, grant, devise, alien, assign, and dispose of Lands, Tenements and Hereditaments, and to do and execute all and singular other Things, by the same Name that to them shall or may appertain to do: And that they and their Successors, by the said Name, may plead and be impleaded, answer and be answered, defend and be defended, in whatsoever Courts and Places, and before whatsoever Judges and Justices, and other Persons and Officers, in all and singular Action, Pleas, Suits, Quarrels, Causes, and Demands whatsoever, of whatsoever Kind, Nature or Sort, in such Manner and Form, as any other of our Liege People of this our Realm of England, being Persons able and capable in Law, may or can have, purchase, receive, possess, enjoy, retain, give, grant, devise, alien, assign, dispose, plead, defend and be defended, release and be released, do permit and execute. And we also grant and allow, that the said Company and their Successors, under the Name aforesaid, may have a Common Seal, and may likewise break and alter the same at their Pleasure.

And further we ordain, That the said Company shall elect one of the Members thereof to be their Governor, and twenty-four of the said Members to be Committees, who shall have the Direction of the Voyages of and for the said Company, and the Provision of the Shipping, and Merchandizes thereunto belonging; and also the Sale of all Merchandizes, Goods, and other Things returned, in all or any of the Voyages and Ships, of or for the said Company, and the managing and handling of all other Business, Affairs and Things belonging to the said Company. And we ordain, that the said Governor and Company shall be ruled and ordered as is hereafter expressed, and not otherwise; and that they shall likewise enjoy the Liberties, Privileges and Immunities herein specified, and no other. And for the better Execution of our said Will and Grant in this Behalf, we nominate, constitute and appoint, Sir Andrew Riccard to be the first and present Governor, and George Lord Berkley, Sir John Lewes, Sir William Thomson, Sir Richard Ford, Sir James Drax, Sir John Fred- rick, Sir Theophilus Biddulph, Sir William Vincent, Sir Thomas Bludworth, Sir William Ryder, Sir Stephen White, and Sir George Smith, Knts. William Love, Esq; William Williams, John Jolliffe, Peter Middleton, Thomas Kendal, Maurice Thomson, Samuel Moyer, Christopher Boone, Francis Clerk, John Mascall, Thomas Pearle, and Christopher Willoughby, Gentlemen, to be the twenty-four first and present Committees for the said Company, from the Date of these Presents, until the 10th Day of April, then also next following; and so until new Committees shall be chosen in Form hereafter expressed. And further we will and ordain, that the said Governor and Company, at any General Court, may elect a Deputy Governor, who shall take an Oath before the Governor, and five or more of the Committees for the Time being, well, faithfully and truly to execute his said Office of Deputy to the Governor of the said Company. And the said Governor and Company shall have Power Yearly, between the 10th and the last Day of April, to meet and to elect a Governor for one whole Year, who shall take an Oath before the last Governor, or his Deputy, and six or more of the Committees, that he shall well and truly execute the Office of Governor of the said Company; and in like Manner, every Member of the said Company, before their Admission into it, shall take an Oath before the Governor of the said Company, or his Deputy, to such Effect, as by the said Governor and Company, or the greater Part of them in any Court, to be held for the said Company, shall be in a reasonable Manner devised.

And further we will and grant, That the said Governor or Deputy Governor, and the Company or their Successors, for the Time being, may meet Yearly, between the 10th and the last of April, and elect twenty-four Committees for the Year ensuing, who shall, before their Admission into their said Stations, take an Oath before the Governor or his Deputy, and five more of the last Committees, their immediate Predecessors, that they shall truly and faithfully execute their said Office of Committees.

And further we will and grant, That upon the Death or Removal of the Governor of the said Company (which Governor not demeaning himself well in his Office, we will to be removable at the Pleasure of the said Company, or the greater Part of them, at any of their General Courts) the Residue of the said Company, or the greater Part of them, may elect another Governor, who shall exercise the said Office during the Residue of the Year, having first taken an Oath, as aforesaid, for the due Execution thereof. And in like Manner, any of the Committees dying or being removed (which Committees not demeaning themselves well, may be removed at the Pleasure of the Governor and Company at any of their General Meetings) the Governor, or his Deputy, and Company for the Time being, may elect and nominate one or more of the said Company, to be Committee or Committees of the said Company, in the Place and Stead, or Places and Steads of him or them of the former Committees so dying or removed; which Person or Persons so elected shall take an Oath (as aforesaid) for the Right and due Execution of their aforesaid Office or Offices.

And further we will and grant, That the Sons, Factors and Servants of the Members of the said Company, that are of one and twenty Years of Age and above, may freely trade in any Part of Asia, Africa, and America, beyond the Cape of Good Hope, to the Streights of Magellan, in such Manner as shall be agreed to at any General Court, and not otherwise.

AND

AND we further will and grant, That the said Governor, or his Deputy, and the said Company may assemble in any Place to hold Court, and there make Laws for the Government and Management of their Trade, and may impose Penalties on Offenders, and may levy the same without any Account, so as the said Penalties be reasonable, and not contrary to Law.

AND also we will and grant, That the said Governor and Company of Merchants, and their Agents, Factors and Assigns shall have six Months Time for the Payment of one Half, and six Months Time longer for the Payment of the other Half of all Duties, Poundage, Customs, and Subsidies, for all Manner of Goods; they, the said Governor and Company of Merchants, always giving sufficient Bond, with Surety, for the Payment thereof at the Terms aforesaid. And when any Goods exported from England, for which the said Governor and Company have paid the Custom here, or given Bond for the Payment thereof, shall happen to miscarry, or be lost, before their safe Arrival at the Ports for which they were designed; due Proof being made thereof before the Treasurer of England, the Duties paid for such Goods shall be deducted out of the Duties of the first Goods shipp'd off afterwards for the said Company's Account.

AND further we grant unto the said Governor and Company, That it shall be lawful for them and their Successors, or any the natural Subjects of this our Realm which may or shall buy any East-India Goods by them imported, to transport the same in English Bottoms freely out of this Realm, without paying any further Duties than those that were paid at the Entry, provided the said Goods be exported within the Space and Term of thirteen Months.

AND moreover, We grant to the said Governor and Company, That it shall be lawful for them to transport in their Voyages all such foreign Coin of Silver, Spanish or other foreign Silver or Bulloin of Silver, as they shall bring or cause to be brought into this Realm of England from the Parts beyond the Seas, either in the same Kind, Sort, Stamp or Fashion which it shall have when they bring it in, or in any other Form, Stamp or Fashion to be coined in our Mint within our Tower of LONDON, at their Pleasure, so as the whole Quantity transported exceed not Fifty Thousand Pound in one Voyage.

AND we further will and grant, That the Company and their Successors shall have and enjoy the whole and entire Trade to the East-Indies; and in any Time of Restraint they may send six good Ships and six good Pinnaces well furnished with Ordnance and other Munition for their Defence, and 500 Mariners, Englishmen, to guide and sail in the said six Ships and six Pinnaces; except when we having just cause to arm our Navy in warlike Manner, in Defence of our Realm, or for Offence of our Enemies, or that it should be found needful to join to our Navy the Ships of our Subjects to be also armed for the Wars, to such a Number as cannot be supplied if the said six Ships and six Pinnaces should be permitted to depart; then, upon Knowledge given by us or our Admiral to the said Governor and Company, about the 20th Day of July, or three Months before the said Governor and Company shall begin to make ready the said six Ships and Pinnaces; then they forbear to send the same, till we shall recal or withdraw our Navy from the Service against our Enemies.

AND further, we prohibit and forbid all our other Subjects to visit or trade into the East-Indies, unless by Licence from the said Governor and Company, upon Pain of Forfeiture of Ship and Goods, one Half to us, and the other Half to the Company, and the Offenders to suffer Imprisonment during our Pleasure, and such other Punishment as we shall think fit to inflict on them.

AND further, We have granted and condescended, That the said Governor and Company may give Licence, under their Common Seal, to any Person or Persons to sail, trade or traffick into or from the East-Indies, upon some Consideration or Benefit by them to be given. And we, our Heirs or Successors shall not give nor grant any such Licence to any Person or Persons without their Consent.

And also the said Governor and Company, at any General Court (as abovesaid) may admit into their Freedom all such Persons as they shall think fit.

AND further, The said Governor and Company do, by these Presents, for themselves and their Successors, promise and covenant to and with us, that within six Months after every Return from every Voyage (the first Voyage only excepted) they shall bring into this Realm from the East-Indies, or from other Parts beyond the Seas, as great or greater Quantity of Bullion, Gold or Silver, respectively for every Voyage, as that which by Virtue of our Letters Patents they exported. And that all the Silver which shall be by them or their Successors transported out of our Dominions, shall be shipp'd off at the Port of LONDON, being first duly enter'd without Custom or Subsidy, as likewise what shall be imported.

PROVIDED always, and our Will and Pleasure is, That these our Letters Patents and Charters shall not give the said Company Leave to trade to any Place already in the Possession of any Christian Prince in League and Amity with us, who shall overtly declare against it.

PROVIDED also, That if we find this Grant unprofitable for us or our Realm, then after three Years Warning the same is to cease, charging all our Admirals and other Officers to be aiding thereunto, &c.

IN witness whereof we have caused these our Letters to be made Patents. Witness ourself at Westminster the third Day of April, in the thirteenth Year of our Reign.

An ABSTRACT of the CHARTER granted by his Majesty King JAMES II. to the EAST-INDIA Company, under the Great Seal of England, the 12th Day of April, in the Year 1686, and the Second of that Prince's Reign.

JAMES II. by the Grace of God, of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all to whom these Presents shall come, Greeting. Whereas our well beloved Subjects, the Governor and Company of Merchants trading to the East-Indies, have been of long Time a Corporation, to the Honour and Profit of this Nation, and have enjoyed, and do still enjoy divers Liberties, Privileges, and Immunities, by Virtue of Letters Patents and Charters heretofore granted them by our late Royal Progenitors and Predecessors; Queen Elizabeth and King James. And whereas the late King Charles II. our dearly beloved Brother, of ever blessed Memory, did by his Royal Charter, dated at Westminster the third Day of April, in the thirteenth Year of his Reign, confirm the said precedent Charters and Patents, and grant, That the said Governor and Company should be for ever a Body Corporate and Politick, in Name and in Deed; and that their Sons, Apprentices and Servants might for ever freely trade and merchandize to and from India, by the Ways then and thereafter to be discovered, in such Manner as should at any General Court (the Governor or his Deputy being always one) be limited and agreed to; any Statute, &c. to the contrary notwithstanding; so as they trade not to any Place in the lawful Possession of any Christian Prince or State in League or Amity with this Nation, that would not accept of such Trade, but openly declare against it.

AND further the said King did thereby for himself, his Heirs and Successors, grant unto the said Governor and Company for themselves and their Successors, that they should for ever enjoy the whole and entire Trade of the Indies; and that no Part of the said Indies should be frequented and visited by any of his Majesty's Subjects. And his said Majesty did also by his Prerogative Royal, straightly prohibit all his Subjects from Trading into the said Indies, other than the said Governor and Company, their Factors and Servants; &c. except by Licence obtained of them, under their Common Seal; under the Penalties, Pains, and Forfeitures, in the said Letters Patents, at large expressed.

AND whereas the said late King Charles II. by his Royal Charter, or Letters Patents dated at Westminster the 27th Day of March, in the 20th Year of his Reign, by the Advice of his Privy-Council, in all the Grants and Matters therein; did grant, transfer, and confirm for himself, his Heirs, and Successors, unto the said Governor and Company, all the Port and Island of Bombay, by the East-Indies, with all the Rights, Profits, Territories, and Appurtenances, thereof whatsoever, and all the singular Royalties, Revenues, Rents, Customs, Castles, Forts, Buildings and Fortifications, Privileges, Franchises, Preheminences, and Hereditaments whatsoever, within the Premises, or to them or any of them belonging, or any ways appertaining in as large and ample Manner, to all Intents, Constructions and Purposes, as the said late King then had enjoy'd the same, or might or ought to have had and enjoy'd the same, by Virtue and Force of the Grant of the then King of Portugal, and not further or otherwise. And them the said Governor and Company, did make and constitute the absolute Proprietors thereof, always reserving unto himself, his Heirs and Successors, the Faith and Allegiance to him due and belonging, and his Royal Power and Sovereignty of and over his Subjects there: To have, hold, possess, and enjoy, the said Port and Island, and all, and singular the Premises therein before granted, or mentioned to be granted unto the said Governor and Company, their Successors and Assigns, and to the only Use of them for evermore; to be holden of him the said late King, his Heirs, and Successors, as of his Manor of East-Greenwich, in the County of Kent, in Free and Common Soccage, and not in Capite, or by the Knights Service; yielding and paying therefore to him the said late King, his Heirs and Successors, at the Custom-House, LONDON, the Rent and Sum of 10 l. of good and lawful Money of England in Gold, on the 30th Day of September Yearly, for ever. And the said late King did, by his said Charter, also grant them; and order, that they should enjoy in the said Island, all the Privileges and Advantages that they might enjoy in the other Parts of India, by Virtue of his said Majesty's former Patent, dated the 3d Day of April, in the 13th Year of his Reign, in as large and ample Manner, as if particularly expressed in the second recited Charter or Letters Patents. And whereas the said late King, by his Charter dated the 5th of October, in the 28th Year of his Reign, did confirm all Rights formerly granted the said Company, notwithstanding any former Mis-user, Non-user, or Abuser thereof whatsoever. And whereas the said late King, by his Royal Charter dated the 16th Day of December, in the 25th Year of his Reign, did grant unto the said Company, the Island of St. Helena, with all and singular the Rights, Profits, Territories, and Appurtenances whatever; and all the Soil, Lands, Fields, Woods, Mountains, Farms, Lakes, Pools, Harbours, Rivers, Bays, Isles, Islets, situate or being within the Bounds or Limits thereof; with the Fishing of all Sorts of Fish, Whales, Sturgeons, and all other Royal Fishes in the Bays, Islets, or Rivers, within the same Premises, and the Fish therein taken, and all the Veins, Mines, and Quarries, as well Royal Mines, as other Mines, whether the same were then discovered, or not discovered; and also all Gold, Silver, Jems, and precious Stones, and and all other whatsoever, be it of Stones, Metals, or any thing whatsoever then found, or to be found, within the Veins, Mines, and Quarries, of the same Island and Premises; with all and singular Royalties, Revenues, Rents, Customs, Castles, Forts and Buildings, then erected, or to be erected. And whereas the said late King did create and constitute the said Company, absolute Lords and Proprietors of the said Island (always reserving the Faith and Allegiance of the Inhabitants) to the only Use of the said Company, to be holden of the said late King, his Heirs and Successors, as of the Manor [of East-Greenwich, in Free and Common Soccage; not in Capite, nor by Knight's Service, as in and by the said Letters Patents, may fully appear.

AND

AND whereas the same late King, by his Royal Charter, dated the 9th of August, in the 35th Year of his Reign, did erect a Court of Judicature to be holden as the Company should direct, to determine all Cases of Forfeitures and Seizures of Ships, as also all Causes Mercantile and Maritime, and all Trespasses upon the High-Sea, or any of the Region and Territories, Countries or Places, therein for that Purpose mentioned, concerning any Person or Persons residing, being or coming into the Parts of Asia, Africa, and America, within the Bounds and Limits therein mentioned; all which Cases shall be Judged and Determined by that Court, upon due Examination and Proof, according to the Customs of Merchants, and the Rules of Equity and good Conscience; and by such Methods, as the said late King should direct, under his Great or Privy-Seal, and for Want thereof, as the Judges of the said Court should think meet; and all Judgments, Determinations and Decrees of that Court, were to be put in Writing, and signified to the Persons that were present at the making of them, and should contain a short State of the Matter of Fact, as it appeared to them, and their Sentence and Adjudication thereupon; as in and by the aforesaid Charter and Letters Patents, doth and may more fully appear.

AND whereas several Persons, in Contempt of the first recited Letters Patents, have presumed (without Licence) to send out Ships, and to trade within the Limits comprized in the said Charter; to the great Damage of the said Company, and the manifest Hazard of ruining of that Trade; whereupon the said Governor and Company have humbly besought us to grant and confirm the said Charters, with some Additions. Now well weighing how highly it imports the Honour and Welfare of this Realm, that those Disorders should be redressed, and that Trade improved to the utmost; that the said Company may be encouraged by all lawful Assistance, in that difficult and hazardous Trade: Know ye, that we taking the Premises into our Royal Consideration, have of our special Grace, &c. ratified and confirmed, and by these Presents, for Us, our Heirs and Successors, do ratify and confirm unto the said Governor and Company, and their Successors for ever, all the said Charters and Letters Patents, and all and singular the Rights, Grants, Liberties, Covenants, Franchises, Preheminences and Authorities, in all the said Charters, or any of them comprized, as fully to all Intents and Purposes, as if every distinct Right, Grant, Power, Liberty, Covenant, Franchise, Preheminence and Authority, comprized in the said Letters Patents, were herein recited, and hereby confirmed separately and apart by itself. And further we establish to them, all such and the like Liberties and Privileges, as ever they had; with Power to the said Company, their Presidents, &c. to administer the Freeman's Oath, and such other lawful Oath, as the Court shall direct. And we do further erect and establish a Court of Judicature, at such Places as they shall appoint; which Court shall consist of one Person learned in Civil Law, and two Merchants, who (or the Major Part of them, the Civilian being always one) shall have Power to determine of all Forfeitures, Seizures, &c. and all Causes Mercantile or Maritime, and all Trespasses on the High-Seas, or any of the Regions, aforesaid, according to the Customs of Merchants, and the Rules of Equity and Good Conscience, and according to such Methods of Proceeding as we shall appoint; and in Default thereof, by such ways as they shall think fit, all which Judgments and Determinations, &c. shall be put in Writing, according to the Manner prescribed in the Letters Patents of the said late King Charles II. as aforesaid.

AND whereas the said late King did grant the said Company Power to appoint Governors of Forts, Castles, Factories, &c. to raise Arms, train and muster what military Forces to them should seem requisite, We do hereby confirm the same. And further, understanding that many of the native Princes, taking Advantage of the late licentious Trading, and the evil Consequences thereof, have violated many of the Company's Privileges and Liberties, for which they intend to demand Satisfaction in a peaceable Way; and if not that Way attainable, to use Force of Arms for recovering of their Loss: We do therefore grant them full Power to appoint Admirals, Vice-Admirals, Rear-Admirals, Captains, and other Sea-Officers, from Time to Time, in all or any Ship or Ships, serving the said Company in the East-Indies, within the Limits of any of the above recited Charters; who have hereby Power to raise, train and muster Seamen or others, and to execute Martial Law, beyond the Cape of Good Hope, reserving to ourselves Power to revoke this Grant touching Martial Law.

AND further by these Presents, we give the said Company Power to coin any Species of Money usually coined by the Princes of those Countries, so as it be agreeable to their Standards in Weight and Fineness, and that they coin not any European Money.

AND lastly, we strictly charge and command all our Admirals, and all other our Officers whatsoever, to be aiding and assisting to the said Governor and Company, in executing and enjoying the Premises; and, finally, our Will and Pleasure is, that these our Letters Patents shall be construed in the most favourable Manner on Behalf of the Company that can be, any Statute, Act, Proclamation or Restriction, or any other Thing to the contrary, in any wise notwithstanding. In Witness whereof, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patents. Witness Our selves at Westminster the 12th Day of April, in the second Year of Our Reign.

An ABSTRACT of the CHARTER of REGULATIONS granted to the EAST-INDIA COMPANY by their Majesties King WILLIAM and Queen MARY, under the Great Seal of England, Sept. 28, 1694, in the 6th Year of their Majesties Reign.

WILLIAM and Mary by the Grace of God of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, King and Queen, Defenders of the Faith, &c. To the Governor and Company of Merchants trading to the East-Indies, and to all others to whom these Presents shall come greeting. Whereas by our Charter dated the 7th of October 1693, we did appoint Sir Thomas Cook, Kt. Francis Tyssen, Esq; and others, to be a Body Corporate and Politick in Deed and in Name, by the Name of The Governors and Company of Merchants of LONDON trading to the East-Indies, under the Proviso's therein mention'd; and did grant them and their Successors divers Liberties, Privileges and Powers, &c. with a Clause, "That if the said Governor and Company should not comply with and accept of such farther Regulations and Restrictions as by Us, our Heirs and Successors, with the Advice of our Privy Council, be made and proposed at any Time between the 29th of September 1694, and put under the Great Seal of England, then the said Charter should be revokable, and immediately after passing of Letters of Revocation under the Great Seal of England, the Powers, Privileges and Grants therein contained should be void and cease." And whereas by our Charter, dated the 11th of November last, several Regulations and Restrictions, &c. have been proposed pursuant to the said Proviso, and that the said Proviso has been renewed and repeated, viz. "That the Company not conforming themselves, and acting in every Thing according to the Regulations and Restrictions, &c. which by Us, our Heirs and Successors, with the Advice of our or their Privy Council, should be made before the said 29th of September, 1694, then the said Charter and the Precedent should be void and cease, and the Powers and Privileges therein granted should absolutely end and determine to all Intents and Purposes.

Now know ye, That in Pursuance of the said two Proviso's, and by Virtue of what otherwise we may lawfully put in Execution, We do by this Writing under our Great Seal, by the Advice of our Privy Council, order and direct that every Person qualified to vote by our last Charter or otherwise, in a General or other Court, to be hereafter holden by the Company, shall, before Admittance to such Votes, take an Oath before the Governor, or Deputy, or any of the Committees (if required by any Member of the Committee having 1000 l. in his own Right in the Joint-Stock) that he or she desiring to vote, is then really intitled to so much Stock for his or their own Use and Right (and not in Trust) as qualifies him or her to give in such Votes as he or she desires. Which Oath the Governor, Deputy, or any of the Committees are required to administer; and no Person, not taking such Oath, shall be admitted to give any Vote, nor their Votes to be of any Effect or Avail, if given.

AND our further Will and Pleasure is, That no Person, not being born our natural Subject, or endenized, shall be admitted a Freeman of the said Company. And further, Every Person fairly elected by the Plurality of Voices to be a Governor, Deputy, or Committee, shall, before his being or acting as such, take an Oath in the General Court before the Governor or Deputy, or one or more of the twenty-four Committees, that at the Time of his Election and taking his Oath, he is intitled in his own Right, and not in Trust, to so much Stock as qualifies him for such Election: Which Oath the said Governor or Deputy are required to administer, and such Person elected not taking the same, his Election shall be null and void; and the Court shall proceed to a new Election, according to this and the last Charter.

AND our further Will and Pleasure is, That no Person that is or shall be chosen Governor or Deputy of the Company, shall continue in their Places more than two Years together; and no Person, that hath served therein two Years together, shall be capable of being re-elected till two Years after. And further, if above sixteen of the precedent Years Committeemen be new chosen at the next annual Election, the Supernumeraries, who have the fewest Votes, their Election shall be void, and others chosen in their Places; so that at least eight new ones shall be elected.

AND whereas by our Charter of Nov. 11, 1693, we did order that the said Governor and Company should not give Licence to any Person or Ships to trade or sail into or from the East-Indies, upon any private Account, on Pain of making void the two last Charters: Now we do hereby direct, That the said Governor and Company may license the Commanders and Mariners of their own Ships, (and no other) to trade in such Commodities and to such a Value as shall be allowed of by any General Court, and no otherwise, provided always that due Entries be made thereof, and the Duties paid at the Custom-House before the Landing; any former Charter to the contrary notwithstanding.

AND whereas by the aforesaid Charter we ordered the said Governor and Company Yearly to export the Value of 100,000 l. of English Manufacture. To the End the Truth thereof may appear, we do hereby order them to give in unto us, our Privy Council, in the Month of August Yearly, a true Account fairly written, under the Governor or Deputy's Hand, of the Nature, Quantity, Value, and Cost of such Goods by them exported Yearly, and from what Place, and that upon the Oath of the proper Officers and Servants of the Company. And we do hereby order, That none of the Goods so exported shall be again landed in England, or carried elsewhere, than within the Limits of the Company's Charter.

AND our further Will and Pleasure is, That if any six or more of the Adventurers having 1000 l. each, or more in his own Right in the Joint-Stock, and qualified to vote by the last Charter, shall, at any Time hereafter, by Writing under

And the Members of each Company may transfer their Stocks in the Book of the same Company respectively, so as the Company keep their Stock in their Politick Capacity for seven Years.

And her Majesty grants to the Governor and Company, that they may admit any Person into their Company, without Fine or Oath, unless they think fit to require it, during the seven Years Time they are to continue a Corporation, notwithstanding any preceding Charters.

It is further appointed, That the Governor and Company shall, after seven Years, within forty Days, transfer their Stock amongst the then Members of their own Company, except 100000 l. which may be assigned to particular Persons in Trust for securing the Payment of such Debts as they shall then own, and the then several Members of the Governor and Company shall thereupon be severally admitted and become Members of the English Company, &c. by whom, after the said seven Years, the whole Trade shall be managed, in Pursuance of their Charter, September 5, 1698.

THE Governor and Company, at some Time before the End of seven Years, are to grant all their Debts and Effects to the Crown, which the Queen will regrant back again within 10 Days, to Persons in Trust for the Company; and the Governor and Company oblige themselves to surrender their Charter within two Months after the End of seven Years; which her Majesty promises to accept; and after the Surrender, the English Company is to change its Name, and be called The United Company of Merchants trading to the East-Indies: And from that Time are to carry on their Trade by their own Directors, and according to the Charter before-mentioned.

HER Majesty covenants to grant any reasonable Powers and Privileges, and releases both Companies of all Forfeitures, Misdemeanors, &c. that they may have committed, either in England or Parts beyond the Sea. Likewise declares, That this Indenture shall be construed in the most favourable Sense for the Advantage of both Companies.

IN the Year 1730, the third of his present Majesty King GEORGE II. an Act of Parliament was passed for reducing the Annuity or Fund of the United East-India Company, and for ascertaining their Right of Trade to the East-Indies, and the Continuance of their Corporation for that farther Purpose upon Terms therein mentioned.

THE Term granted by Act of Parliament to the United East-India Company for possessing the Right of an exclusive Trade, was so near expiring that several Merchants and others applied themselves to obtain by Parliament the being incorporated, and vested with the whole Trade to the East-Indies and elsewhere, in the same extensive Degree as was granted to the Company. Their Offer was to advance 3,200,000 l. to redeem the Fund and Trade of the present East-India Company, to be paid at five different Payments, between March 25, 1733, to March 25, 1735; and they proposed not to trade with a Joint Stock, or in a Corporate Capacity, but to keep the Trade open to all the Subjects of Great Britain, upon Licence from such proposed new Company, to be granted to all his Majesty's Subjects desiring the same, on proper Terms and Conditions. But this Proposal was rejected; and instead of that it was agreed with the East-India Company, to secure to them the full exclusive Trade to the East-Indies till the Year 1766, upon the following Conditions, 1. That the East-India Company should pay into the Exchequer the Sum of 200,000 l. towards the Supplies for the Year 1730, without any Interest or Addition to the Capital Stock or Debt for the same. 2. That the Company should consent to reduce their Annuity, or yearly Fund of 160,000 l. payable to them from the Publick, to the Sum of 128,000 l. 3. That after the Year 1766, their Right to the exclusive Trade should be liable (upon three Years Notice, and Repayment of their Capital Stock of 3,200,000 l.) to be taken away by Parliament.

THE Design of the aforementioned Act is to confirm this Agreement.

NEW MERCHANTS ADVENTURERS.

A NEW Company of Merchants Adventurers there was in Stow's Time, of whose Incorporation he could give no Account; but their Coat and Crest were given by Sir William Seger, Garter, and Mr. Cambden, Clarencieux, Kings at Arms, the 13th of November, in the 14th of King James I. The Motto was; Reddite cuique suum. This Company is now extinct.

The ROYAL-AFRICAN, or GUINEY.
COMPANY of MERCHANTS.

THIS Company is called the Royal Adventurers of England trading into Africa, which by their Charter granted to them by K. Charles II. bearing Date the 25th of January, in the 14th Year of his Reign, have very large Immunities granted them, as Power to call and keep Courts, to make By-Laws, so as not repugnant to the Law of the Land, and to punish Transgressors by Fine or Imprisonment; to set forth Men of War to defend their Factories and Forts, that at any Time after shall be erected and settled in any Part of Africa, within the Limits of their Charter; which is from Sally in South Barbary inclusive, to Cape de Bonna Esperanza: And within the said Limits all English Ships are prohibited to Trade, except those of this Royal Company, and such as are authorized under them. They have Power to appoint Governors over their Plantations, Forts and Factories, to raise Arms, to train and muster Military Forces, and to execute Martial Law against Invasions or Rebellions in their said Factories; but the Sovereign Right and Dominion over the same is reserved to his Majesty and his Successors. Furthermore, they have the Freedom of enjoying all the Privileges in the City of LONDON, as fully as any Company of Merchants whatsoever.

THE Achievement belonging to this Company is thus blazoned: Or, an Elephant Sable, a Quarter, quarterly France and England. For their Crest; out of a Crown Ducal an Anchor erected, wreathed about with a Cable, all Or, between two Wings expanded Argent, each charged with a Cross of England. And for their Supporters; two Blackmoors proper, with Arrows in their Hands Or, headed, and feathered Argent. And for their Motto; Regio floret, Patrocinio Commmercium, Commercioque Regnum.

THEIR Seal is double; One, the Elephant Supported by two Blackmoors: The other, the Effigies of King Charles II. enthroned. The Voyage Out and Home is usually within a Year, which is but short; and many Ships and Seamen are employed by this Company, who, for the Security of their Trade, have at a very great Expence erected several Forts and Factories along the Coast of Guiney, without which the Trade could not be preserved to this Nation; and for that very Reason this Trade cannot be managed but by a Company and Joint Stock; for no private Person will be at the Charge of Forts and Factories: Besides, such as venture one Voyage, and perhaps no more, do usually consult the cheapest Way in their Expences and Exports; neither will they take Care to send such good and merchantable Commodities to Trade with, as a Company will, whose Interest obligeth them to send such as are good for the Support of their Trade, which otherwise would sink. Besides, it brings English Manufactures into a better Reputation than those of our Neighbours, which this Company hath really effected in several Commodities bought in Holland, as Says, Muskets, Knives, &c. being now all exported of our own Making. And of these Differences in and between the Commodities sent by the Company, and those sent by private Traders, the Natives of Guiney (who are a sagacious People) are very sensible, by the ill Dealings they have met with in that Kind from some private Traders, which hath been a Thing very disadvantageous to our English Manufactures and Trade: But these Mischiefs have been removed ever since the Settling of this Company, and the Prohibition of Interloping Traders.

THIS may be reckoned the most beneficial Trade that belongs to the Crown, as well by the Commodities exported as imported, as by the Negro Trade for the Support of our American Plantations. The Goods exported are, Says, Perpetuanos, Broad Cloths, Welsh Plains, and other Woollen Manufactures in great Abundance; besides Quantities of most other English Goods and Stuffs. The large Consumption of which doth not only enable the Tenant the better to pay his Rent, and maintain his Family, but also sets Abundance of poor People to Work. And besides these Goods of our own Growth, vast Quantities of Foreign Commodities are sent them, which were imported by the East-India Company, and other Merchants, as Iron, Copper, Cowries, Silefias, Sheets, Manilloes, Royfadoes, Chints, Rom-bargars, Coral, Callicoes, Piccanies, Cloths, Amber, Powder, Muskets, Batteries of all Sorts, Turkey Carpets, Brandy, Strong Waters, Spirits, Gingham, Taffeties, Beads of all Sorts, and made into Bracelets, Buckthaws, Knives, Tal-low, &c.

THE Commodities imported are Gold, Gold Dust, Elephants Teeth, Hides, Ambergrease, Wax, Red Wood, Malegutta or Guiney Pepper, with divers other good and rich Commodities, besides the great Quantities of Negro Slaves for the Supply of our American Plantations; by whose Labour and the Planter's Industry, the King and his Subjects are very much enriched.

THIS Company, for the Negotiation of their Affairs, have settled several Factories, as at Gambo, Rio Nuno, Rio Grande, Sierra Leona, Serbro, Cestos, Achin, Anta, Cormendu, Cape Corse, Acara, Carmenine, Ardra, Benin, Callabar, and in Time, through the Success of good Management, without Doubt will have many more important Places.

FROM the Gold brought from Guiney by the Company, our Gold Coin, called Guineas, took their Name; and as an Encouragement to the Company to bring over Gold, and to coin it, they are permitted by their Charter to have their Stamp, which is the same as the others coined, but with an Elephant on the Arms Side.

THIS Company consists of a Governor, Sub-Governor, Deputy-Governor, and Court of Assistants, consisting of 36, annually chosen out of the Members of the Company on the 10th of January, to whom the Management of the Affairs of the said Company is committed; but of these, any six or seven, chosen out of the Court of Assistants, may negotiate the Business, whose Transactions are to be reported to the Court for their Approbation, and these have their Meetings weekly or oftner, at their House, called the African House in Leadenhall-Street.

THIS Company hath of late been settled by Act of Parliament, whereby it is allowed to any others, not of the Company, to trade to Guiney, by Licence obtained from the said Company, paying usually 20 per Cent.

FOR some further History of this African Company: It was reduced to a very low Ebb, Anno 1708; and, to recover itself, the Members thereof endeavoured in the Parliament of Queen Anne, Anno 1708-9, to obtain an Act to trade in a Joint Stock, exclusively to all other Traders.

THEN they set forth a Memorial, touching the Nature and State of the Trade to Africa: And therein was shewed, how that ever since they got first Footing on the Coast of Africa in the Reign of King James I. they traded thither by Companies, one after another, with Joint Stocks, and endeavour'd all along to erect Forts and Settlements for the aforesaid Ends. But for Want of a Parliamentary Sanction, their Measures were always disturbed, and the Progress of the Trade and Acquisitions interrupted chiefly upon Account of a divided Interest; which was always more or less kept up among themselves, both at home and abroad; so that the Trade of Africa

hath

hath been often wholly relinquished for Years together, by reason of Intrusion, and irregular Proceedings of Interlopers. While the Trade of Africa was laid open, before the Restoration of King Charles II. the Dutch Company took such Advantages of Separate Traders, that their Losses were computed to about 300,000 l. as appeared by their Petition to the King. Whereupon his Majesty, Anno 1662, granted a Charter to the present Company's Predecessors, and they (called then the Royal African Company) paid 34,000 l. to their Predecessors for the few Forts and Settlements which remained in their Possession at the Time of surrendering their Charter; namely, two on the North Coast, viz. James Island and Sierra Leona; and one upon the Gold Coast, viz. Cape Corse Castle, then in an ordinary Condition, and out of Repair.

THAT in the Year 1672 it was established by a new Charter, with exclusive Privileges. Then they purchased and repaired a considerable Number of Forts, Factories and Settlements on the Coast of Africa, contracted many Alliances with the Natives, and renewed the same from Time to Time; they introduced and encouraged the making of several Sorts of Woollen and other Manufactures, proper for the Trade of Guiney, and formerly manufactured in England, and reduced the making thereof to a staple and settled Goodness. They exported yearly upwards of 70,000 l. worth of the said Woollen and other Manufactures, and gave far better Prices for the same than what usually is now given for the like. They furnished the Western Plantations with constant Supplies of great Numbers of Negroes, the Produce of whose Labours hath added very much to the Publick Revenues and Riches of this Kingdom. They imported considerable Quantities of Gold Dust, Elephants Teeth, Red Wood, and other Goods fit for being manufactured at home, &c.

So that their Trade did not only produce an annual Dividend of certain Profits to all the particular Adventurers in the Joint Stock, besides a Multiplication of their Capital, but likewise several other Publick and National Advantages to the whole Kingdom.

BUT for many Years past they have struggled with many Obstructions and Difficulties for Want of a Confirmation by Act of Parliament; otherwise the British Interest on the Coast of Africa had been by this Time in a much more flourishing Condition, than could be consistent with a precarious Constitution; which permits of the pernicious Consequences that must necessarily attend a divided Interest, especially in a Trade where we have all the Stratagems and united Powers of formidable foreign Competitors to deal with.

THAT soon after the Revolution the Interlopers broke in upon the Privileges of the Royal African Company's Charter; and Anno 1697, the Parliament granted a Permission to all the Subjects to trade to Africa, paying to the Company a Duty of 10 l. per Cent. for their Exports, towards the defraying the Charge and Expences of their Forts and Settlements; and ever since the Trade hath fallen into great Disorders and Confusions; for that, since this Liberty was allowed, the Prices of Goods and Merchandizes imported into Guiney are diminished, at least the one half of what they produced formerly. And the Prices of Negroes are advanced to much more than double of their former Prices; which proceeded from the Advantage the Natives take of having Variety of Chapmen. Whereas before they could have Recourse only to the Company's Settlements and Warehouses.

THAT foreign Rivals in this Commerce did upon Occasion foment and encourage the Divisions

among the Traders here, who had different Interests; and they instructed the Natives how to make their Advantages hence.

THAT after this Act, in one Year the separate Traders sent eighty-one Vessels to Africa: But for some Years last past they have not sent out above one Fifth of that Number of Ships per Ann. by Reason of Losses and Disappointments, &c. That finding it impracticable for themselves, or the separate Traders, to trade profitably on the Foot of the present Constitutions, they have not traded for near so much as otherwise they would have done. So that the Planters in America complained, that for some Years past, the Company and separate Traders together have not supplied them with sufficient Numbers of Negroes; and that those they get, do cost them more than double the Prices they formerly paid.

THAT without some fixed Society, vested with a considerable Joint Stock, there can be no sure Dependence upon having the British Plantations supplied with sufficient Numbers of Negroes at moderate or certain Rates, nor upon making any advantageous Contracts with the Spaniard or Portuguese, to furnish them with Negroes in their West-Indies.

THAT it would be very difficult to regain a Trade, if once lost; especially this of Guiney; which all the neighbouring Nations earnestly thirst to gain from us; and which, if deserted for a very short Space of Time, would be certainly possessed by the French or Dutch. And that the only Means to preserve the same, is by investing the Company with Privileges suitable to those granted to the Companies of other Nations. But that if this were granted, as the Company had paid in several additional Sums of Money upon the respective Shares of that Joint Stock, in order to preserve this Trade, so essential to the Nation, they would advance a further Stock, sufficient to support and improve the said Trade in every Branch thereof.

HERE follows what Improvements this Company hath made to that Trade. Besides their old Forts, which they have rebuilt and enlarged, they have purchased the Danes Fort, and built several other Fortifications of Sherbrow, Dickes-Cove, Succondee, Commenda, Queen Anne's Port, Annamadoc, Winebah, Accra-Whidah; besides settling several other Factories on the Gold Coast. The Charge of all which, with the providing of them with great Guns, Small Arms, Ammunition, and Stores of all Sorts, their constant Supplies and Repairs, and the Interest of that Money so long ago advanced, and laid out, hath amounted to several Hundred Thousand Pounds. So that all Things consider'd, the Company's Estimation of them will appear to be very moderate, whatsoever private Traders do, or may maliciously suggest to the contrary.

WE shall here add the Account given of this Trade, by the late Mr. Joshua Gee, the Quaker, in his Treatise on the Trade and Navigation of Great Britain; tho' he differs much from Mr. Styke in his Opinion, as to the Trade, if carried on by the Company alone, or by private Adventurers.

OUR Trade to Africa, says he, has this Advantage, that it carries no Money out, and not only supplies our Plantations with Servants, but brings in a great Deal of Bullion for those that are sold to the Spanish West-Indies, besides Gold Dust and other Commodities, as Red Wood, Elephants Teeth, Guiney Grain, &c. some of which are re-exported. The supplying our Plantations with Negroes is of that extraordinary Advantage to us, that the planting Sugar and Tobacco, and carrying on Trade there, could not be supported without them, which Plantations are the great Causes of the Increase of the Riches of

of the Kingdom. There has been great Struggles by the African Company to engross that Trade to themselves, by which Means they would not only prevent the large Profits that are brought into the Nation by the Trade private Adventurers drive thither, but would also be one great Means of ruining our Plantations; for our Plantations are supported by the Labour of Slaves, and our Profit either more or less, according to the Numbers there employed; and as the Trade is now drove on by private Adventurers, they push it with all imaginable Vigour, and the Planters have not only very great Numbers of Slaves brought in, but they are also afforded them at moderate Prices: But if this Trade should fall into the Hands of the Company, the Management would be as it has been in some other Companies, carried on to the enriching particular Persons, who too often trade away the Company's Estates; whereas private Traders put themselves into all Methods of Frugality, Industry and good Management, which indeed evidently appears by the Trade the Company drove, and what private Adventurers have done; for the Company at best never traded for above 5 or 6000 Negroes yearly; whereas private Adventurers have traded for 30,000, or upwards; and if ever Trade should come to be put under a Company, it may be taken for granted, that our Improvements in the Plantations, which is carried on by the Labour of the Negroes, would soon decline.

AND it is the Opinion of many, that the Trade to the East-Indies would be managed with greater Advantage to the Kingdom, if it was laid open as the African is. Governor Pitt, tho' he had been 10 Years at the Head of the East-India Company's Affairs on the Coast of Coromandel, often affirmed the same Thing; adding, that it was the Case of all Companies; their Officers and Servants, like Noblemens Stewards, usually grow rich, while their Masters Estates are neglected, and, perhaps, run in Debt to advance their private Fortunes.

The CANARY Company of MERCHANTS.

THIS Company was incorporated by King Charles II. who by his Charter bearing Date the 17th of March. 1664, made them a Fellowship by the Name of the Governor and Company of Merchants trading to the Canary Islands; to be managed by way of a Joint Stock; and granted to them and their Successors as large Privileges as to the other Companies of Merchants.

THESE Merchants trade to all the Seven Islands, antiently called the Fortunate Isles, and now the Canary Isles, which are these following, Grand Canaria, Teneriff, Palma, Gomera, Iterro, Lanzero, and Fuerta Ventura.

THIS Company have granted them the Use of a Common Seal, and to bear a Coat of Arms, which is thus blazoned; Argent, St. George's Cross, and on a Chief, Azure, a Lion of England, between two Bunches of Grapes, Or. For their Crest, on a Helmet and Wreath of their Colours the Mountain called the Peke Teneriff, proper. And for their Supporters, two Faulcons.

THE Commodities exported are chiefly all Sorts of English Woollen Manufactures, as Bays, Kerseys, Serges, Perpetuanoes, Says, Norwich Stuffs and Fustians; also Hats, Stockings, all Manner of Haberdashers Ware, Iron and Tin wrought; likewise Store of Poor Jack, Pilchards, Herrings, Beef, Pork, Wheat and other Grains; also many Sorts of Linen Cloth, both of Germany, Flanders, Holland and France; likewise Pipe-Staves and Hoops, with several other Commodities: And for these are imported great Quantities of Canary Wines, divers Sorts of West-Indi- dia Commodities, as Varinas, Tobacco, Hides, Logwood, Indico, Cochineal, Campechiana, &c.

THESE Merchants, for the Management of their Affairs, are governed by a Governor, Deputy-Governor and Assistants of Twelve, which are yearly chosen at a General Court of the Adventurers, between the 15th and 25th of March. They keep their Courts monthly, or weekly, as their Occasions require.

The HUDSON'S-BAY COMPANY.

THERE is another Company call'd the Hudson's-Bay Company; and though these Merchants make but little Noise, it is a very advantageous Trade. They export some Woollen Goods and Haberdashery Wares, Knives, Hatchets, Arms, and other Hard-Ware; and in Return, bring back chiefly Beaver Skins, and other Skins and Furs.

BESIDES these Societies of Merchants incorporated, there are others not incorporated, yet formerly were; namely, the Spanish Merchants, the Portugal, Italian, French, Dutch, and those trading to the West-Indies. Which Places now are open to any one to trade unto. And there are such as keep a Trade, some to some of those Places, others to others, but not in a Joint Stock with others as a Company, but singly by themselves.

SPANISH and PORTUGAL MERCHANTS.

THESE Merchants trading into Spain and Portugal, are found beneficial to the Nation in their exporting these Commodities, Bays, Says, Serges, Perpetuanoes, Cloths dressed and dyed, and most English Manufactures; also Lead, Pewter, Shot, Iron, Tin, Calves Skins, Herrings, Pilchards, Salmon, Poor Jack or Bacalow, Silk Stockings, Perukes, &c. And importing the Wines of Malaga, Zeres, Bastard, Gandado and Alicant; Oils, Olives, Sugars, Ginger, Rosin, Fruits, White Marble, Allum, Plate, Anniseeds, Sodobarilla, Sopes, &c.

The ITALIAN MERCHANTS.

THE Merchants trading into the Parts of Italy, as Leghorn, Venice, Naples, Genoa, Sicily, &c. export English Cloths, Bays, Serges, Perpetuanoes, Kerseys, Lead, Tin, Pewter, Red and White Herrings, Pilchards, Pickled Salmon, Newfoundland Fish, Calves Skins, Russia Hides, Tallow, Tobacco, the Drugs and Spices of India, Persia and Arabia, &c. And import Wines, Oils, Silk, raw and wrought into several Fabricks, as Taffeties, Sarfets, Sattins, Velvets, Plushes, Damask, Cloth of Gold and Silver, Grograins, Fustians, Allum, Anniseeds, Rice, Almonds, Saffron, Brimstone, Venice Gold and Silver, Argol, Venice Treacle, Quick-Silver, Looking and Drinking Glasses, Anchovies, Marble, &c.

The FRENCH MERCHANTS.

THE Merchants trading into France export and import many good Commodities. Those exported are, English Cloths, Bays, Kerseys, Friezes, Cottons, Pilchards, Herrings, Newfoundland Fish, Lead, Tin, Galls, Cotton Wool, &c. And they import Wines, Oils, Almonds, Paper, Oade, coarse and fine Linen, Tabby, and other Silks, Canvas, Dowlas, Buckrams, Salt, Cards, Glass, &c.

The DUTCH MERCHANTS.

SUCH Merchants as use the Trade into the Low-Countries, as Holland and Flanders, export and import the following Commodities. Those exported are, Woollen Cloths, Lead, Tin, Sheep and Coney Skins, with most of our other English

English Commodities and Manufactures. And for these and the like, they import Tapestries, Pictures and Prints, Tape, Salt-petre, Quick-silver, Rhenish Wine, painted Tiles, Furs, Butter, Cheese, Thread, Flanders Lace, (before it was forbidden) with most Commodities of other Nations; which, by Reason of their great Trade, and Cunning in buying them at the Seasons when cheapest, or when there is a Glut, they can afford at cheap Rates. And by Reason of the Herrings, and other Fish, which we permit them to catch in our Seas, they trade for most European Commodities.

The SOUTH-SEA COMPANY, established by Act of Parliament in the Reign of Queen ANNE.

THE most considerable of all the Trading Companies, is that of the South-Sea, established by Act of Parliament in the ninth Year of the late Queen Anne, intituled, An Act for making good Deficiencies, and satisfying the Publick Debts, and for erecting a Corporation to carry on a Trade to the South-Seas, and for the Encouragement of the Fishery, &c.

THE Preamble recites, That the Debt due to the Navy, the Army, &c. amounted to 9000000 and upwards, and thereupon it was enacted, That the Duties following should be impos'd for paying an Interest or Annuity, after the Rate of 6 per Cent. per Annum for all the said Sum; which Interest amounted to the annual Sum of 568279 l. 10 s.

THE Duties constituting the Fund for Payment of the said Interest, were, all the Impositions and Duties upon Wines, Vinegar, Tobacco, East-India Goods, Fine Wrought Silk, Whales, &c. granted by an Act of the 8th of Queen Anne, till the Year 1720, continued by this Act to the Crown for ever; together with the Duties on Candles, and on Money given with Apprentices.

AND the Queen was empowered by Letters Patent, to form the said Creditors interested in the Navy-Bills, &c. into a Company, who, on their subscribing their Bills, Tickets, Debentures, &c. were to be admitted into the Joint-Stock, and become Members thereof, in Proportion to the Sums due to them.

AND the said Corporation were by the said Act, to be vested in the sole Trade to and from all Kingdoms and Lands on the East Side of America, from the River Oroonoko to the Southernmost Part of Terra del Foga, and on the West Side thereof, from the Southernmost Part of the said Terra del Foga, through the South-Sea to the Northernmost Part of America, not exceeding 300 Miles from the Continent on the said West Side, (excepting Brazil, and other Places in the Possession of the King of Portugal, and the Country of Surinam, in Possession of the States General) the Company to be the sole Proprietors of all Islands, Ports, &c. which they should discover within these Limits, to be held under the annual Rent of an Ounce of Gold.

THE Crown also was empowered by Letters Patent, to direct a Stock to consist of 20 s. in every 100 l. of the Capital Stock of the Company, to be raised by the Members thereof, and employed in improving, enlarging, and carrying on the Fishery of this Kingdom, for the Use of the Company.

IN Pursuance of this Act, the Proprietors of the Navy-Bills, Tickets, and Army-Debentures abovesaid, were incorporated by the Name of The Company of Merchants of Great Britain trading to the South-Seas and other Parts of America, and for encouraging the Fishery.

AND on the Peace that follow'd, An. 1713, the late Queen was pleas'd to transfer to the said

Company, the Benefit of the Affiento Contratto with Spain, that is, the furnishing the Spaniards with Slaves for their Mines and Plantations in America, by which also they were intitled to send a large Ship annually with European Goods, consisting chiefly of our Woollen Manufactures, to the Spanish West-Indies.

By an Act of 1 George I. Cap. 21. the Sum of 822032 l. 4 s. 8 d. was added to the capital Stock of the South-Sea Company, to make it up just the Sum of 10,000,000 l.

WITH this large Capital it is not to be found that the Company have much applied themselves to foreign Trade, (which seem'd to be one principal Design of incorporating them) unless in sending the Ship above-mention'd with European Goods to the Spanish West-Indies, and furnishing the Spaniards with Negroes.

NOR did they make any Attempt to promote the Fishery (another grand Design in establishing this Corporation) till of late Years, and then only by sending a small Number of Ships annually to fish for Whales; but what they make a Merit of is, " Their contriving the Method for lessening " the National Debt, and rendering some of " those Debts redeemable, which could not have " been redeem'd otherwise, without a Breach of " the Publick Faith. They say, that they have " not only added above 50 per Cent. to the Estates of all the old Proprietors of the Stock, " but have been continually working the Publick " Good, by Savings and Reduction of Interest. " That it appears, by a Statute of 3 George I. " Cap. 9. that the Capital of the Company then " amounted to 10,000,000 l. for which a Yearly " Fund of 600,000 l. was payable to them, after " the Rate of 6 l. per Cent. and that they submitted to accept, after Midsummer 1718, of " an Annuity of 500,000 l. being after the Rate " of 5 l. per Cent. per Annum for their Ten " Millions. That the Company agreed also to " advance the Government the further Sum of " Two Millions, for the Discharge of Lottery " Tickets, that carried 6 l. per Cent. and accepted another Fund to pay them an Interest " of 5 l. per Cent. for the said Two Millions.

" THAT afterwards the South-Sea Company " procured as many Annuities, redeemable and " irredeemable, and other publick Debts, to be " subscrib'd into their Stock, as with their original Capital amounted to Thirty-three Millions and upwards, taking an Interest of the " Government of 5 l. per Cent. for the present, " and stipulated to take 4 l. per Cent. for the " Whole after Midsummer 1727; by which " Reduction of Interest, the Nation was provided of a Fund, usually called the Sinking Fund, " and was enabled to discharge the whole Debt " within the Compass of forty Years, or very " little more, without laying any new Burthens " on the Subject.

" AND whereas it was objected to them, That " the Change that was made in the long Annuities, by the Company's redeeming them at " twenty Years Purchase, had brought the Nation in Debt three Millions more than it was " before, the Annuitants not having paid so " much Money for them by three Millions.

" THEY answer, That the Nation was in Debt " on Account of the Annuities, according to " the Payments she was to make to the Annuitants, and according to the Time she was " oblig'd to continue those Payments; and if " their Bargain makes no Alteration in that " Matter, if it neither adds to or lessens those " Payments, or the Time of continuing them, " then it leaves the Debt of the Nation just as " it found it, neither encreas'd nor diminish'd " by it: But if it either lessens the annual Payments, or shortens the Time of making such " Payments, “ Payments, it must be so far said to lessen the National Debt to the Annuitants.

“ IN the Year 1716, there was publish'd a Calculation of the State of the National Debt, in which the Long Annuities granted at several Times were stated, and valued according to the Sums paid in the Exchequer for them, which was about eleven Years and a half Purchase for those in King William's, and under sixteen Years Purchase for those in Q. Anne's Time. This Calculation therefore states the Debt of the Nation on the Account of the Annuitants, according to the Sums they were first granted at.

“ BUT this could neither be reckon'd the Debt of the Nation with Regard to the Annuitants, nor the Value of the Annuitants. It could not be reckon'd the Debt of the Nation with Regard to the Annuitants, because the Nation had contracted with them (not to pay them off at Pleasure, by returning them the Money they at first paid into the Exchequer, but) in an absolute Engagement for the Payment of such Annuitants for a certain Term of Years: Neither could it be reckoned the Value of the Annuitants, for their Value must be stated (as the Value of every Thing else must be) not according to what was given for them at first, or what they were worth at the Time they are propos'd to be purchased: For as they were then only of such a Value because Money bore such an Interest; so if the State of Interest is altered since that Time, the Value of such Annuitants must be in the same Degree altered; for their Value must rise in the same Degree that the Interest of Money decreases, which was the Reason that they were worth above twenty Years Purchase in the Year 1720, and therefore could not be purchased at a lower Rate, unless a Power had been taken in Parliament of fixing the Price, which was suppos'd to be a Step inconsistent with the Safety of Publick Credit. The stating therefore the National Debt to the Annuitants according to the Sums first given for them, is a great Mistake.

“ BUT yet upon this Foundation, that the Degree of the Debt is to be thus stated; an Argument is formed, That the buying the Annuitants by the South-Sea Company at twenty Years Purchase, makes an Addition to the National Debt, because here is 3000000 l. &c. more paid for them than they were at first granted at.

“ THIS supposes that the Nation owed the Annuitants no more than their first Purchase-Money, and could oblige them to take it when they pleas'd; and if this had been the Case, then it must have been granted, that the 3000000 l. &c. given by this Bargain, had been so far an Increase of the National Debt.

“ BUT if this Supposition be quite contrary to the true State of the Case, if the Faith of the Nation was given absolutely for the Payment of such Annuitants, and for such a Term of Years, then the Debt of the Nation to the Annuitants must be stated according to that Grant.

“ AND then the Question will be, Whether the Nation is upon better Terms with the Annuitants by this New Bargain, than she was without it? And the only Way to see this clearly, is to see whether the Nation is to be sooner quit of her Payments to the Annuitants, and therefore pay less to them by Virtue of this Purchase, than she must have paid to them had they continued unpurchased in their first State. At the Time this Purchase was made, the Nation was to continue the Payment of the Annuitants for about 83 Years.

VOL. II.

“ If therefore this Term of Payment is by this New Bargain reduc'd to a Term of Years of about half the Time, and this be done not by any further Money advanc'd by the Nation, but only by a Change made in the Manner of her Payments, and a Change of the State of the Annuitants, then it must be very obvious how much the Nation is reliev'd in her Debt to the Annuitants.

“ THE Change made in the Manner of the Payment is this: The South-Sea Company buys 100 l. Annuity with 2000 l. Stock; so that the Nation is to pay Interest for 2000 l. Stock, instead of paying an Annuity of 100 l.

“ WAS the Nation to continue this same Payment to the Stock, and for the same Term of Years that she was to have continued her Payments to the Annuitants, then it is suppos'd it must have been granted, that she had neither lessened nor increased her Debt by this Bargain.

“ BUT if by Virtue of this New Bargain, and by this Change in the Manner of the Payments, that is, by paying Interest for 2000 l. Stock, instead of an Annuity of 100 l. the Nation has not only a redeemable Debt to deal with, but is also provided with a Fund sufficient for the redeeming or discharging the 2000 l. Stock, in about half the Time she was to have paid the Annuitants, then it must be equally granted, that she has her Debt in this great Degree lessened and relieved by this Bargain.

“ Now what is here only suppos'd as the Effect of this Bargain, is the true and real Nature of it, and such as it was sufficiently fitted to produce, which may be thus made plainly to appear:

“ THE Nation pays Interest for 2000 l. Stock, instead of paying an Annuity of 100 l. but it is provided for in this Contract, That in the Year 1727, there shall be a Reduction of Interest of 1 per Cent. So that instead of the 100 l. Annuity, there will be only 80 l. per Annum paid to the 2000 l. Stock; and this Abatement of Interest, or Deduction of 20 l. per Annum from the 100 l. Annuity, will raise a Fund sufficient for the Discharge of the 2000 l. Stock, in about half the Time that the Payment of the Annuitants was to have been continued.

“ So that by this meer Change of the State of the Debt, and the Manner of the Payments, the Nation is enabled to discharge the whole Debt in about thirty-four Years sooner than it could have been discharg'd, had the Annuitants not been thus purchased.

“ THAT notwithstanding all these Advantages accruing to the Nation by the Scheme laid by the late South-Sea Directors, they have been evicted out of their Estates, however long enjoy'd, and by whatever Means acquir'd.

“ AS to the Calamities of the Year 1720, which alter'd the Estates of so many private Persons, they ought not to be imputed to the Directors, or the South-Sea Scheme, but to a more general Cause; for there was not any Order of Men in the Nation that had not some Share in helping forward that general Infatuation, and to whom therefore the common Calamity ought to be attributed; so that it might have been justly expected, that every Order of Men in the Kingdom should have been inclin'd, either to have pardon'd, or gently punish'd such a State of Things as they had not been meer Spectators of.

“ THAT had the Directors been allow'd the Benefit of a Trial, they might very justly have pleaded, That they had done nothing privately.

3 R

“ vately, or on their own Heads ; that they were “ driven into all the Steps they took by the “ irresistible Temper of Men of all Orders ; “ that they had acted openly in the Sight of “ the Legislature, and had the Orders and Au“ thority of General Courts for all they did, and “ their Thanks after it was done.

“ ANOTHER Cause the late Directors assign “ for the sudden Rise of their Stocks, which “ occasioned the Calamities in the Year 1720, “ was the Bank Bidding against them. The Pro“ position made to the Parliament at first, say “ they, was only for a voluntary Subscription of “ the Proprietors of the irredeemable and re“ deemable Debts into the South-Sea Stock; at “ the best Terms the Company could agree with “ them, (which was no more than selling their “ Stock by Subscription) a Method the Bank “ has often pursued ; and as the Ministry knew
 “ the Company had gained a Sum for their Pro“ prietors, by taking in Part of the Lottery
 “ 1710, the Year before, besides what they paid
 “ the Government for so doing, they insisted the “ Company should pay a Sum of Money to the “ Government for the Liberty of having the said “ Debts subscribed into their Stock.

“ BEFORE this Proposition the Bank had “ been applied to for undertaking this Matter ;
 “ but they refused it, treating it with Con“ tempt.

“ BUT on the Proposition being made to the “ House of Commons, they became Bidders of “ about five Millions and a half to the Govern“ ment, by which the Scheme first proposed was “ entirely altered, the same being then put up “ to the highest Bidder ; which influenced the “ Minds of all Sorts of People, and was the Oc“ casion of all the extravagant Rise of Stocks, “ whereby all the mischievous Consequences to “ private Persons ensued ; for 'tis plain the Na“ tion has received a great Advantage by it,
 “ and therefore the ill Consequences can only “ be the increasing some Persons Estates, and “ decreasing the Estates of others. The second “ Reason of the ill Consequences of the Scheme “ was owing to the Bargain which the Bank so“ lemnly made with the South-Sea Company, “ and never performed, whereby so many Per“ sons were misled, and thereby very greatly “ injured.

“ THEY desire also it may be observed fur“ ther, That the Directors and Managers of “ that Scheme were never charged with any “ Frauds or Embezzlements of the Company's “ Effects : Nay, even Mr. Knight himself, who “ thought fit to decline the Enquiry of Parlia“ ment, and retire from his native Country, re“ tired only with his own Acquisitions, and “ without loading himself with the Guilt of Rob“ bing the publick Treasure which was intrusted
 “ in his Hands.

THE late Directors also in their Defence, and in order to shew how instrumental they have been in reducing the Interest of Money, and putting the National Debt in a Way of being paid off in a few Years, published another Treatise, stiled, A True State of the South-Sea Scheme, &c. wherein they inform us, That the Method they first proposed for executing their Scheme was as follows :

THE Total of their Capital	£
was about	11,746,000
TOTAL of the Annuities and
Debts to be taken in were about	30,981,000

WHICH would make the To- tal of their Capital	£
	42,727,000

“ THE whole Sum to be taken in by the Com“ pany being so large, and consisting of Annui“ ties and Debts of various Kinds ; it was judged “ to be impracticable to take in the Whole at “ one Time, and that by taking them in at “ different Times, Prices and Proportions, the “ Proprietors thereof (through Apprehension of “ being either left intirely out, or of coming in “ afterwards, at a higher Price) would be quick“ ened to make their Subscriptions, whereby
 “ the Execution of the Scheme would be rendered “ more easy and certain.

“ THOUGH when the Scheme was first formed
 “ the Price of the Stock did not exceed 116%
 “ to 118 per Cent.

“ YET it was supposed, if the Proposal was “ accepted by the Parliament, that Acceptance “ would so much increase the Credit of the “ Stock, as the Company might be able to take “ in the said Annuities and Debts, at the Rates,
 “ and in the Proportions herein after men“ tioned.

“ AND if the Bank and East-India Company, “ or either of them would come in, they were “ proposed to be admitted into the first Sub“ scription at 130 l. per Cent. or even lower,
 “ which would nevertheless have increased the “ Profit to the South-Sea Company.

“ BUT as to their coming in was uncertain, the “ Calculation was made only upon the other An“ nuities and Debts, viz.

6,500,000 l. Annuities and Debts	£
“ subscribed at 130
“ per Cent. for the	5,000,000

" WHICH by gradual selling the Stock, the " Company gained on the Subscriptions would " have supplied the same for above twelve Years ;
 " before the Expiration of which Time it was " supposed the Benefit of their Trade to Africa,
 " and the Grants of Nova Scotia, and of the " French Part of St. Christopher's, would have " been sufficient to have perpetuated the Divi" dend, if not to have enlarged it.

" BUT the Commons objecting against giving
 " the South-Sea Company the African Trade,
 " Nova Scotia, and that which was the French
 " Part of St. Christopher's, the South-Sea Com" pany were prevailed with to leave those Ad" vantages out of their Proposals, which were " the substantial Things to have supported their " Stock, but still with Assurance from those in " the Administration, of using their utmost En" deavours to obtain them for the Company.
 " But the Price of South-Sea Stock from the " Time of accepting their Proposal, to the pas" sing the Act, rising very considerably, and the " Bank and their Friends always opposing what" ever appeared to be for the Benefit of the South-
 " Sea Company, they could never obtain those " advantageous Grants, which they had much " depended on (as solid Supporters to the Stock)
 " tho' they frequently importuned and pressed
 " the Ministry for the same.

" THE extraordinary Rise of the South-Sea
 " Stock, before the passing the Act, together " with the Opposition of the Bank, having de" feated the Company of those Grants and Set" tlements which they had depended upon as " the solid Supports of the Stock, as has been " already hinted ; nothing was left them but " the Opinion of Mankind to enable them to " execute the Act, which put them under a
 " more than ordinary Necessity of complying
 " with the general Disposition of the People ;
 " and therefore, though their original Design
 " and Intentions were to have no Subscriptions
 " but of the several Annuities and Debts that " were to be taken in, yet there being imme" diately after passing of the Act, a prevailing " Notion among many of the Proprietors and " others without Doors, (for it did not proceed
 " from the Directors) of taking in Money Sub" scriptions, and this Opinion growing univer" sal, the Directors found themselves under a " Necessity to depart from the Method they had " first intended to proceed in, and to begin
 " the Execution of the Act with a Money Sub" scription, to which they were the more easily " induced, finding the Method prescribed by " the Act would require a great many Months
 " to effect the taking in but a Part of those
 " publick Debts, and that unforeseen Accidents
 " might so reduce the Price of Stock, as whol" ly to defeat the Execution of the Act, and

 " yet the Company would remain under the Ob" ligation of paying to the Publick 4,667,000 l.
 " though no Part of the Act should be exe" cuted.

" A further Inducement to admit of a Money
 " Subscription was, that they might be there-
 " by enabled to pay off such of the Redeem" able Debts, and to offer Money to such of the " Annuityants as should not be inclined to take " Stock for the same, they not being then cer" tain, there would be such an universal Dis" position in those Proprietors to accept Stock
 " for their Debts and Annuities, as afterwards
 " appeared ; but when that Disposition did ap" pear, the Directors had no Occasion to ap" ply the Money to that Use. By these and the " like Considerations, the Directors were pre" vailed on to open a Money Subscription at " 300 l. per Cent. with distant Times of Pay" ment, and without limiting the Sum to be " taken in, Stock being then 285 l. per Cent.

" THE Method they proceeded in was, that " every Director took the Names of those Per" sons who applied to them, and the Sums for " which they desired to be admitted into that
 " Subscription, which, when brought together,
 " and cast up, amounted to so large a Sum, and
 " the Names were of so considerable Persons,
 " that though their first Intention was to have " had that Subscription for no more than one " Million, or at most one Million and a half ;
 " and though they permitted no one Person to " have more than 4000 l. and the Sums desired
 " were generally reduced ; yet the Directors
 " found they could not bring the Subscription
 " to a less Sum than 2,250,000 l. without giving " such Disgust as might prove prejudicial to the " Company.

" THE first Money Subscription being thus " fixed, and the Sum it amounted to being
 " 6,750,000 l. of which 60 l. per Cent. being
 " 1,350,000 l. paid down, the Directors thought " this Subscription a sufficient Fund to enable " them to execute the rest of the Act ; and ac" cordingly came to an unanimous Resolution of " taking no more Money Subscriptions.

" BUT the Subscription soon selling at a con" siderable Profit, it cannot be forgot how im" patient Persons of all Ranks and Degrees were
 " for another Money Subscription, and by their " Importunity did prevail on the Directors to " agree the 28th of April to open one, which " was done on the 30th of the same Month at " 400 l. per Cent. of which 40 l. per Cent. was " paid down ; and the same Day they resolved
 " it as their Opinion, Nemine Contradicente, not " to take any further Subscription in Money.

" THIS Subscription was intended also not " to exceed a Million ; but the Application to " get into it was such, that when the Directors
 " came to examine the Names and Sums de" manded, they found they could not reduce it
 " under a Million and a half, without giving
 " the greatest Offence.

" BUT the Directors Thoughts being intent
 " upon executing the Act, according to their " first Design, by taking in the Annuities and " Redeemables, especially the former, on which " the Parliament had laid so great Strefs : They
 " (the same Day on which it was agreed to open
 " the second Money-Subscription) previously
 " resolv'd on a Subscription for the Annuities,
 " which met with such Success, that, in a few " Days, above two Thirds of them were brought " in ; and on the 19th of May (the Price of Stock
 " being then 375 l. per Cent.) the Directors fix'd
 " the Price for subscribed Annuities at 32 Years
 " Purchase, to be paid as follows, viz.

" For

“ For 100 l. per Ann.

“ Stock 700 l. at 375 l. per Cent. which } 2625 “ amounts to
“ In Money and the Company's Bonds 575

“ Total for 100 l. per Ann. 3200

“ THIS gave great Satisfaction to all Parties concerned, and the Stock and Subscriptions advanc'd so fast, that when the Parliament rose, the Stock was at near 800 l. per Cent. and the second Subscription sold for 500 l. per Cent. Profit.

“ To shew that the Rise of the Stock, and what was then done in the Execution of the Act, was far from being at that Time thought any ways criminal; it may be permitted to cite a Paragraph in His Majesty's most gracious Speech to both Houses of Parliament, on the 11th of June, when that Session ended, viz.

The good Foundation you have prepared this Session for the Payment of the National Debts, and the Discharge of a great Part of them, without the least Violation of the Publick Faith, will, I hope, strengthen more and more the Union I desire to see among all my Subjects, and make our Friendship yet more valuable to Foreign Powers.

“ AND a Copy of the Speech to his Majesty the same Day, by the Speaker of the House of Commons, has been seen, wherein were the following Words, viz.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

YOUR Majesty's most Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Commons of Great Britain in Parliament assembled, had no sooner dispatch'd so much of the Supplies as were necessary to carry on the current Service, but they immediately applied themselves to find out Means for lessening the Publick Debt; in which, if your Commons have the Satisfaction to see the Success of their Endeavours, exceed even what the most Sanguine could hope: If Your Majesty's good Subjects have now a certain Prospect of being eased of the heavy Load of very near Eight Millions, in a little more than the Compass of one Year: If the Difficulties in discharging that Part of the National Debt, which by some were thought to be insuperable, without Breach of the Publick Faith, are now in a Manner overcome: And if at the same Time every Branch of the Publick Credit is advanc'd to an unexpected, and some of them even to an amazing Height: Yet Your Commons must confess, that they have been only the happy Instruments in conveying these Benefits to Your People; and that all the Merit they can claim, is in not having neglected an Opportunity, which the flourishing State of the Publick Credit put into their Hands; and must in Justice acknowledge, that all these surprising Events are owing to that profound Veneration and Esteem, which this Nation, and all Europe, has for Your Majesty. For Credit is so nice and delicate in its Nature, that though in all other Affairs no Detriment is perceiv'd, no Mischief is felt, till a Calamity comes: Yet, in whatever relates to Credit, the Fear and Apprehension of Calamity, is as mischievous as the Calamity itself; and Diffidence is the same Thing as Destruction. Credit, therefore, is only maintained, in its present flourishing Condition, by the Experience Your People have had of the Vigilance of Your Majesty's Councils, and the Reliance on the Steadiness of Your Conduct. And since the just Confidence Your Subjects place in Your Majesty's known Prudence and Wisdom has enabled Your Commons to make so great Progress towards discharging the Publick Incumbrances: It would have been highly unjust, when Your Majesty condescended to desire the Advice and Assistance of Your Commons, had they declined to support the Honour and Dignity of the Crown, at a Time when the Nation receives so much Benefit from its Lustre; and it would have been equally ungrateful, had they not cheerfully provided the necessary Aids, to make the Supplies, voted at the Beginning of this Session, effectual.

“ THE Price of Stock, and also of the First and Second Subscriptions, advancing daily from the Time of fixing the Price for the Annuities taken in, caus'd many pressing Solicitations from Persons of all Ranks and Degrees for another Money Subscription; to which the Directors constantly shew'd an Aversion, and endeavour'd to dissuade them from it; giving for Answer, The Resolution they had come to against any more Money Subscriptions. But this did not stop, but rather increas'd the general Importunity; and, from Persuasions, many proceeded to Menaces and Clamour, backed with Imputations, That if that favourable Opportunity of executing the Scheme was neglected, the Blame must be charg'd on the Directors: Whereby they were at length brought almost to an absolute Necessity of opening a third Money Subscription, which they did on the 17th of June 1720. And the same was opened the sooner, at the earliest Instance of many Members of both Houses, who desired it might be made before their going into the Country.

“ AT this Time the Price of Stock being about 800 l. per Cent. and the second Subscription selling for about 500 l. per Cent. Advance, and great Numbers of those who desired to be admitted into the third Subscription, having requested it at 1000 l. per Cent. the Directors thought they could not set it at a less Price; but they allowed such Times of Payment as with the Midsummer Dividend reduced it to about 800 l. per Cent.

“ THIS met with no Blame from any Person at that Time, but, on the contrary, universal Approbation, as appears by the Price this third Subscription bore, it soon selling at 300 l. per Cent. Profit.

“ WHEN this Subscription was compleated, the Directors came again to a Resolution of taking no more Money Subscriptions; and applied themselves to take in the Remainder of the Annuities and Redeemables. To which End, on the 8th of July, they agreed to open their Books on the 12th of that Month, to take in Part of them; which was accordingly done, and, in a few Days, most of the Redeemables and Annuities standing out, were subscribed; but some of the Proprietors of those Debts and Annuities, by Reason of their Absence or other Impediments, not having an Opportunity to subscribe before the Books were shut, made great Application to the Directors to be admitted; who being willing to compleat the Execution of the Act, with as much Expedition as they could, did, on the 27th of July, resolve to open Books on the 4th of August following, for taking in the Remainder of those Debts and Annuities; and most of those which were standing out were then brought in.

“ ON the 12th of August the Price of Stock, inclusive of the Midsummer Dividend, was upwards of 900 l. per Cent. which made the Stock, exclusive of that Dividend, about 820 l. per Cent. The Directors agreed to fix the Price of the subscribed Long Annuities at 36 Years Purchase, and the Redeemables at 105 l. per Cent.

“ Cent. and the Price of Stock to be given for “ the same, at 800 l. per Cent. so that the Re“ deemables, considering they were taken in at “ 105 l. per Cent. had the Stock at about 60 l.
 “ per Cent. under the current Price, which gave “ general Satisfaction at that Time.

“ It farther appeared, even to Demonstration, “ that the Terms allowed for the Annuities and “ Redeemables which were subscribed, were ve“ ry satisfactory, because they were sold at a much “ higher Price than the unsubscribed; and, some “ Time after this Price was declared in the Ga- “ zette, many considerable Proprietors of the “ unsubscribed Annuities and Debts, pressed and “ asked it as a Favour to be, and were accord“ ingly admitted to subscribe; and particularly “ several Foreigners and Merchants entrusted “ here by them for their Use.

“ ALTHOUGH the Directors had come to se“ veral Resolutions against any further Money “ Subscriptions, those Resolutions were not suffi“ cient to stem the repeated Applications for “ the same from Multitudes of all Ranks; and “ the Proprietors of the Stock began to clamour
 “ at their not being admitted to their Propor“ tions in the former Subscriptions, and some of “ them threatened to demand a General Court,
 “ to order that the Proprietors might be admit“ ted to a Subscription in Proportion to their “ Stock, which obliged the Directors to take “ that Matter into Consideration; and the same “ Day on which they fixed the Price of Stock
 “ for the two last Subscriptions of the Annuities
 “ and Redeemables, they agreed to take a Sub“ scription of 20 per Cent. on Stock for the Pro“ prietors only; the Stock in such Subscription “ to be valued at 1000 per Cent. which at that “ Time gave great Pleasure and Satisfaction to “ the Proprietors, and 40 l. per Cent. was offered “ for the Privilege of that Subscription.

“ BUT this did not take off the Applications
 “ for another Money Subscription to all Persons “ indifferently, to which the Directors shewed
 “ a great Unwillingness; but by the continued “ Solicitations of Multitudes of all Degrees, and “ from all Parts, they consented to open a fourth “ Money Subscription on the 24th of August, at “ 1000 l. per Cent. exclusive of the Midsummer “ Dividend, (the third Subscription then selling “ at about 300 l. per Cent. Advance.) But to “ prevent this Subscription running to an exces“ sive Sum, they agreed that one fifth Part, be“ ing 200 l. per Cent. should be paid down, and “ none to be admitted but those who brought “ their Money that very Day.

“ THE Eagerness for this Subscription was so “ great, that notwithstanding this Precaution,
 “ and the Directors full Intention that this Sub“ scription should not exceed a Million, yet in “ a few Hours there was 1,200,000 l. subscribed, “ although many were excluded who pressed ve“ ry earnestly to come in. Had not the Direc“ tors taken that Precaution, in relation to this “ fourth Subscription, it would probably have “ swelled to a larger Sum than the third, as “ is manifest, not only by the eager filling so “ great a Sum, (as is mentioned) in so short a “ Space, and the numberless Letters the Direc“ tors received from Persons who desired to be “ admitted into it, but also by a memorable Re“ ply that a great Minister of State, since dead, “ made to them, upon their informing him of the “ Method they intended to proceed in; who “ thereupon told them, That he himself had a “ List for above a Million for that Subscription, “ and that therefore, if they would proceed in “ the Method they had proposed, without taking “ in Lists, as they had done in the third Sub“ scription; he desired that they would publish “ an Advertisement in the Daily Courant, that
 “ VOL. II.

“ it was not in his Power to serve his Friends;
 “ that thereby he might clear himself from the “ Clamour and Charge that would arise against “ him, for having neglected them.

“ As to the Subscriptions for 20 l. per Cent. to “ be limited to the Proprietors only, the same
 “ was afterwards (for several Reasons) thought “ fit by the General Court to be omitted.

“ THE Spring of the Money Subscriptions “ arose from without Doors, and not from the “ Directors themselves, as already mentioned;
 “ and one may venture to say, Those Subscrip“ tions were countenanced by the Parliament; “ for that after the first Money Subscription was “ taken, there having arisen some Doubt con“ cerning the Validity thereof: The Parliament “ were pleased to pass a Clause in the Act
 “ for establishing the two Insurance-Companies, “ confirming not only the Subscriptions taken,
 “ but also all such Subscriptions as should af“ ter be taken; and to make the Receipts that “ should be given out for the same assignable in “ Law, which they would not have been without “ Authority of Parliament.

“ THEY observe further, That by the origi“ nal Scheme the highest Calculation of the “ Stock was 160 l. per Cent. and that Advance “ supported by such beneficial Grants to the “ Company, which if pursued and ripened in-
 “ to actual Execution, would have kept the “ Stock at least to that Price, without being de“ trimental to any. But several publick Ad“ vantages would necessarily have arisen there“ from, as,

“ First, The bringing the Annuities into a “ State of Redemption, which had been always “ thought the unsurmountable Obstacle to get“ ting the Nation out of Debt.

“ Secondly, The reducing the Interest of the “ Publick Debts from 5 to 4 per Cent. and there-
 “ by increasing the Sinking Fund above 540,000 l.
 “ per Annum, by which the whole Debt of the “ Nation might have been paid off in about 24 “ Years.

“ Thirdly, The lowering the common Rate of “ Interest which would soon have followed as a “ necessary Consequence thereof.

“ Fourthly, The Trade and Revenues of the “ Kingdom would have been increased by the “ peopling and cultivating Nova Scotia, and “ the French Part of St. Christopher's; and espe“ cially, by enlarging and opening the Trade to “ Africa, into the Inland Parts of the Conti“ nent, whereby they could scarce have fail'd of “ discovering the many rich Gold Mines, which “ unquestionably are there, and from thence an “ immense Treasure might have been brought “ into this Kingdom.

“ THESE appear to be some of the pleasing “ Thoughts which entertain'd the Minds of the “ Authors in the first Formation of the Scheme, “ and could not but charm the Heart of every “ sincere well Wisher to the Prosperity of the “ Nation; but as no Age nor Country has been “ free from Persons, who, under the specious
 “ Name of Patriots, have malign'd and oppos'd “ every Thing that has appear'd for the com“ mon Benefit, whereof they have not been the “ Authors; falsely imagining, that whatever “ Credit any other Persons obtained is a Dimi“ nution to themselves; and thus it has hap“ pened in some respect in the Case before us.

“ FOR tho' this Scheme, as deliver'd to the “ Chancellor of the Exchequer, was by him, as “ we are well assur'd, offer'd to the Directors of “ the Bank, and they, as he says in his before “ quoted Speech, shew'd a great Backwardness “ in undertaking any Thing for the reducing the “ Publick Debts, and treated this Scheme with “ Contempt; yet, as soon as they found the “ South-Sea Company were like to come into it, the Bank and their Friends began to raise Objections to it, as not sufficiently advantageous to the Publick, there being no Certainty of what the Publick should gain by it; because, as the same was first propos’d, the Money payable to the Publick was only pro-rato, and in Proportion to the Sum of the Annuities and Debts which should be taken in.

“ THIS Objection caus’d that Alteration which was made in the Scheme, before the same was shewn to the Court of Directors; whereby the Company were to be obliged to pay the Publick a Million and a Half certain, in all Events for the Redeemables, whether any of them were taken in or not.

“ AND to this Opposition may be, as is before shewn, justly imputed the Beginning of the Destruction of that Scheme, and of the Misfortunes that ensued: Not that this was the only Share the Conduct of the Directors of the Bank had therein, as will appear by what follows:

“ FOR no sooner was this Scheme open’d in the House of Commons in Favour of the South-Sea Company, but (as is before set forth) it appear’d the Bank were come to a Resolution to be Competitors for it; which so warm’d the Spirits of the Proprietors of the South-Sea Company, that though what was first propos’d to them was but a Million and a Half for the Redeemables, and about the like farther Sum for the Annuities, or, pro-rato, for so many of them as should be taken in; yet they were prevail’d upon to make their Proposal 3,500,000 l. certain, for the Whole of the Annuities and Debts.

“ BUT the Bank’s Proposal (which was deliver’d at the same Time) amounted to above 5,500,000 l. which was above Two Millions more than the South-Sea Company’s Proposal.

“ THIS Proposal of the Bank, exceeding so much that of the South-Sea Company, gave the first Fire to the Imaginations of Mankind, that there was something more advantageous in this Scheme than had been conceiv’d; so that to this (as it may be safely call’d) extravagant Bidding of the Bank, may be attributed the subsequent Dealings in this Stock at such excessive and pernicious Prices.

“ IT was given out, That the Bank would considerably advance beyond their first Proposal, (which was not without Foundation, for it is certain they were advis’d, and had once agreed to make an Offer of Nine Millions) whereby the South-Sea Directors were driven in to the making the large Offer in their second Proposal: And from the Time of the Acceptance thereof, began those great Transactions in the Stock, which occasion’d all the Misfortunes that have happened. For though in Reality the Scheme was so much the worse, as the Money paid for it to the Publick exceeded what was at first propos’d, yet by the Opposition and great Offer of the Bank, People’s Minds were so heated, and their Persons so animated with Apprehensions of inconceivable Advantages, that from this Time they seem’d to throw away all Reason, and give themselves up wholly to Humour.

“ So that (as has been said) upon the Bank’s Competition and Opposition, may be charged the principal Cause of all the Misfortunes that follow’d.

“ NOR was this the last Step which the Directors of the Bank took, that contributed to our Misfortunes.

“ FOR though it had often been propos’d to them by their Proprietors, to lend Money upon their own Stock, yet they could never be brought into it, till the South-Sea Stock was greatly advanced, and then they came into a Resolution of lending Money on their own Stock, which could not be done with any other View, than that of raising it beyond its real Value, and farther pushing up of the South-Sea Stock, as Mr. Ayslabie has very well observed in his said Speech; wherein, Page 15, speaking of the Bubbles, he expresses himself as follows, viz.

“ MY Lords, I must not omit to take Notice, that this Spirit of Bubbling had prevail’d so universally, that to shew you what would have been the Case if the Bank had obtain’d the Scheme, the very Bank became a Bubble: And this, my Lords, not by Chance or Necessity, or from any Engagement to raise Money for the Publick Service, but from the same Spirit that actuated Temple-Mills, or Garraway’s Fishery. For this Purpose, my Lords, they entertained a Scheme in Imitation of the South-Sea, of lending Money upon their Stock, which as it contributed to raise the Price of their own Stock, so it furnished a Supply of Cash to the Gamesters in the Alley, that at once push’d up the Bubbles and the South-Sea to an immoderate Height. But as this was intended chiefly to advance their own Stock, let the Project come from what Hand soever, it was founded in the same Iniquity with any other Bubble, and was of ten Times more dangerous Consequence: For, as Bank Stock was raised by it from 150 l. to 245 l. and as it has from thence fallen to 130 l. there have been many Millions lost upon it, besides the fatal Consequences it had like to have had upon the Publick Credit; for, for Want of this Money, which was lock’d up in Loans upon their own Stock, and could not readily be come at, they were at a Loss when the Crash happened, and were forced to have Recourse to Subscriptions, supported chiefly by the Adventurers of the South-Sea, and to a Memorable Bargain with the South-Sea Company.

“ AND to confirm what Mr. Ayslabie says would have been the Case, if the Bank had obtained the Scheme, and to convince the World that the Bank (if they had had it) would have executed it at the highest Rate they could: One need only reflect how solicitous almost every Director of the Bank was to get into the Third Subscription; insomuch, that when the Directors of the South-Sea Company had limited, (in order to prevent that Subscription running up to an excessive Sum)

“ THAT no Member of Parliament (except such as were in the List of Persons in the Administration) nor Director of the Bank or East-India Company, nor Alderman of LONDON, should have more than 1000 l. in that Subscription. One of the most considerable Directors of the Bank of England, who was then a Member of Parliament, and an Alderman, as well as Director of the Bank, wrote a Letter to one of the Directors of the South-Sea Company, demanding to have 3000 l. in that Subscription, as having three of those Capacities, which were admitted to 1000 l. each; but the same was refus’d him, and he was forced (much against his Will) to be content with 1000 l. Subscription. But the then Governor of the Bank, being Deputy-Governor, was (though not without great Impertunity) admitted to 2000 l. in that Subscription.

“ FOR a further Confirmation of what has been “ said, it may not be improper to take Notice,
 “ that when the Directors of the South-Sea “ Company agreed to open a Subscription for the “ Redeemables, the South-Sea Stock happen’d “ to be about its highest; and then were the “ whole Body of the Directors of the Bank so “ sanguine, as to cause the following Letter to “ be written to one of the Directors of the “ South-Sea Company, viz.

S I R,

THE Bank being possess’d of several Sums in the Redeemables, transferrable in the Bank, not exceeding 300,000 l. and having resolved to write them in upon the present Subscription:
 We desire your Favour to inform us, whether we may depend upon its being effected. Your Answer this Evening, or To-morrow Morning early, will much oblige, S I R,

Your Humble Servants,

Bank, 12th
 July, 1720.

John Hanger, Governor.
 John Ward,
 Peter Delme,
 Nath. Gould.

THIS Letter being laid before the Court of Directors of the South-Sea Company, the Bank’s Request was complied with, whereof their Governor being acquainted, the several Species of the Bank’s Redeemables, which before were in several Names, were transferred into the Joint Names of Mr. Hanger, their Governor, and Sir John Ward, in order to their being subscribed into the South-Sea Company.

How far this Eagerness of the Bank contributed to the hurrying in the rest of the Redeemables, the Proprietors of those Debts are themselves the best Judges.

THE next Step of the Bank, is, that which Mr. Aislaby, in the Paragraph of his Speech before quoted, calls, The memorable Bargain with the South-Sea Company; who thinking it of Importance to their Credit, that their Bonds should be circulated, propos’d it to the Bank, and those Gentlemen undertook to circulate three Millions of South-Sea Bonds for one Year, at a certain Premium.

It was agreed also, That a Subscription should be taken by the Bank to carry on the said Circulation, and that in Consideration of this Undertaking, the South-Sea Company should pay 3,700,000 l. to the Bank in South-Sea Stock, the Stock being valued at 400 l. per Cent. The Minute of which Agreement between the said Companies is said to have been drawn up by Mr.
 Walpole; which Agreement was confirmed afterwards by the Court of Directors of each Company, and the Non-Performance of this Bargain on the Part of the Bank, they insist, ruin’d more Families than all the Transactions of the South-Sea Directors.

FOR, after this Bargain, made in so solemn a Manner, in the Presence of the principal Persons in the Administration, and by the Direction of the General Courts of both Companies, and reported to the General Court of the South-Sea Company, in the Presence of several of the Directors of the Bank, the most cautious Men were drawn in to embark their whole Fortunes in South-Sea
 Stock at near 400 l. per Cent.

ON this Occasion some farther Passages in Mr.
 Aislaby’s said Speech may be properly inserted.
 Who, in Page 15, (after having mention’d that Memorable Bargain of the Bank with the South-Sea Company) thus expresses himself. “ And “ here, my-Lords; while I am speaking on this “ Subject, give me Leave to lament the Fate of

“ the unhappy Proprietors of the Redeemable “ Debts, that were drawn in to subscribe their “ respective Estates; not so much from the Arts
 “ of the South-Sea Directors, as from the fatal “ Influence and Example of some of the chief “ Managers and Friends of the Bank; who,
 “ though they now make the greatest Claimour “ for Justice, were the first that subscrib’d the “ Redeemables into the South-Sea Company:
 “ And this, my Lords, they did not do by Sur“ prize or Mistake, but upon great Deliberation, “ having some Time before prepared for this “ Subscription, and purchased great Part of this “ Debt at advanc’d Prices for this Purpose.

“ I could not suspect there was any Intrigue “ or Deceit in this Transaction, till I saw from “ the extraordinary Motion in the Alley, and “ several private Hints that were given out, “ what was intended. I could not think it “ possible that the Gentlemen of the Bank,
 “ who had such great Interest in the Redeem“ ables themselves, should drop so many Thou“ sands of the unhappy Proprietors, who had “ depended so entirely upon them, and who “ would certainly have found their Way out of “ this cursed Labyrinth, if they had not been “ lulled asleep by this fallacious Agreement.

“ As for me, my Lords, I was throughly sa“ tisfied, that this Agreement of the Bank was a “ legal and a firm Bargain: And I can’t yet “ imagine with what Face of Justice or Equity “ they could ever break through it, without “ providing for the Safety of their Wards (if I “ may use that Expression) the Proprietors of the “ Redeemable Debts.

AND farther, in Page 19, he delivers himself thus: “ I do not intend, my Lords, by what I “ have said, to lay any Imputation upon the “ Bank of England, for, as in all great Bodies, “ there are few that are let into the Secret, I “ suppose it might so happen here: But, if what “ I have heard since be true, and what they say
 “ has been publicly avowed, that this Bargain
 “ was never intended to be kept, then, I say, it “ was not only a useful Secret to those that were “ in it, but the most compleat Stratagem of the “ whole Year.

“ THIS Contract the Bank never performed, “ therefore the General Court of the South-Sea “ Company, held in Sept. 1721, ordered their “ Directors to prosecute the Bank, effectually to “ oblige them to comply therewith; but they “ never made any Proceedings thereon, only “ read to their General Court the Opinions of “ three eminent Counsel, two of which gave it “ under their Hands, That the Bank could be “ compelled to perform that Agreement, but
 “ the third was doubtful.

“ BUT now to proceed to consider another “ Cause of the Misfortunes that have happened, “ which was, the Distemper of the Times, which “ captivated the Reason of Mankind in general,
 “ not only in England, but in all the neighbour“ ing Countries; who leaving the usual Methods “ of Labour and Industry to gain Estates, were “ all tainted with the fond Opinion of being rich
 “ at once, which caused many Persons, to engage “ much beyond their own Fortunes, not only in “ South-Sea Stock, but in every pernicious Bub“ ble that could be devised. And here needs “ only an Appeal to every Man’s own Con“ science, and to desire him to reflect on the “ Operations of his own Mind at that Time;
 “ and what he did and saw, and knew to be “ done by others.

“ How did Persons of all Ranks and Stations “ lay aside all Manner of Distance, and almost “ Decency, to become the humble Suitors for “ Subscriptions, not only to the Directors of the “ South-Sea Company, but also to the meanest
 “ and

“ and vilest of the People, who had but the Assurance to set up any Kind of Bubble, even without so much as knowing what the Thing was, into which they so earnestly pressed to be admitted Subscribers.

“ THIS Temper gave Rise to those numberless Swarms of Bubbles, which then pestered the Town, and which were set up with no other View or Design, than to get Subscriptions, but never to put the Affair into Execution; and were the Names and Numbers of those Bubbles and Sums paid in, together with the advanced Prices they actually sold at, collected and published, it would apparently shew, that the Mischief and Ruin which proceeded from them was more than the Losses sustained by the South-Sea Stock, before that memorable Bargain with the Bank; and yet it will easily be admitted, that these numerous Bubbles, selling at such extravagant Prices, did not a little contribute to advancing of South-Sea Stock to the high Price it arrived at.

“ THESE Bubbles were the more pernicious, in that they were generally traded in by the lower Part of the People, whose Circumstances would not permit them to buy South-Sea Stock or Subscriptions; but being “ infected with the then epidemical Disease, of becoming rich on a sudden, deserted their Shops and Trades, and their usual Methods of Industry, and were stripped of what by their former Diligence and Frugality they had acquired.

“ THAT which has caused Surprise to some considering Persons, is, that though the South-Sea Scheme was originally formed (as plainly appears by the foregoing Account) with a Design of great Advantage to the Publick, as well as to the Original Proprietors: And notwithstanding the same received so many Alterations between its first Formation, and passing into an Act, and the Execution of that Act has been attended with so many Misfortunes; nevertheless there still flow therefrom many and great Benefits, as well to the Publick as to the Original Proprietors; and yet the Directors of the South-Sea Company are punished in a Manner beyond any Precedent known in England, whilst the Projectors and Managers of the innumerable Bubbles set up, even without any legal Foundation, and with no other Intention than that of Fraud and Cheat, have not been so much as called in Question.

Thus far the Apology of the South-Sea Directors, in Behalf of themselves and their Scheme. But whether this be a full Answer to the Charge contained in the Act of Parliament for the Confiscation of their Estates, the following Votes of Parliament, and Resolutions of the Secret Committee, they will do well to consider.

2 February, 1720.

Resolved, by the House of Peers, That the South-Sea Directors declaring 30 per Cent. Dividend for the half Year ending at Christmas, and 50 per Cent. per Ann. for 12 Years after, was a villainous Artifice to delude and defraud his Majesty's good Subjects.

In which Resolution the Commons concurred.

16 February, 1720.

The Secret Committee of the House of Commons made their Report, from whence it appears that the following Portions of South-Sea Stock were taken in for the several Persons following, viz.

For the Earl of Sunderland, first Lord of the Treasury, at the Request of James Craggs, Sen. Esq; 50,000 l.

For the Dutches of Kendall, 10,000 l.

For the Countess of P. 10,000 l.

For the two Nieces of the Dutches of Kendall, 10,000 l.

For Mr. Craggs, Sen. 30,000 l.

For Charles Stanhope, Esq; 10,000 l.

For the Sword-Blade Company, 20,000 l.

It appeared also, That Mr. Aislaby, Chancellor of the Exchequer, had great Quantities of South-Sea Stock given him; and that a great deal more had been taken in by Members of both Houses of Parliament.

18 February, 1720.

Resolved, That the setting the Stock to Sale by Subscriptions at high Prices above the intrinsic Value by the Directors, was a gross and notorious Fraud, and one great Cause of the sinking the Publick Credit, and bringing upon the Nation the Distress it at present labours under.

Resolved. That the advising the late Directors to set the Stock to Sale by Subscriptions at high and extravagant Prices, or to declare the high and extravagant Dividends. aforesaid, by any Persons in the Administration, was a notorious Breach of the Trust reposed in them, to the Prejudice of his Majesty's Government, and the Interest of the Kingdom.

20 February.

Resolved, That the taking in or holding of Stock by the South-Sea Company, for the Benefit of a Member of Parliament, or Person in the Administration, while the Company's Proposals or Bill was depending, without a valuable Consideration or Security for the Acceptance or Payment for such Stock; and the Company's paying or allowing such Person the Difference arising by the advanced Price of the Stocks, were corrupt, infamous and dangerous Practices, highly reflecting on the Honour and Justice of Parliament, and destructive of the Interest of his Majesty's Government.

THE Commons taking into their Consideration that Part of the Report of the Secret Committee which related to John Aislaby, Esq; a Member of that House, Mr. Aislaby was heard in his Defence; and it being plainly proved that he had caused a Book of Accounts between him and Mr. Hawes to be burnt, and given him a Discharge for the Balance, amounting to 840,000 l. it was resolved, Nemine Contradicente, (among other Things) than the said John Aislaby had encouraged and promoted the dangerous and destructive Execution of the late South-Sea Scheme, with a View to his own exorbitant Profit, and had combined with the late Directors of the South-Sea Company in their pernicious Practices, to the Detriment of great Numbers of his Majesty's Subjects, and the Ruin of the Publick Credit, and the Trade of this Kingdom.

THEY resolved also, That he should be expelled the House and committed to the Tower, and a Bill brought in for restraining him from going out of the Kingdom, and from alienating his Estate, as was done in the Case of the Directors.

VOL. II.

AND the Adversaries of the South-Sea Scheme still continue to suggest, that the Confiscation of the Directors Estates by the Legislature, was far from being unjust; nay, it is affirmed, that such Indulgence was never shewn before to People in their Circumstances; for tho' it should be admitted that they were the Projectors of the Sinking Fund; that they put the Debts of the Nation in a Way of being paid, and rendered those Annuities redeemable, which before were irredeemable; yet it was done by such Methods as ought never to be countenanced or encouraged. Had they not given out that they were able to make such Dividends, the Annuitants had never been drawn in to subscribe their Annuities, and others to purchase Stock at those advanced Rates. There is no doubt but the Company had great Advantages by the Publick Debts being subscribed, and by the high Price at which their Stock was purchased; but what was the Company's Gain, was the Loss of Thousands and Ten Thousands; nor does the Competition of the Bank at all excuse the Rashness of the South-Sea Company in Bidding so vast a Sum for the Scheme as they were conscious could never be paid by any Gains the Company could fairly make. They had 'tis true improved their Original Stock by taking in the Debts. The Bank saw it, and would have been glad to have ingrossed those Debts for the very same Reasons the Company were so fond of them; but one would think both the one and the other infatuated, as well as the People, to bid so many Millions as they did, for the Execution of the Scheme. There is no doubt but the seeing these great Bodies Bidding against each other, did contribute to the advancing the Price of Stock, and if it should be admitted that the Bank had their Share in abusing the People, and inducing them to part with their Fortunes to purchase what had no Existence in Nature; it is not to be conceived how this Step of the Bank can excuse the South-Sea Company, who led the Way to all these Extravagancies. And can it be supposed, that the Proprietors of the Long Annuities could ever have been prevailed on to subscribe them, or other People to have given 3 or 400 l. for 100 l. Stock, if they had not been assured by the Directors it was worth so much, and that they could make Dividends in Proportion to those Prices.

THE Merit therefore of procuring the Annuities to be subscribed, which before were irredeemable, by giving out that their Stock was worth more than it really was (say the Adversaries of this Scheme) was no more than the Merit of a Sharper; had not the Annuitants been deceived in the Value, they would never have subscribed, and thought the bringing them in might lessen the National Debt, and be a very great Advantage to the Company, yet as it was accomplished by deceitful Arts, has very little Merit in it. The Government may be Gainers by the Scheme, as well as the Proprietors of the Original Stock; but if this Gain has arisen from the Losses innocent People have sustained, who confided in the Veracity and Probity of the Directors, who depended upon it that the Stock was of the Value they set upon it; What Excuse can they make for their Conduct? It is not to say, that there has only been a Revolution of Men's private Estates and Fortunes, and that what one has lost, another has gained; but the Question is, By what Means the Losers were induced to part with their Fortunes and beggar their Families? Whether the Annuitants were not deceived in the Value of Stock when they subscribed, by the Directors setting so high a Price upon it, and assuring them they could divide 20, 30, nay 50 l. per Cent. What Satisfaction faction is it to a Man that he has tricked into a disadvantageous Contract, and not forced into it? Or how is Publick Credit supported better the one Way than the other?

HAD the Government came with an armed Force and compelled Annuitants to accept of a less Sum than their Annuities were really worth, or shortened the Time for the Payment of them, this would have been justly looked upon as a Breach of the Publick Faith. And if by Stratagem, and in Prospect of imaginary Advantages, a Way is found out to over-reach these Annuitants, and induce them to part with their Annuities, or consent to a Redemption of them, for what is not a valuable Consideration, can any Government in Honour approve of such Practices, and not shew some Resentment against the Projectors of such Schemes?

SUCH Reflections as these we hear daily made (by the Adversaries of the South-Sea Scheme) and it seems incumbent on the Authors of it to give a more satisfactory Answer to them than they have hitherto done.

THE following Paragraph, taken from Cato's Letters upon this Subject, seems very much to the Purpose:

I Would gladly know what Advantage ever hath, or ever can, accrue to the Publick, by raising Stocks to an imaginary Value, beyond what they are really worth to an honest Man who purchases them for a regular Support to himself and Family, and designs not to sell them again till he hath Occasion for the Money they will produce. It can most assuredly serve no honest Purpose, and will promote a thousand knavish ones. Besides those before-mentioned, it turns most of the current Coin of England out of the Channels of Trade, and the Heads of all its Merchants and Traders off their proper Business. It enriches the worst Men and ruins the Innocent. It taints Mens Morals, and defaces all the Principles of Virtue and fair Dealing, and introduces Combination and Fraud in all Sorts of Traffick. It hath changed honest Commerce into Bubbling; our Traders into Projectors; Industry into Trickery, and Applause is earned when the Pillory is deserved. It hath created all the Dissatisfaction so much complained of, and all the Mischiefs attending it, which daily threaten us, and which give Reasons of standing or occasional Troops. It hath caused all the Confusion in our Publick Finances. It hath set up monstrous Members and Societies in the Body Politick, which are grown, I had almost said, too big for the whole Kingdom. It hath multiplied Offices and Dependencies in the Power of the Court, which in Time may fill the Legislature, and alter the Ballance of Government. It hath overwhelmed the Nation with Debts and Burthens, under which it is almost ready to sink; and it hath hindered those Debts from being paid off; for if Stocks sell for more, or much more upon the Exchange than the Prices, at which they are redeemable; or more can be got by Jobbing than by Discharging them, then all Arts will be used to prevent a Redemption.

As to the Trade carried on in the Spanish West-Indies by the South-Sea Company, though it appear at first View very beneficial, inasmuch as they export the Manufactures of Britain, and receive Treasure (chiefly) in Return; yet this (it is said) was done with as great Advantage formerly by the Way of Cadiz and the Flota, and that the fraudulent Practices of the Company's Agents in America, have been one principal Occasion of the ill Usage we have met with on that Side.

The PRESENT STATE of the SOUTH-SEA Company, as given us in a Speech made on the 14th of January, 1731-2, by Sir John Eyles, Sub-Governor of the said Company.

Gentlemen,

THIS General Court is called, in order to your declaring the Dividend for the half Year ended at Christmas last, and to lay before you some Affairs of special Importance, viz.

THE Situation of the Debt on Loans, contracted in the Year 1720.

THE Circumstances of the Greenland Trade, which by your Consent and Order has been carried on for the seven last Years.

To acquaint you with the State of the Trade to America since the Year 1721, thereby to satisfy you how unjust the Reports have been of great Losses thereby.

AND lastly, To acquaint you with the Measures your Court of Directors have, and still are taking, upon an Information they have received of a Breach of Covenants, committed by the Captain of your Annual Ship Prince William, in her late Voyage to Carthage and Porto-Bello.

THESE are Matters that will in their Course deserve your serious Consideration.

THE Dividend it is proposed should be 2 l. per Cent. the Warrants to bear Date the 25th of January, and payable the 11th of February, to which your concurrent Order is necessary.

As to the Matter of the Loans, the Company having brought an Action against Colonel John Duncomb for two several Sums of 4000 l. each, by him borrowed of the Company in the Year 1720, upon Stock, according to the Method then practised; the Cause was appointed to be tried at the Bar of the King's-Bench by a Special Jury, and the Trial came on on Monday the 15th of November last, before the Lord Chief Justice Raymond, and the other three Judges of the Court, and lasted near seven Hours.

It seemed to be the Opinion of the Court, that it was sufficiently proved on Behalf of the Company, that the Defendant had received of them the Sums laid in the Declaration, by Way of Loan; and that the only Point of Difficulty was, Whether it was intended and understood by the Company and the Borrowers, that the pledged Stock should be the only Security for the Money lent; or whether, notwithstanding the Pledge, the Borrowers Person remained liable. Accordingly this Point was particularly taken Notice of by the Lord Chief Justice, in summing up the Evidence. The Jury, after they had withdrawn for about a Quarter of an Hour, brought in their Verdict for the Defendant.

YOUR Directors are not sensible of any Misconduct on the Company's Part, and therefore think there is Reason to believe, that the Verdict was founded on the Point above-mentioned, which they apprehended to be the Merits of the Cause.

So that they have no Prospect of Success to encourage them to carry on any more of these Prosecutions.

IN stating the Circumstance of the Greenland Trade, it may be necessary to look back into the Proceedings of the General Courts held formerly upon that, among other Subjects, and the Resolutions then taken for the engaging therein, which, for the Revival of your Memory, we shall read to you from your Books.

Here the several Proceedings of the General Courts held the 1st of September, 1721, the 21st of September, and 5th of October, 1722, and 20th of May, 1724, we read.

THE Sub-Governor then proceeded as follows:

Gentlemen,

Gentlemen,

YOU observe by the Resolutions taken in the said Courts, your engaging in this Trade was determin'd by a very great Majority on a Ballot; and the Inducements arose from the Popularity and National Benefit of the Undertaking, the great Extent it is capable of, if attended with encouraging Success; and from the Probability your Directors then gave you, of your not being behind other Nations, in Point of Management or good Fortune.

IN Pursuante of the above Resolution, your Directors, in the Year 1724, built twelve new Ships proper for that Trade, of 300 Tons each; hired the great Dock at Deptford, and fitted it, together with the Warehouses, and other Buildings for their Purposes, against the Return of the said Ships from their Voyage.

IT fortun'd that their Success was superior to all other Nations, which encouraged the Directors, against the next Year, to build 13 more Ships of like Burthen, which made your Greenland Fleet consist of 25 Sail; after which, no further Increase was made, the Stock therein employ'd, which your Directors limited to Two Hundred Thousand Pound, being thought sufficient for the Experiment, till repeated Success should give new Reason to increase it.

IT has now been practis'd for seven Years, and though we have the Satisfaction, so far as our Credit is in Question, to say you have not been deceived in the Opinion given you by the then Directors, neither as to the Success in the Number of Whales taken, in Proportion to Foreigners, nor in the Point of Management or Economy; the regular Method and exact Frugality, which have been kept up in the Practice of the Trade, having been remarkable to every Observer; yet, the Produce of the Whales taken has been far short of the Expence incurred, insomuch that your Directors can by no Means encourage you to proceed further in the Exercise of this Trade, unless the Parliament shall think proper to give some further Advantages than have yet been granted to the Undertakers; towards which a Representation has been laid before the Administration; and, no doubt, every reasonable Encouragement will be given, but in what Shape, cannot yet be determined. When we can speak to you hereupon with more Certainty, we shall communicate the same to you, and take your further Orders: In the mean Time, 'tis fit we acquaint you, that as Expeditions on the Whale Fishery require the Readiness and Departure of the Ships in the Month of February to Davis's Streights, and the Beginning of April to Greenland, we have been under a Necessity of making Preparation for this Year's Fishery, although the Encouragements applied for are but in Expectancy, because, should we cease the Course of this Trade but for one Year, the Men Foreigners, as well as English, now trained up in the Art of the Fishery, will be dispersed on other Services, which will be a very great Inconvenience in Case you should be encouraged to continue it.

WE further think it our Duty, by acquainting you with the true State of your Affairs in Point of Commerce, carried on since the Year 1721, to remove the Insinuation which designing Men, in order to depreciate your Stock, and thereby to take Advantage of the Fears and Credulity of the Ignorant, have industriously spread abroad, viz. That there has not been less than Two Millions of Money lost by Trade.

IF this Insinuation has taken Rise from any who can be supposed to have had Opportunity or Authority to inspect your Books, they have shewn either their Ignorance in Accounts, or, which is worse, their little Regard to Truth, in sowing so unreasonable Jealousies to disturb the Credit of your Stock.

CREDIT is of a very nice and tender Nature, depending not only upon the Situation of publick Affairs between Nations, but also upon the Opinion the Possessors of Property have of its Security and Intrinsic Value, and of the Management and Care of those they entrust with the Conduct of their Concerns; whosoever therefore, by willful Misrepresentations, scatters unjust Apprehensions to sink Credit below, or unreasonable Hopes to advance it above its true and real Value, is guilty of a Fraud; and if any one commits such Fraud to profit thereby, the Offence is greatly aggravated: Your Directors, therefore, have ever avoided all vain and groundless Amusements, by giving any fallacious Appearance to your Affairs, or affectedly pretending them to be better or worse than they really are.

EVERY Body knows what Misfortunes this Company have undergone in the Course of their Commerce. Since you first began trading under the Affiento Contract, two Seizures of your Effects in the Indies have been made, upon the Misunderstandings with Spain, in the Years 1718 and 1727. And though upon the Accommodations of Affairs Restitutions have been afterwards ordered, and in good Measure complied with, yet these Recoveries have not been without great Loss and Diminution; besides, that every sudden Interruption to the Course of your Commerce is also attended with Loss and Damage; and the Expence of your Factories has been unavoidably as great, under the long Suspensions of Trade, as while carried on; by which Circumstances and Accidents, the promising Views of Advantage from your Commerce have been very much obstructed. To which we may add, some prejudicial Inconveniencies from the Method in which we found your Factories originally established; which Method could not well be altered till Experience shewed the Defect, and till the Interruption of Commerce in the Year 1727, gave sufficient Leisure and Opportunity of settling them on a new and better Establishment, which has since been done.

HOWEVER, under all these Misfortunes, Losses and Inconveniencies, which having been generally known, may consequently have given some Credit to the false Insinuations lately spread abroad, of the very great Losses that have been sustained, amounting, as has been reported, to no less than Two Million Sterling, we can assure you, that by an Account of your Payments and Receipts on Account of Trade, from March 25, 1721, to Christmas last, certified by your Accountant, and laid before your Directors, it appears, that you are not in Disburse one Shilling on Account thereof, which, we hope, will be a sufficient Satisfaction without saying more.

AT the Expiration of the calamitous Year 1720, when we, or some of us, were elected into your Service, we found your Affairs in the utmost Confusion imaginable abroad and at home. The Difference with Spain had continued from the Year 1718 to that Time, and till the following Year, whereby, and by the Death of many Factors abroad, Loss of Books, &c. the Debts and Dependencies arising from the first Sales of Goods and Negroes in all Parts of America, were left in great Obscurity and Hazard. At home we found your Cash low, a very heavy Load of Bonds, mostly issued in the Year 1720, on Account of the Long Annuities subscribed, without any Means or Provision for the Discharge of them; besides which, there was a Debt of a Million which had been borrowed of the Publick, and Seven Millions were also due by Agreement, for the Privilege of increasing your Capital. We also found you you engaged in a Contract for the Circulation of Exchequer-Bills: At the same Time, People concerned in the Money Subscriptions, and those of the Redeemable Debts, were in a confused Uproar, and all the Debtors upon Loans in the greatest Consternation; a tremendous Weight of Business upon those who then had the Care of your Affairs! which, however, by the Means you at last fell into and agreed upon, almost all your Difficulties were settled and adjusted: The Million owing to the Publick has been paid, the other Debt remitted by the Publick, and above half your Bonds have been discharg'd. Pending the Operation of those great Events, the Peace with Spain being obtained, the Company had the Notification thereof in Form, and of the Revival of the Affiento, with Cedula's of Restitution, and for the sending of an annual Ship to Porto Bello, which was accordingly dispatched that Year, and your Factories were immediately filled by a new Choice, according to the Plan we found they had been settled upon.

WE have mentioned so much of the disordered Situation of your Affairs in those unhappy Times, as an Argument only, by Way of Apology, had any Errors been committed in the new Commencement of your Commercial Affairs, before your then Directors were well inform'd in the Nature of them, and when they were fully employ'd in the most intricate and arduous Affairs. Experience gave your Directors new Lights to govern themselves by, and it has been their constant Application to reform and rectify every Thing that could possibly be put on a Foot better and securer from Injury and Abuse, towards which, as Occasions have offered, divers new Regulations have from Time to Time been made; yet it is no easy Matter to find a secure Check to every indirect Proceeding of Persons employ'd in your Service. Which leads us, lastly, to acquaint you with the Proceedings we are taking, upon an Information your Court of Directors have lately received concerning the Conduct of the Captain of your annual Ship Prince William, in her late Voyage to Carthagena and Porto Bello.

THE Sub-Governor having on the 19th Day of March last taken Notice to the Court of Directors, that by the common Report of Advices from St. Christopher's, your said Ship had touched at that Place, in her Passage, and taken in a Quantity of Goods, contrary to Covenants entered into, more strict and severe than were ever before formed, and contrary to Instructions and Orders, your Directors unanimously agreed in the following Resolution, viz.

THAT it be referred to the Committee of Correspondence, to inquire into the said Reports, and that they consider, in Case the same were found to be true, of such Means of procuring Satisfaction for any Damage the Company might receive thereby, in such Manner as might be least detrimental to the Company's General Affairs.

THE Committee were very careful in their Inquiry, and solicitous, agreeable to the Tenour of the Reference, that no Damage might be endanger'd to the Company in their Affairs with Spain, by this suspected Conduct of the Captain and the other covenanting Parties; and were at the same Time considering the most adviseable Means of obtaining Satisfaction for any Damage done the Company, so as to make Report of their Opinion upon the Whole, as soon as possible, after the Return of the Ship, and the obtaining the fullest Evidence that could be got of their Transactions.

ON the Return of the Ship, and the Application of the Sailors for their Wages, your Directors retaining a warm Resentment, ordered an Examination of the Officers and Sailors before their Payment, concerning the Practices at St. Christopher's. Accordingly the Common Sailors and all the Officers were examined, the Result of which amounted to nothing of Importance.

THIS Enquiry, however, in so publick a Manner, which your Directors, in Zeal for your Service, had ordered, raised more Speculation and Discourse abroad on this Subject than suited the true Interest of the Company, inasmuch as any Evidence to the Court of Spain of Exceedings in the Tonnage limited and allowed by the Affiento Treaty, may subject the Company to Inconveniences and Damages from the Complaints of Spain, infinitely greater than those otherwise sustained by the Company, especially at this Time, when the great Demands this Company has to make on the Crown of Spain, for their Infractions of the Treaty in Injury to you, are under the immediate Consideration of Commissioners appointed on the Part of both Nations.

THIS is a Peculiarity of Circumstance that attends this Company in Enquiries of this Nature, beyond that of any other Societies, that trade upon exclusive Charters: They trade where they please, within the Limits thereof, and to what Amount they think fit: You do not at all in Virtue of your Charter, but only under the limited Grant and Privilege of the Crown of Spain.

BESIDE the Officers and Sailors of the Prince William, the Captain himself was examined, who made some Confession, and offered to submit himself to be dealt with by the Court as they thought fit: But his Confession being not judged to contain the whole Truth, his Covenants were ordered to be put in Prosecution, and the Conduct thereof referred to the Care of a Committee.

WHILE the Committee were employed in taking such proper Measures as Counsel advised, Mr. Dundey Kidd, Chief Mate of the Prince William, signified to the Committee, that in Case the Court would indemnify him from the Penalties of his Covenants, he would inform the Court of all Proceedings at St. Christopher's; which, upon the Report of the Committee, was agreed to; and he accordingly, on the 17th of last Month came into Court, and gave Information in Writing of Goods taken on board at that Place, to the Amount, as he said he was told, of 150 Tons, which was immediately referred to the said Committee, to make the proper Use of.

THIS Information in a Moment become too much the Discourse of the Town to hope for any Avoidance of evil Consequences at the Court of Spain, by its being a Secret there.

THE Difficulty to which the Notoriety of the Proof of this Fact had reduced your Concerns in so critical a Conjunction, when you were just feeling the Sweets of Friendship with Spain, and when the Cedula for your next Annual Ship was on the Point of being dispatched, was too obvious not to require some immediate Thought how, if possible, to remove it: Your Sub-Governor therefore, that no Time might be lost, wrote a Letter the following Post to your Agent in Spain, instructing him how to behave on the Occasion, to prevent the evil Consequences otherwise to be feared; which Letter being communicated to the Court of Directors at the next Court, the same was unanimously approved; and it is hoped the Directions therein given may remove the Prejudice that Court might otherwise entertain against the Company, upon the Knowledge of this Affair.

IN the mean Time your Directors are busy in pursuing that reasonable Recompence they ought

ought in Justice to expect from the Offenders, for the particular Damage the Company may have suffered.

HAVING thus opened to you the several Matters we had to lay before you, we hope we have given you Satisfaction in so doing.

THEN the said General Court agreed, that the Dividend for the half Year ended at Christmas, be two per Cent. in Money, and be paid the 11th of next Month. Acquiesced in Opinion, as the Trial with Colonel Duncomb went against the Company, not to prosecute any more of the Debtors on the Loan of the Year 1720. Also that the Greenland Trade go on this Year, in Hopes of the Favour of the Parliament.

THE General Court having desired to be acquainted with the State of the Company's Bonds, the Sub-Governor informed them thereof.

THE foregoing Account of the Company's Trade, and of their Bonds, and the general Conduct of the Governors and Directors being much to the Court's Satisfaction, a Motion was made and insisted on, That the Thanks of the General Court be given to them for their just and wise Administration of the Company's Affairs; which the Sub-Governor handsomely waved, and declined to put, signifying to the Court, That he had found their Favour at Elections, which was sufficiently pleasing to him: But the Court insisting on the Motion, the Secretary put the said Question, which was carried Nemine Contradicente.

It appeared to the Court, that 200,000 l. had been employed in the Greenland Trade, of which 150,000 l. had been laid out in Shipping, and about 50,000 l. was lost by that Trade: In the Year 1721, 640,000 l. had been lost or sunk in the Assiento Trade; but since that Time 250,000 l. had been received more than sent out: In the Year 1721, the Company owed on Bonds above 4,400,000 l. but now not 2,000,000 l.

The WHARFS and KEYS of the PORT of LONDON.

FOR ascertaining the Port of LONDON for the Use of Merchants, King Charles II. by Virtue of an Act of Parliament in the 14th Year of his Reign, intituled, An Act for preventing Frauds, &c. did issue out a Commission under the Seal of the Court of Exchequer, in the 19th Year of his Reign, Anno 1667, to the Lord High Chancellor, the Lord High Treasurer, and many other Officers of State, and other eminent Persons, Citizens and others, to regulate the Port of LONDON, and for the assigning and appointing all such and so many open Places to be Keys and Wharfs, as should be meet for the shipping and landing of Goods, Wares and Merchandizes within the said Port of LONDON; and for the appointing, limiting and bounding all those Places by sufficient Meets and Limits, and to set the Number, Heighth, Breadth, Form and Building of all the Cranes that are, or shall be built upon the said Wharfs; and to set down and appoint the Extent, Bounds, Limits and Privileges of the said Port. In Pursuance of this Commission, the said Commissioners made a Certificate, dated at the Custom-House, May 24, 1667, of all the lawful Keys, Wharfs, and Places for landing, 21 in all; and the Limits of each set forth, East, West, and Northward. And they certified the common Key, called Billingsgate, to be a common open Place for the landing or bringing in of Fish, Salt, Victuals or Fewel of all Sorts, and all native Materials for Building and for Fruit, and for carrying out the same, and for no other Wares or Merchandizes. And they certified concerning the Bridge-House in South- wark, that it may be allowed as a Place convenient for the landing of any Kind of Corn, bought and provided for the Provision or Victualing of the City. To this Certificate Anthony Lord Ashley, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir William Morrice, Secretary of State, and 30 more subscribed. And lastly, To confirm and ratify this Certificate, the King allowed it by an authentic Instrument under the Seal of the Exchequer, and directed the Execution thereof. The Certificate and Confirmation are as follow:

A CERTIFICATE, in Pursuance of his Majesty's Commission for regulating the Port of LONDON, and bounding and limiting the Wharf and Keys thereof, &c. Together with his Majesty's Commission approving and confirming the same, and directing the Execution thereof.

BY Virtue of his Majesty's Commission under the Seal of his Majesty's Honourable Court of Exchequer hereunto annexed, bearing Date the 29th Day of March last past, to us and others directed, for the assigning and appointing all such, and so many open Places to be Keys and Wharfs, as shall be meet for the shipping and landing of Goods, Wares and Merchandize within the said Port of LONDON, and for the appointing, limiting, bounding and settling all those Places by sufficient Meets, Limits and Bounds; and also to set forth the Number, Heighth, Breadth, Form and Building of all the Cranes that are or shall be built upon the said Wharfs; and to set down and appoint the Extent, Bounds, Limits and Privileges of the said Port, according to the Tenor of an Act of Parliament made and enacted in the 14th Year of his Majesty's Reign, intituled, An Act for preventing Frauds, and regulating Abuses in his Majesty's Customs.

WE the said Commissioners, by Virtue of his Majesty's said Commission, have, the twenty third Day of April, in the said nineteenth Year of his Majesty's Reign, and at several Days and Times sithence, searched, surveyed and viewed, and inquired into, by the best Ways and Means we could, all and every the convenient and useful open Place and Places, to be Keys or Wharfs for the shipping, lading, or landing of Goods, Wares and Merchandizes within the said Port of LONDON, below the Bridge towards the Sea; and the Heighth, Length and Breadth, and Form of Building of all the Cranes which are or shall be built thereupon; and also the Extent, Bounds, Limits and Privileges of the said Port, in Manner and Form hereafter following; and do declare all other Places within the said Port to be unlawful for the shipping or landing of Goods, Wares or Merchandize, and utterly to be debarred from that Privilege by Force of the said Statute, and other Premises. And, First, We humbly conceive and certify, that the Keys, Wharfs and Places hereafter named, may be assigned, appointed and allowed by his Majesty to be lawful Keys, Wharfs or Places for the shipping, lading, or landing of Goods; that is to say, the Wharf or Key called

1. Brewers Key, bounded on the East with Tower-dock, containing from East to West seventy three Feet, and in Breadth from the River of Thames Northward, forty Feet in the narrowest Place.

2. Chester's Key, containing from East to West fifty one Feet, and from the River of Thames Northward, forty Feet in the narrowest Place.

3. Galley Key, containing from East to West one hundred and one Feet, and from the River of Thames Northward, forty Feet in the narrowest Place.

21. Fresh Wharf, containing from East to West one hundred and fifteen Feet, and from the River of Thames Northward forty Feet in the narrowest Place.

Item, We do also humbly conceive and certify, that the common Key or Place called Billinggate, containing from North to South one hundred seventy one Feet and a Half, and in Breadth from East to West forty Feet, to be a common open Place for the landing or bringing in of Fish, Salt, Victuals or Fewel of all Sorts, and all native Materials for Building, and for Fruit, (all Manner of Grocery excepted) and for carrying out the same, and for no other Wares or Merchandize: And that if the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City shall think fit to fill up any Part of the said Dock at the North End thereof, not exceeding forty Feet in Length, the same Ground so filled up may have the same Privilege as the rest of the Wharf before described.

Item, We think fit, and humbly certify, that the Bridge-house in Southwark may be allowed as a Place convenient for landing of any kind of Corn, bought or provided for the Provision or Victualling of the City, and not upon any private or particular Person's Account, and for no other Goods or Merchandize.

Item, We think it reasonable, and do humbly advise, that it may be lawful for any Person to ship or lade into any Ship or Vessel on the River of Thames, bound over Seas, and lying between London and Woolwich, any of the Goods or Merchandize hereafter mentioned, viz. Horses, Coals, Beer, ordinary Stones for Building, Fish taken by any of his Majesty's Subjects, Corn or Grain; provided that the Custom and Duties of such Goods be duly paid, and Cockets or other lawful Warrants passed for the same, and delivered to the Searcher, or one of his Majesty's Under-Searchers, and shipped in the Presence of some of them, and in the Presence of a Deputy, to such Persons as shall be appointed from Time to Time to manage or receive the Customs in the Port of LONDON, and no otherwise.

Item, We humbly advise, That it may be lawful for any Person or Persons to unship and lay on Land, Deal Boards, Balks, and all Sorts of Masts, and great Timber, at any Place of the River of Thames, betwixt Westminster and Lime-house-Dock; provided the Owner of such Goods do first pay or compound for the Custom and other Duties, and declare the Place at which they will land them, before they unship any of the Goods, to the Officers or Farmers of the Customs thereof for the Time being, and receive Sufferance or Permission from them so to do; and that they unship none of the said Goods but in the Presence of a Waiter or Officer appointed thereunto, unless by special Licence of the said Officers or Farmers of the Customs for the Time being; otherwise the said Goods to be liable to Forfeiture according to Law.

AND to the End the Buildings upon the Wharfs and Keys afore-named may be carried on with the most Conveniency, Regularity and Ornament, and

and be kept at forty Feet Distance from the Wall, Key or Wharf which bounds the River of Thames, according to an Act of the now Parliament, lately passed for rebuilding the City of LONDON: We humbly advise, That it may be lawful for the Owners or Possessors of the several Wharfs, called, Lyon Key, Sommers Key, Dice Key, and Sab's Dock, to fill up or wharf over and enlarge into the River of Thames so much as will make the Front of their Wall or Campshot range equally with the adjoining Keys or Wharfs, that is to say, that Lyon Key, the whole Length thereof being thirty six Feet nine Inches, may be enlarged into the Thames eight Feet in Breadth, to make it equal to the outmost Point of Botolph Wharf; and that Sommers Key, being seventy four Feet in Length, may be enlarged into the Thames the same Breadth of eight Feet from the said Lyon Key to Billinggate; and that the Dock or Inlet at Dice Key, being fifty seven Feet in Length, may be enlarged into the River of Thames twenty four Feet four Inches, to make it range equal with other Parts of the said Key on the West Side, and with Ralph's Key on the East Side thereof: And that Sab's Dock, being now open in an irregular Form, may be arched, wharfed over, or filled up, to make the same front the Thames in a right Range with the Walls or Campshots on both Sides of it: And in Case the said Keys and Dock, or any of them, shall be so filled up or wharfed over, we think it reasonable, that from thenceforth the general Wharf of forty Feet to be left next the Thames, be reduced accordingly.

AND for further Ornament and Conveniency in the Buildings which shall be erected upon the said Wharfs to front the River of Thames, according to the Intent of the Act of Parliament for Rebuilding the City, We think it necessary, and do declare, That if any of the said Houses or Buildings be intended for Warehouses, or hereafter so employed, yet nevertheless the two upper Stories and Garrets of the said Houses be made, and from Time to Time continued with glazed Windows: And if the said Stories or Garrets be made use of as Warehouses, and be made with Doors outward to receive in Goods, yet those Doors to be made in the Form of Doors or Valves for Balconies, to open with double Leaves to the Bottom of the Floor whereunto they are placed.

Item, We think fit that the Number of Cranes upon the said several Wharfs be at the Erection of the Owners or Possessors of the Ground, provided they exceed not the Dimensions following, viz. a single Crane with one Wheel twelve Feet in Breadth, and a double Crane with two Wheels twenty Feet, and each of them in Depth or Length from the Wall or Campshot, twenty one Feet at the most; and that the said Cranes, as well single as double, be kept open and free for common Passage from the Ground to the Floor under the Wheels without any other Inclosure, Partition, Separation or Hinderance by Posts or Spurns, than the necessary Posts or Timbers which support the same at both Ends; and that the open Height of the said Crane be at least ten Feet and a Half from the Ground to the Floor under the Wheels, that Carts and Carriages may freely pass under them.

AND, to prevent all Incroachments, Incumbrances and Abuses that may be made or committed upon the said Wharfs, Keys or Cranes, We do think fit, and do hereby declare, That it shall not be lawful for any Person to build any Outsets, Jets, Penthouses, Warehouses, Rooms, Lodgings, or any Manner of Posts, Sheds or Buildings, contiguous or annexed to the said Cranes, or any Part of the open Wharf, of forty Feet in Breadth, described as aforesaid, more than what is convenient about the Cranes for the Wheels to work in and upon, and sufficient Covering thereunto, not exceeding the Height, Breadth and Length aforesaid: And, for further Ornament, in Regard those Cranes stand in the most publick View of the River, that they be laid in Oil, and coloured Blue, and in the Front thereof, towards the Thames, be placed the King's Arms, painted and set in an Escutcheon or other Frame, with a decent Moulding about it, of at least four Feet and a Half in Diameter.

Item, We have advised, and do think fit, That all the Passages, Lanes or Cartways, leading to the said Keys or Wharfs from Thames-street, and every of them, be made of the Breadth of eleven Feet at the least; but if any was of a larger Breadth or Dimension heretofore, this shall not be construed or meant to lessen or straiten it, but that it continue at the antient or larger Dimension.

Item, We think fit that the several Keys and Wharfs described and allowed to be free Places for Shipping and Landing of Goods and Merchandize as aforesaid, and which according to the Tenor of the said Act of Parliament for Rebuilding the City, is and ought to be left open and free at the Distance of forty Feet from the Water-side, shall not be separated or divided one from another by any House, Wall, Pale, Post, Rail, or other Impediment whatsoever, but only by meer Stones or Marks in the Pavement for the Distinction of Propriety, and not otherwise.

Item, We think fit, and do hereby declare, That if any Wharfinger or Owner of any of the Wharfs or Grounds allowed for Shipping, Lading or Landing of Goods or Merchandize as aforesaid, do not conform to the present Form, Rules and Method hereby prescribed and directed for their Wharfs, Cranes, or Buildings, or hereafter shall discontinue or alter the same, or make new Incroachments thereupon: That after publick Notice given by any three or more of the principal Officers or Farmers of his Majesty's Customs, by fixing up a Writing under their Hands upon the Wharf where the Fault shall be committed, declaring the Offence, and limiting a Day and Time for the Amendment thereof; which if not amended or performed accordingly, that then such Wharf, or Crane, shall from thenceforward be no more reputed or taken, or have the Benefit or Privilege as a lawful Place of Shipping, Lading or Landing of Goods or Merchandize; but be thenceforward utterly debarred thereof, unless restored by his Majesty's special Warrant; and nevertheless the said Buildings, Alterations and Incroachments to be demolished and removed, as the Law in that Case hath directed.

YET nevertheless, notwithstanding any Advice, Declaration or Appointment herein before mentioned concerning the Keys, Wharfs or Places of Shipping, Lading or Landing of Goods and Merchandize, if at any Time it shall seem reasonable to the principal Officers or Farmers of the Customs for the Time being, and consistent with his Majesty's Service, to give Sufferance or Permission for the Shipping, Lading or Landing any Goods or Merchandize at any other Place or Places, or in any other Manner than is herein before nominated and advised, or assigned to be lawful Keys and Wharfs, it shall and may be lawful for them so to do; and such Sufferance and Permission shall be good and warrantable, without any Forfeiture or Advantage to be taken against the Goods so landed, notwithstanding any Thing herein before declared to the contrary.

BUT if his Majesty shall be pleased to reduce all the lawful Keys and Wharfs to the Space of Ground betwixt London-bridge and the Tower, which will be a great Improvement to the Owners thereof, We do humbly advise, and hereby declare, declare, That whosoever shall accept of, or from henceforward employ any of those Keys or Wharfs by Virtue of such Concession to the Use of Shipping, Lading or Landing of Goods and Merchandize, that it is to be understood, and it is hereby declared to be with this Covenant and Condition, That they perform all and singular the Orders, Assignments and Appointments, which on their Parts and Behalves is herein before declared to be performed and done, and not otherwise.

AND for the avoiding the Incumbrance and Annoyance which will daily happen, to the Disturbance of his Majesty's Service, and Inconvenience to Merchants in taking up their Goods at the said Keys and Wharfs, by suffering Cars to stand empty upon the said Wharfs and open Places allowed by the Law for other Purposes; We think it necessary that the several Wharfingers, or Possessors of any the said Keys or Wharfs, or their Servants, shall not suffer to stand or remain upon their Wharfs, or Passages leading to them from Thames-street, any more than such Cars or Carts as shall be immediately called to lade or take up Goods, Wares or Merchandize there: And if any other Car or Cart shall presume to come down empty, without being called by the Owners or Agents employed in taking up of Goods, and there stand, to the Disturbance and Hindrance of the Service aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the said Wharfingers, or their Servants, by lawful and peaceable Means to force them off; and in Case of Refusal, to prosecute them farther by such Rules, Orders and Punishments, as by the Laws and Customs of the City they may or ought to do.

AND to prevent all future Differences and Disputes touching the Extent and Limits of the Port of LONDON, and the many Frauds and Abuses which have been acted and committed, as well upon and within the River of Thames, as without the Mouth thereof upon the Sea, we think it necessary, and do humbly advise, that the said Port may be declared by his Majesty to extend, and be accounted from the Promontory or Point, called Northforeland, in the Isle of Thanet, and from thence Northward in a supposed right Line to the opposite Promontory or Point, called the Nase, beyond the Gunfleet, upon the Coast of Essex, and so continued Westward through the River of Thames, and the several Channels, Streams and Rivers falling into it, to London-bridge, saving the usual and known Right, Liberty and Privilege to the Ports of Sandwich and Ipswich, and either of them, and the known Members thereof, and of the Customers, Comptrollers, Searchers, and their Deputies, of and within the said Ports of Sandwich and Ipswich, and the several Creeks, Harbours and Havens to them or either of them respectively belonging, within the Counties of Kent or Essex; but that every Part and Place of the River of Thames and Sea within the Limits and Bounds aforesaid, not included or belonging to the said Ports of Sandwich or Ipswich, or the several Creeks, Harbours or Havens to them, or one of them respectively belonging, within the said Counties of Kent or Essex, shall be deemed and taken to be within, and Part and Parcel of the Port of LONDON.

AND whereas by the Act of Parliament for Rebuilding the City of LONDON, it is Enacted, That for the Prevention of Inundations, and for Easiness of Ascent, the Street called Thames-street, and all the Ground between the said Thames-street and the River of Thames, shall be raised and made higher by three Feet at the least, above the Surface of the Ground as it now lieth: And whereas by exact Survey and Levels lately made of the Surface of the Ground, and the several Wharfs and Campshots bounding the River of Thames from London-bridge to Tower-dock, it is found that the Grounds, Wharfs and Campshots aforesaid have been heretofore of different and unequal Heights, and those made now much more unequal by Rubbish and Alteration, which hath happened by the Accident of the late Fire, by Means whereof the antient Surface of the Ground and Campshots are hardly distinguishable: And whereas it is also found that the Wharf called Sommer's Key, is, in Pursuance of the said Act, raised higher than any of the rest, insomuch that it now appears to be now five Feet above the High-Water Mark at an ordinary Spring-Tide, which is judged sufficient Height against all Inundations: Therefore according to the true Intent and Meaning of the said Act of Parliament, we hold it necessary to declare, that all the other Keys, Wharfs and Campshots aforesaid be raised to an exact Level with the same: And accordingly it will be found, that the several Places hereafter named ought to be raised from the present Height as followeth, viz. Brewer's Key one Foot six Inches, Chester's Key one Foot six Inches, Galley Key two Feet, Wool Dock one Foot nine Inches, Customhouse Key, on the East Part thereof ten Inches, and on the West Part thereof one Foot, Porter's Key one Foot, Bear Key on the East Part thereof one Foot six Inches, and on the West Part thereof two Feet, Wiggon's Key one Foot, Young's Key eight Inches, Ralph's Key six Inches, Dice Key one Foot, Smart's Key one Foot four Inches, Billingsgate two Feet, Botolph Wharf six Inches, Cock's Key six Inches, Graunt's Key one Foot, and Fresh Wharf six Inches: And for the Easiness of Ascent, that all the said Ground be continued from the Water-Side to Thames-street, in an equal and gradual Ascent to the Height that is to be there set forth and limited, according to the Intent and true Meaning of the Act of Parliament aforesaid.

AND lastly, We do humbly advise, that no further or other Passage be made or enlarged to the Wharfs, or any Part of the River of Thames, from Thames-street within the Limits aforesaid, other than the antient and common Passages to the same.

FANSHAWE.

TRINITY-HOUSE.

TO these Corporations of Merchants may be subjoined the Corporation of Mariners, one of the most considerable Bodies in England for the

the Use of it, both for the Conduct and Safety of Merchants Ships, and also of the Royal Navy.

IN Water-lane, in Tower-street Ward, this Corporation, commonly called Trinity-House, hath their House (beside that more antient one at Deptford-Strond) conveniently seated, and nearer at hand for the Dispatch of their frequent Business within the City, and where their Ballast Office is also kept.

THEIR first Charter, whereby there were embodied into a Society, or Guild, bore Date the 20th of March, in the fourth Year of King Henry VIII. The Shipmen and Mariners of England were then incorporated by the Name of the Master, Wardens and Assistants of the Guild, Fraternity or Brotherhood of the most Glorious and Undividable TRINITY, and of St. Clement in the Parish of Deptford-Strond in the County of Kent. And, since, they have been confirmed by Letters Patents from divers Kings and Queens of the Realm.

THE Members of this Corporation are called Elder and Younger Brethren; whereof there be only thirty-one elder Brethren; but the Number of the younger Brethren is unlimited, there being some Hundreds of them: And it is free for all Seafaring Men that desire it, to be admitted into the said Corporation.

THE Ends and Intents of this Foundation were for the Increase and Encouragement of Navigation, for the good Government of the Seamen, and the better Secutity of Merchants Ships; and a Power is granted them in their Charter to make By-Laws for the said good and useful Purposes.

THEIR Government is by a Master, four Wardens, eight Assistants, and eighteen elder Brethren, in all thirty one; whereof the Master and two of the Wardens are annually chosen every Trinity Monday; usually at their antient House at Deptford-Strond, the others being for Life.

THEIR General Courts are accidental, as Occasion and Business requires: But their constant Weekly Meetings for more ordinary Business are on Wednesdays and Saturdays, where the Master and Wardens, and some of the Brotherhood are present.

THE great Uses and important Services of this Corporation will appear by some particular Account of the Businesses they are employ'd about, viz.

THAT formerly most of the Sea-Causes came down hither, which are now generally decided at Common Law; yet sometimes (though more sparingly) such Causes are brought before this Court to judge and conclude.

THEY hear and report such Maritime Causes as come referred hither from the Admiralty Court; though the final Determination thereof belong to the Judge of the Admiralty.

THEY examine, and report to the Navy Board, if required, the Fitness of Masters for the King's Ships, and certify what Rate the Ships are they take the Charge of, and give Certificates and Testimonials to the said Masters, under the Master and Wardens their Hands.

THEY survey the Provisions of the Navy, and whatever else may belong to it.

THEY examine, authorize and appoint all Pilots under the Seal of the Corporation, as well for taking Charge of the Royal Navy, as other Merchants Ships. They also send Pilots aboard the King's Ships from Time to Time, as they have Occasions for them.

THEY used to bind and enroll Apprentices to the Sea; though many, or most, are bound elsewhere now a-days.

THEY examine and certify the Proficiencies and Abilities of the Mathematical Children of the Royal Foundation of King Charles II. in Christ-Church Hospital, before they be bound out.

ALL Mathematical Teachers have their respective Qualifications and Learning examined and certified, who have been of late appointed aboard by the Lord Admiral, for the teaching of Voluntiers that go on board the King's Ships, which extend but to the Third Rate, and so downwards.

THEY are liable, at an Hour's Warning, to serve the King at Sea, and to attend upon Summons at every Admiralty-Sessions.

AND further, for the Good of Navigation, to them belong the Service and Power of erecting, placing and maintaining several Light-Houses, Buoys and Beacons, or other Sea-Marks upon the Coasts of England, and in the Mouth of the River of Thames, and to alter and shift the same, as there may be Occasion from Time to Time, for the better Security of Ships, according to an Act of the Eighth of Queen Elizabeth.

FOR which End the Brethren do frequently survey the North and South Channels leading to the River, and are watchful to observe the Alteration and Increase of all such Lands and Shoals as may arise in the Channels, or in any Port or Harbour of this Kingdom; upon Signification some Time from the Parliament, some Time from the Lord Admiral, or Commissioners of the Navy; and do accordingly erect their Buoys and Marks.

MOREOVER, such Places and Towns at a further Distance, that are minded to have Buoys or Light-Houses for their Benefit, and do send to the House for that Purpose, upon their Desire and Contribution thereunto, the House doth place and erect accordingly.

To them belong the sole Care and Power of ballasting all Ships going out of the River of Thames; which Ballast is to be taken from such Shelves as may be most dangerous for Ships, and for the better cleansing and deepening the River.

FURTHER, upon Request of Masters and Merchants, concerning the Loading of Ships coming into the River of Thames, they do certify the dead Fraught, or Goods damnified through ill Stowage or the like.

Lastly, They give Licence to poor aged and maimed Mariners to row only a-crofs the River of Thames, Ratcliff Stairs, &c. for their Livelihood, exclusively of the Company of Watermen.

AFTER the Maintenance of their Buoys, Sea-Marks, &c. and other necessary Expences of the Corporation, the Remainder of their Revenue is applied wholly to the Relief of poor decayed Seamen, their Widows and Orphans, and none other.

THEY have eighty seven Alms-houses at Deptford and Mile-end, all built in a Manner since the Restoration; wherein are harboured and maintained the like Number of such, being poor decayed Masters or Pilots, and their Widows, and none else, at the monthly Allowance of 12, 16, and the Governors 21 s. besides new Broad Cloth given them every Year; and Coals for Firing every Year.

Two Chaplains are likewise provided and paid by the Corporation, to read Prayers thrice a Week, or oftener, to each Company of Alms-People in their respective Chapels.

BESIDES whom, they relieve by monthly Pensions upwards of two thousand other poor Seamen and their Widows, allowing some more, some less, according to their Necessity.

WHICH Charitable Contributions in the Whole amount to between 5000 and 6000 l. per Annum, with some Repairs.

THEIR great Charities reach also further to all accidental poor Seafaring Men, or their Wives and and Widows, whom they are satisfied to be Objects of Commiseration by Reason of any Misfortunes of the Sea, whom they every Wednesday and Saturday relieve out of their Poor's Box, which they have therefore, for that Purpose, always at hand: It is made of Brass, with two Keys, whereof the Master keepeth one; given by John Wodecote, Master, Anno 1597, as is inscribed upon it; as also these three Sentences to the same Import, in English, Dutch, and French, viz. Remember the Poor. Gbedent den Armen. Ayes Souvenance du Pouvre. That all those Nations to whom this Box should upon Occasion be offered by this Corporation, might be excited to bestow their Charity: So that if any Seamen have been cast away at Sea, or are to travel to some distant Place or County to their own Dwelling, or are fallen sick or the like, and bring good Testimonials thereof, they are ever relieved with Money, more or less, according to the Discretion of the Master, Wardens, and the rest of the Elder Brothers. But Christmas especially is a Time that this Charity is most largely and universally distributed to all that come for Alms, and bring Certificates either from the Masters of Ships, or other substantial Persons of good Credit, that they are proper Objects of Charity. At Christmas, 1705, they expended in this charitable Way of Contribution above 200 l. whereof 1200 and more partook.

THEIR Benefits and Revenues (whereby they are able to do all this) ariseth from Light-Money, Buoys, Beaconage, Ballastage, and from the Benefactions of the Brethren and others; which are contingent, and so no certain State to be made thereof.

IN Consideration of the weighty and necessary Services to the Publick from this eminent Corporation, and that they, their Ships, and Servants, are to be at his Majesty's Call, they have several Privileges and Immunities granted them; as, to be exempted from serving in the Militia on Land-Service, or to be contributory thereunto; also from serving on Juries and Inquests, and the like. This Favour is indulged all the Brethren, both Elder and Younger, their Officers and Servants.

THERE is in this Trinity-House a Table hung up of the Orders, Constitutions and By-Laws, made by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Guild, Fraternity or Brotherhood of the most Glorious and Undividable Trinity, and of St. Clement, in the Parish of Deptford-Strond, in the County of Kent, touching the Conversation, good Estate, wholesome Government, Maintenance and Increase of the Navigation of this Kingdom, and of the Mariners and Seafaring Men within the same, by Virtue of several Charters, and Letters Patents, made unto the said Corporation by several Kings and Queens of this Realm; and, particularly, of a Charter of Constitution and Confirmation of the same made by King James II. dated the 8th of July, in the first of his Reign. It consisted of twelve Articles:

THE First is, Concerning any Master or Pilot, or other Seamen, refusing to appear, when they shall be summoned before the Corporation. The Forfeit whereof is 13 s. and 4 d. if a Master or Pilot; and if other Mariner, 2 s. for the first Default, 3 s. and 4 d. for the second, to the Use of the Poor of the Corporation; and for the third, to be punished at the Discretion of the Company, the Fine not exceeding such a Sum.

THE Second, Concerning such Seamen as go to Sea without paying such Duties as they ought to the Corporation. At the next Return into the River to pay double so much, over and beside the Duty which from them may grow due for the said Voyage at their Return.

THE Third, Concerning the Masters of Ships, or their Mates, to be aboard their Vessels, to see the Merchants Goods safe taken in, if the Vessel be at Blackwall or above, from the Time any Ship or Vessel within the River of Thames, or any Creek or Harbour of the same, shall receive into her any Merchants Goods to be transported. And at the Return of every Ship, the Master or his Mate to be aboard, to see the Merchants Goods orderly and safely delivered, if at Blackwall or above: And if below Blackwall, then the Master or his Mate to be aboard three Times in a Week, or every other Day for the Purposes aforesaid, and for every Time neglecting, to forfeit 6 s. and 8 d. The Master, Boatswain, Gunner and Carpenter, or two of them, to lie on Board, while the Ship shall have any Goods remaining in her, upon Forfeiture of 5 s.

THE Fourth, Concerning Powder taken aboard Ships before their Departure out of the Thames, and kept aboard at their Return; and also concerning heating of Pitch, Tar, Rosin, Grease, Tallow, Oil, &c. whence hath happened great Losses by Fire. No Ship outward-bound to receive on board any Powder before she shall be at or below Blackwall, and not till within twenty-four Hours after her coming to an Anchor there, or at the Place of her unlading, upon Penalty of 5 l. to the Poor of the Corporation: The Master to take Care not to suffer Pitch, Tar, Rosin, &c. to be heated on board by Fire, Loggerhead Shot, or any other Thing, but to be done upon the Shore, or in a Boat being a Shore, upon the Penalty of 3 l.

MASTERS to take Care in drying their Bread-Rooms, and not to dry them in the Night, or keep any Fire therein in the Night-time, upon Penalty of 5 l.

THE Fifth, Every Master homeward-bound, to unshot all his Guns before, or as soon as he arrives at Gravesend, upon Penalty of 20 Nobles. And no Master above Blackwall to presume to fire any Gun before Sun-rising, or after Sun-setting, upon Penalty of 10 s. for each Gun.

THE Sixth, Concerning divers Boats, otherwise called Bum-boats, their carrying Fruit, Wine, and Strong-waters, to sell to Shop-keepers; much Wrong being done to the Owners, by purloining of Carriage or other Materials: All Masters to take Care they do not permit any such Boats to come on board their Ships, and that their Men do put the Dirt of their Ships in their own Boats at seasonable Hours of the Day, and do carry and lay it on Shore above High-Water Mark, and not to suffer any Dirt or Filth to be thrown overboard into the River. In Case of Neglect, the Master to forfeit 20 s.

THE Seventh, No Master to suffer to be taken in, or heaved out of the Ship, any Ballast, without having a Sail nailed to the Sell of the Port; or if a small Vessel, to the Gunnel, to overhang the Side of the Lighter, upon Pain of 20 s.

THE Eighth, Concerning Masters, by themselves, or their Officers, or Seamen, refusing to hinder any Person appointed by the Corporation, (and, upon Demand, shewing his Authority under the Common Seal) from coming on board his Ship in the Day-time, to search for Powder, Guns unshot, heating of Pitch, Tar, &c. the careless and unseasonable drying of Bread-Rooms, and suffering Bum-boats to come aboard, and to traffic with them, upon Forfeiture of 5 l.

THE Ninth, Concerning certain Members of this Corporation, that partly of themselves, and partly at the Request of others, preferred Bills, Petitions, &c. to the Parliament, and to other inferior Jurisdictions, in the Name of Seamen in general, without making the Master, Wardens, and Assistants acquainted, to the great Detriment and Scandal of the Corporation. For the preventing this for the future, if any Members of this Corporation do, or attempt the like Matters, or shall set their Hands to any Bill, Petition, &c. without Consent of the Master, Wardens and Assistants, he shall forfeit 5 l.

THE Tenth, for better regulating and governing of Seamen and Mariners, it was ordered that no Mariner on Ship-board swear, curse or blaspheme, on Forfeiture of 1 s. for every such Offence, to be put into the Poor's Box, remaining on board the same Ship. Any Seaman hired to serve in any Ship, and at any Time to lie on Shore, during the Voyage, without Leave, to forfeit 2 s. 6 d. to the Poor's Box. No Mariner, being in perfect Health, to absent himself from Prayers, being performed according to the Liturgy of the Church of England, and not repairing thither immediately after the Ring of the Bell; the Neglect of which is the Forfeiture of 6 d. If any Mariner be drunk, to forfeit 1 s. If he shall be obstinate and stubborn in not obeying the Master's lawful Command, or the Mate's or Boatwain's, in his Absence, to forfeit half his Month's Pay.

ANY Person found to offend against the above-mentioned Orders, to be left to the Liberty of the Master or Commander, with Consent of the Mate, Boatwain, Purser, Gunner and Carpenter, or the major Part, either to inflict corporal Punishment, according to the Custom of the Seas, or receive and take the Penalty hereby imposed.

IF the Person or Persons have not present Money to satisfy what the Order is, then to subscribe their Names to the Master or Purser's Books, thereby signifying their Consents, that the said Forfeitures may be defaulted out of their Wages the next Pay-Day.

THE Eleventh, Concerning any Mariner's shipping himself with any Master for a Voyage, and afterwards deserting and shipping himself with another, the Master with whom he goes the Voyage to detain 2 s. in every Pound of his Wages, for the Time he serves in his Ship, to be paid to the Corporation for the Use of the Poor.

THE Twelfth, Every Commander of a Ship hiring any Mariner to sail with him upon any Voyage, to take in Writing under the Seaman's Hand, upon what Condition he is entertained, and to submit himself to the By-Laws of the Trinity-House.

ALL which Acts, Ordinances and Constitutions, George Lord Jeffreys, Baron of Wem, Lord High Chancellor of England, Sir Robert Wright, Lord Chief Justice of the Pleas, before his Majesty to be holden, and Sir Edward Herbert, Lord Chief Justice of his Majesty's Court of Common-Pleas, at the Request of the Master, Warden and Assistants, and Elder Brethren of the said Corporation, by Authority and Virtue of an Act of Parliament made in the 19th Year of King Henry VII. for that Purpose, saw, read and examined; and for good, lawful and laudable Ordinances and By-Laws, did allow and approve, and set their Hands and Seals thereunto the 24th of June, 1687.

THERE is yet another Table hanging up in Trinity-House, which shews the Number, Tonnage and Measure of each Lighter belonging to the Ballast-Office, weighed May 15, 1700.

THE Master, Wardens and Assistants of Trinity-House, have caused all the Lighters employed in the Ballast-Work, to be new weighed and marked in their own Presence, with all the Exactness possible. And to the End that no Master of a Ship, or other Person, having Occasion for Ballast, may be deceived in the Tonnage by the Lightermen employed in that Work, the said Corporation published in Print the said Table.

AFTER the Table is added :

Now whereas this Corporation is informed that divers Masters of Ships, and coasting Vessels chiefly, do frequently take in Ballast from private Wharfs and Places in the River without entering it at the Office, and paying for the same; it is hereby declared, That if any Master shall take in all or part of his Ballast, (or Chalk Stones or Rubbish of any Kind, to be used instead of Ballast) from any Wharf or Place whatsoever within the River of Thames, (excepting from our own Wharfs at Greenwich and Greenhithe) or suffer our own Lightermen, or any other, to serve him with Ballast, before it be entered and paid for; he is for the first Time to pay double the Price of the Ballast he did so take in, and for the second, to be prosecuted with the utmost Rigour of the Law.

AND if any Master, or his Company, shall violently take and carry aboard his Ship any Lighter with Ballast, not appointed to him by the Office, no further Supply of Ballast, or any Bill shall be given to the said Master, until he shall have given such Satisfaction for his or their above-said Abuse and Disorder, as this Corporation shall think reasonable.

AND if any Master shall not take in his Ballast when brought to his Ship Side at the Time of his own Appointment, or shall not discharge the Lighter or Lighters bringing the said Ballast the same Tide of Ebb, he shall pay for the said Ballast, though it be afterwards carried away, as if it had been taken into his Ship; unless he shall, one Tide at least before, give Notice at the Office, that he shall not be ready for the Ballast at the Time before appointed. This Table was signed,

C H A P. XI.

Of the MERCHANTS of LONDON in General.

IN the Reign of King Edward VI. there were but few English Merchants Adventurers, and a great Want of Shipping to convey our Commodities abroad, and bring in Returns for them. A notable Merchant in those Days wrote thus in a Letter to a Statesman then, (viz. Sir William Cecyl) "I think there is never a City in Christendom, having the Occupying that this City hath, that is so slenderly provided of Ships, having the Sea coming to it, as this hath. And, that he had heard of late much complaining for English Ships to lade Goods into Spain, and other Places, and none were to be had. And that he had seen thirty seven Hoys laden with Wood and Timber, go at one Tide out of Rye, and never an English Mariner among them.

THE Number of Merchants in LONDON in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, viz. when Alderman Lodge was Mayor, (which was Anno 1561,) were in all 327, whereof the Company of Mercers afforded 99; and these were the Names of the Chief, Sir Thomas Leigh, Sir Thomas Gresham, Mr. Alderman Martin, Mr. Alderman Baskersfield, Sir Rowland Hill, Vincent Randal, Lionel Duckett. Of the Grocers were 57, whereof the Chief were, Sir John Lyon, Mr. Alderman White, Mr. Alderman Lodge, Lord Mayor, Mr. Edward Jackman, Alderman. Of the Dra- pers 29, whereof the Chief were, Sir William Chester, Mr. Alderman Champion. Of the Harbardashiers 51, whereof the Chief were, Sir William Hawarde, Alderman Woodroff. Of the Merchant-Taylors, 25, whereof the Chief were, Sir Thomas White, Sir John York, Sir William Harper, Alderman Row, Richard Hills. Of the Skinners 16. Of the Fishmongers 12. Of the Clothworkers 13, whereof was Alderman Hayward. Of the Ironmongers 6, whereof was Alderman Chamberlain. Of the Salters 2. Of the Girdlers 2. Of the Bowyers 1. Of the Leathersellers 9. Of the Armourers 1.

THE Traffick of the Merchants to the Parts of the World at a greater Distance, was first to Russia, which began in the latter End of King Edward VI. wherein divers of the Court were Adventurers with the Merchants of LONDON.

In the Year 1563, in March, a Voyage was undertaken to Maderabombo, set forth by some Merchants, some Mariners, and some of the Court, to encourage Foreign Trade, viz. the Earl of Pembroke, the Lord Robert Dudley, the Lord Admiral, and Sir William Cecyl, Knt. Secretary of State, Sir William Garret, Sir William Chester, Sir Thomas Lodge, Benjamin Gonson, Edward Castlyn, Merchants; John Hawkyins, William Wynter, Mariners. The Ships that went in this Adventure, the Complement of Men in each, each, and the Charge of their Ordnance, Tackle and Apparel, were as follow :

Ships.	Men.	Ordnance, &c.
The Jesus of Lubeck	80
The Solomon	35	600 lb.
The Tyger	20	200 lb.
The Swallow	15	120 lb.
	150	920 lb.

THE Wares and Victuals for the Negroes, with their Apparel, and Habiliments of War, amounted to the Charge of 1190 l.

THE Sum of the whole Charge (over and beside the Adventure of the Jesus of Lubeck accounted for) 3300 l.

IN the Year 1576, certain Muscovy Merchants (with whom several of the Court were also Adventurers) sent Martin Furbisher, or Frobisher, in a Voyage to discover a Passage by Sea North Westward to Carthay: Which Voyage cost 1600 l. wherein Michael Lock was one of the chief Adventurers, and Treasurer. From this Voyage was brought home 200 Weight of Ewer by Furbisher, for Experiment, which was molten and tried by one Jonas Schutz, an Almain, and John Baptista Agnello, an Italian, and three Englishmen; and there proceeded thence in Silver six Ounces seven Penny Weight, and 13 Grains; and of the same Ewer in Gold, five Penny Weight and five Grains; which both in Silver and Gold amounted to 47 s. 6 d. Sterling, at 5 s. the Ounce Silver, and 3 s. the Penny Weight Gold, according to the Account brought in to the Muscovy-House. So that at that Rate a Ton of the said Ewer would make in Money 23 l. 15 s. all Charges deducted. Hence, upon the View of this Account they found, that for every 8 l. to be disbursed by the Adventurers, they would gain 5 l. which arose upon every 100 l. Gain clear above the Sum of 60 l. And a Writing was delivered in to Secretary Walsingham, one of the Adventurers, to the same Import. And hereupon Sir William Wynter certified several honourable Adventurers, as well as Walsingham, upon the Information given him, That Furbisher had found a Mine of Gold worth 60 l. the Ton, from whence the aforesaid Ewer was taken.

UPON which a second Voyage was undertaken by the said Furbisher in the Year 1577, which cost above 4000 l. to fetch Ewer from this Gold Mine. And a third, Anno 1578, made upon the Foundation of some Writings of the Value of the Ewer brought the second Voyage (however the Ewer proved not good.) And their Honours gave Orders for this Voyage by their Letters written to the Commissioners. Which Voyage cost 15000 l. Yet, after all, these Voyages turned not to the desired Account: For they could find no more of their first Ewer.

IN the Year 1583, Alderman Hart, Mr. Spencer Hoddesdon, and divers other Merchant-Adventurers, attempted a Discovery, in order to Trade, of the hithermost Parts of America, to the Latitude of 40 Degrees, or thereabouts, under Capt. Carleil; who excited them thereto by many considerable Arguments of the Profitableness thereof; the Country being very fruitful, inhabited with a savage People of a mild and tractable Disposition; and that of all other Places, which were unfrequented at that Day, it was the only fittest and most commodious for us to intermeddle withal. For, First, it was not any long Course, but such as might be performed to and fro in four Months, after the first Discovery thereof. Secondly, One Wind sufficed to make the Passage, whereas most other Voyages of like Length were subject to three or four several Winds. Thirdly, It was to be performed at all Times of the Year. Fourthly, The Passage was upon the High Sea, whereby they were not bound to the Knowledge of Dangers, or any other Coast, more than of that Country, and of ours here at home. Fifthly, Those Parts of England and Ireland, which lie aptest for the proceeding outwards and homewards upon this Voyage, were very well stored of good Harbours. Sixthly, That it was to be accounted of no Danger at all, as touching the Power of any foreign Prince or State.

SUCH as desire to know more of the Voyages set out by the Merchants Adventurers, for Discovery of foreign Parts of the World, and for settling a Traffick there, may consult Hackluit's Voyages; where the various Histories thereof, in the Northern, Western and Eastern Regions of the Earth, are set down at large.

ABOUT the Year 1590, the Number of the chief Merchants in LONDON increased greatly, 280 Names being to one Petition. And of the Court of Aldermen these Members signed it, William Row, Mayor, Richard Hayward, Richard Martyn, William Webbe, Cuthbert Buckle, John Spencer, William Masbam, Anthony Radclyff, Hugh Offley, Henry Billingsley, Richard Saltonstall, William Elkyn, Stephen Soame, Thomas Skyner, and Richard Gourney.

OF the Commodities which were of the Growth or Manufacture of England, it is not needful to make a distinct Declaration. But among other Things sent Abroad by the Merchants, about the Year 1580 and odd, much Beer was transported, and became a great Commodity in Queen Elizabeth's Reign: But the Exporting of it was often forbad by that Queen's Proclamation: For commonly it was a Cause of enhancing the Price of Corn: Yet even upon Prohibitions, special Licences were granted by the Lord Treasurer. Thus he allowed one Lyster, in the Month of November, to brew and transport 500 Ton of Beer for the Queen's Use: And in the same Month another Ship was laden with 350 Barrels of Beer to Embsden; and in the same Month again a Ship of Amsterdam laded 300 Barrels of Beer more. And in the same Month four Ships of Embsden more were laden with 800 Barrels; which shews in what Request our English Beer was then Abroad.

AMONG the Commodities of the Growth of England sent Abroad, as well as spent here at Home, the Sea Coal of Newcastle deserves some Mention. This is the great Commodity that supplies the City with Firing, both for Dressing of Food, and for the Operation of divers Trades and Manufactures exercised there. About the Year 1590 and odd, Sea Coal began to advance its Price far higher than ever before, being enhanced by sinister Ways and Means of some at Newcastle; a few engrossing the whole Commodity to themselves. And, besides, the Coals were not so good as they used to be, by their sending out the best into foreign Parts, and sending the worst to be spent in the Realm. The Price of Sea Coal, of the best Sort, went at 4 s. the Chaldron, for many Years.

THEN there happened a Leasing of the Mines, which was called, The Grand Lease: Which Grand Lease was assigned to one Mr. Sutton. And then the Price came to 6 s. the Chaldron; and so continued during the Time that Sutton enjoyed the Lease. Then it was assigned over to the Town of Newcastle; and then the Price began to increase to an excessive Rate; first to 7 s. then to 8 s. and then grew to 9 s. Neither could be so had, unless the Buyer would be content to take of both Sorts, viz. the Good and Bad together.

OF this the Lord Mayor made Complaint to the Lord Treasurer Burghley, against the Town of Newcastle; setting forth the Causes of these Abuses, and then the Remedies for the Reformation of them. The chief Causes were, Certain Inhabitants of Newcastle, called Freehofts, to whom the Grand Leases were first made over to the Use of that Town, being to the Number of sixty Persons, or thereabouts. These of later Times had compounded and made over their whole Right to a far less Number, viz. to eighteen or twenty Men; who having before Coal-pits of their own, engrossed the whole Commodity, and reduced the Trade into a few Mens Hands, combining together to sell their Sea Coal at their own Prices, and so advanced the Price, as was said before, to 9 s. the Chaldron, one with the other. The said few Persons, being Men of great Wealth, had, besides the Grand Lease, taken and engrossed all the Coal-Mines about the said Town; namely, the Mine of Stella, the Bishops Mine, sometimes farmed by one Mr. Tempest and others; the Mine of the Lordship of Ravenworth, the Mine of Mr. Gascoign, the Mine of the Lordship of Newborne, and divers others. Of these Mines or Pits they opened or shut up such and so many as they thought good, for the advancing of their private Gain; whereby the Freehofts, who were wont to make Suit for the Sale of their Coals, and offer the same unto the Ship-masters, (which made a Cheapness) were now sued unto, and made it a Matter of Favour and Preferment whom first they would serve, ordering the Prices at their own Pleasures.

THE Remedies propounded were, That the Lords of the Privy Council would take Order, that all Owners and Farmers of Coal-Mines might open them, and make Sale of their Coals at reasonable Rates, not exceeding the Price of 7 s. the Chaldron, and to lade the same at most opportune Places without any Restraint. And that they be enjoined to have good Store of Coal digged before-hand, and ready to be laden; whereby the Ship-masters might not be enforced to stay for their Lading, as they had sometimes, four, five or six Weeks together; whence the Price of Coals became increased.

THE Town of Newcastle made a great Benefit by these Coals long ago: For, in the latter Time of Queen Elizabeth, were yearly shipped hence unto several Places within the Realm and beyond the Seas, by Computation, five or six Hundred Thousand Chaldrons: The Toll whereof, after the Rate of 4 d. the Chaldron, amounted to the Sum of 10000 l. a Year, which went to the Chamber and Corporation of that Town, beside the Revenue which grew to the Inhabitants of that Place for the Sale of their Coals.

So that in the latter Part of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, these Coals bore 9 s. the Chaldron: But, in the Time of King Henry VIII. they were bought at Newcastle for 2 s. 2 d. the Chaldron: For one Thomas Barnaby, a Merchant in those Times, exciting a great Courtier in King Edward's Time to promote Shipping, and increase the Number of Mariners, which would turn so much to the Strength of England, shewed, how the sending Coals into France from Newcastle would set 6 or 7000 Mariners on work; whereas then the French got the Benefit: For, in Times of Peace, there would be three or fourscore Ships of Normans and Britons at once, as soon as their Fishing was done, fetching Coals from thence; and, as soon as they were departed, would come as many more. The Advantage of that Trade to the English would prove very considerable: For as he, the said Barnaby, had bought Coals at 2 s. 2 d. the Chaldron, so he had sold them in France for 13 Nobles: And this for the Commodity of Sea Coal.

LET some Notices more modern be yet added concerning this notable Commodity of Sea Coal. There was about the Year 1698 a Tax laid upon them of 5 s. the Chaldron, which the Citizens were extremely displeased at; and, in a little Book, drawn up chiefly for the Use and Information of the Parliament, printed Anno 1699, is shewed the Mischief of it: It is intitled, The Mischief of the Five Shilling Tax upon Coals. This was taken off by the first Session of the next Parliament, and laid on again the last Session of the same. It was expected never to have heard of this Tax again, having been taken off in a full House, and after full and ample Examination by the Committee, and after the Experience of its Partiality, especially upon the Poor, and of its pernicious Consequences upon Trade and Navigation.

THE said Book shewed, That 1400 Sail of Ships were employed in the Collier Trade, as appeared by the Coast-Books of the Custom-House in the Port of Newcastle, which cost in building one Thousand Pounds one with another; and that it was notorious, that the said Ships gave not, when this Tax was on Foot, (nor ever would give as long it continued) one Farthing Profit to the Owners. Here then was the Interest of 14000 l. lost from the Proprietors of Shipping, and so from the Nation itself.

THEREFORE it was humbly represented to the Parliament, that this Tax was inconsistent with the Safety of England, partial upon the Poor, pernicious to our Shipping and Seamen, destructive of our Rivermen, viz. Boatmen, Keelmen, Bargemen, Ballastmen, Coalheavers, &c. fatal to our Manufacturers with Sea Coal, (especially Salt, Glass, and all Sorts of Gross Iron-work) that by this Coal Tax must run into Coal Countries, or out of the Kingdom, and so highly injurious to the Royal Revenue.

It appeared by the Custom-House-Books for the Coast-Duty of 12 d. per Chaldron on Coals at Newcastle, that there was exported from that Port Communibus Annis, in Times of Peace, 200,000 Chaldrons of Coal, Newcastle Measure. And Newcastle hath but two Thirds of the Collier Trade. So that the Writer said, that he might with Safety affirm, there was exported from Newcastle and its Member-Ports, 300,000 Chaldron of Coals, which is in Tonnage of Shipping 795,000 Ton: To which, if we should add the Over-Sea Collier Trade, he doubted not to affirm the Collier Trade employed 900000 Tonnage of Shipping per Annum; which is more than two Thirds of all the Tonnage of Goods imported or exported every where, from or into this Kingdom in English Bottoms. So that the Collier Fleet is the great Body of the Shipping of England, and all our other Trades are served by Detachments from it.

THIS is the Navigation and Collier Trade of England; but upon this Tax, there would not be exported (as he computed) from the North Coastways, above 150,000 Chaldron, Newcastle Measure; nor half the Number of Ships and Sailors be employed upon the said Trade that was before the said Tax; for there would remain no further Occasion for Coals in the South, than for domestick Use: Their Forges and Furnaces being run, by this Tax, either into the North, or out of the Kingdom. And instead of 100,000 l. per Annum, which was expected from this Tax, we should find it would not bring in above 50,000 l. and there would be a Fall in the Proceed of other Taxes above double the Sum. And one half of the Collier Trade failing, one half of the Men it supported at Sea, in our River, ver, and at Land, would either be driven abroad, or reduced to live upon the Alms of the Parish. 20,000 Souls was the least we should find to fall into these miserable Circumstances. And this must make a vast Abate in the Proceed of the Taxes, the Pole-Money, Births and Burials, the Excise of Beer, Ale and Salt, the Duties upon the Materials for Navigation, and the Branches of Customs.

FURTHER, the Author computed; that if there were no 5 s. Tax upon Coals, we should export from the North Coastways above 400,000 Chaldrons of Coals, Newcastle Measure, which might be modestly computed and judged at 1,200,000 Tons of Coals; having every Day an increasing Trade; for Wood decays every where, and the Town grows more populous, having many new Streets built out of her void Spaces and cumbersome Places. This 1,200,000 Tons of Coals is a Bulk of Cargo sufficient to employ 2000 Sail of Ships, of the same Burden with those at present in the Collier Trade, and will maintain 20,000 Seamen, and a tripple Number of Rivermen, at the loading and unloading Ports; and always living jollily and comfortably in their Business, must raise the Proceed of the Revenue far above what is expected from that aforesaid Tax. 30 Years Experience since the Writing of this Book will shew what Truth there is in that Argument.

ABOUT the Year 1572 considerable Quantities of Iron Ordnance, cast here in England, were transported abroad, whereby the Queen's Enemies, as it was feared, were supplied, and that by some Licence secretly obtained; but the Merchants of LONDON, knowing how this might furnish the Enemies Ships to obstruct their Trade, and bring other great Damages upon the Queen and her Subjects, petitioned her, in a great Body, to withdraw this Licence, laying also their Reasons before her Majesty for it: But this Petition (whether it was shuffled off by some about the Queen) never came before her. But they petitioned a second Time, for the preventing so great a Danger, beseeching her to take a full View and deep Consideration of their former Petition, together with the Reasons annexed thereto. The Issue was, that in September the abovesaid Year, there was a strict Restraint for transporting all Iron and Brass Ordnance, proclaimed. It set forth, "How the Queen was informed, that notwithstanding it was unlawful to transport any Ordnance out of the Realm, without special Licence, other than for her Majesty's natural Subjects, to be used in their Shipping, and not to be aliened to any Stranger, yet this had been lately practised by some. Therefore, for the Stay hereof, her Majesty did strictly command all Manner of Persons to forbear to ship, with Intent to transport to any foreign Parts, any Kind of Ordnance of Brass or Iron, or to sell or deliver any such Ordnance to any Person to transport the same, upon Pains, &c. which her Majesty must extend against such Offenders, as did thereby strengthen the common Enemies against her Majesty and her Realms.

"AND for a further Remedy against the Inconvenience that was generally seen in making of great Quantity of Iron Ordnance, and by selling the same to sundry Persons that had secretly carried the same out of the Realm, whereby the common Enemy had been furnished with the same, not only for Shipping, but also for Maritime Towns and Ports, which otherwise had not been able, nor durst have put their Ships to the Seas; therefore she straitly charged all Owners of Iron Works, Furnaces or Forges, or that made any Iron, that none of them should make any Manner of Ordnance above a Minion, and that to be of so many Pounds."

This good Service the Merchants now did for the Nation, as well as for themselves.

THE Ground of all this seems to be, that the Lord Admiral had granted a Licence of transporting Iron Ordnance to Sir Thomas Leighton, who had made Use of one Garret Swift to obtain it of the Admiral; and Sir Thomas, underhand, did promise to the said Swift, by a Writing dated in August 1592, that in Consideration hereof, upon his obtaining the Suit, he would appoint him, the said Swift, his whole and only Deputy to execute the same under him during his Life, and for his Pains would give him the fourth Part of all such Fees and Benefits as should any Ways arise by the same.

IN the Year 1590, John Allington, Draper, moved that an Office might be set up for the making and registering all Manner of Writing in the ordinary Contracts and Bargains, usually made between all Merchants, Owners, and Masters of Ships, before the going out of every Ship or Vessel; and that he, his Deputies or Assigns, might be the only Registers for that Office; and that no Ships should pass beyond Sea before they, the said Allington, or his Assigns, had made their Charter Parties, Bonds, Bills of Lading, or other Writings, concerning their Agreement for the Voyage; upon Pain to forfeit, for every Ship or Vessel so departing, 40 l. the one Moiety to the Queen, the other to Allington, or his Assigns; the Parties paying to the said Allington for the making of the said Writings, ratably as they had heretofore usually paid. The Reasons for the Queen's granting this were, that hereby the Queen, beside the Gain of 40 l. yearly, and the Forfeitures, her Customs might be much the better assured and increased from Time to Time. And it might be a general Benefit to the Commonwealth. For, whereas oftentimes corrupt Merchants pretended to pass with their Ladings from Port to Port within the Realm, yet when they were at Sea, they past into foreign Countries, as well to the Queen's Enemies as Friends; some without paying any Customs, some often colouring Strangers Goods, whereby the Queen did lose one half of her Customs, the Subjects the more unfurnished of Victuals, Corn, and other Commodities. All which, by the Diligence of this Patentee might be often discovered or prevented. Besides, from him might be presently given a perfect Note, what Number of Ships and other Vessels were yearly employed, by whom, whither, of what Burthen, and who were their several Owners and Masters. Lastly, That divers Suits of like Nature, and not of greater Importance, yet much more beneficial, had been granted by the Queen to sundry Subjects, by Virtue of her Highness's Prerogative only.

ABOUT 16 or 17 Years before, such a Kind of Grant, Sir John Hawes being Mayor, one Richard Candler, Mercer, obtained of the Queen, viz. to make and register all Manner of Assurances, Policies, Intimations, Renunciations, and other Things whatsoever, that hereafter should be made upon any Ship or Ships, Goods or Merchandize, or any other Thing or Things in the Royal-Exchange in LONDON, or in any other Place within the City, by any Manner of Persons of what Nation, Condition or Quality soever, to endure the Queen's Majesty's Pleasure; but with a Proviso, that if the said Office should be thought needful to be reformed for the better Benefit of the Subject that should have any Dealing herein; then, notwithstanding the same, upon Suit made to her Highness, or her Honourable Council, by Order to be directed in Writing, the said Candler should conform himself thereunto. But this Patent was soon complained of by the Notaries Publick and the Brokers, That it was an Intrusion upon them, and would be their utter Undoing, as hath been shewn before. And upon this, this Patent seems to have been revoked. But now, after divers Years, another endeavoured to get the like Grant.

Now as to the Merchants who were Foreigners born, a few Remarks may be added. Of these there were very many residing and trading here in former Times. In the Reign of King Richard III. LONDON harboured abundance of Italian Merchants. And in the Parliament, in his Days, was an Act made against their Abuses. It set forth the Evils and Incommodities they brought into the Realm. These Merchants are there specified to be Venetians, Apulians, Sicilians, Lucaners, Cataloyns [Catalonians perhaps, who were Spaniards] and others. The Act mentions, that these did in great Numbers inhabit and keep House, as well in LONDON as in other Cities and Burghs within the Realm; and took Warehouses and Cellars to put therein their Merchandizes and Wares.

THEIR evil Doings were, (as was there specified) That they did deceitfully pack and meddle their Wares, and kept the same till such Times the Prices were greatly enhanced, for their great Lucre; that they sold them to all Manner of People, as well by Retail as otherways, as well within the Ports where they brought them as elsewhere; that they bought at the same Ports and Places, at their own Liberties, the Commodities of this Realm, and sold the same again at their Pleasures within the same, as commonly and freely as any of the King's Liege People; and did not employ a great Part of the Money coming thereof upon the Commodities of the Realm, but made it over Sea, by Exchange, to divers other Countries, to the King's great Damage and Loss in his Customs, and to the great Impoverishing of his Subjects, of whom they ought to have bought the Commodities of the Realm. That the same Merchants of Italy, and other Merchant Strangers were housed, and took to them People of other Nations, and were with them daily, and did buy, sell, and make privy and secret Contracts and Bargains with the same People, to their great Increase and Profits, and to the importune Damage of the King's Subjects, and contrary to divers Statutes. That these Merchants bought a great Quantity of Wool in divers Places, and Woollen Cloth and other Merchandizes of the King's Subjects. And Part thereof they sold again to the same Subjects and others within the Realm, and much of the same Wools they delivered to Cloth-makers, thereof to make Cloth at their Pleasure; King Richard III. therefore did make a Law, that these Italian and Foreign Merchants should cause their Goods and Commodities to be sold and bartered in Grofs, not by Retail, and to employ the Money coming of that Sale within the same Ports where they did arrive, upon Commodities and Merchandize of this Realm, their reasonable Cost and Expences always excepted and deducted, upon Pain of Forfeitures; and by no Means to make over such Monies by Exchange, and finally, to restrain the abovefaid Abuses. Of this Matter of Employment more will be said by and by.

Anthony Guidotti, an Italian Merchant, towards the Beginning of King Edward VI. his Reign, did good Service to England, by his Wisdom and Dexterity in managing State Business, in setting forward a Peace between England and France. For taking divers private Journeys from the Constable of France to the Council in England (which he seemed to do at first upon his own Head) it came at last to this Point, that four Commissioners were appointed to treat, and after long Debate it ended in a Treaty, and that in a Peace, Anno 1549; and for a Reward, in April 1550, Guidotti was recompenced with a Knighthood and 1000 Crowns, and 150 Crowns Pension, and his Son with 250 Crowns Pension.

AMONG the Foreigners that for the Liberty of their Religion planted themselves in England under King Edward VI. many were Italians and Genoese, having a Congregation in LONDON, and most of them Merchants who brought over and traded in Silks, Velvets and Damasks, and got great Wealth thereby.

IN Queen Elizabeth's Reign, about 1572, were of Note Francisco Galliardetto, Cesar Adelmor, (whence the Family of Cesars of Hertfordshire, still flourishing) Acerbo and Benedict Spinola, who had so much Favour granted him as to obtain divers Licences for the passing of Cloths and Kerfies with English Custom.

THERE have been from Time to Time many Acts made (besides that mentioned before) for the Regulation of the Trade of Merchants, Aliens and Strangers, and that the Nation might receive Benefit and Advantage from it; as, that they should dwell in no other Place but in an Englishman's House, and he to be their Host, and to have the Sales of all such Goods as they should bring into the Realm; and he, the said Host, to see the Money received for such Commodities, to be employed upon the Commodities of the Realm. That they should have appointed them by the Mayor, Sheriffs, Bailiffs and Constables, their Host, whither they were to resort, and to no other Place; and he to be appointed the Surveyor or Broker of all such Merchandizes by them brought into the Realm, and the same to be registered by him; and for his Pains and travel therein to have 2 d. for every 20 s. That neither they, their Servants or Factors, should ride into the Country, or any Part of the Realm, to buy any Wool, Cloth, Lead, Tin, or any other Commodities; because they used to sell the same again within the Realm to other Merchants Strangers, to the Hindrance of the King's Subjects; and by riding from Place to Place, and from Haven to Haven, they might understand the State of the same, with all such landing Places as were meet for any Enemies to land at. That no Merchant Stranger or Denizen might buy any Wools, Wolfels, Leather, Lead, Tin, or any other Commodity throughout our Realms and Lands by Covin or Collusion to abate the Prices of the same Merchandizes: For by their riding and sending into the Country, they came to know the Value of the English Commodities, whereby the Merchants that were wont to serve them of the same, could scarce be offered the Monies it cost in the Country, to the Hindrance of the said Merchants, and Decay of the Commodities. That where any Contract was made with any Lombard, or other Merchant Stranger, and any Bond thereof past between them, that if he should break and escape out of the Realm without Agreement made with his Creditors, then if any Merchant of the Company acknowledged himself bound by the Manner, the Company should answer the Debts. For in former Times divers Merchants Strangers, as well of the Stillyard as others, having by their Credit here gotten great Sums of Money and Wares into their Hands of divers Subjects of this Realm, suddenly broke and play'd Bankrupts, and thereupon departed the Realm, whereby none of their Creditors knew where to seek any Part of his Debts. That Merchants Strangers, being Viſtuallers, should put in good Assurance for the employing of their Money received for the Viſtuals. That none of them should lodge in their House any other Merchant Stranger than of their own Country, upon Pain of forfeiting 40 l. and in the Reign of King Henry VII. not to lodge in their House any Merchant Stranger, either of his own Country or other upon the same Penalty: For with these these they used to buy, sell, barter and exchange as commonly and freely as English Merchants did. By which Means they coloured one another's Goods, and hindered the Sale of our Country Commodities. That they should make such Exchange to the Court of Rome or elsewhere, and to be bound personally in the Court of Chancery by Recognizance, to buy within nine Months after such Exchange, and make like Merchandizes in this Realm as should amount to the said Sum, of so much as was exchanged, upon Forfeiture of the same. Lastly, That where they daily brought in Wheat, Corn, Merchandizes, &c. for the which they received Gold and Silver, and carried the same out of the Realm without any Employment upon any Kind of Merchandize of this Realm, to the Damage and impoverishing of the same, and diminishing the King's Coin; therefore none should carry away any Beer, Wheat, Corn, or any other Merchandize from any Creek or Port, but that it should be lawful to seize the same as forfeit.

THESE old Laws were revived in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth. About the 14th Year of whose Reign a great Quarrel arose against the Merchants Strangers, and continued a great while after; That they did not employ the Money they received of the Commodities they brought into the Land, in purchasing therewith other Goods of our own Growth and Manufacture; but that they returned their Monies by Bills of Exchange, or otherwise, Abroad; and so emptied the Land of its Treasure. William Bird, of the Custom-House, informed the Treasurer, Anno 1572, that it was reported, that some Merchants Strangers brought in Wares for 8 or 10000 l. or more a Year, and did not make Employment for 200 l. of the same in the Commodities of the Realm. Which was contrary to the good Policy of the Realm, and a great Damage to her Majesty: For hereby the Queen's Revenues were sunk; and the Lord Treasurer was informed from the Customers, that the Queen's Officers had no such Knowledge of the Strangers Goods and Wares brought from beyond Sea, as heretofore they used to have: Whereby her Highness's Customs and Subsidies outward were much decreased. And they prayed him to take Order, That the Merchants Strangers should deliver (as heretofore they had done) a Bill or Content of all such Goods and Merchandizes as they should from Time to Time bring into the Port of LONDON; whereby their Employments made, and their Bonds taken for the same, might the better be seen unto for her Majesty's Service.

THAT which gave a great Occasion to these Matters against the Foreigners, was a Supplication made to the Lord Treasurer by one John Fabian, a Citizen, in the Year 1571, that he might be constituted the Broker for Strangers Goods. He shew'd, in a long Paper, the Access of Aliens and Strangers coming out of foreign Realms and Countries into the Realm, and especially LONDON, where, for the most Part, they made their Dwelling; that it had been now of late Years far greater than in any Age or Time heretofore past, and so yet continued. That their Numbers daily increased in that Measure, that it surmounted all Memory; which said Strangers, for the most and greatest Part of them, used the Trade of Merchandize, but that they did not, nor would set on work, as Brokers in the Sales and Buying of their Goods, any English or Freemen of the City, but only Foreigners and Strangers, and that for the most Part such as were of their proper Nation and native Country, to the great and unspeakable Gains of themselves, and Loss and Hinderance of the Commonwealth of the City. Now Fabian supplicated for the Reformation hereof, that in Consideration of his Industry and Willingness, his Skill and Ability to do and execute the same, and for the Profit to redound thereby unto the Queen, the whole City, and the Freemen thereof, to grant unto him and his Assigns, to be the principal, sole and only Broker for, and to all Merchants Strangers that should bring in, or convey out of the Realm any Wares, Goods, or Merchandizes whatsoever, into, or out of the Port of LONDON; for which he would pay certain Sums of Money in annual Rent, or Ready Money; and, finally, that he being the first Deviser and Inventaer of this Suit, might be first preferred in it.

BUT this the Strangers by no Means liking of, endeavoured that they might have Brokers of their own, and one Stephen John, and Nichol de Franays, Italians, were nominated by them; the latter sued to Acerbo and Spinola, two chief Italian Merchants, to be admitted by the Lord Treasurer.

IN the Year 1573, Orders were made by the Lord Treasurer for the Employment of Money growing by Wares brought into the Realm by Strangers, upon Wares of the Realm to be carried outward, to avoid thereby the continual carrying and stealing out of the Realm our Gold and Silver; and that Employment to be within six Months, &c.

THIS Order, touching so hard upon all the Strangers, Denizens, as well as all others, awaked them to seek for some Remedy and Favour in this Matter; which they did so vigorously, that it was a Thing that depended many a Year after. The Denizens, they petitioned to be discharged of this Order, and that they ought to be so by a Statute of the Third of Henry VII. they urged that they might enjoy the antient Privileges of the Laws and Customs of this Realm, and all the Grants of her Majesty's Letters Patents, and other of her Ancestors; and particularly the Limitations of the antient Intercourse between the House of Burgundy and us. And further, they declared themselves content to be bound in reasonable Bonds, not to carry out of the Realm any Money, Plate or Gold. They shewed moreover, that in these present Days they could not sell the hundredth Part of their Commodities but at three or four Months, five and six Months, and often eight, and also at twelve Months and a Day Payment, according to the Nature and Quality of the Merchandize; and a great many did not pay till three or four Months after the Day; and some, for Want of Ability, paid not at all. That when there came a Glut of Merchandize, their said Wares could not be sold for Lack of Vent. And for such Wares as could not tarry, they gave very long Days of Payment. That Commodities brought in by Strangers, sometimes the most Part of them were bought upon Credit beyond Sea, and to pay for the same, they must deliver their Money here received by Exchange to English Merchant Adventurers, and others, who do ship Cloth and other Commodities, to be paid beyond the Seas, or else pay here such Bills of Exchange, as by their Creditors are directed for the Payment of the said Merchandizes. That the Commodities coming from beyond the Seas is oftentimes the Return of the Commodities taken up likewise upon Credit here, and shipped over the Sea to be answered there with the Money of the said Return brought in, &c.

IN the Year 1584, Andreas de Loo, and divers Strangers of the Low Countries, and others, were Suiters to the Lord Treasurer, to have this Matter qualified according to the Law. They urged for themselves, that at the Colloquy at Bruges by Dr. Wotton, Dr. Haddon, and Dr. Aubrey, it was accorded, that no such Servitude of Valuation of Merchandize should be upon the Low Country Men; and that Bills of Exchange should be counted counted for Employment. And that in the Year 1567, Haddon wrote a Letter to the Customers of LONDON, to allow Bills of Exchange for Employment. They further shewed, that the Employment out of the Realm of English Commodities, was so great now by the English Merchants, that the Companies of the Merchant Adventurers, the Spanish Merchants, the Muscovian Merchants, and the Eastland Merchants, were fain to stint themselves, what every Merchant should ship out of the Realm, according to the Antienty of Continuance, Place and Freedom, every body being ready to carry out more than could be bought; so as there lacked no Employment. And the whole Transportation by Strangers of their Commodities was now taken out of their Hands by Englishmens Trade and Importation; the false Suggestion of the Lack thereof being one of the Causes of making those Orders.

BUT Fabian, before-mention'd, in the Year 1588, was very hard against the Strangers. He asserted, that at the Conference had with the House of Burgundy at Burborough in Flanders, concerning the Intercourse, not any Charter or Monument could be produced to impugn or prejudice this Action for Employment. And that the Parliament then at hand might, if any Thing were wanting, make it strong and in Force. He urged the Fruit it would bring: First, The great Augmentations of the Queen's Customs. Secondly, The Vent of the Commodities of the Realm. Thirdly, The only Stay of our Money and Bullion from Transportation, and the reducing and bringing back that which had been conveyed and carried out. Fourthly, the Let that the Realm should not be indebted, as now it was, to foreign Nations, by bringing in and consuming more of their Wares, than was carried away of our Commodities. Fifthly, It would yield a Rent to the Queen of good Value, to be paid yearly, where and how the Lord Treasurer should appoint. Sixthly, It would discover other Things worthy of understanding, not to be omitted, to serve the Lord Treasurer, and the State; which without, it could not so come to Light.

THE said Fabian stood now to be Surveyor upon the Statute of Employment; that is, to be privy to all Strangers Entries in the Custom-House, and to the Sale of their foreign Wares, and the Employments made upon the same. He, besides the Arguments already made use of, shewed moreover, that it would bring in all the Trade, outwards and inwards, unto our Nation, and draw it away from Merchants Strangers, that got the whole Gain from us, if they refused to submit themselves to the Laws and Ordinances of our Land. For, as our Laws stood in old Time, that Merchants could not make any Exchange of Money over the Sea from hence without the Queen's Licence; so then they must of Necessity employ the Money of their Wares brought in and sold, in our Commodities, or else to be charged to have imported the same out of the Realm, and never should be able to deny it. Which Commodities of the Realm, when the Stranger could not transport as cheap as the English Merchant might, by Reason of the high Customs he must pay, then would he leave the Trade to our own Men: And so by this Means all Merchants Strangers would leave the Realm, being not able to use Exchange as they were wont to do, by delivering the same unto our Men under the true Valuation of our Standard; whereby they had impoverished the Land a long Time of many Thousand Pounds a Year, and also had most pitifully bitten our Merchants by the said Change, Rechange, Interest and Usury. In this Suit Fabian continued till the Year 1590.

THE main Matter that awakened these old Laws of Employment, was, that the whole Trade of Spain, Portugal, Flanders, Artois and Brabant was then in the Hands of the Low Country Men, and of the French. The Popes Allum also consigned to Philip Corfini. And they all made no Employment of the Wares brought in and sold, and so were in Danger of spoiling the Realm.

BY what is said above it appears, that these Strangers were not without the Envy and ill Will of the English, among whom they came to sojourn. They grumbled; and so Fabian complained to the Lord Treasurer, how that if any Commodity happened to be in Request, by and by the Stranger Leger gave Advice on the other Side of the Sea. And if the Commodity were foreign, they had it here with the first, and enhanced the Price on the other Side. And that by this Means the whole Trade of Wares almost came into their Hands, the English Merchants excluded, that were wont only in former Times to be made rich thereby. But if the Commodity were of our own native Country, they ran upon it likewise, enhancing the Price here, and sent it away, taking the first Market on the other Side. That they enhanced their Commodities at their Wills and Pleasures, to the Discommodity and Hinderance of the Commonwealth. That they bought and sold among themselves, to the Hinderance of Freemen. That they were wont to defraud the Queen of her Customs by their subtle Devices, &c. And about the Merchants Strangers Exchange, Peter Osborn, the Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, shewed what an Inconvenience that was to the English Nation. Which Objection, he said, all the Italians in the World, nor the Low Country Men, should ever be able to answer.

THIS also appeared by the Displeasure that was taken at the many useful Manufactures brought in and set up here in LONDON, and other Places of the Realm, by the Strangers; pretending, the great Loss the Queen sustained in her Customs hereby, as well as other Disprofits to the Subject. Concerning which, Thomas Smith, the Queen's Customer, wrote thus to the Lord Treasurer, being required thereunto, "That he had sought out, as near as he could, the Certainty of the Queen's Losses, and Hinderance in her Customs inwards, by the late Increase of made Wares here, which were accustomed to be brought into this Realm, and answered her Highness's Custom and Subsidy for the same, at least to the Value of 1000 l. yearly; which did arise in these Commodities following, viz. Striped Canvas, striped Sackcloth, tuft and plain Mocadoes, Norwich and Sandwich Grograms, Serges, Sayes, Draperies and Tapestries, and all Kind of Fringes; and Laces of Gold, Silver and of Crewel, besides Bays and Frizadoes. Of which Commodities, in Time past, was very few, or none at all, made here. Furthermore, that he had learned that there was a great Number of Bays made in England, Sandwich, Norwich, Colchester, and Thetford; whereof many were spent there, and many were sent for Portugal, Spain, and the Low Countries. That he had also learned, that the Number of Bays making here did much hinder and decay the making of Welsh, Cheshire, and Manchester Cottons, and of other coarse Cloths made in the North Parts, as Northern Cottons, Cardinal Whites, Northern Streittes, Northern Checks, and Penistones; and also of Pindewhites and Plaines made in the West Country. That the Decay of the making of these Commodities did not only hinder the Queen's Custom outwards, but also a great Number of the Poor, which were wont to be set on work by the same. For he had learned, that the Strangers set few English on work. And lastly, That the making of

" Bays,

“ Bays, Frizadoes, and such like here, did “ much raise the Price of Wools and Fells in “ this Realm; whereby her Majesty was much “ hindered in her Customs outward of the “ Staple.

AND that the Citizens still stand alike ill-affected towards these Strangers, appears from the late Endeavours to hinder the Naturalizing of them; which were much used in the Reign of the late King William, shewing to the Parliament the Inconvenience thereof, in a Paper, intituled, REASONS humbly offered to the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament assembled, against the passing of several Bills now depending in Parliament for Naturalizing of Aliens.

AS it hath been the Prudence of the Princes (Kings and Queens) of this Nation, always to take Care to make a Distinction between natural-born Subjects, and Aliens of other Kingdoms; and have never encouraged, nor indeed tolerated them in any Thing further than that which might one Way or other be for the Interest of their native Subjects: So it it has no less been their Care of the Great and Populous City of LONDON, to preserve the Trade thereof to the Native Freemen of the same, especially and principally against the Incroachments of Aliens of other Kingdoms. Witness, the antient Oath administered to every Freeman, who swears not to take the Child of an Alien Apprentice; which clearly points out to us the Mischiefs they apprehended would thereby redound to the Trade of the said City: And Witness also the several Tolls and Duties antiently and Time out of Mind laid upon the Goods of Aliens imported and exported out of the Port of LONDON, called Scavage, Package, Balliage and Portorage; and for weighing of Goods and Merchandizes, called Tronage; and other Things, which in Process of Time are become considerable Revenues of the said City; which said Duties, amongst other Things, are as a Security, appropriated by a late Act of Parliament for Payment of the perpetual Interest of the Orphans Debts; and the other Part thereof doth help to maintain the Charge, and support the Magistracy and Grandeur of the said City. Now, by the Naturalizing of Aliens, the Revenue of the City would be greatly lessened, if not totally lost, and the City thereby deprived of one principal Means of bearing the Charge, and supporting the Grandeur and Magnificence thereof. There are several other Instances to be given, to prove that the Naturalization of Aliens is greatly prejudicial to the Trade of the said City, and Publick Good of the Nation in general: Some of which are set out in the Statute of 1 Henry VII. Cap. 2. in these Words, viz.

WHEREAS in Times past divers Grants have been made by King Edward, as well by his Letters Patents as by Acts of Parliament, to divers Merchants Strangers, born out of this Realm, to be Denizens, whereby they have and enjoy such Freedoms and Liberties as do Denizens born within the said Realm, as well in Abatement of their Custom which they should bear as if they were no Denizens, as in buying and selling of their Merchandize to their great Avail and Lucre, and oft-times suffer other Strangers, not Denizens, deceitfully to ship and carry great and notable Substance of Merchandize in their Names, by which the said Goods be free of Custom, in like wise as if they were the Goods of a Denizen, where of Right they ought to pay Custom as the Goods of Strangers, by the which they be greatly advanced in Riches and Honour; and after they be so enriched, for the most part they convey themselves with their said Goods into their own Countries, wherein they be naturally born, to the great impoverishing of this Realm, and to the great Hurt and Defraud of the King's Highness in Payment of his Customs: Wherefore it is Enacted, Established and Ordained, by the Advice of the Lords Spiritual, &c. That any Person hereafter to be made Denizen, shall pay for his Merchandize like Custom and Subsidy as he ought or should pay, before that he were made Denizen; any Letters Patents, or other Ordinances by Parliament or otherwise notwithstanding.

THE Statutes of 11 Hen. VII. Cap. 14. and 22 Hen. VIII. Cap. 8. are both to the same Purpose. And during the Reigns of Edward VI. Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth, few or none were Naturalized. And in all the Reigns of King James I. and King Charles I. not above 10 Aliens Merchants were Naturalized, and those such as by long Abode in England had merited that Kindness of the Nation; and then it was rare to hear of an English Merchant that failed, so that the Clothiers grew rich, and the Clothing was in great Request abroad. Besides which,

THIS Favour of Naturalizing Aliens is ruinous to the English Merchants Trade, by Commission, which they enjoyed plentifully before these Naturalizations, which these naturalized Aliens now enjoy. The English had Factories settled in all Countries, whereby they governed the Trade of the World; and these English Factors were great Incouragers of our Manufactures, and brought a great Addition to the Capital Stock of the Kingdom, by the great Estates they arrived to, and brought home. But since these particular Naturalizations of Merchants Aliens, our Factories in France, the Netherlands, Portugal, Hamburg, and other near Countries, are ruined and enjoyed by Aliens.

By the second Rule in the Book of Rates, annexed to the Act of Tonnage and Poundage, Goods imported having paid Custom, and again exported by English in 12 Months, and Aliens in nine Months, Drawback from his Majesty half the Customs paid by them on the Importation, and in some Cases more than half; which Rule was designed to give the English Merchant three Months longer Time for a Market for their Goods in England than Aliens had, and yet saved to them the Benefit of the Drawback of half the Custom, in Case they missed of a Market here, and were necessitated to send them abroad for a foreign Market; which discriminating Advantage will be lost to the English, when Aliens being Naturalized shall thereby have the same Privilege.

AND (among other Things) it is not to be forgotten, how our antient native Manufactures are slighted and neglected, by Reason of the many Aliens being Naturalized and Settled among us, have introduced foreign Fashions and Inventions, to the Ruin of the honest English Handicrafts Tradesman, whose Manufactures thereby become a Drug, which would not be, were Aliens not Naturalized: For by the Statute of 32 Hen. VIII. Cap. 16. an Alien Artificer is disabled from settling among us, and cannot so much as take the Lease of an House in England to drive his Trade in.

UPON the whole Matter, it should seem highly consonant to Reason, for all Englishmen, Lovers of their Country, and especially for this High Court of Parliament, to take Care to preserve the Revenue and Trade of the great and populous City of LONDON, to the Native Freemen thereof, for the Benefit of themselves and their Successors, by preventing the future Naturalization of Aliens: Or if any hereafter, for weighty Reasons, be Naturalized, turalized, that it may be under a Proviso, "That they pay a greater Custom to his Majesty and his Successors, for the Goods and Merchandizes they shall import or export, than his Majesty's native Subjects; and may pay all City, Town and Port Tolls and Duties payable before by any Aliens." And hereby will Trade be by the native English carried on in an equal Ballance with Aliens, the Customs (being the Publick Revenue of the Nation for guarding the Seas) increased, the honest English Handicrafts-Men encouraged, the native Manufactures brought again into Request, the antient Trade by Commission regained, the Number of English Factors abroad increased, the younger Sons of the English Gentry preferred, the Freemen and Members of this great Metropolis enriched, and the Revenue thereof, for Payment of the Orphan's Debts, and supporting the Magistracy and Government thereof preserved, and generally the Good of all his Majesty's Subjects advanced.

BESIDES the Freemen Inhabitants of this City, there are likewise a great Number of Strangers and Foreigners that have chosen here to fix their Habitations: And they are of two Sorts, either such as are Natives of England, and come of English Extraction, but not free of the City, nor any of the Corporations; or such who themselves, or whose Ancestors came from other Parts and Dominions. These latter making so considerable a Part of the City, both for Number and Wealth, may justly fall under some Cognizance in this Place.

MANY of these came antiently here, (besides those of Calais and the Parts adjacent, when they were lost) especially Italians and Genoeses, and French and Flemings, upon the Account of Trade; but in the Days of King Edward VI. and Queen Elizabeth, for Religion and Trade too; and they chiefly from the Low Countries, and some Italians, French and Spanish; for these Nations also had received the Gospel. The several Things relating to these Foreigners may be digested under the following Heads; as, First, The Places where they generally fixed themselves. Secondly, Their Occupations. Thirdly, Their Numbers. And, Fourthly, The Reception and Entertainment they met with among the Citizens.

THEY chose to live by one another, and comforted as much together as they could; and the Streets and Places where they chiefly inhabited were either in the Suburbs, or in privileged Places; as St. Martin's le Grand, Black-fryars, Clerkenwel, Turnmil-street, St. John's-street, High Holborn, the Dutchy of Lancaster without Temple-bar, St. Catharine's, Holywel, Holywel-street, Norton-folgate, Shoreditch, Hoxton, White-chapel, Wapping and Southwark. In the Liberties of the said St. Catharine's is a Place called now Hangman's Gains, by a strange Corruption for Hammes and Guynes, where the poor Trades People of Hammes and Guynes were allotted to dwell, after Calais and those Places were taken from the English.

FOR the Italian Merchants, whom the English Citizens could not well brook for their great Wealth, which they got here by their rich Silks and Damasks which they brought over: There were of them Florentines, Luccasses, Venetians, Genoeses, &c. and they chiefly resided in Broad-street Ward, in St. Bartholomew's near the Royal Exchange, and Bennet Fink.

As for their Trades and Occupations, some of them followed the Calling of Merchants, others were Jewellers, Brokers, Weavers, Taylors, Shoe-makers, Stone-cutters, Hatband-makers, Potters, Painters, School-masters, Physicians, Surgeons, Joiners, Butchers; and many were of no Trades at all, but lived of what they brought over with them. By these Foreigners divers Manufactures were set up in England; but the Queen thereby lost in her Customs.

THE Strangers of the Low Countries brought in the making of Bays, that has proved such an advantageous Commodity for our Merchants to transport; but these were chiefly made at Norwich and Colchester, and brought up to LONDON; and they were made so well, and so strictly examined every Piece, that they carried a Reputation throughout the World. At Norwich were 18 Persons appointed on purpose for the Search, Sealing and Measuring of the Baytre; as the Mayor and Aldermen of Norwich wrote to the Lord Treasurer; whereby their Commodity held such Credit and Estimation, that they were vendible both in this Realm and in many Countries beyond Seas, to the Benefit of the Queen's Customs, and Relief of the poor Strangers, the Workers thereof, with many of the English Nation. The Manner and Order of their Search and Sealing was remarkable, as they sent it up Anno 1578, to LONDON, in Writing, to this Tenor:

"First, There been three Governors which oversee the Woolls, lest any Lambes Wooll be occupied: And they also visit the Racks in eche Howse, that it be equal Length to warp upon, and their Slays to be accordingly; and they also renew their Stamps so often as nede requireth.

"THERE been two Serchers, by the Name of Prynters, which do twice in the Week visit eche Baye-Weaver's Howse, to view their Warps; and whether their Slays be full of Threds or not: And if they be found as they ought to be, then they set a Seal upon that of Allowance; otherwise it is not received for a Baye, but is converted to a Blanket, and is finable. Also eche Wever is bound to make th' Owner's Mark upon the Baye. Moreover, if Threds do breke in the Weving, and not tied again to a certain Nembre, that is finable also.

"AFTER they come from the Lome, they are brought as they be, to the first Howse called the Rawe Perse. Where there belong to that Serch nine Persons that view eche Baye for the true Workmanship of the Wever, and passeth undre Seal, and his Default, if eny be, is set upon the Seal, is finable according to the Fault. And the Owner's Mark, and the Wever's Mark been sown up so close, that many Times the Owner geveth Sentence upon his own Baye to him unknown, to his own Loss. But this is a General Rule, the Workman that maketh the Fault of Workmanship payeth the Fyne.

"FROM thence they go to the Scowring and Fulling, and the Fuller is to Stamp a Lead with his Mark thereupon, to the Entent that if any Fault be in his Office, he doth allow the Owner the Fyne that shall be set upon that Default.

"FROM the Fuller to the Sherman, called the Rower, who in like Manner by a Mark or Letter is known, and is t' answer his Default, if eny be made, to the Owner, after it be found and judged by the Serchers.

"FROM the Fuller they be brought to the second Howse, called the High Perse, where be also nine Serchers, there to have the full Allowance according to the Goodness of the Baye, whether it be an whole Castle, a Lyon, or a Sword; for these been the Differencies of Seals, whereby their Goodness are known, that eny Person of Discretion may buy them by theis Marks, and by one other Addition which is used if they want full Goodness or Worthyness of “ either of their Seals ; then do they notwithstanding carry the Seal with a Difference by a Corner of the Baye cut, whereby it is known not to be a full Cattle, Lyon, or Sword, and bereth Price accordingly. The Manner of Serche is, each Baye with his Marke and Leads passed at th’ other Serche, is wound up close and sowed together, to that End it may not be known what is passed before, but to give the right Judgment as they synd it then.
" either

“ AND when the Serchers do agree of the Goodness, and find the Baye not worthy of the best Lead, which eche Man doth covet, the Officer of the Bayre goeth out to th’ Owner, who waiteth for his Baye, and declares what is found, before it be stamped : But if the Owner thinketh his Baye to be better, he doth appeal to another Company called Betrackers, which be seven of them, that geve their Attendance twice in the Week, Tuesday and Friday, and as they synd it he must stand contented, tho’ it be worfe than the first Men did allow. In this Serche there been certain Leads set upon the Lyfte of the Baye, called Over-Leads, t’ admonish the Buyer of every Fault, whether it be in the Fuller or Rowar, and hath for every such Lead a Quarter of a Flemish Ell allowed. And besides, in this Serche great Corrections are used, as the Fault is found ; some th’ Lystes be rent off, some cut asondre in five Parts, some less, some more, whereby the Truth of every Baye is espied and known, and synded besides, and th’ Estimation of them preserved.

“ THEN the Bayes be brought to the Thred Howse, called the Sealing Huse, where there do attend four Days in th’ Weke three Persons that be sworn Measurers, th’ one called by the Name of Meter, th’ other two been Controullers, and they receive the Bayes a Day before they do measure them, to that End that if the Wynde have strayned them being on the Rame, then they may rest, and gather home again ; forasmuch as it is a tyche Commoditye to measure. And they do fold them, and lay them in Redynes to the Meters Hands, who use to measure them with a Flemish Awne or Ell, as they did in Flanders. And if th’ Owner doth mislike of the Measure of his Baye, as indeed he ought to be of good Skyll, that shuld be a Measurer of Bayes, forasmuche as there is no Ynche allowed, but strictly from a Skotch in their Measure ; then may the Owner appeal to the Controullers, and then the Measure by them is to stand and bear Warrant or Prynt by Seal.

“ AND from thence to the fourth House, called the Sale Hall, which is used three Days in the Week, viz. Monday, Wednesday and Friday, if it be not Holidays. And all other Commodities newly invented, have the like Carefulness in their making and serche, before they pass.

To this Manufacture of Bays set up by the Strangers at Norwich, may be added another Manufacture, viz. making of Gallipots, set up there also Anno 1567, by Jaspar Andries and Jacob Fanson, Potters, who came from Antwerp, to avoid the Persecution there. And these were for the most Part the Trades and Occupations of the Strangers that seated themselves in LONDON or elsewhere. Great Number of those in LONDON were Merchants ; over whose Goods and Traffick it was thought by some, that a more strict Eye should be had, as not employing in the English Manufactures that Money which they gained by their Trade here, but returning the said Monies into foreign Parts. One John Fabian therefore, (partly for his own Ends) in the Year 1571, put up a Supplication to the Lord Treasurer, that he might be constituted the Broker for Strangers Goods, in a long Paper, shewing, in the Beginning, the Access of Aliens and Strangers coming out of Foreign Realms and Countries into this Realm, and especially to LONDON ; whereof some Account is given before.

THE Numbers of these Strangers that came over hither, especially in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, were considerably great, insomuch that there were three Churches appointed for them, (though all seemed to be shelter’d under the Charter of King Edward VI. for the Strangers free Exercise of their Religion) viz. a Church for them that came out of Flanders and the Low Countries ; another for such as came from the Parts of France and Artois ; and a third for Italians ; and there may be added a fourth for Spaniards ; besides, many of these Foreigners resorted to the English Churches ; but many there were that resorted to no Church at all.

OF these Strangers the State being suspicious, as coming from the King of Spain’s Dominions, who had conceived malicious and destructive Designs against the Queen and her Kingdom, she did, from Time to Time appoint some in every Ward to go from House to House to take their Names, their Qualities, their Callings, and their Churches ; and Certificates were sent up according to these Inquisitions taken. Thus, about the Year 1566, the Names were taken out of all the Members of the Dutch Church, and the Number of them, which was 310, among which was Gherardt Ver [Van] Strype, Ancestor of the Reverend Mr. Strype, who published, with large Additions, the last Edition of Stow’s Survey, and to whom we are much indebted in this Work.

By another Account taken of the Strangers, there appeared to be of them 2730, whereof Dutch 2030, French 428, Burgoinians 44, Italians 140, Spaniards and Portuguese 45, Scots 40, Danes 2, Liegeois 1. Again, in the Year 1580, or thereabouts, the Certificates of the Strangers in the several Wards and Precincts about the City of LONDON stood thus :

Anno 1593, May the 4th, a compleat List was brought in of the Number of Strangers, with the Children and Servants, according to Certificates made by several Wards of LONDON, viz.

Their Children	2067		No
Women Servants	1227		Denizens	737

By another Book of the Numbers of Strangers, taken for the same Year 1593, they are reckoned to amount to 5259, taking in, all within the Liberties also and without. Thence were deducted 259 English Servants; and the Sum was reduced to 4300; to which were also subjoined all the English that were set on work by the Strangers, which were made to amount in the Whole to 1493.

AMONG the Persons named in a List of the Year 1576, are John Howblowe, and Gyllam Tulyer mentioned. And in another are the Names of John Houblond, and Peter Hubland, miswrit in both Places, no doubt, by the English Scribes. And in an authentick Catalogue of such French as fled to Rye in Sussex, upon that inhuman Massacre of the Protestants in France, Anno 1572, there be the Names of Le Tellier, and Tellier, one a Merchant, another a Minister, and another a Brazier of Diep. Some of these, very probably, were the Ancestors of those eminent Merchants and Citizens bearing the Name of Houblon and Lethieulier, which at this present flourish here in Wealth and Reputation; and some of them, such as have, and do partake of the Government of this City, as well as other Places of Honour and Trust.

AND having related thus much of the Foreigners that transplanted themselves from abroad into this Place, something may further be added of the Manner of their Reception and Entertainment among the Citizens. Many whereof (especially the more ordinary Sort) had no great Love for them, and were glad of an Opportunity of oppressing them, the English Nature being somewhat inhospitable to Strangers, jealous of their Industry, and suspecting them to get their Trade away from them.

Anno 1563, July 30, a Proclamation came out against Strangers; and divers Frenchmen Denizens, and others, were seized, it may be, upon the Falseness and Treachery of the French to the English at Newhaven. But to see how ready the Citizens were to take this Opportunity to express their Disgust against Foreigners, Sir Thomas Lodge, Lord Mayor, wrote to the Privy Council, That the People, a great Number of them, were very fervent, and a great Number very unquiet; and proceeded, without Order, in the Execution of the Proclamation; so that he thought it good, as he wrote, to give their Honours Intelligence thereof, beseeching their further Order and Pleasure herein; for that the same Proclamation was not orderly published, and the People very heady in using the Liberty of the same.

THE poor Strangers not only in LONDON, but all England over, as they were offensive to the ordinary Sort of People, as Mechanicks and such like, so they were sought as a Prey by others, to make a Benefit of them. Thus one Ralph Lane, a projecting Man, in the Year 1583, made this Motion to the Lord Treasurer, that considering, by Reason of the Civil Wars in the Parts beyond Seas, Numbers of Strangers made their Habitations within this Realm, and that in such great Multitudes, as was to the great Annoyance of homeward Artizans and Subjects, both through the Exercise of English Trades, and by not performing, for their Parts, that which the Laws of this Land did enjoyn for the Benefit of the Commonwealth; as also through the Increase of the Prices of Victuals, raising the Rents of the Tenements, and increasing of Sicknefs by their over pesterling of small Rooms with many of them; besides other like Inconveniencies, meet either to be refrained, or else at the least, in some Measure to be refrained by new Provisions, meeting with the Mischiefs of such new Accidents: Therefore, that her Majesty would be pleased to grant him the executing such Laws as were made against Aliens, with the Benefit of the Penalties thereof, and Authority, yearly, to survey them, taking their Appearances, and for the registering of every of their Names to take 4 d. with a like Authority to take yearly Bonds to her Majesty's Use (and that only of such of them as have already broken the Laws) not to offend in the like hereafter, and to dispense with what is past. This, if it had passed according to the Petitioner's Desire, would (it is like) have given Occasion of continual Vexation to the Strangers.

THREE Years after, viz. 1586, the Apprentices of LONDON did conspire an Insurrection in the City against the French and Dutch, but especially against the French; a Thing as like unto evil May-Day as could be devised, in all Manner of Circumstances; there wanted nothing but Execution. Several of these were taken, all under twenty-one Years of Age. They were of the Mystery of the Plaisterers, and were committed to Newgate upon the Queen and Council's Commandment; and the Recorder, and other Magistrates of the City, were in Search for the principal Captain. For the effecting this, they had been working one whole Day or two after in Whitehall and at Westminster, (where they suspected him to be) and at his coming home they hoped to have him, having set a standing Watch armed, from Nine at Night until Seven in the Morning; and meant to continue the same so long as it should be thought convenient by the Lord Treasurer, and other of the Lords, as the Recorder signified to them.

AGAIN, in the Year 1592, the Outlandish Strangers that dealt in Retail Trades, were greatly disgusted by the English Shop-keepers and Freemen of LONDON, as spoiling their Trades; and they made Complaint, and drew up Allegations against retailing Strangers, in Order to the getting an Act of Parliament against their Retailing. They alledged, That the Retailing of foreign Commodities by Strangers caused the Decay of English Retailers, in Ability, Number, and Trade. For Example, The English Retailers of Linen Cloth in LONDON were to the Number of 160, or thereabouts, but now they were but 67; and the Strangers were increased double in that Trade. And whereas, within seven Years past, one English Retailer of Linen Cloth in LONDON uttered yearly in Lawns and Cambricks to the Value of 1400 l. now the best of them uttered not in that Sort of Ware yearly 200 l. and so of the rest; though much more of those Wares were uttered at that Day than was wont to be. So that what the English Retailer lost, the Retailing Strangers got. They alledged further, That the Strangers Retailers had more Liberty than the English Retailers, in that they retailed in Cities, Towns Corporate, and the Suburbs of Cities, and other exempt Places; which English Retailers were prohibited by a Law to do, viz. the Statute of 1 & 2 Phil. & Mary. And that some Strangers were both Merchants and Retailers. They alledged, That the Strangers Retailers hindered the Queen's Subsidies and Customs, in living obscurely as poor Retailers in Shew; and so paid the Queen for for Subsidy but 4 d. a Poll; and in not being mere Merchants, whereby they should pay double Custom and Subsidies. They alledged, That they enhanced the Prices of Wares, by secret combining with Merchants beyond the Seas, Wares being then by one half dearer than they were before they retailed. They alledged, That they were dangerous to the State, in Respect of their exceeding Wealth, by using two or three several Trades; in Respect of their great Numbers planted in the chief Cities and Coast-Towns of this Land; in Respect of their Readiness to fly from us upon Report of Danger; and in Respect that many of them were of no Church or apparent Profession. Lastly, They alledged, that they kept a Commonwealth among themselves, and they would not teach any of our People their Trades, nor bring up any Children of our Nation in their Trade under them. Upon these Reasons they endeavoured to get an Act of Parliament against them.

THE Foreigners on the other Side argued for themselves, that such an Act was against Charity, in that it debarred Strangers from their Livings; that the Strangers Retailers sold Wares better cheap than the English Retailers did; that it was against the Freedom of their Denizations; that it was against the Queen's Benefit, in that Strangers paid double Customs and Subsidies; that they had done much Good to divers Cities and Towns within this Realm; and lastly, that if they were restrained from Retailing, the English Retailers would raise the Prices among themselves. The Number of these Strangers within LONDON and the Liberties (according to the above-said Complaint against them) were, reckoning both Denizens, and no Denizens, 1062.

THIS Bill against Aliens selling by Way of Retail, was brought into the Parliament, 35 Eliz. Anno 1593, and Counsel was held for the Strangers, and for the City against them. Sir John Wolley (Secretary for the Latin Tongue to the Queen) was against the Bill, and said in the House, "That such a Restraint upon Strangers would be ill for LONDON itself; for the Riches and Renown of the City came by the entertaining of Strangers, and giving Liberty unto them. That Antwerp and Venice could never have been so rich and famous but by entertaining of Strangers; and by that Means had gained all the Interourse of the World.

BUT Sir Walter Raleigh took the other Side, and spake against the Strangers, and that with great Bitterness, and said to this Tenor, "That whereas it was pretended that it was against Charity, against Honour, and against Profit to expel them; in my Opinion, said he, it is no Matter of Charity to relieve them; for, first, such as fly hither have forsaken their own King. Our Religion is no Pretext for them; for we have no Dutchmen here but such as come from those Princes where the Gospel is preached, &c. As for Honour, it is Honour to use Strangers as we be used by them. But it is a Lightness in a Commonwealth, yea, a Baseness in a Nation, to give a Nation a Liberty, which we cannot receive again. In Antwerp, where our Interourse was most, we were never suffered to have a Taylor or a Shoemaker to dwell there. Nay, at Milan, where there are three Hundred Pound Englishmen, they cannot have so much as a Barber among them. And then as for Profit, they are all of the House of Almaine, who pay nothing, yet eat our Profits, and supplant our own Nations, &c. And therefore he saw no Reason so much Respect should be given unto them. And so he concluded, that he saw no Matter of Honour, no Matter of Charity, no Matter of Profit, in relieving of them.

Dr. Kennet observes, upon Sir Walter Raleigh's Speech, "That this was a severe Speech against the poor foreign Strangers, delivered by him; who could not foresee his own Misfortunes of being first ruined in a Voyage to foreign Parts; and after his Return, of being hunted to Death by a foreign Minister.

BUT Sir Robert Cecil, (one of the Secretaries of State) a Man of a better Spirit, by his Wisdom and Temper, took off this Inveective; who spake after this Sort; "That he could not but own it a Matter of Charity to relieve Strangers, and especially such as do not grieve our Eyes. And as to the Point of Honour, this Entertainment of them had brought great Honour to our Kingdom, in that it was accounted the Refuge of distressed Nations: For our Arms have been open to them, to cast themselves into our Bosoms. And yet (added he, to moderate Matters) our Charity must not hinder or injure ourselves. That, as the Bill was, it was not sufficient for this Purpose.—That for his own Conscience, if the Question were then made, he was not resolved to give his Voice. That if it were not for the Gravity of the House, nor for the Credit of the Committees to have it rejected upon the sudden; that as it was then, it was not fit to pass, in his Credit. He saw the Citizens themselves would be well assenting unto the reforming of the same. For that Mr. Recorder yesterday speaking with them for the City, yet, with good Regard, thought the Bill might receive great Moderation." And, upon this Motion and Discourse of Cecil, the House was pleased to stay the Bill, and commit it again to the former Committee. The Bill afterwards pass'd the House of Commons with a good Majority, but went no further before the Dissolution: When the Strangers here residing, were left in Possession of all Indulgence that the Laws of the Kingdom did allow, and the Laws of Hospitality could bestow upon them.

AGAIN, Anno 1593, one Edward Dymock sued for a View of Aliens and Strangers throughout the Realm, and to keep a Roll and a Book of the Names and Numbers of them. The like Suit did Sir Thomas Milmay make; petitioning for the erecting an Office to keep a Register yearly of the Names, Ages, Abilities of Body, Countries, Callings, Arts, Sciences, Places of Habitation, Causes of Repair hither, and Times of Departure hence, of all Foreigners and Strangers, now being and inhabiting within the Realm; and of all others that should from Time to Time come into the Realm to inhabit, or pass out of the same; allowing 6 d. for every Poll at their first Entry into the Register, and yearly after 4 d. of such as were Householders, and 2 d. for Children and Servants; and 4 d. for every one that should depart the Realm.

It was commonly urged against the Strangers, that a greater Number might repair hither, than with good Policy were fit to be endured. That very many might justly be supposed to resort hither, not so much out of Zeal to Religion, or Love to the Queen, as to practise against her, and her State, and to rob the English of their Commodities to enrich themselves. That they placing themselves in LONDON, Norwich, Canterbury, or in Port Towns, as Southampton, Sandwich, Colchester, might be more ready to do Mischief, or lie fittest to engross our Commodities into their Hands, and to transport the same to their own private Benefit. That the Artisans and mechanical Persons might be impoverished by the great Multitude of Strangers being of their Trades and Faculties. That there were many rich Men among them that lived obscurely, to benefit themselves by Usury and Exchange of Money, Money, without doing good to the Commonwealth. That many having gotten into their Hands great Riches and Treasure by engrossing our Commodities, suddenly departed the Realm, and many Times stole away with other Men's Goods, without any Notice thereof; and that under Colour of Merchandize and Religion, many Intelligencers and Spies adventured to come hither. These were some of the Reasons which Sir Thomas Mildmay, above-mentioned, used to persuade the Queen to grant a Register.

THE wiser and better Sort were rather for cherishing these Strangers, as well perceiving what Advantages they brought to the Nation, both for their Callings and Examples of Thrift and Diligence; as also by rendering the Queen's Enemy weaker by the dispeopling his Country, and abating his Trade and Traffick. They had also a Religious Compassion for such as left their own Country and Friends, and plentiful Living, (as most of them did) for the Sake of God and Truth. Of this Temper and Judgment was the wise Lord Treasurer Burghley; for when in the Year 1588, great Labour was used to make Strangers employ their Monies received for foreign Goods and Commodities, in other home Commodities to be transported abroad, and not by Exchange; he was against urging it too rigorously, because he saw it would drive away Strangers, who in those Days ought, as he said, rather to be cherished than hardly dealt withal, or exacted upon.

NOR were they backward to assist the Queen according to their Ability, and to do as other Subjects did. Thus in that critical Year 1588, there being a Loan charged by the Queen upon the City, the Companies and Mysteries of LONDON subscribed each distinctly. Then did the Strangers also subscribe among themselves the Sum of 4900 l. Their Names, and the Sums they subscribed were as follow:

IN the Year 1595, the poor Tradesmen made a Riot upon the Strangers in Southwark, and other Parts of the City of LONDON, whereupon was a Presentment of the greatest Inquest for the said Borough, concerning the outrageous Tumult and Disorder, unjustly committed there, upon Thursday, June 12, 1595, and the Leaders were punished, and also the chief Offenders.

THE like Tumults began at the same Time within the Liberties (as they are called) where such Strangers commonly harboured. And upon the Complaint of the Elders of the Dutch and French Churches, Sir John Spencer, Lord Mayor, committed some young Rioters to the Compter. And when some of their Fellow-Apprentices and Servants gathered in a Body, and attempted to break open the Compter, and deliver the Prisoners; the Mayor went out in Person, and took 20 or more of them, and committed all to safe Custody, and promised to proceed against them with all Severity, as he signified in a Letter to the Lord Keeper, dated the 12th of June, 1595.

THE State of the poor French Protestant Refugees, Anno 1687, was this: Their Numbers that were relieved by a Brief that Year, were 15,500 Persons, whereof 13,500 were in and about LONDON, and 2000 in several Sea-Port Towns; of these were 140 Families of Persons of Quality; 183 Ministers with their Families; 144 Families of Lawyers, Physicians, Merchants and Citizens; the rest Artificers, Husbandmen, &c. and considerable Numbers of them more still at that Time coming over. The Collection that was made for them in LONDON; and other Parts of the Nation, in the abovesaid Year 1687, amounted to 40,000 l. paid into the Chamber of LONDON, and not long after 2000 l. more was paid in. Fifteen French Churches, or convenient Places for the Worship of God, were erected by Means of this Collection, viz. three in LONDON, and 12 in several Counties, besides those great Numbers before-mentioned relieved thereby.

THE Christian Hospitality of King Charles II. towards these Refugees, in the Reception of them some Years before, appears by this that follows:

ON the 21st of July 1681, there was a Memorial presented to King Charles II. in Behalf of the distressed Protestants abroad; which he referred to the Consideration of the Lords Committees of Council-Board for Trade and Plantations, with Directions to report their Opinion thereupon; which they accordingly did July 28 following in Council. And then the King in Council at Hampton-Court did declare, "That he held himself obliged in Honour and Conscience to comfort and support all such afflicted Protestants, who by Reason of the Rigors and Severities which were used towards them upon Account of their Religion, should be forced to quit their native Country, and should desire to shelter themselves under his Majesty's Royal Protection, for the Preservation and free Exercise of their Religion; and in order hereunto his Majesty was pleased further to declare, That he would grant unto every such distressed Protestant, who should come hither for Refuge and reside here, his Letters of Denization under the Great Seal, without any Charge whatsoever; and likewise such further Privileges and Immunities as were consistent with the Laws, for the Liberty and free Exercise of their Trades and Handicrafts; and that he would likewise recommend it to his Parliament at their next Meeting, to pass an Act for the general Naturalization of all such Protestants as should come over as aforesaid; and for the further enlarging their Liberties and Franchises granted to them by his Majesty, as reasonably might be necessary for them. And for their Encouragement his Majesty was likewise pleased to grant unto them, that they should pay no greater Duties in any Case than his Majesty's own natural born Subjects; and that they should have all Privileges and Immunities, that generally his Majesty's native Subjects had, for the Introduction of their Children into Schools and Colleges.

AND his Majesty was likewise pleased to order, That all his Officers, both Civil and Military, should give a kind Reception to all such Protestants as should arrive within any of his Majesty's Ports in this Kingdom, and to furnish them with free Passports, and give them "all

“ all Assistance and Furtherance in their Journeys “ to the Places to which they should desire to “ go. And the Lords Commissioners of his Ma-“ jesty’s Treasury were to give Orders to the “ Commissioners of his Customs, to suffer the “ said Protestants to pass free with their Goods “ and Household Stuff, whether of a greater or “ smaller Value, together with their Tools and “ Instruments, belonging to their Crafts or “ Trades, and generally all what belonged to “ them, that might be imported according to “ the Laws then in Force, without exacting any “ Thing from them.

“ AND for the further Relief and Encourage“ ment of the said necessitous Protestants, the “ King would give Order for a general Brief “ through his Kingdom of England, for collect“ ing the Charity of well-disposed Persons, for “ the Relief of the said Protestants who might “ stand in need thereof.

“ AND to the End when any such came over,
 “ being Strangers, they might know where to ad“ dress themselves to fitting Persons, to lay their “ Requests and Complaints before his Majesty, “ he was graciously pleased to appoint the Most “ Reverend Father in God the Lord Archbishop “ of Canterbury, and the Right Reverend the “ Lord Bishop of LONDON, or either of “ them, to receive all the said Requests and “ Petitions, and to present the same to his Ma“ jesty ; to the End such Order might be given “ therein as should be necessary.” And this Order, for the more publick Knowledge thereof, was printed by the King’s Printers.

QUEEN Anne, of later Years, was not behind in her Compassion of the Misery of these poor Protestants, still under grievous Persecution. For in the Year 1707, these Refugees, viz. the Earl of Lifford, Monsieur Le Coq; Monsieur St. Leger and several other French Protestant Gentlemen and Ministers, introduced by the Earl of Sunderland, one of the Principal Secretaries of State, April 2, 1707, presented to her Majesty an Address signed by a great Number of them ; expressing their Gratitude for the gracious Protection, and charitable Assistance they had received from the English : And laying before her Majesty the distressed and calamitous Condition of their Brethren in France under the present Persecution :
 And prayed, that her Majesty would be pleased to take the same into her Royal and tender Consideration.

To which Address her Majesty was pleased to return the following Answer : “ I have always “ had a great Compassion for the unhappy Cir“ cumstances of the afflicted Protestants of France.
 “ I will communicate my Thoughts upon this “ Matter to our Allies ; and hope such Measures “ may be taken as may effectually answer the “ Intent of your Petition.

AND lastly, upon the Bill about Occasional Conformity in that Queen’s Reign, fearing some Restraint might be put upon them in Respect of the Exercise of their Religion, they recommended their Case to the Parliament as follows :

The CASE of the DUTCH and FRENCH Protestant Churches in England.

THAT they were first established in the Reign of King Edward VI. and afterwards in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, and have now

THAT those Churches were, and are composed of such Persons, who themselves and their Ancestors fled out of the Netherlands, France, and other Parts beyond the Seas, from Popish Persecution.

THAT they have introduced and established a great Number of very profitable Woollen, Silk, and other Manufacturies in this Realm, particularly at LONDON, Canterbury, Norwich, Colchester, &c.

THAT they have always continued very Dutiful and Loyal to the Crown and Government.

THAT in the Act of Uniformity, made in the 13th and 14th Years of King Charles II. there is Provision made, and a Clause inserted in Favour of the said Churches.

THAT King James I. of glorious Memory, in 1614, sent his Royal Letters to the National Synod of the French Churches, expressing his great Care and Concern for their Peace and Preservation.

THAT in 1618, his said Majesty sent one of his Bishops, and four of the most famous Doctors of the Church of England, to the Synod of Dort, who acted with the whole Body, and signed all their Acts.

THAT the Convocation of the Clergy of England, were pleased to take Notice of the Protestant Churches Abroad, in several Addresses made to the Crown, and to declare how much they were concerned for the Preservation of their Religion.

THAT in the Prayers appointed for the publick
 Fasts, and upon solemn Occasions, the Reformed Churches abroad are therein recommended to GOD.

THAT the Crown of England hath, on the Behalf of the Protestants, been Guarantee in several Treaties of Peace between the Protestants and Papists.

THAT many of the English Nobility and Gentry, when abroad, do repair to the Protestant Churches and Assemblies, and there receive the Sacrament.

THAT the Papists abroad will revile the Protestants, that they are not of the same Religion with the Church of England, altho’ they have a Liturgy and Form of Prayer.

THAT the Dutch and French Churches maintain (by voluntary Contribution) great Numbers of poor People ; which they will be disabled to do, in Case Persons of honourable Offices and Employments are prohibited, under Penalties, to resort to their Churches, and thereby the Poor (which are numerous) will become a great Charge to the several Parishes.

THAT by the Bill depending concerning Occasional Conformity, the said Churches will be greatly prejudiced in their established Privileges, and their Members may become liable to several Penalties and Forfeitures, unless a Clause be inserted for their Exemption.

THAT not only they will be prejudiced, but also all the Reformed Churches abroad : For one of the Advantages of those Churches is, being looked upon by their Enemies as Churches which are of the same Communion with the Church of England ; but when it is known that those which are in this Kingdom in any Place of Honour or Trust, incur Penalties for being present in the Assemblies where their Rites and Discipline are followed, they will become contemptible and despicable to their Adversaries ; and their Members will be deprived of the Comfort and Encouragement they find in their glorying of being of the same Religion with the Church of England ; and that the Queen’s most Excellent Majesty is Defender of their Faith, and of their Interest in the World.

Wherefore it is humbly hoped, that a Proviso or Clause may be added for their Exemption in the said Bill concerning Occasional Conformity, they performing their Exercises in the Dutch and French Languages.

C H A P. XII.

The MILITARY GOVERNMENT of the CITY of LONDON.

HAVING thus treated of the Ecclesiastical and Temporal, or Civil Government of the City, there is yet a third State of Government distinct from the former, viz. the Military State, serving for the Defence thereof, in Case of any hostile Invasion, or Oppression. And the City is able to furnish out considerable Forces for its own Defence, and the Service of the Prince, upon Occasion; and hath her Members carefully disciplined in Martial Arts, and Feats of War for that Purpose.

IN a Time of War, under King Stephen, the City mustered 20,000 Horse, and 60,000 Foot, of their own Men.

IN the Year of our Lord 1532, (not to look farther back) being the 23d of King Henry VIII. there was a General Muster in LONDON; wherein were taken the Names of all Men within the City and Liberties, from the Age of 16 unto 60, the Harnesses, and all Sorts of Weapons for War being taken Account of. They then drew out only such able Men as had White Harnesses; and caused them all to appear in white Coats and Breeches, and White Caps and Feathers. And because Notice was given that the King would see them mustered, they all prepared to appear as splendid as they could; and, to that End, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, Recorder, Sheriff, and all that had been Sheriffs, had White Harnesses, and over them Coats of Black Velvet, with the Arms of the City embroidered thereon; each one a great Gold Chain, and well mounted on Horses with rich Trappings; on their Heads Velvet Caps, and in their Hands Battle-axes gilt. Each Alderman and the Recorder had four Halbertiers in White Silk, or Buff-Coats, waiting on them, with their Halberts gilt. And the Lord Mayor had sixteen tall Men apparelled in White Sattin Doublets, Caps and Feathers, Chains of Gold, and other gorgeous Attire, with long gilt Halberts, following his Lordship at a Distance. But next to him he had four Footmen attired in White Sattin; then two Pages cloathed in Crimson Velvet, and Cloth of Gold, riding on fine Horses richly furnished, one of them carrying the Lord Mayor's Helmet, and the other his Pole-axe, both richly gilt. Most of the Citizens, of any Quality or Office, were clad in White Sattin, or White Silk Coats, with Chains of Gold; and some had rich Jewels.

WHAT was the Number of Men then in Arms, is not recorded; but that they may be guessed at by what follows. They mustered in Mile-end Fields, and, before Nine o' Clock in the Morning, they began to march, entering at Aldgate in great Order; and some marched up to Westminster, where the King and most of the Courtiers were placed to view them, as they passed by. Thence they marched about St. James's Park, so through Holborn, and thence to Leaden-hall, where they disbanded and went home. And this was not done till Five o' Clock in the Afternoon; which was eight Hours March.

IN the Year 1585, were great Musters in LONDON, that so the City might be in a Readiness upon any Invasion of the Spaniards, who threatened terribly, by the Preparation they were making; and upon any Insurrections at Home, by Reason of the Queen of Scots. And large Contributions were raised upon the Citizens for this Charge: But they in Black-fryars, St. Martin's, White-fryars, and other exempt Places, refused to be taxed, and would not yield to pay any Thing, unless they received Direction from the Lord Treasurer, and other Lords of the Privy Council for the Doing thereof. So that Sir Thomas Pullyson, Lord Mayor, desired the said Lord Treasurer to give his Orders to those Places.

AND in April and May this Year, the Queen being at Greenwich, the City Militia, compleatly armed, mustered before her six or eight Days, laying intrenched about Blackheath, to the Number of 4 or 5000 Men. Then all the Companies and Mysteries of LONDON sent out their Numbers. And here follows a Scheme of what Numbers of Men each Company sent forth, and the Charge of Arms, Wages and Victuals.

This Account was sent in to Sir Thomas Pullyson, Lord Mayor, many of these Men putting themselves voluntarily to Charges, in making new Coats, and providing themselves Scarfs and Feathers, and such like. This Training, no Question, was ordered to prepare for any Attempt of the Queen's Enemies from Abroad or at Home, by secret Insurrections.

UPON the dangerous Threatening from the Conspiracies by Papists carrying on, in September 1586, the City thought of putting themselves into a Posture of Defence: And there was for that End drawn up (to be considered by the Lords) a Book, intituled, The Manner of ordering the Citizens of LONDON, to the safe Keeping and Defence of that her Majesty's City, against the traitorous and sudden Attempts of all Conspirators and Traitors whatsoever. Which, being so remarkable a Matter, and shewing the Vigilancy and Courage of the City at this Time, may deserve to be here exemplified.

1. THAT everie Alderman of his Warde, assisted with the gravest Inhabitants there, doe gather and register the Names of all suche Howsehowlders, their Children and Servants, as dwell in the same Warde, who openly profess and shewe themselves to love the Gospel, and hate Poperie, being of sufficient Wealthe to mainteyne their owne State, and able to beare Almes.

2. Item, That of the most apte of those Cittizens, there be chosen out for special Leaders (everye of them to lead xxv of his Neighbours dwelling next him.) And that there be so manye of those Leaders, as after that Rate shal be sufficient to leade iiii. or v. thousand Men, or more or lesse, as shal be thought meete: And that the sayd Number of Men be chosen out of those, to be registred as aforesayd.

3. Item, That of the most valiante, grave and wise amonge the said registred Cittizens, there be chosen Captaynes of Bandes, everie of them under severall Ensignes; to receive tenne of the sayd special Leaders, with everie of them his xxv Men. So shal there be two hundred and fifty Men under an Ensigne: And that they have their severall Ensignes accordinglye.

4. Item, That of the said Cittizens there be chosen to serve under everie suche of their Captaynes, their severall Lyvetenantes, Ensigne-Bearers and Sergeantes, with a fit Drummer: And that there be assigned a Place certen to everye Captayn, wherunto he shal resort upon any sudden Alarme. And that he know all his Officers, and those petty Leaders speciallie appointed, to bring his Men thither to him. And likewise that those Officers and Leaders know the same Place, and their Captayne.

5. Item, That after suche Election and Appointment as aforesaid, everie one applye himself to learne and know, howe to exercise their severall Offices and Roles, as apperteyneth. And that everie Householder have readie in his Howse all Weapons and Furniture necessarie for himself and those of his Howse, to be appointed in this Service.

6. Item, That the Watches for the Nighte be kepte according to the former Order. But the same to be of more sufficient Persons; and that speciallie, there be at everie Gate a Watche from ix o'Clock at Nighte, till vij in the Morning for the Wynter, and from x to v in the Sommer; and that the Portcullises at everie Gate be surveyed and made readie to use at any suddyn, yf any Nede be.

7. Item, That inasmuche as that Syde of the Cytie, next the Ryver lyeth open, That therefore from the Tower to Bryderwell, they do appointe all alongest a sufficient Number of Watche Howses. And therein nightlie to be good Watches to come and contynue at the Gate: And that all pryvate Kayes, Alleys and Wharves during the Howers aforesayd, be close shut upp in.

8. Item, That at thendes of Streetes be prepared Chaynes, as shal be thought needfull, for interrupting thentrie and Passage of anye Adversarie.

9. Item, For quenching of sudden Fiers, yt will be necessarie to have a thousand trustie Persons to carrie Leather Bucketts and Ladders. And that to them of the graver Cyttyzens there be appointed Leaders, to lead them as nede may be, by Hundreds and Fifties, for to be redie to relieve anye fiered Place. And that likewise, under like Leading, there be appointed v hundred Pyoners with Mattocks and Shovells, ready to make Trenches and Rampyers at all Occasions.

10. Item, That the whole ording and disposing of the Premises be at the Direction of the Lord Maior, Sheriffes and Aldermen, and suche grave Persons as they shal take and chuse of the sayde Cyttye to assiste them; and so from Tyme to Tyme, and not otherwise.

11. Item, Upon anye Alarme to be geven, everye Captayne forthwith to repayr to his appointed Place, and all his Officers, and the severall Leaders, with the xxv Men a peece, forthwith to resort to that Place to their special appointed Captaine. And two of those Captaines being placed next to the Lord Maior's Howse for the Time being, with bothe their Bandes, to repayre ymmediately to his Lordship. And to either of the Sheriffes in like Sorte, to repayre one severall Captayne, with his severall Bande. And all other Captaines and their Companies to remaine at their appointed Places, till they receive Order from the Maior. And that in such Case one general Watch Word be geven to everye Soldyer: And that they have some special Token whereby everye of them may be knowne one to another.

12. Item, That upon any Shewe or Suspicion of any dangerous Attempte discryed or perceyved by any of the Watches, that then forthwith they shal geve Knowledge thereof to the Lord Maior and Sheriffe, and to everye Alderman or his Deputie, in the severall Wardes; that they maye call so manye to Armes, as in Case by them shal be thought convenient and sufficient.

13. Item, That upon anye Alarme or Warning geven, everye Inhabitant prepare and have readie in his Howse a Lanthorne with Lighte readye to hange out, when by Authoritie it shal be so commanded.

14. Item, That straighte Order be taken, that if any Alarme be proclaymed, that no Masters of Howses goe noe further than the Streete Dores of their Howses; and that noe Servante or other (upon grevous Payne) do then issue into the Streete, except the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, Sheriffs, Captaynes, Leaders, Officers and Soldiers aforesayd, and their Buketiers and Pyoners, and their Leaders; and such others as shal be especiallie called or commanded by the Lord Mayor or Sheriffs.

15. Item,

15. Item, That one of the Watche Howses at the Water Syde be nere the Engine there that serveth the Cittie with Water : For that above all other is most present, and abundant to that Purpose, and most readye for quenching Fyer; and therefore is speciallie to be garded.

16. Item, That such Recusants as have greate Houses and Lodgings within the Liberties of the Citie; and likewise all dangerous and suspicious Persons to the State, may, by her Majesty's Authoritie be removed from lodging within the Walles of the Citie, (or Suburbs, yf that may be) for those Howses are most like to harbour and cover dangerous Persons to be nearer and readier to make sudden Invasion upon the Cittie.

17. Item, That some special Consideration may be had of all Strangers, having Howses in the Citie, and which are not of the Frenche or Dutche Church. And that some Order may be sett downe, especiallie concerning them, as in this Time and State shall be found requisite.

AGAIN, in the Beginning of the Year 1588, the Queen hearing and seeing such vast Preparations making by Spain, and concluding these Clouds to be intended to be discharged upon her, resolved, in the best Manner she could, to put her City into a Condition of Defence. So the Lords of the Council ordered Edmund York, a brave Commander in the Low Countries, to give his Directions how the City should be ordered for this Purpose : But still the Lord Mayor was to be the chief Governor of all this military Preparation in the City, in making Colonels and Captains, and other Officers; which was such a Trust by the Queen imposed upon the Lord Mayor, as York said, Such an Honour, and such a gracious Favour never happened to any People, neither was the like heretofore done unto them. York's Discourse follows, intituled,

An ORDER to be observed for the Marshalling of the City of LONDON into a true Form of Discipline, to be used in Time of Occasion.

CONsidering the auncient Government of the Citie hath always depended on the Lord Mayor and his Brethren, which Course hath always been found so pleasinge to our Prynces, and liking to the People, as to alter were inconvenient; if therefore your Lordships shall please rather to give them some Authoritie (by your Directions) Marshall, then to derogate anye Thinge from them, it will animate them in their Accounts and Expences; which Authoritie shall contynue till her Majestie and your Lordships shall please to the contrarie. Yet consideringe their Professions and Nurritures not to performe the Actions, therefore to joyne unto the Mayor's Authoritie some Man of Judgment, Experience and Fidelitie, it were convenient, as Marshall, by whose Advise, with the Mayor's Consent, all Causes Marshall be directed, then a Sargeant, Mayor and a Provost, the one to marshall the Men, and the other to do Justice; wherein the French truly saith, That three Things mayne-tenne the Warres, which is, Bon Chief; Bonne Burse, and Bon Bureau, meaning Justice; all which may be performed in the Citie. For the Chief, or Marshall, being appointed by your Lordships, there is no doubt of his Sufficiencie, upon whom the greatest Weight of this Burthren must lye; the Purse considering the Charges so small, it will soon be performed; the Justice by your Lordships Directions, and the Provost's Diligence shall be duly administred; so as all Things shall proceede to the Glorie of God, to the Honour of her Majestie, and to the Benefit of the People. Object they canne not, for that the Charges is defrayed by the Entertainment onely of three Persons, so as no doubt of the Allowance in Respect of Charges. For infringing the Liberties and Privileges your Lordships do give them more than ever they had. For Reputation and Trust, her Majestie and your Lordships do putt Armes, and the managing of Armes into their Hands; so as no doubt, but of a most gracious Acceptance and Acknowledgement of so an especiall gracious Favour and Trust; and may justlye saye themselves to be the happiest People of the World, in having so gracious a Prynce, who contrarie to the Policie of all other Prynces (who disarmie their Subjects) doth put Armes, and managing of Armes into their Hands: O blessed Prynce and happy People. By how much therefore are we more bound to her Majestie then any other Subjects of the World to their Prynces, by as much as our Lives, our Wives, our Children, our Goods, our Freedome and Posteritie is worth.

THE Marshall, Sargeant, Mayor and Provost being by your Lordships appointed, the first Thinge they are to doe, (after the receiving of their Commissions from your Lordships) is to make a Review General of all the Armes and Munition within the Citie and Suburbs, and thereof to enforme your Lordships.

THE next is, to make a Review of all the Garners of Corne, as well in private Houses as in common Magasyns, not onelye of Corn but of all Manner of Victuals, and thereof enforme your Lordships.

THESE Reviewes made by the Mayor, his Brethren, and Marshall, (to whome all Provision of Munition, Armes, and Victuall belongeth) then shall they warne everie common Marchant of Corne to have such a Quantitie, and to everie common Baker and Brewer; to have allwayes in a Readynes such a Quantitie of Corne as he uttereth in fortie Dayes, over and above his ordinarie uttering; and so shall geve like Order of Provision to eurye severall Person that lives and gaynes by selling Victualls; for as the Merchant of Armes and Munitions, the Baker, the Brewer, the Butcher, and all other Trades have a contynuall getting, so lett them be bound to have an Overplus always in their Handes, to serve her Majestie, and to susteyne themselves upon any Occasion of Warres, Dearth, or the Sustainance of distressed Frendes.

THIS done, the Citie shall be divided into so many Quarters as there is fifteene hundreth Men: In everie Quarter shal be chosen one Collonell, a Man there dwellinge, and a Citizen of Honestie, Reputation and Wealth, elected by the Maier and Marshall (after your Lordships Allowance,) who shall haue under hym tenne Captaynes, all Dwellers in that Quarter; and everie Captayne shall have a hundreth and fiftie Men, all Inhabitants in that Quarter, which shal be either the Housholder, his Sonne, or his contynewed Servant. Provided that the Collonnells be none of the Aldermen, because they are already chosen to the Civill Government.

THE Regiment being all Dwellers together in one Quarter, doth make the Collonnells Government easie, and makes the Assemplye of the Souldiers speedie.

THE Collonnells chosen, and the Quarters devided, then shall everie Collonell choose six Captaynes, which shal be allowed by the Maier and Marshall; (after they have enformed your Lordships) being all Dwellers in the Collonnells Quarter.

AFTER the Captaynes chosen, the Lord Maier, his Brethren, and the Marshall, shall deliver so many Housholders, their Sons or contynewed Servaunts, as will furnish eurye Captayne 150 Men with Wepons thus devided, that is, eight Hal-

berdiers,

berdiers, 60 armed Pikes, 30 Musketers, and 50 Harquebusiers, and the two odd Men shal be for the Sargeants. For to put into these trayned Companies and Archers, or a superfluous Number of short Weapons, it were inconvenient, for that the Multitude upon any Alarum, will come furnished with those Weapons; and therefore to teach that by Art which Nature geves, were Tyme lost; and to charge a People with that which is not wanting, were frivolous.

THE Companies furnished, as is aforesaide, then the Sargeant Major, or his Corporalls shall visitt every Man's particular Furniture in their private Howses; aswell to see the Goodnes of their Armes, as to see it in order, least they should dishonour their Commanders; for not performing that which apperteynes to Men of Judgment and Souldiers to doe.

AFTER your Armes provided and reviewed, a Muster-General of all the Armye shall be held in some convenient Place; at which Musters shall onely be the Shew of the Men with their Armes without any Exercise, which shall be held in the Presence of such Honorable Persons as your Lordship shall appoynt, ioyned with the Maior, his Brethren, the Marshall, and Sargeant Major: At which Tyme the Marshall, Sargeant Major and Provost shall be presented unto all the Collonells, Captaynes and Souldiers, their Commissions published.

WHEN your Collonells, Captaynes and Souldiers know this, then everie Night at 6 of the Clock shall five Companies of severall Regiments putt themselves in Armes. And so with their Ensignes shall marche unto the Exchange, and there shall stand in Battell a quarter of an Houre: To whom the Marshall shall come with the Word, which he shall take from the Major, who shall haue it from her Majestie (if she be neare LONDON) which the Marshall shall deliver to the Sargeant Maior with great Duetie and Respect, who shall geve it unto the Captayne of the Watche, and to everie Officer that is in Garde that Night: After the Word delivered, a Prayer for her Majestie's Estate and Kingdom, the Lord's Prayer shal be sayed. Then the Sergeant Major shall putt five Billets in a Hatt, which the Captaynes that are in Garde drawe for their Places of Gardinge; so as he that draweth the Billett of the Exchange, shall that Night be Capteyne of the Watche: He that drawes the Billett of the Bridge, shall garde it, and St. Catheryn's Gate by the Tower: He that draws Aldgate shall garde it, and Busshopsgate: He that drawes Croplegate shall garde it, and Aldersgate: He that drawes Newgate shall garde it, and Ludgate: As for Morgate, it is no Avenew, but a Passage, as the Posterne and the Grave-fryers are. Why I devide the Companies into two Gardes, is, for not over-toylinge the Souldiers, being Men of Trade: For by this Meanes they garde but once in 20 Dayes, which else would come everie tenne Days.

WHEN the Companies are thus entred into Garde, the chief Cordegard for the Captayne of the Watche, shal be kept at the Exchange, by his whole Companye, and the other Cordegards at the Gates by halfe Companies. Upon everie Cordegard shall continuallye stand in Armes five or sixe Souldiers, who shall be relieved every halfe Hour. And considering the continuallye styrringe and travayle that is in LONDON, it shall not be convenient to shut the Gates tyll Tenne of the Clocke or after: and then at Eleven to put forth the Centinells, which ought to be placed upon the Walles, or as near as may be: and so shall stand centneld till 3 in the Morninge, and shal be changed eurye Houre; and eurye half Houre they shall make the Round, which is the surest Garde in the World: But considering how impossible it is to place the Centinells, by Reason of the disorderlye and dangerous Buildinge of Howses which are upon the Walles: By which Means I haue knowne many Townes surprized and greate Intelligence passed to their utter Ruine; for where your Centenells canne not come to the Walles, nor your Round haue free Passage, it is impossible of any certain Safetie, which Manner of Buildinge ought carefully to be looked unto, especially in any Place of Importance, as the Tower, or such like Forts are: Therefore must the Centenells be placed in the Streetes, who, after they are once posted, shall not suffer anye to passe without the Worde, which Manner of severe Gardinge shal be but used tyll the Companies have once all gone over: Whiche is onely to teache them to knowe how to stande upon their Gardes, duringe which Tyme onely the Gates shal be shutt, and the Keyes delivered to the Maior, and no Man to come in but by Commandement from your Lordships, in as good and orderly Forme, as in anye Towne of Warre.

AND the Orders and Ordynances for the Discipline shal be published by the Provost, that in offending no Man pleade Ignorance hereafter. At this Muster a perfect Rolle shal be made by some sufficient Person, of all Persons and Weapons in their Army, which shal be delivered to your Lordships, and registred in the Guldehall. And at these Musters everie Collonell shall bringe his Stampe and Marke particular, with the which every Corlett, Pike, Harquebuze, Muskett, Murrion, and Furniture of his Regiment shal be marked, to avoyde this unmeete lending of Armes; whereby they neglect their Duties to her Majestie, dishonour their Commanders, and utterly deceave themselves. I remember when I was first brought up in Piemount, in the Countie of Brissacks Regiment of the old Bannes, we had our particular Calibre of Harquebuze to our Regiment, both for that one Bullet should serve all the Harquebuzes of our Regiment, as for that our Collonell would not be deceaved of his Armes: Of which Word of Calibre, came first this unapt Terme wee use to call a Harquebuze a Calliver, which is the Height of the Bullett and not the Piece. Before the Battle of Mounguntur, the Prynces of the Religion caused 7000 Harquebuzes to be made all of one Calibre, which were called Harquebuse du Calibre de Monsieur le Prince: So as I think some Man not understandinge Frenche, brought hither the Name of the Height of the Bullett for the Piece, which Word of Calibre, is yet contynued with our good Cannoniers.

AFTER the Musters passed, the Mayor, the Marshall, and the Sargeant Major shall ride round about the Citie, to see all the Wayes or Avenues that comes unto the Towne, to looke what Places are most fit to place Gardes upon, what Streetes are most convenient to make Places of Armes, or Randeuous general, for Assembly upon any Alarum in; which I think will be most necessarie in two Places, that is, one Place of Assemblye shall be at Leadenhall, which answers Algate, Busshopsgate, the Bridge, and directly into LONDON: The other shall be without Newgate, which answers Holbourne, Smithfield, Ludgate, and directly into LONDON; to everie one of these Randeuouses shall, upon any Alarum, assemble five Companies of five particular Regiments: The other five Companies of everie one of those five Regiments shal be thus employed, that is, one Companye shall goe to Algate, another Companye to Busshopsgate, and the other three Companies of the Regiment shall stand in Armes in their Quarter, tyll the Marshall or Sargeant Mayor shall command them; so as upon any sodeyne Alarum, your Souldiers knowe whither and how to assemble without Confusion; fusion, which is a Matter of greate Weight. By this Means your Lordships have two Companyes at evrye Gate, 20 Companyes at either of the Places of Assemblies, and one Companye in everye Streete of Ymportance in LONDON.

WHEN your Collonells and Captaines knowe whither to assemble upon any Alarum (without Confusion) he shal be shewed by the Marshall or Sargeant Major: Then shall the Sargeant Major and his Corporalls have five Companyes everie Day abroad in some private Place to teache them to weare their Furnitures, and to use their Armes, so that in 20 Dayes the whole 15,000 will knowe how to weare their Furniture, and carrye their Armes (which Number I esteeme easie to be leavyed of the best and honestest Sort) which is as much as for this Tyme is requisite.

As you have here the Forme how these Companyes shall enter into Garde, how to divide themselves to their Gardes, how to place there Centenells, and how to make the Ground; (which Form shall every Night be observed, and when the Drums sounde to put the Companyes that enter into Garde in Armes.) Then shall the Companyes that are in Garde, put themselves in Armes, and so stand upon their Cordegard, tyll the Companye that enters into Garde, be possessed of the Cordegard. Then shall they depart, and march orderlye to Garde home their Colours: All which is onely done to teache your Captaynes, Officers and Souldiers, to know how to enter into Garde, how to place their Gardes, and how to stand upon their Gardes; which is the most assuredst Thing that ever was devised for the Safetie of anye Citie, Towne, Place, Camp or Army, which in the open Field without anye Covert in the World, of Wall, Trench or Carriage will be as orderlye and Safely performed, as in any Towne, if the Master of the Campe have Judgment in placing of the Armye, and the Sargeant Major Discretion in placing of the Gardes.

By this Meanes there is everie Night at 6 of the Clock, 10 Ensignes marching in LONDON, which is drawne out of severall Regiments, and severall Quarters, to make the greater Stirring and greater Showe: And because Townes Men love Ease and Profit, therefore there shall onely remayne all Night 25 at every Gate, and 50 at the Exchange; so as they enter into Garde but once everie 20 Dayes, and stand upon their Garde but once in 60 Dayes, which is Nothinge.

WHEN the Gates and chief Bodie of the Watche by the Exchange is possessed (for that you must never carry out your Souldiers, but that you are first possessed of your Gardes for the Assurance of your Retreat;) then shall the Sargeant Major have five Companyes every Daye abroad, and the Sargeant Major of every Regiment shall have one Company abroad, to teach them to use their Armes, to march, assaile, defend: So by this Meanes there is everie Day in Armes 9 particular Companies, with their Sargeant Major, and five Companyes with the Sargeant Major General, and ten Companyes entring into Garde, and in Garde, so as there is 24 Companyes everie Daye in Armes.

ONCE everie 20 Dayes the Marshall and the Sargeant Major shall have one whole Regiment abroad, to teache them to marche, and range them in Battell, and to use their Armes, and once every two Monthes, the Major, the Marshall, the Sargeant Major and the Provost shall have all the Armye abroad for two Dayes, (saving the Companyes in Garde, and those that must enter the next Dayes into Garde; for you must never leave the Gardes ungarded or unprovided of those that shall susteyne the Gardes;) whereby they shall know how to Marche, how to garde in Camp, how to range in Battell; and how to lodge in the Feild, for on their Marches it were good they should learne how to marche in Covert and Champion; how to attack a Skyrmise; how to range suddenly in Battell, and how to assaile and defend: So as if her Majestie upon any sudden Occasion shall please to use this Army, they are at all Tymes readie to marche; and know how to marche, how to lodge, how to garde, and how to use their Armes, and (which is more) knowe how to command, and how to obey: Which is onely brought unto them by her Majesties great Care, and especiall Favour and Trust, with your Lordships Directions, and not any wayes to their Charges; for they onely are charged with the Enterterment of three Persons. Synce therefore it pleaseth her Majestie and your Lordship to laye upon this especial Honour and Trust, as to make the Major Lieftenant in makinge Collonells, Capteyns, Officers and Souldiers, being all Citizens, is suche an Honour, such a Trust, and such a gracious Favour, as never happened unto anye People, neither was the like ever heretofore done unto them, or anye other by anye Prince.

As your Lordships have provided for the marshalling of the Citie, so to prevent any Inconvenience that by anye forren Enemy may happen, which no wayes canne annoy LONDON (in Respect of the Multitude of People therein) but by some foodeyne Attempt, which may breede verye greate Amazement and Fright, with most assured Daunger. If therefore to prevent anye foodeyne Furye, either of Horse or Foot, your Lordships shall please to give Directions, that everie End of evererie Suburbe, there be thirty or forty emptye Pipes, which shall be kept in some Place tyll Occasion serve, and then to place them in such Manner (as I will hereafter shew unto your Lordship, when it shall please you to command) so as 100 shall withstand anye 2000, till further Ayde shal be in a Readyness.

My Meaning is not that these Forces continually use this trayning and gardinge, but onely duringe suche Tyme as your Lordships shall best like, and that they be once well and orderly marshalled, and reduced into good Form, being divided into Regiments and Companyes; that everie Capteyne maye know his Collonell, every Souldier know his Capteyne and Officer, whither to assemble upon anye Alarum, and how to assemble, to avoyde that dangerous Mischief of assembling in Confusion, and to put them in true Order and Forme of the Use of their Armes, and in their Gardes. So as if at any Instant hereafter, her Majesty and your Lordships shall please to use their Service, they are at all Tymes readie without further Direction or Trouble, to performe their Duties, and to obey her Majesty and your Lordships Commandements, havinge onely a Sargeant and two Corporalls to everye Regiment; which three shall bring the whole Regiment in Order, being Souldiers of Worth; without the which it is impossible to reduce them into any Order; so as by this Meanes her Majesty shall continually have xxx Souldyers of Worth in a Readyness.

Thus, to obey your Honours Commandments, I shew my Wants, which I will rather do, then disobey you, knowing your honourable Vertues such, and your Care of me so favourable, as that which is superfluous, you will forget; and that which is wanting, you will with your honourable Favour help: Being therefore neither Scholler nor Learned, I hope your Honour will beare with my Imperfections; but fearing you should trye the Opinion of a great Man of Warre, who sayed, a Souldier ought never to be without his Sword or his Penne in his Hand, meaning in Tyme of Warre to followe those Accounts, and in

Tyme

Tyme of Peace, or idle Tyme which I have, (whereof I am ashamed) to observe that which by Experience he hath learned. Wherein I finde my self farre unable to accomlishe your Lordships Expectation, yet rather then to neglect my Dutie, I bewraye my Ignorance. Thus, beseeching God to geve you long Life, and greate Honour, I commit your Lordships to his Tuition, and my self to your Direction, this Day of March 1588.

Your Honours most humbly to doe you Service,

EDMUND YORKE.

Now as to the Strength of the City, in Regard to the Forces it is able to furnish out, Howel writes thus, in his Londonopolis; That so long ago as 1293, the City set forth a Fleet of ninety-five Ships. And another Record shewed, That in King Stephen's Reign the City raised 60,000 Foot, and 20,000 Horse for Land-Service. And that in his Time (which was Anno 1657,) LONDON had 12,000 Trained Bands, Citizens perpetually in a Readiness, and excellently armed. He esteemed the Circumference of the City to be about twelve Miles, and the Number of Inhabitants therein to be ten hundred thousand; and allowing but the tenth Part able to bear Arms, the City and Suburbs might raise an hundred and fifty thousand fighting Men. Of which the third Part were enough for a brave Army, viz. 50,000 Men, according to the modern Discipline of War.

In the Year 1614, there was a great Muster of the City, the King having appointed after Harvest a general Muster all England over; which every Shire performed with much Cheerfulness. Then did the Citizens also shew themselves very forward, as well in making new Provisions of Ammunition, as in practising all Points of War and Military Discipline. And for the well managing of this Muster, the Lord Mayor and Commonalty appointed twenty Captains to be selected of the most active and able Citizens; and unto every of them he allotted 300 Shot and Pikes, viz. 6000 in all for that Time, being for the most Part Householders, bravely furnished. These twenty Captains performed all Things with such Expedition, Bounty and Bravery, as, except in the Year 88, the like was never before. And such of them as were not formerly of the Martial Society, and Practice of the Artillery-Garden, were then admitted.

BUT to come to Musters of a later Date, and to shew how the Military Government is now established.

ABOUT the Middle of April, in the Year 1660, the Time of the Restauration of King Charles II. there were in LONDON, and the Liberties thereof, that were mustered in Hide Park, Six Regiments of Trained Bands.

Six Regiments of Auxiliaries. And

One Regiment of Horse.

The 12 Regiments of Foot consisted of 80 Companies, and in each Company not less than 250 Men. By which Account the whole Number did amount unto 18,000 Men.

THE Regiment of Horse consisted of six Troops, and each Troop of 100 Men.

THIS Force of the City's being judged to be highly useful for the Defence, not only of the City, but Safety of the King's Person, his Majesty was pleased some few Months after to send to the City a Commission of Lieutenancy, appointing several Persons to act as his Lieutenants in LONDON; giving them the same Power that the Lord. Lieutenants of the Counties in England have. And, in Pursuance of that Commission; the Regiments were new settled:

The Model thus:

THERE were six Regiments of Trained Bands commanded by six eminent Citizens, who were all Knights; and their Lieutenant-Colonels were also Knights.

THERE were also six Regiments of Auxiliaries. And in these 12 Regiments there were 20,000 Men.

THERE were also at that Time listed two Regiments of Horse, each consisting of five Troops, and in each Troop 80 Men; which makes the two Regiments to contain 800 Men.

WHEN this Model was settled, they were all drawn into Hide Park, where his Majesty did view them, with divers Persons of Quality, and innumerable other Spectators, to the general Satisfaction. And besides these, in Case of Necessity, it is certain, that in LONDON, and within the Liberties, there may in a few Days be raised at the least 40,000 Men.

THE Colonels of the six Regiments of the City in the Reign of the late King William, of happy Memory, were Sir Robert Clayton, Sir Tho. Stamp, Sir Will. Ashurst, Sir Tho. Lane, Sir Tho. Abney, and Sir Owen Buckingham. But upon the late Queen's Commission of Lieutenancy, opened at Guild-Hall, July 9, 1702, (where was a very great Appearance of the Commissioners) they chose Sir William Pritchard, Sir John Fleet, Sir Francis Child, Sir Samuel Dashwood, Sir Thomas Cook, and Sir Charles Duncomb.

May 23, 1707, the Queen appointed a new Lieutenancy for the City. The Commission of which Lieutenancy was opened June the 27th following; and then were chosen Colonels, Sir Will. Ashurst, Sir Owen Buckingham, Sir Jeffrey Jeffreys, Sir Gilbert Heathcote, Sir Charles Thorold, and Sir Samuel Stainer. Nicholas Baker, Clerk; Capt. Joseph Hyde, Muster-matter.

The following is a LIST of the NAMES of the Commissioners of LIEUTENANCY for the City of LONDON, by Commission under the Great Seal, dated Feb. 17, 1727.

THE Six Regiments of the City Trained Bands are thus commanded :

THE Green, by Sir William Humphreys, Knt. Baronet and Alderman, Colonel.

THE Yellow, by Sir Charles Peers, Knt. and Alderman, Colonel.

THE Orange, by Sir Gerard Congers, Knight and Alderman, Colonel.

VOL. II.

THE White, by Sir John Eyles, Baronet and Alderman, Colonel.

THE Red, by Sir Robert Baylis, Knt. and Alderman, Colonel.

THE Blue, by Sir William Billers, Knt. and Alderman, Colonel.

IN every one of these Regiments are eight Companies, consisting of 150 Men each, making in the Whole 7200 Men.

MOREOVER, one Regiment of Trained Bands in Southwark, consisting of 1500 Men.

Two Regiments within the Tower-Hamlets, consisting of 3000 Men.

THE Holborn Regiment, consisting of 2000 Men.

AND Westminster Regiment, also of 2000 Men.

Of the ARTILLERY COMPANY:

BESIDES the afore-mentioned Trained Bands and Auxiliary Men, there is the Artillery Company, which is a Nursery for Soldiers, and hath been so near 100 Years. It is a Kind of Independent Company, consisting of seven or eight hundred Volunteers. Their Place, or Field of Exercise, formerly was in the Old Artillery Ground, now in Finsbury Fields, adjoining to the upper Quarters of Moorfields on the East, and Bunhill on the West: It is a large Piece of Ground, containing about ten Acres, inclosed with a high Brick Wall.

KING Charles II. lifted himself into this Company when he was Prince of Wales, about the Year 1636, and so did his Royal Brother James, Duke of York, at the same Time: Who (after the Restoration) took upon him the Command thereof, and owned it as his Company.

UNDER the principal Commander, there is a Leader, who exercises this Company every Tuesday Fortnight; and the other Tuesdays the Exercise is performed by the several Members of the Company who are to command.

MANY of the Nobility of the Land are of this Company, as also the Lord Mayor, and most of the Aldermen: And all the Commanders and Commission Officers of the Trained Bands, and Auxiliaries before-mentioned, do exercise Arms in this Ground, the whole Company consisting of 600 Men, or thereabouts.

The Government of this COMPANY, and the principal MEMBERS.

1. A Leader.
2. Two Lieutenants.
3. Two Ensigns.
4. Two Serjeants.
5. A Provost Marshal.
6. Three Gentlemen of Arms.

THEY have a Court Martial, which consists of a President and Vice-President; a Treasurer, and twenty-four Members of the Company.

UPON the second Tuesday in February, at a General Rendezvous every Year, the Officers are elected.

April 27, 1708, a General Court of the Artillery Company met in the Artillery Garden, to choose a President, Vice-President, Treasurer, and twenty-four Assistants, for the Year following; where the Election for the three former fell by a great Majority on Sir William Ashurst for President, Sir Owen Buckingham, Vice-President, and Sir Gilbert Heathcote, Treasurer, in the room of Sir John Fleet, Sir Jeffrey Jeffreys, and Lieutenant-Colonel Robert Child. And for Assistants, chiefly those in present Commission in the City.

Of the Original of this Artillery Company, we have this Relation: That Anno 1585, the City having been greatly troubled and charged with continual Mutters and Training of Soldies, certain gallant, active and forward Citizens, having had Experience both at Home and Abroad, voluntarily exercised themselves, and trained up others, for the ready Use of War. So as within two Years there were almost three hundred Merchants, and others of like Quality, very sufficient and skilful to train and teach common Soldiers the Management of their Pieces, Pikes and Halberds, to March, Counter-march and Ring. Which said Merchants, for their own Perfecting in Military Affairs and Discipline, met every Thursday in the Year, practising all usual Points of War, and every Man, by Turns, bore orderly Office, from the Corporal to the Captain. Some of them; in the dangerous Year 1588, had Charge of Men in the great Camp at Tilbury, and were generally called Captains of the Artillery Garden, the Place where they exercised. These took Precedent from the Merchants of Antwerp.

BUT this useful Artillery-Exercise became afterwards discontinued for a great while, till the Year 1610, when by Means of Philip Hudson, Lieutenant of the said Company; Tho' Laverock, Rob. Hughs, Sam. Arthois, Rob. Greenburst, and divers other Gentlemen and Citizens of LONDON, this brave Exercise was renewed and set on Foot again. These Gentlemen associated in the said Garden, having sufficient Warrant and Toleration granted them by the Lords of King James's Privy Council, to whom they became humble Suitors in the Beginning, for Prevention of all future Misconstructions of their honest Intent and Actions there. And having duly considered the Necessity of the Knowledge of Arms in so populous a Place, and the Inconveniencies that happened to Antwerp, and other their late populous and flourishing Neighbour-Cities, principally by Reason of their Neglect of that most noble Exercise of Arms, and Martial Discipline, in Times of Wealth and Peace. These therefore now undertook, at their own private and particular Charge, a Weekly Exercise of Arms after the modern and best Fashion and Instruction then in Use. And, moreover, for their better Ease and Conveniency, they erected a strong and well furnished Armory in the said Ground, in which were Arms of several Sorts, and of such extraordinary Beauty, Fashion and Goodness for Service, as were hardly to be matched elsewhere.

CAPT. Edward Panton was their first Captain; and Nicholas Spring, a Merchant of the City, their first elected Antient, or Ensign-Bearer. And as those formerly of the Old Artillery-Garden did good Service many Ways in their own Persons, and in teaching others, so these last were likely to do more particular Service, being Men of more Skill, and their Practice greater.

THE Company was now grown great, and in good Estimation: And unto the Artillery Garden, at the usual Times of their Military Exercise, many Country Gentlemen of all Shires resorted, and diligently observed their Exercises; which they saw were excellent: And being returned home to their own Countries, they practised and used the same with their Trained Bands. Prince Charles came hither sometimes to see them.

AT this Time young Scholars, and other Youth, from the Age of nine to ten, unto seventeen, of their own Warlike Dispositions, voluntarily chose themselves Captains and Lieutenants out of their own Companies; and, with Sound of Drum, and other Ensigns spread, marched into the Field, upon Play-days and Holidays; and practised all Points of War which they had seen their Elders teach; having got themselves Pikes and Pieces fit for their handling.

Note, Every County of England hath a Lord Lieutenant, but the City of LONDON is a Lieutenancy of itself, not subject to any Lord Lieutenant, but the Office executed by the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and other principal Members of the City, authorized by a peculiar Commission from the King.

BEFORE we quite leave the City of LONDON, it is fit we rectify one Mistake which happen'd in Book IV. Page 83, that Sheet being printed off on the 24th of June, the Day the Sheriffs are elected, we have placed George Martin, Sen. Esq; and William Pate, Esq; as the two Sheriffs of LONDON and Middlesex for the present Year; but those Gentlemen, after their Election, having disqualified themselves, as some others did afterwards, either by swearing off, or paying their Fines, the Sheriffs that now serve are Micajah Perry, Esq; Alderman of Aldgate Ward, and John Salter, Esq; Alderman of Cornhill Ward.

SURVEY

OF THE City of WESTMINSTER.

BOOK V.

Containing an Account of the Antiquities, Bounds, Liberties, Parishes, Churches, Royal Palaces, Courts of Justice, Great Houses, and other eminent Places of that City; together with the antient Monastery and Church of St. Peter.

CHAP. I.

A Description of WESTMINSTER.

WESTMINSTER had its Name from the Minster, that is, the Monastery, situated Westward; as there was another Minster not far from the Tower of LONDON, Eastward of the City, called Eastminster. It was antiently but a Town, and so it was called about the Beginning of King Henry VIII. There was an Act of Parliament in 37 H. VIII. to authorize that King, by Letters Patents or Proclamations; to make Westminster an Honour, with some other Places of the Kings, viz. Kyngston upon Hull, St. Osyth's in Essex; and Donnington in Berks:

IN former Times there was not a continued Street of Buildings between LONDON and Westminster as now there is; but much vacant Space of Fields and open Grounds between; then the Way was often bad to pass, and the Sheriffs of LONDON have sometimes taken Care for the Reparation thereof. Thus did King John send to them to that Purpose; Preceptum fuit Vicecomitibus LONDON, ad reparandam viam a LONDON ad Westmonasterium.

THE Highway of the Strand, from Temple-bar to the Savoy, seems to have been paved about Ann. 1385, in the Reign of King Richard II. in whose eighth Year Toll was granted to be taken for that Purpose: And again, the like was granted in 24 H. VI. Anno 1446, but the Paving went went no farther than to the Savoy, till towards the latter Part of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, Sir Robert Cecil, Knt. building a fair House somewhat beyond the Savoy, at Ivy-bridge, levelled and paved the Highway near adjoining.

Now touching this City of Westminster, to begin at Temple-bar, on the Right Hand or North Side, and so pass up West through a back Lane or Street, wherein do stand three Inns of Chancery; the first called Clement's-Inn, because it stands near St. Clement's Church, but near to a fair Fountain, at the Time of its first Building called Clement's-well; the second is New-Inn, so called, as more lately made than the other an Inn of Chancery for Students out of a common Hostery, the Sign of our Lady. This was about the Beginning of the Reign of Henry VII. and not so late as some have supposed, viz. at the pulling down of Strand-Inn, in the Reign of King Edward VI. for Sir Thomas More, some Time Lord Chancellor, was a Student in this New-Inn, and went from thence to Lincoln's-Inn.

THIS Street stretches up to Drury-lane, so called for that there was a House belonging to the Family of the Drury's. This Lane turns Northward toward St. Giles's in the Fields. From the South End of this Lane in the High Street were divers Hosteries and Houses for Gentlemen, among which was Cecil-House, some Time belonging to the Parson of St. Martin's in the Fields, and which, by Composition, came to Sir Thomas Palmer, Knt. in the Reign of Edward IV. who began to build the same of Brick and Timber, very large and spacious; but it was afterwards enlarged and beautified by Sir William Cecil, Baron of Burghley, Lord High Treasurer and great Counsellor of State.

FROM thence was a continued Building of good Houses, as far as the Earl of Bedford's House, near Ivy-bridge, over-against Russel-House, afterwards the Lord Burghley's, and so on the North Side to a Lane that turned to the Parish Church of St. Martin's in the Fields. Then was the Chapel of our Lady, called the Pew, with a House wherein some Time were distracted and lunatick People, of what Antiquity Stow says he has not read, nor of the Suppression; but it was said, that some Time a King of England not liking such Kind of People to remain so near his Palace, caused them to be removed farther off to Bethlem without Bishopsgate of LONDON, and to that Hospital the said House of Charingcross remained in Stow's Time.

AMONG other Things of this Chapel Stow remarks that on the 17th of February, in the Year of CHRIST 1452, by Negligence of a Scholar appointed by his School-Master to put forth the Lights of this Chapel, the Image of our Lady, richly decked with Jewels, precious Stones, Pearls and Rings, (more than any Jeweller could judge the Price) was, with all this Apparel, Ornaments and Chapel itself burnt; (but Stow, in his second Edition chooses to place this Chapel elsewhere, viz. near St. Stephen's.)

THEN is the Meuse, so called of the King's Falcons there kept by the King's Falconer, which of old Time was an Officer of great Account, as appears by a Record of Richard II. in the first Year of his Reign. For, Sir Simon Burley, Knt. was made Constable for the Castles of Windsor, Wigmore and Guilford, and of the Manor of Kennington, and also Master of the King's Falcons at his Meuse, near Charingcross by Westminster. Of later Time King Henry VIII. having good Stabling there for Horses, in the Year 1534, the 28th of his Reign, it was burned with many great Horses and much Hay therein; but it was again re-edified in the Reigns of King Edward VI. and Queen Mary. And this was the farthest Building West on the North Side of that high Street.

ON the South Side of which Street, in the Liberties of Westminster (beginning at Ivy-bridge) first was Durham-House, built by Thomas de Hatfield, Bishop of Durham, who was made Bishop of that See in the Year 1345, and sat Bishop there 36 Years.

Manerium, sive Hospitium Episcopale Londoniæ cum Capella & Cameris, sumptuosissime construxit. This Bishop died Anno 1381, May the 8th, at his Manor near LONDON, called Alford, probably Aldford, that Place near Stratford le Bow, now called Oldford.

THUS writes Sir Henry Spelman of this Durham-House, that Bishop Tonstal, about 26 Henry VIII. conveyed the same to the King in Fee; and that King, in Recompence thereof, granted to the See of Durham, Coldharborough, and other Houses in LONDON. And after, King Edward VI. about the second Year of his Reign, granted Durham-House to the Lady Elizabeth, his Sister, for Life, or until she was otherwise advanced. Afterwards the Bishoprick of Durham, by a private Act, 7 Edward VI. was dissolved, and all the Possessions thereof given to King Edward VI. who shortly after conveyed in Fee the said Bishop's late House at Coldharborough, and other Houses in LONDON, to Francis Earl of Shrewsbury and his Heirs. Soon after, 2 Mar. ca. 3. the Statute of 7 Edw. VI. for dissolving that Bishoprick was repealed; but, by a Proviso, the Mansion-House of Coldharborough, &c. so granted to the said Earl, was confirmed to him; and the Bishop by that Act prayed a Recompence from the Queen, at his Charge. Whereupon Queen Mary, about the 5th or 6th Year of her Reign, granted to the said Bishop of Durham her Reversion of Durham-Place in Succession. Which coming into Possession by the Death of Queen Elizabeth, the Bishop of Durham that then was, (afterward Archbishop of York, viz. Toby Matthew) entered into and enjoyed the same in the Right of his See, by Opinion of the Lord Chief Justices of the Land, referred to by the King, being opposed by Sir Walter Raleigh; and so did the Bishop of Durham that succeeded him.

AMONGST Matters memorable concerning this House, this is one: In the Year of CHRIST 1546, the 32d of Henry VIII. on May Day, a great and triumphant Justing was holden at Westminster, which had been formerly proclaimed in France, Flanders, Scotland and Spain, for all Comers that would undertake the Challengers of England, which were Sir John Dudley, Sir Thomas Seymour, Sir Thomas Ponings, and Sir George Carew, Knts. and Anthony Kingston, and Richard Cromwell, Esqs; all which came into the Lists that Day richly apparelled, and their Horses trapped all in white Velvet; there came against them the said Day 46 Defendants or Undertakers, viz. the Earl of Surrey foremost, Lord William Howard, Lord Clinton, and Lord Cromwell, Son and Heir to Thomas Cromwell, Earl of Essex, and Chamberlain of England, with other; and that Day, after the Justs were performed, the Challengers rode to this Durham-House, where they kept open Household, and feasted the King and Queen, with her Ladies, and all the Court.

THE second Day Anthony Kingston and Richard Cromwell were made Knights there.

THE third Day of May the said Challengers did Tournay on Horseback with Swords, and against them came 49 Defendants; Sir John Dudley and the Earl of Surrey running first, which at the first Course lost their Gauntlets; and that Day Justing Feast at Durham House.

Day Sir Richard Cromwell overthrew Mr. Palmer and his Horse in the Field, to the great Honour of the Challengers.

THE fifth of May the Challengers fought on Foot at the Barriers, and against them came 50 Defendants, which fought valiantly; but Sir Richard Cromwell overthrew that Day at the Barriers Mr. Culpepper in the Field, and the sixth Day the Challengers broke up their Household.

IN this Time of their House-keeping they had not only feasted the King, Queen, Ladies, and all the Court, as is afore shewed; but also they cheered all the Knights and Burgeses of the Common-House in Parliament, and entertained the Mayor of LONDON, with the Aldermen and their Wives, at a Dinner, &c. The King gave to every of the said Challengers, and their Heirs for ever, in Reward of their valiant Activity, 100 Marks, and a House to dwell in of yearly Revenue, out of the Lands pertaining to the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem.

Now to speak somewhat of latter Time concerning this Durham-House; it was well known and observed, that the outward Part belonging thereto, and standing North from the Houses, was but a low Row of Stables, old, ruinous, ready to fall, and very unsightly, in so publick a Passage to the Court and to Westminster. Upon which Consideration, or some more special Respect in the Mind of the Right Honourable Robert Earl of Salisbury, Lord High Treasurer of England, it pleased him to take such Order in the Matter, that (at his own Costs and Charges) that deformed Row of Stabling was quite altered by the Erection of a very goodly and beautiful Building instead thereof, and in the very same Place. Some Shape of the Modelling, though not in all Respects alike, was after the Fashion of the Royal-Exchange in LONDON, with Cellars underneath, a Walk fairly paved about it, and Rows of Shops above, as also one beneath, answerable in Manner to the other, and intended for the like Trades and Mysteries.

THIS Work was not long in taking down, nor in the Erection again; for the first Stone was laid on the 10th Day of June, 1608, and also was fully finished in the next ensuing November after. Also on Tuesday, being the 10th Day of April following, divers of the upper Shops were adorned in rich and beautiful Manner, with Wares most curious to please the Eye; so ordered against his Majesty's coming thither, to give a Name to so good a Building. On the Day following it pleased his Highness, with the Queen, Prince, the Duke of York, and the Lady Elizabeth, to come thither, attended on by many great Lords and Ladies. It then pleased his most excellent Majesty, because the Work wanted a Name before, to entitle it Britain's Burse, or Burs.

NEXT beyond this Durham-House was another great House, some Time belonging to the Bishop of Norwich, and was his LONDON Lodging, which afterwards pertained to the Archbishop of York, on this Occasion. In the Year 1529, when Cardinal Wolsey, Archbishop of York, was indicted in the Premunire, whereby King Henry VIII. was entitled to his Goods and Possessions, he also seized into his Hands the said Archbishop's House, commonly called York Place, and changed the Name thereof into Whitehall.

THIS House was called antiently the Archbishop of York's Inn by Westminster. Concerning which this may be noted, Anno 1399, October 19, In Capella Hospitalii Archiep. Ebor. juxta Westmonast. In the first Parliament of Henry IV. Tho. Samesten Epus Karlelen, formerly Monk of Westminster, personally appearing, performed and did Obedience and Fealty to the Lord Archbishop of York, his Metropolitan, and to his Successors. Present then and there, the Abbot of Westminster, Tho. Warkworth, Rich. Conyngsbey, Canon of York, &c.

THE Archbishops of York being dispossessed, and having no House of Repair about LONDON, Queen Mary gave to Nicholas Heth, then Archbishop of York, and to his Successors, Suffolk-House in Southwark, built by Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, as is shewed elsewhere.

THIS House the said Archbishop sold, and bought the aforesaid House, of old Time belonging to the Bishops of Norwich, which (of this last Purchase) was called York-House. The Lord Chancellors, or Lord Keepers of the Great Seal of England, have been sometimes lodged there.

WHILE this House belonged to the Bishops of Norwich, there was a Presentment made in the King's-Bench against one of the Bishops, 21 Edward IV. for Annoyance of a Way inter Hospitium Episcopi Norwiciensis & Dunelmensis in Parochia Sti. Martini in campis: Whereupon there was a Case.

THIS Place of the Bishop of Norwich, among all or the greatest Part of the Possessions of the See of Norwich, about 27 Henry VIII. were conveyed to the King by a private Act of Parliament, in Recompence of the Union of the Monastery of St. Bennet de Hulmo, and the Possessions thereof, to that Bishoprick, being of far better Value than the antient Lands of the Bishoprick of Norwich assured to the King, as is recited in the Statute of 32 Henry VIII. whereby the Bishop of Norwich is made Collector of the Tenths of his Diocese, as other Bishops were, being freed thereof by the said private Statute of 27 Henry VIII.

THE Bishop of Norwich was limited by the said private Act, to enjoy perpetually in Succession, a Prebend in the Free Chapel of St. Stephen's at Westminster, and the House thereto belonging in Chanon-row, whereof then was Incumbent one Knight: The House was said to be leased by the Bishop in Edward VI's Time, for some small Rent, to Sir John Thinn, Knt. for many Years enduring.

THIS York-House remained to the Archbishop of York in Archbishop Sandys's Time: But then, in the Year 1588, it was by some earnestly endeavoured to be gotten from the See; whereat that Archbishop made a Complaint in a secret Letter to the Lord Treasurer Burghley; "That it was most unreasonably requested of him. He could not, he said, in Conscience yield to that Request, and remained resolute; entreating that Lord to be a Means to the Queen, that he might refuse his yielding herein, without Offence to her; shewing, that her Speech to him heretofore, about the same Thing, had been such, that he was fully persuaded she would not deal against him in it.

THIS York-Place or House, was occupied or enjoyed in King James I's Time, by Thomas Viscount Brackly, Lord Ellesmere, Lord Chancellor, and by Francis Viscount St. Alban's, some Time Lord Chancellor after him. In 2 Jac. I. an Exchange of it was made by Toby Matthew, Archbishop of York, who was seized in Fee-Simple, in Right of his Archbishoprick, of the said Mansion-House, and of divers other Messuages and Tenements situate within the Parish of St. Martin in the Fields. These he granted to King James I. and the said King granted to the said Archbishop the Manor or Lordship of Brighton, with the Lands in Melborn, the Manor of Acomb, or Acom, and Holgate; and all the Lands, Tenements and Hereditaments in Acomb, Holgate, Clifton, Skelton, Wigginton, Botham, &c. the Manor of Santon, and Lands in Eastrop, &c. and the Manor or Grange of Beckhay, with all Rights, Members,

Members, and Appurtenances thereof; which would be more profitable and commodious unto the Archbishop and his Successors, than the said Mansion-House. For that the Archbishop, nor his Predecessors, had not, for many Years past, the Use of the said Mansion-House; and the other Premises yielded them very little Profit. And farther, the said Mansion-House was like to be burdensome, and a Charge to the said Archbishop and his Successors: Which was the Reason used in the Act of Parliament for the said Exchange, viz. That it would be for the Benefit of the Archbishop and his Successors; and therefore it was of the King's Grace and Favour to the said Church and See, to make this Conveyance and Assurance.

THEN was there an Hospital of St. Mary Rouncival, by Charing-Cross, (a Cell to the Priory and Convent of Rouncival in Navar, in Pampelione Diocefe) where a Fraternity was founded in the 15th of Edward IV.

NEAR unto this Hospital was an Hermitage, with a Chapel of St. Catharine, over-against Charing-Cross; which Cross, built of Stone, was of old Time a fair Piece of Work, there made by Commandment of Edward I. in the 21st Year of his Reign, in Memory of Eleanor, his deceased Queen, as is before declared.

St. James's.

WEST from this Cross stood some Time an Hospital of St. James, consisting of two Hides of Land, with the Appurtenances, in the Parish of St. Margaret in Westminster, and founded by the Citizens of LONDON, before the Time of any Man's Memory, for fourteen Sisters, Maidens, that were leprous, living chastly and honestly in Divine Service.

AFTERWARDS, divers Citizens of LONDON gave 56*l.* Rent thereunto, and then were adjoined eight Brethren to minister Divine Service there.

AFTER this also, sundry devout Men of LONDON gave to this Hospital four Hides of Land in the Field of Westminster; and in Hendon, Calcote, and Hampstead, eight Acres of Land and Wood, &c. King Edward I. confirm'd those Gifts, and granted a Fair to be kept on the Eve of St. James, the Day, the Morrow, and four Days following, in the 18th of his Reign.

THIS Hospital was surrender'd to Henry VIII. the 23d of his Reign; the Sisters being compounded with, were allowed Pensions for the Term of their Lives, and the King built there a goodly Manor, annexing thereunto a Park, closed with a Wall of Brick, now called St. James's Park, serving indifferently to the said Manor, and to the Manor or Palace of Whitehall.

AND this Place now, since the burning down of Whitehall, is become the Royal Palace of our Kings, and their chief Residence.

SOME Distance hence, between St. James's and Hide-Park, was kept May Fair, yearly, where young People did use to resort; and by the Temptations they met with here, did commit much Sin and Disorder. Here they spent their Time and Money in Drunkenness, Fornication, Gaming, and Lewdness; whereby were occasioned oftentimes Quarrels, Tumults, and Shedding of Blood. Whereupon, in the Month of November, 1708, the Grand Jury of Westminster, for the Body of the County of Middlesex, made a Presentment to this Import, "That being sensible of their Duty, to make Presentment of such Matters and Things as were publick enormities and Inconveniencies; and being encouraged by the Example of the worthy Magistracy of the City of LONDON, in their late Proceedings against Bartholomew-Fair, did present, as a publick Nuisance and Inconvenience, the yearly riotous and tumultuous Assembly in a Place called Brook-Field, in the "Parish of St. Martin in the Fields, in this County, called May-Fair. In which Place many loose, idle, and disorderly Persons, did rendezvous, and draw and allure young Persons, Servants, and others, to meet there, to game, and commit Lewdness, and disorderly Practices, to the great Corruption and Debauchery of their Virtue and Morals; and in which many and great Riots, Tumults, Breaches of the Peace, open and notorious Lewdness, and Murder it self had been committed; and were like to be committed again, if not prevented by some wise and prudent Method: And for that the said Fair being so near her Majesty's Palaces, and might be very dangerous to her Majesty's Royal Person and Government, by seditious and unreasonable Men; taking thereby Occasion to execute their most wicked and treasonable Designs. Wherefore, and because the said Fair, as it was then used, both actually was, and had so fatal a Tendency to the Corruption of her Majesty's Subjects, Violation of her Peace, and the Danger of her Person; they humbly conceived it worthy the Care of those in Power and Authority to rectify the same.

SOUTH from Charing-Cross, on the right Hand, in Stow's Time, were divers handsome Houses, then lately built before the Park: Then a large Tilt-yard for Noblemen and others, to exercise themselves in Justing, Turneying, and Fighting at the Barriers.

ON the left Hand from Charing-Cross were also divers Tenements then lately built, till you come to a large Plat of Ground enclosed with Brick, and called Scotland, where great Buildings have been for Receipt of the Kings of Scotland, and other Estates of that Country. For Margaret, Queen of Scots, and Sister to King Henry VIII. had her Abiding there, when she came into England, after the Death of her Husband, as the King of Scotland had in former Times, when they came to the Parliament of England.

THIS was first given by King Edgar, a Saxon King, (who reigned about the Year 959,) to Keneth, or Kynald, King of Scotland; from whom he had received Homage for that Kingdom, and enjoined the said King Keneth, once every Year to repair unto him in England, for the making of Laws, which in those Days was done by the Noblemen and Peers. To which End the said King Edgar gave that King this Piece of Ground, lying beside the new Palace of Westminster, for his Residence when he came up; upon which this Keneth built an House: Which by him and his Posterity was enjoyed until the Reign of King Henry II. in whose Time, upon the Rebellion of William, then King of Scots, it was resumed into the King of England's Hands. After that, the House went to Decay; but the Ground where it stood is called Scotland-Yard to this Day.

THEN is the said Whitehall, some Time belonging to Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent, and Justiciar of England, who gave it to the Black Fryars of Oldborne, or Holbourn, although he left one Daughter, who was married to an Ancestor of the present Sir John Guise of Elmore and Rendcomb in Glostershire; which Family, upon this Marriage, changed their Coat of Arms for that of the Burgh's, viz. Seven Lozenges variet Azure and Argent, in a Field Gules; and have born the same ever since. King Henry VIII. ordained this Place to be called an Honour, and built there a sumptuous Gallery, and a beautiful Gatehouse, cross the High Street to St. James's Park. In the uppermost Rooms of this Gatehouse is the Paper-Office, or Paper-House, wherein Papers of State, Embassy, &c. are repositied.

IN this Gallery, the Princes, with their Nobility, used to stand or sit, and at Windows, to behold all triumphant Justings, and other Military Exercisings.

BEYOND this Gallery, on the left Hand, is the Garden or Orchard belonging to the said Whitehall.

THERE is an Instrument among the Records at Westminster, 21 Hen. VIII. for the Recovery of the Place (called then York Place) for the King, omnibus, &c. wherein it is specified, "That Thomas More, Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Norfolk, Treasurer of England, William Fitz Williams, Knight of the Garter, Treasurer of the King's Household, and Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaster; Robert Norwiche, one of the King's Serjeants at Law, and Christopher Hales, Attorney-General, in Hilary Term, before the Justices at Westminster, recovered to them and their Heirs, for the Use of our Lord the King, Henry VIII. against the most Reverend Father in CHRIST Thomas Cardinal of York, one Messuage, two Gardens, and three Acres of Land, with the Appurtenances, situate in the Village or Town of Westminster, in the County of Middlesex; which are commonly called York Place. And they delivered, demised, and by that present Charter confirmed to the King the said Messuage, &c. Dated the 7th of February, 21 H. 8.

AND in the said King's Donation to the said Cardinal, (after the Forfeiture of all his Goods and Chattels) in the said Month of February, to enjoy the Archbishoprick of York, and all the Benefits thereof, it is excepted in the Instrument, to the King and his Heirs, and reserved all that Messuage, two Gardens, and three Acres of Land, with the Appurtenances, called York Place.

KING Henry VIII. was the first King of England that removed his Dwelling from the Old Palace nigh unto the Monastery of St. Peter's Westminster unto Whitehall; and that because that old Palace was then, and had been long Time before, in utter Ruin and Decay, as it is expressed in an Act of Parliament; and that the King had lately obtained this Whitehall, which is stiled in the same Act, "One great Mansion-Place and House, being Parcel of the Possessions of the Archbishoprick of York, situate in the Town of Westminster, not much distant from the same antient Palace: And that he had lately, upon the Soil of the said Mansion-Place and House, and upon the Ground thereunto belonging, most sumptuously and curiously built and edified many and distinct, beautiful, costly and pleasant Lodgings, Buildings and Mansions, for his Grace's singular Pleasure, Comfort and Commodity, to the Honour of his Highness and his Realm: And thereunto adjoining had made a Park, walled and environed with Brick and Stone, and there devised and ordained many and singular commodious Things, Pleasures, and other Necessaries, apt and convenient to appertain to so noble a Prince, for his Pastime and Solace.

By the said Act, this Place, with the said Buildings and Park, are taken into the Bounds of the King's Palace, and to enjoy all the Privileges thereof. And the whole Limits of the Royal Palace are there set out and described, namely, "That all the said Soil, Ground, Mansion, and Buildings, and the Park, with all the Things, Commodities, and Pleasures, thereupon built and devised; and also the Soil of the antient Palace, should be from thenceforth the King's whole Palace at Westminster; and so be taken, deemed, and reputed, and to be called and named, The King's Palace at Westminster for ever. And that the said Place should extend, and be as well within the "Soil and Places before limited and appointed, as also in all the Street or Way leading from Charing-Cross unto the Sanctuary-Gate at Westminster; and to all the Houses, Buildings, Lands and Tenements on both Sides of the same Street or Way from the said Cross unto Westminster-hall, situate, lying, and being between the Water of the Thames on the East Part, and the said Park-Wall on the West Part; and so forth, through all the Soil, Precinct, and Limits of the said old Palace: And all the said Palace to enjoy the like Prerogatives, Liberties, Pre-eminences, Jurisdictions, and Privileges, as to the King's antient Palace within this Realm have at any Time heretofore belonged, used, or of Right appertained.

HERE is the magnificent Building called the Banqueting-house; which, before King James I. came hither, was old, rotten, and but slightly built; that therefore the King caused to be pulled down, Anno 1606, and new built very strong and stately, every Way larger than the former; and fair Lodgings were new built there and increased.

James th'eldest Sonne and Heir to Lord D'Aubenev, was baptysed the 26th Day of April 1612, in the King's Majesty's Chapell Royall of Whitehall. The King was his Godfather: And the Officers of the Vestry had to their Fees xl s.

THE Marriage of the two excellent Princes, Frederick, Prince *Palatyn*e, and Lady Elizabeth, sole Daughter to King James, was solemnized on Skrove-Sunday, being the 14th of February 1612, in his Majesty's Chapell Royall at Whitehall, by the Right Reverend Father in God George Archbishop of Canterbury, and assisted by the Bishop of Bathe and Welles, Dean of the Chapell, who preached at the Marriage the same Day. The Gentlemen of the Chapell, and the Officers of the Vestry had given them for their Fees, an hundred Pounds in Jacobuses; whereof the Serjeant of the Vestry had four Markes, the two Yeomen had between them seven Jacobuses, and the Grome had thirtie Shillings.

Anne, first Daughter to Robert Cecil, Earl of Salisbury, was baptysed in the King's Majesty's Chapell Royal at Whitehall, the 23d of February 1612. For her Godmothers she had Queen Anne, and th'elder Countess of Derby, Wyfe to the Lord Chancellor; and for her Godfather, Gylbert Earl of Shrewsbury. The Officers of the Vestry had for their Fees xl s.

THE Marriage of the two noble Persons, Robert Earl of Somerset, and the Lady Frances Howard, was solemnysed on St. Stephen's Day, being Sunday the 26th of December 1613, by the Right Reverend Father in God, James Bishop of Bathe and Welles, in his Majesty's Chapell Royall at Whitehall: And her Father gave her in Marriage, and the Deane of Westminster preached at the Marriage. The Officers of the Vestry had for their Fees xl s.

Henry, Sonne to the Lord D'Aubenev, was baptysed the 2d Day of April 1616, in the King's Royall Chapell at Whitehall. Queen Anne was his Godmother, and Prince Charles and the Earl of Marr his Godfathers. The Gentlemen of the Chapell had for their Fees 5 l. and the Officers of the Vestry had for their Fees xl s.

James, Sonne and Heire to Sir John Edgerton, was baptysed on Tuesday the first of October at Durham-house. His Godfathers were K. James, and Thomas Lord Elfmer, Lord Chancellor, Grandfather to the Child, and the Lady Marchioness of Northampton Godmother. The Officers of his Majesty's Vestry had for a Gratiuity the Sum of xxix s.

James, Sonne to the Lord Viscount Harrington, was baptysed the 11th Day of March, by the Bishop of Winchester in the Chapell at Whitehall, Anno 1616. His Godfathers were the King's Majesty, and the Earl of Suffex, his Godmother the Countess of Bedford. The Officers of the Vestry had their usual Fees.

James, Sonne to Sir William Feilding, was baptysed by the Right Reverend Father in God the Bishop of Winchester, on Thursday the 13th of March, in the said Chapell. His Godfathers were the King's Majesty and the Earl of Buckingham; and the Countess of Bedford was Godmother. The Officers of the Vestry had the usual Fees.

Charles, second Sonne to Sir James Ramsey, Lord Viscount Haddington, was baptysed on Sunday the 17th of May, Anno 1618, in his Majesty's Chapell Royall at Whitehall, by the Reverend Father in God the Lord Bishop of Durham. The Gossips were, Prince Charles, George Marquis of Buckingham, and the Countess of Hertford. Payd for Fees for the same Service to the Gentlemen of the Chapell 5 l. and to the Officers of the Vestry 2 l.

ON the Right Hand were divers Tennis-Courts, Bowling-Allies, and a Cock-Pit, all built by K. Henry VIII. (out of certain old Tenements) and then one other arched Gate, with a Way over it, thwarting the Street, from the King's Gardens to the said Park.

Whitehall now lies in Ruins, having been burnt down by Accident in the Reign of King William. For Want of rebuilding the same, Mr. Weedon, an ingenious Gentleman, supposed the City of Westminster was damnified above 30 l. per Cent. in their Houses, Trades, and Properties. The same Gentleman therefore, of his own good Will, to the reforming that most noble Palace, for the Honour and Benefit of the Queen, and her Kingdom, proposed in Print, That an Act of Parliament should be made for the Rebuilding of it, after the Manner of a Model or Plan of Inigo Jones, the famous English Architect in King James I's Time, who built the Banqueting-House at Whitehall, and left a Plan for the whole Palace to be built suitable to it, that being reputed one of the best Buildings in Europe; which Plan his late Majesty, viewed and approved of. This Palace, to be built after the said Plan, would amount to six hundred thousand Pounds, and might be about seven Years in building. He propounded moreover, That the said Structure should extend from the North East of the first Scotland-yard, and be continued to the North Side of the old Palace-yard at Westminster, and the common Way to Westminster made to run next the Waterside, whereby the new Palace might front St. James's Park and the River. That there might be twelve Commissioners, six to be appointed by her Majesty, and six by the Parliament, to carry on the said Building, and to have a Power, by a Jury, as those Commissioners had, that were appointed for the Rebuilding of LONDON after the dreadful Fire, whereby to adjust all Persons Interests and Differences, and truly to account for and to apply whatsoever Value should be raised or given towards the Charges; and that there be seven Persons, whereof one to be Treasurer, to promote and collect voluntary Benefactions and Subscriptions towards the carrying on so National a Good.

THEN he offered Ways and Means for the Raising of the said Sum of six hundred thousand Pounds: And the first was, That the City of Westminster should be incorporated, to consist of a Mayor, Recorder, and 24 Aldermen; and certain Franchises and Liberties to be granted them. That all Profits arising to the said Corporation, over and above all Manner of Expences and Charges the Corporation would be at in supporting it self, be for the next seven Years appropriated to carry on the said Palace. That Duties should be laid upon new improved Rents within the said City of Westminster. That all Officers that held two or more Offices of above the Value of 300 l. per Annum, should pay so much in the Pound. And that such as had any Right or Title to any House, or Office, or Lodging, within the said new intended Palace, should pay likewise so much in the Pound. That all Improvements of any Part of the Ground of Whitehall, and the Benefit arising to her Majesty of all future and new Inventions, Discoveries and Improvements, be for such a Term appointed towards the said Charge. And that all future Forfeitures accruing to her Majesty for a Term of Years, to be likewise appropriated for the same Charge: But this Work was thought fit to be laid aside for the present.

FROM the arched Gate, which was at the East End of King-street, to a Bridge over Longditch, (so called, the same making the City of Westminster almost an Island) was a Way leading to Chanon-row, so called, because it belonged to the Dean and Chanons of St. Stephen's Chapel, who were there lodged, as were afterwards divers Noblemen and Gentlemen, whereof one was Sir Edward Hobbey, another, John Thin, Esq; whose House was rebuilt in a stately Manner by Anne Stanhope, Dutches of Somerset, Mother to the Earl of Hertford, who enjoyed it in Stow's Time. Next to this was a fine House building, at the same Time, by William Earl of Derby; over-against which was a handsome House built by Henry Clinton, Earl of Lincoln.

THE King [Henry VIII.] granted a Charter of Privilege to the Dean of the Free Chapel of St. Stephen, and the Canons, to pull down all the antient and very ruinous Tenements, and to build them again. It is set out there, how butted and bounded, viz. " Situate in Le Wolstaple, between " the Clock toward the East, and Le Way House " toward the West, and the Wall of our Palace " in Length toward the South, and Le Wulbrige " of our Staple toward the North.

FROM this Way up to the Woolstaple, and to the high Tower, or Gate, which enter'd the Palace Court, all was replenished with Buildings and Inhabitants.

Staple; the Word means the Place where the Market of such or such Merchandize was kept, as here in Westminster was the Woolstaple. The Word was antiently writ Estaple, and comes of the French Word Estape, which signifies a Mart or Market. There are five Staple Merchandizes of England, saith the Lord Coke, viz. Wool, Woolfells, Leather, Lead, and Tin. There was a Major of the Staple, and there was a Court of the Major of the Staple, wherein Merchants of the Staple did sue by Law-Merchant; so there was a Statute, That Merchant Strangers might sue before the Major of the Staple, according to the Law-Merchant, or at the Common Law. And this Court was holden at Woolstaple in Westminster. This Court, tho' it were far more antient, was straitened and warranted by Act of Parliament 27 Edward III.

THE Bounds of the Staple at Westminster began at Temple-bar, and extended to Tuthill.

IN the Reign of Edward I. the Staple being at Westminster, the Parishioners of St. Margaret, and Merchants of the Staple, built a-new the said Church, the great Chancel excepted, which was lately before new built by the Abbot of Westminster.

MOREOVER, Edward III. in the 17th of his Reign, decreed, That no Silver be carried out of the

the Realm on Pain of Death; and that whosoever transported Wool, should bring over, for every Sack, four Nobles of Silver Bullion.

IN the 25th of his Reign, he appointed the Staple of Wool to be kept only at Canterbury, for the Honour of St. Thomas. Moreover, in the 27th of the said King Edward, the Staple of Wool, before kept at Bruges in Flanders, was ordained (by Parliament) to be kept in divers Places of England, Wales, and Ireland; as at Newcastle, York, Lincoln, Canterbury, Norwich, Westminster, Chichester, Winchester, Exeter, Bristol, Caermarthen, &c. to the great Benefit of the King, and Loss unto Strangers and Merchants: For there grew unto the King by this Means (as it was said) the Sum of a Thousand an Hundred and Two Pounds by the Year, more than any of his Predecessors before had received. The Staple at Westminster, at that Time, began on the next Morrow after the Feast of St. Peter ad Vincula.

THE next Year was granted to the King, by Parliament, towards the Recovery of his Title in France, Fifty Shillings of every Sack of Wool transported over Seas, for the Space of six Years next ensuing: By Means whereof, the King might dispend daily, during those Years, more than a thousand Marks Sterling: For, by the common Opinion, there were more than an hundred Sacks of Wool yearly transported into foreign Lands; so that during six Years, the said Grant extended to fifteen hundred thousand Pounds Sterling.

IN the 37th of Edward III. it was granted unto him for two Years; to take six and twenty Shillings and eight Pence upon every Sack of Wool (notwithstanding the King's Oath, and other great Estates) was ordained to be kept at Calais, and six and twenty Merchants, the best and the wealthiest of all England, to be Farmers there, both of the Town and Staple, for three Years; every Merchant to have six Men of Arms, and four Archers, at the King's Cost. He ordained there also two Majors, one for the Town, and one for the Staple, and he took for mala capta, commonly called Maltorth, Custom twenty Shillings, and of the said Merchants, Guardians of the Town, forty Pence upon every Sack of Wool.

IN the 44th of Edward III. Quecnborough, Kingston upon Hull, and Boston, were made Staples of Wool: Which Matter so offended some, that in the 50th of his Reign, in a Parliament at LONDON, it was complained, That the Staple of Wool was so removed from Calais to divers Towns in England, contrary to the Statute, appointing, That Citizens and Merchants should keep it there, and that the King might have the Profits and Customs, with the Exchange of Gold and Silver that was there made, by all the Merchants in Christendom (esteemed to amount to eight thousand Pounds by Year the Exchange only.) And the Citizens and Merchants so ordered the Matter, that the King spent nothing upon Soldiers; neither upon Defence of the Town against the Enemies; whereas now he spent eight thousand Pounds by Year.

IN the 51st of Edward III. when the Staple was settled at Calais, the Major of the Staple did furnish the Captain of the Town, upon any Road, with an hundred Bill-men, two hundred Archers, of Merchants and their Servants, without any Wages.

IN the Year 1388, the 12th of Richard II. in a Parliament at Cambridge, it was ordained, That the Staple of Wool should be brought from Middleborough in Holland to Calais.

IN the 14th of his Reign, there was granted forty Shillings upon every Sack of Wool, and in the 21st was granted fifty Shillings upon every Sack transported by Englishman, and three Pounds by Strangers, &c.

It seems that the Merchants of this Staple be the most antient Merchants of this Realm, and that all Commodities of the Realm are Staple Merchandizes by Law and Charter, as Wools, Leather, Woolfells, Lead, Tin, Cloth, &c.

KING Henry VI. had six Wool-houses within the Staple at Westminster; those he granted to the Dean and Canons of St. Stephen at Westminster, and confirmed it the 21st of his Reign.

AND now to pass to the famous Monastery of Westminster: At the very Entrance of the Close thereof is a Lane that leads towards the West, called Thieving-lane, for that Thieves were led that Way to the Gatehouse, while the Sanctuary continued in Force.

The Monastery of St. PETER WESTMINSTER.

THIS Monastery was founded and built by Sebert, King of the East Saxons, [that began his Reign Anno 603] upon the Persuasion of Ethelbert King of Kent, who having embraced Christianity, and being baptized by Melitus, Bishop of LONDON, immediately (to shew himself a Christian indeed) built a Church to the Honour of God and St. Peter, on the West Side of the City of LONDON, in a Place (which because it was overgrown with Thorns, and environed with Water) the Saxons called Thorney, and now of the Monastery and West Situation thereof, is called Westminster. In this Place (saith Sulcardus) long before was a Temple of Apollo; which being overthrown, King Lucius built therein a Church of Christianity.

WHEN the Church of God first began to grow in Great Britain at such Time (saith Sulcardus) as Antoninus Pius was Emperor of Rome, the Temple of Apollo, which was then seated on the West Side of the City of LONDON, where now Westminster stands, fell down by the Violence of an Earthquake; of the Ruins whereof, Lucius (who was King of the Britons, and reigned here by Permission of the Romans) built a small Church to the Honour of CHRIST, in the Year of our Lord 170, which afterwards was utterly defaced when the Heat of Persecution (under Dioclesian) wasted Britain.

THIS Place afterward, for a long Time, lay altogether neglected, and not regarded, but became all overgrown with Thorns and Bushes, inso-much as the English Saxons named it Thornez, or Thorney, until Sebert, King of the East Saxons, (or of Essex and Middlesex) who was the first that subscribed to the Worship of CHRIST, built in that Place a Monastery to CHRIST and St. Peter, in the Year of CHRIST 605; whereupon, partly from the Situation to the West, and partly from the Monastery or Minster, it began to take the Name of Westminster: But afterwards, when this Monastery was destroyed in the furious Wars of the Danes, Dunstan, Archbishop of Canterbury, (by the Favour of King Edgar) repaired it, and granted, and gave it to a small Company of Monks.

AFTERWARD King Edward, surnamed the Confessor, with the Tenths of all his Revenues, built it a-new, to be a Place for his own Sepulchre; and a Monastery for the Monks of St. Bennet's Order, and endowed it with Revenues lying here and there in all Places of England, and it is an antient Fabrick, and very stately: Since which Time this Monastery hath been, and yet is, very famous, for the Consecration and Coronation of the Kings of England, and the Burial of of many of them, and other great Personages, and for the Custody of the Regalia for the Coronation.

BUT 160 Year after, King Henry III. pulled down that antient Fabrick of King Edward, and (with 50 Years Work) built a Church of a most goodly Frame, with a Multitude of Marble Pillars, set in comely Order; whereof he himself laid the first Stone, and covered the Roof with Lead, Anno 1220.

It appears by some Records in the Tower, that several Things were given for adorning this Church, both by that King and his Queen. She set up in St. Edward's Feretory the Image of the Blessed Virgin Mary. And the King, in the 28th of his Reign, which was about the Year 1244, caused Edward Fitz Odo, Keeper of his Works at Westminster, to place upon her Forehead, for Ornament, an Emerald and a Ruby, taken out of two Rings, which the Bishop of Chichester had left the said King for a Legacy. The same Year the King commanded the Keepers of his Works at Westminster, that they should provide for the Abbot of Westminster one strong and good Beam to support the Bells of the King's Gift, and deliver the said Beam to the Sacristan: And in the 39th of the said King, he gave 100 Shillings, by Payment each half Year, to the Brethren of the Guild at Westminster, and their Successors, who were assigned to ring the great Bells there, to be paid out of his Exchequer, till the King can provide them the Value of 100 Shillings, Land or Rent. In the 24th of his Reign, he gave the Prior three Marks to repair the Organ. In the 28th Year of his Reign he commanded Edward Fitz Odo to make a Dragon in Manner of a Standard or Ensign of certain red Samitt, to be every where adorned with Gold, and his Tongue to be made appearing, as though it continually moved; and his Eyes of Saphires, or other Stones, agreeable to him; and this to be set in St. Peter's Church against the King's coming thither. In the 30th of his Reign, the same King Henry III. gave the said Church one great Crown of Silver, to set Wax Candles upon in the said Church; and he commanded the Keeper of his Exchange to do this out of the Issues thereof, and to buy also out of the said Issues, as precious a Mitre as could be found in the City of LONDON, for the Abbot of Westminster's Use, of the King's Gift. And lastly, the 41st of Henry III. about Anno 1257, as a farther Ornament for St. Peter's, he ordered a sumptuous Monument to be erected there for his Daughter Catharine deceased, giving Order to his Treasurer and his Chamberlains of the Treasury, to deliver to Mr. Simon de Wells five Marks and a half for his Expences in going to LONDON for a certain Brass Image to be set upon her Tomb, and returning home again: And upon the same Tomb there was also set a Silver Image. For the making of which, William of Glocester, the King's Goldsmith, was paid sixty Marks and ten.

THIS Church afterward the Abbots did much enlarge to the Westward: And King Henry VII. in the Year 1502, bestowed 14000 Pounds on the East Side, where he built a Chapel [called Our Lady's Chapel] of admirable Beauty, (which Ireland calls the Miracle of the World; for any Man that sees it may say, that all Elegancy of Workmanship and Matter is couched in it) to be a Place of Sepulture for himself and all his Posterity; wherein, at this Day, is to be seen his own Tomb, most gorgeous and great, made all of solid Brass; where also his Queen lies by him. And in the said King's last Will, dated Apr. 10. Anno 1508, he appointed to be buried there, in a Chapel made by himself, and a Sum of 5000 l. is mentioned to be delivered to the Abbot of Westminster, for Masses and Alms, whereof Ten Thousand Masses to be said for his Soul at 6 d. a Mass, and 2000 l. for Alms between his Death and Burial: So much to the City of LONDON, so much to Prisons, &c.

A late Author gives the following Account of this Building:

"THE Arch, at the Entrance of Henry VII's Chapel, is exceeding grand and ornamental; the Steps underneath are a fine Preparation for the Scene at landing, and the three Doors an admirable Expedient to favour the Perspective within; but this, and several other Beauties, are utterly spoiled by the Stalls, which cut off the collateral Isles of the Chapel intirely, and thereby spoil the Beauty and Symmetry of the Whole.

"THE Roof of this Structure is certainly one of the finest Things in the World, I mean in the Gothick Stile; nothing can be a better Form, or more richly decorated; perhaps had it been more simple, it had shewn to greater Advantage; but still 'tis a Wonder that one continued Cluster of Ornament could be contrived to please so much, and answer so well.

"WERE the absurd Partitions mention'd above thrown down, the Roof would appear still more surprizing, and the Area before more spacious and more proportionable; all those Tombs which are now shut up in such a Manner, that they are no where to be seen as they ought, would then come forward to the Eye, and give an additional Grandeur and Solemnity to the Scene; the Perspective would be finely broke, and every Object properly terminate in the Founder's Mausoleum, as the principal Point of the whole View.

"THERE are few Tombs in Europe more famous than that of Henry VII. neither indeed are there many which deserve to be more so. The Undertaking, in itself, was vast and surprizing, the Cost prodigious, and the Execution exceedingly difficult and laborious; and yet the Artift has succeeded in it to Admiration; there is hardly a Part in it that is not excellent, from the chief Figures to the minutest Point of the Decoration; the Statues of the King and Queen are grand and noble, and the Bas-Relief on the Sides below, beautiful and expressive. I am of Opinion the Workman, whoever he was, was equal to the noblest Scheme of this Nature, and would have made a Figure even amongst the Antient. What a Pity is it therefore that such a Genius, and so much Art, should be lavish'd away on a Thing intirely out of Taste, and which, at the same Expence and Study, might have been made the Wonder of the World! To explain myself farther on this Head, nothing can be more stupid than the laying Statues on their Backs, in such a Situation, that 'tis impossible they should ever be seen to Advantage, and, of course, that all their Perfections must be utterly thrown away. In the next Place, the Brazen Inclosure, which surrounds this Tomb, wonderful as it may be, considered by itself, is a monstrous Blemish, with Regard to the Thing it was intended to preserve and adorn; because it rises abundantly too high, and intercepts the View intirely from the principal Objects.

"WITHOUT Doubt the Statues of the King and Queen ought to have been in living Attitudes, erect and bold, and the decorating Figures should have form'd a corresponding Groupe, which in every Light should have stood the Test of Criticism, and given the Spectator an intire Satisfaction; a few more Steps too should have been added to raise the Foundation higher; a magnificent Arch might have been thrown over all, and the Boundary

“ below should have been only a Guide, not an Incumbrance to the Prospect.

IN the Year 1569, this most magnificent Monument of Henry VII. and also of Queen Elizabeth his Wife, received much Damage by a certain rude Fellow who stole away divers Parcels of Brass and Copper that adorned their Tombs: But he was discovered and punished by Mr. Barnard Randolph, the Common Sergeant of LONDON.

AMONG the rest of the Lands belonging to this Abbey was a Garden, they called the Vine-garden; because perhaps Vines antiently were there nourished and Wine made. It was in King Edward VI.'s Time enclosed with Houses and Buildings, and other Lands and Meadows, and Pastures belonging to the same; and likewise a certain Parcel of Land called, The Millbank: These were of Value 58 s. and given by that King in the Third of his Reign, to Joanna Smith, in Consideration of Service.

AFTERWARD, when the Monks were expelled by King Henry VIII. it was converted to divers Governments. First, It had a Dean and Prebendaries: After, a Bishop, and that only one, named Thomas Thurlbey, Anno 1540, when the Revenues of the Church were abridged. He departed thence Anno 1550, being removed to Norwich, and left it to be governed by a Dean.

WITHIN short Time after Q. Mary brought in the Monks again, with an Abbot named Feckenham, who not long after being expelled by Act of Parliament, Queen Elizabeth (of blessed Memory) converted it into a Collegiate Church, or rather a Nursery for the Church, in the Year 1560. For there she ordained (to the Glory of GOD, and the Propagation of true Religion and good Literature) a Dean, twelve Prebendaries, an Upper-Master, and an Usher for the School, forty Scholars, termed the Queen's Scholars, who (at their due Times) are preferred to both the Universities; besides Ministers, Singers, and Organists, ten Choiresters, and twelve poor Soldiers, &c.

THE Church at Westminster, erected by Queen Elizabeth into a College or Collegiate Church, by Order prescribed from her Majesty to Dr. Bill, the first Dean of the said College, is governed as a College, and in Manner and Form as Eaton and Westminster College.

THE Dean and Prebendaries do keep Commons together in the Hall, and in likewise the School-Master and Usher, and her Majesty's Scholars, and also the Servants and Officers of the said College.

THE Scholars Order for Admittance is by Election and Assent of the Dean of Christ's Church in Oxford, and the Master of Trinity College in Cambridge, and their Colleges, and the Dean of Westminster, one Prebendary and School-Master, both into Westminster, and from thence unto the Universities, according to her Majesty's Letters Patents.

THE Scholars Allowance for Diet is in the said Hall, after the Rate of a Provision made by the Dean and Prebendaries, viz. a Bushel of Wheat for twenty Pence, a Barrel of double Beer for three Shillings four Pence, and the Fuel after a certain Rate, paying for the Carriage only.

THE Scholars are allowed for Livery, every one two Yards of Broad Cloth, which cost xi s.

THE Queen's Scholars lay all in one great Chamber, provided for that Purpose by Dr. Bill, and the Prebendaries then; but there is now lately built a New Dormitory for them, which is accounted a fine Piece of Architecture.

IN Church, School, Hall, Chamber, they keep daily ordinary Prayers:

A House is provided for them within the Clofe, if they should fall sick:

THERE is also a House built at Chefwicke with Chamber and School for the Summer Time, and if there should be Occasion of Sickness; which House cost building five hundred Pounds.

THE Master of the Choiresters hath allowed him a House and four Pounds in Regard, and three Pounds six Shillings four Pence for every one of the ten Choiresters, besides a yearly Livery to every one, and a Bushel of Wheat weekly.

THE Ministers and Singing Men have every one of them Houses and forty Shillings allowed them over and above their Stipends in Regard yearly, which amounts to the Sum of forty Pounds.

THE Servants and Officers have Allowance of Diet, Livery and Stipend, where before they had only a Pension by Patent or otherwise.

WHEN as this Church was a Cathedral the Dean and Prebendaries kept several Houses, and kept Residence only for xxi Days, three Quarters of the Year, and xxiii one Quarter.

THE Dean, if he were absent any one Day of his Residence, he paid ten Shillings for every Day; if he came not at all, he had but the Corpse of his Deanry, which was xl l.

THE Prebendary omitting any one Day of his Residence, he lost a Shilling for every Day; if he were wholly absent, he had but the Corpse, which was x l.

THE said Provisions of Corn and Fuel was divided between the Dean and Prebendaries Resident.

THE Scholars had but three Pounds six Shillings four Pence allowed them to every one, and so did board themselves in the Town or elsewhere, and only came to the School.

THE Servants and Officers of the Church were then allowed a Stipend only.

THE first Dean then of that Foundation was Mr. William Bill, who being taken away within two Years, had for his Successor, Mr. Gabriel Goodman, Doctor of Divinity; who, when he had governed this Collegiate Church (with great Commendation) the Space of forty Years, died in the Year of our Lord GOD, 1601, and then Mr. Lancelot Andrewes, Doctor also in Divinity succeeded him; next Dr. Neale, and after him Dr. Mountaine.

Sebert was buried in this Church with his Wife Athelgoda, whose Bodies many Years after, viz. in the Reign of Richard II. (says Walsingham) were translated from the old Church to the new, and there interred:

Edgar, King of the West Saxons, repaired this Monastery about the Year of CHRIST 958, Edward the Confessor built it new; whereupon T. Clifford writes thus:

“ WITHOUT the Walls of LONDON (says he) upon the River of Thames, there was in Time passed a little Monastery, built to the Honour of GOD and St. Peter, with a few Benedictine Monks in it under an Abbot, serving CHRIST. Very poor they were, and little was given them for their Relief. Here the King intended (for that it was near the famous City of LONDON, and the River of Thames; that brought in all Kind of Merchandizes from all Parts of the World) to make his Sepulchre: He commanded therefore, that of the Tenthhs of all his Rents, the Work should be begun in such Sort as should become the Prince of the Apostles.

AT this his Commandment the Work was nobly begun, even from the Foundation, and happily proceeded till the same was finished: The Charges bestowed, or to be bestowed, are not regarded: He granted to this Church great Privileges vileges above all the Churches in this Land, as partly appears by this his Charter.

“ EDWARD, King, greets William Bishop, and Leofstane and Ælfie, Portrieves, and all my Burgesles of LONDON, friendly : And I tell you, that I have this given and granted to CHRIST and St. Peter, the Holy Apostle, at Westminster, full Freedom over all the Land the belongeth to that Holy Place, &c.

HE also caused the Parish Church of St. Margaret to be newly built, without the Abbey Church of Westminster, for the Ease and Commodity of the Monks. Because (before that Time) the Parish Church stood within the old Abbey Church in the South Isle, somewhat to their Annoyance.

THIS Church of St. Margaret (which that King Edward built) continued till the Days of Edward I. at what Time the Staple of Wools were at Westminster; and then the Parishioners and Merchants of the Staple built it all of new, the great Chancel excepted, which was done by the Abbots of Westminster, as is afore shewed.

KING Henry III. in the Year of CHRIST 1220, and in the fifth of his Reign began the new Work of our Lady's Chapel, whereof he laid the first Stone in the Foundation; and in the Year 1245, the Walls and Steeple of the old Church (built by King Edward) were taken down, and enlarging the same Church, caused them to be made more comely. For the Furtherance whereof, in the Year 1246, the same King (dividing how to extort Money from the Citizens of LONDON towards the Charges) appointed a Mart to be kept at Westminster, the same to last fifteen Days, and in the mean Space all Trade of Merchandize to cease in the City; which Thing the Citizens were fain to redeem with two thousand Pounds of Silver.

THIS King Henry, as he rebuilt this religious Fabrick of King Edward the Confessor, so he religiously observed his Festival at the said Place. And when he could not be present, he gave Command to have it honourably celebrated by others in his Name. Thus in the 39th of his Reign, Anno 1255, it is recorded in the Tower Records, that because the King was not sure that he could be present at the Solemnity of the Feast of St. Edward approaching, by Reason of various and urgent Affairs in Scotland, he commanded Philip Luvel his Treasurer, and Edward of Westminster (his Son) in the Faith and Love whereby they were held bound to the King, that they keep the said Feast together, with the venerable Fathers, the Bishops of Sarum, Norwich, Bath, Colchester, and the neighbouring Abbot and Prior, whom the King, by his Letter, has invited to the Feast; and that they solemnly celebrate it at the King's Cost; and for the Poll of the King and Queen and their Children, so much to be offered, scil. de 36 Almuciis nomine eorum offerri, in their Name; and that they cause to be touched the Silver Cross upon the great Altar at Westminster; and that they offer one Plate of Gold of the Weight of one Ounce in the King's Name, as is customary in the Solemnity of the Mass of the said Edward, as tho' the King himself were present. And to fill the King's two Halls at Westminster, in the said Feast (with People) and cause them to be fed, as has been accustomed to be done; and cause solemnly to come to Westminster on St. Edward's Day, the Procession of the Church of St. Margaret, and all the Processions of the City of LONDON, with Wax-Lights, and their other Processions, as the King has likewise commanded the Mayor, and the honest Men of LONDON: This was dated at Werk the 13th of September.

AND that nothing, no not Vows, might obstruct this King's Solemnization of this Feast, the next Year, viz. 1256, he obtained a Bull from Pope Alexander, for the King and his Guests to keep it, whensoever it shall fall on a Saturday. It was directed, To his dear Son in Christ, Henry King of England. And it was granted on this Occasion, as it seems by the Import of the said Bull, viz. That the King was detained by a Vow he had made from eating Flesh on Saturdays, and that he had desired a Freedom from that Vow, that he might the better keep this Feast, whensoever it should fall out on that Day. Cum sicut ex sua parte, &c. “Whereas, on their behalf it is signified to us, that you are bound by Vow to abstain from Flesh on Saturdays, we, yielding to your Request, indulge, by the Authority of these Presents, your Excellency, that if the Feast of the Translation of St. Edward happen to be kept on a Saturday, it may be lawful for you to eat Flesh, notwithstanding such a Vow; and also for your Guests, who have not been bound by such Vow. And we will, that you be bound for this to feed an hundred Poor the same Day.” This Bull has a leaden Seal with Strings of yellow and red Silk.

THE Works of this Church, with the Offices, were finished to the End of the Choir, in the Year 1285, the 14th of Edward I.

ALL which Labour of 66 Years was in the Year 1299, utterly defaced by a violent Fire which broke out in the less Hall of the King's Palace, and burning Westward seized the Roof and burnt down great Part of the Church.

THEN was the Monastery again repaired by the Abbots of that Church, King Edward I. and his Successors putting to their helping Hands.

Edward II. appropriated to this Church the Patronages of the Churches of Kilueden and Sabritsworth in Essex, in the Diocese of LONDON.

Simon Langham Abbot (having been a great Builder there in the Year 1362) gave 400 l. to the Building of the Body of the Church: But (amongst others) Abbot Islip was (in his Time) a great Builder there, as may appear in the Stone Work and Glass Windows of the Church: Since whose Decease that Work stood for a good Number of Years as he left it, unperfected, the Church and Steeple being all of one Height.

THE Face of this Church is much altered from the early Appearance of it, not only by the Injuries of Time, but the more destructive Hands of hot-brain'd Zealots. As for the Altars, they were most of them removed at the Reformation, though some have been injured in our late thorough Reformation, as it was then called; and some of the Chapels, Time, the Weight of Monuments, and the necessary Repairs of the Church, have entirely made away with, that not even the Site is to be discovered. However, what has been formerly mentioned of them is here set down.

THE Chapel of St. Benedict the Abbot, where was formerly an Altar to that Saint, near the Tomb of Bishop Langham; at which Altar whoever heard Mass had an Indulgence granted for the Space of two Years and thirty Days. This Chapel is now standing, and had, not long since, a plain Skreen of Wood cancellated, opening to the South Cross, which was removed to make Way for the Tomb of Mr. Dryden. It is the first Chapel of the Area going round St. Edward's, and is likewise called the Dean's Chapel.

St. Edmund's Chapel, founded as before-mentioned, by Abbot Crokefly, in which there is no Account of any Altar to this Shrine. This Chapel is the second in the Area, and the largest.

St.

St. Nicholas's Chapel is the third in the Area, and had formerly in it an Altar erected to that Saint; for hearing Mass at which Altar, was granted an Indulgence for three Years and sixty Days.

NEXT to this was formerly a Chapel dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary, founded by Henry III. but pulled down by Henry VII. in order to found his new Chapel, and was situate where now are the Stairs and Portico of that Chapel. In this former Chapel was an Altar, at which whoever heard Mass, had an Indulgence for two Years and one hundred Days. In the same Chapel, at the Door on the North Side, two Years and fourteen Days: By which it appears there was a Passage into the Church through this Chapel.

CHAPEL of Henry VII.

CHAPEL of St. Paul, in which was an Altar, where whoever heard Mass, had two Years and thirty Days Indulgence.

CHAPEL of St. John Baptist, in which whoever heard Mass, had Indulgence for three Years and an hundred and forty five Days.

CHAPEL of Isip; this has in a late Book been confounded with the Chapel of St. John Baptist, and called by that Name, contrary to all former Writers, and without the least Grounds, except a Text Inscription over the Door of the latter, bearing the Name of that Saint.

THE Chapel of St. John the Evangelist, in which was formerly an Altar erected to that Saint, where, whoever heard Mass, had an Indulgence for two Years and thirty Days. This is the last Chapel in the Area, and looks towards the great North Cross, from which it is separated by a Skreen cancellated of Wood, formerly finely carved, gilt and adorned with Arms of several of our Nobility, but is now almost gone, or blinded with the Tomb of Sir Gilbert Lort.

NEXT to this Chapel is that of St. Michael, now not separated from the former, looking into the North Cross, from which it was skreened by Cancellæ like the former; but they are now blinded, or rather removed, for setting up the old Duke of Newcastle's Tomb.

THE Chapel of St. Andrew, being the last of the three that look into the North Cross, and now laid into one with the two former. This was formerly adorned with a Skreen made by Abbot Kirton, in which were the Arms of many of our Nobility and others, curiously carved and gilt, and was a beautiful Piece of antient Work; but now a huge Monument, erected to the late Duke of Newcastle, fills up its Place, and blinds the Chapel; together with a very curious Monument that stands in it. In this Chapel was an Altar dedicated to St. Andrew, at which, whoever heard Mass, had an Indulgence for two Years and thirty Days.

THE Chapel of St. Blase, was a Place in the South Cross, inclosed with Wainscot, lately made use of as a Revestry. This Inclosure was not long since taken away, which was indeed a scandalous Blot in the Beauty of this Part of the Church; and a much more convenient Place is found out for the same Purpose that was made use of. Mr. Dart, in his Antiquities of Westminster-Abby, says, when he was about that Work, that this South Cross was made a News-Walk by the Singing Men, till the Sub-Dean or any of the Prebendaries come, and then in a hurried, confused Manner they run different Ways to get into their Seats in Time.

In this Chapel of St. Blase was an Altar formerly, at which, whoever heard Mass, had Indulgence granted them for the Space of two Years and twenty Days.

BESIDES the Chapels, which (except the old one of the Virgin Mary) are now standing, there is in several Papers belonging to the Church, an Account of these following, of which the very Situation is now intirely lost.

THE Chapel of St. Catharine, in which, whoever heard Mass, had Indulgence granted for two Years and sixty Days. It was in this Chapel, (which must therefore be of great Antiquity) that Matthew Paris tells us King Henry III. caused a great Anathema to be read against all Violaters of this Church.

THE Chapel of St. Anne, where was granted a like Indulgence for hearing Mass for the Space of two Years.

Of the antient Custom of offering SALMON in this Church.

THIS Custom was long kept up to preserve a monstrous Monkish Tradition, relating to a pretended Consecration of this Church, which, as the fabulous Historians tell us, was in this Manner; the Church being built by Sebert, King of the East Saxons, and quite finished, Mellitus, Bishop of LONDON, intending to consecrate it, was thus prevented: St. Peter himself one Night called upon a certain Fisherman, whose Name was Edricus, and desired him to carry him over to Thorney, the Waters being that Night raised with prodigious Rains; which he accordingly did; and then the Apostle consecrated the Church; the Fisherman, the mean while, hearing heavenly Musick, and seeing a great Light of Tapers. The Apostle, upon his Return, discovered himself to him, and bid him let Mellitus know what he had seen, and that he should refrain from a second Consecration: To confirm which, he bid him throw his Nets into the River at such a Place, and he should have a large Number of Fish; which he did, and had such a Draught that his Nets were ready to break with a vast Quantity of Salmon. The Apostle told him, that he nor any other succeeding of his Trade, should want for that Kind of Fish, upon this Condition, that they made an Offering of the tenth Fish to this Church of Westminster. There is in an antient Manuscript in the Cotton Library, an Account received by Tradition of several Monks of that Church, living about the Tenth Century, who had seen Salmon offered upon the Altar in that Church; and likewise a Dispute made by the Parson of Retherhith, or Rotherhith, upon the Thames Side, with the Abbot and Monks of this Church upon that Affair.

Mellitus, having heard of this miraculous Consecration, hastens to the Church, and finds the Chrism, the Drops of the Wax Tapers, and all the Marks of a real Consecration; whereupon he desisted from Proceeding to a new Consecration, and in Remembrance of this Miracle ordered the Name to be changed from Thorney to Westminster.

THE Ceremonies used at the Offering the Salmon were these: The Salmon, after being offered at the High Altar, was carried into the Kitchen, and being scraped and cleaned, the Sacristan (having delivered to the Fisherman a Candle of a Pound, and to two of his Companions, if there were two, a Candle each of half a Pound Weight,) in lieu thereof he demanded of the Cook the Head of the Fish, and as much below the Gills as the Breadth of three Fingers, or the Ala of the Fish shall be griped off, being extended. When the Fish was boiled, it ought to be carried in a Dish to the Table in the Middle of the Refectory, to which the Prior and Convent ought to rise. This Day the Fishermen had a Right to dine at the same Table with the Prior and Convent; and that Day might demand of the Cellarer Ale and Bread; for which the Cellarer might demand as much as four Fingers, with the Thumb erect, could take of the said Fish's Tail.

Of the SHRINE of St. EDWARD.

THIS Prince, of whom it is necessary to give some Account, was Son of Ethelred King of England, and Emma, and was born at Ipslip; but, by the Danish Usurpation, being obliged to shelter himself in Normandy, he reached not the Throne till the 40th Year of his Age; so that his Youth, (a Time when Vice chiefly steals upon Greatness) being spent in Afflictions, the Remainder of his Life was a Course of sedate Piety. He was a Man not over wise, from whence (according to the Custom of that Time) he was called Edward the Simple; yet, says Rob. Glouc. was the Nation happily governed and defended under him, by some Ministers of extraordinary Conduct and Courage. He was easy of Temper, and the hard Usage of his Mother is rather owing to the Influence of those about him. He released his Subjects of Taxes, and secured them by wholesome Laws, and was wanting only in not endeavouring a Successor, (the Cause of their future Miseries) after his Marriage with Godwin's Daughter, against whom there was no Objection but a Point of Religion, strained too far, and a mean and narrow Opinion of its Rules; which is no Wonder to find in a Prince, who at the same Time that he was of a monastick Temper, was but of a shallow Understanding. He was so in Love with a cloystered Life, that he was never well but when paying Visits to his adjoining Monastery, or receiving them from Edwyn, Abbot of it; with whom he spent most of his private Hours. He was so great a Lover of Retirement, that at one of his Country Seats, being disturbed by the Singing of Nightingales, he prayed they might be no more heard in that Place; which, says the Legend, was accordingly granted. Many are his Miracles, of which it is necessary to mention one in this Place, for the better understanding some Parts of this History. The Story is that of the Ring, which is this: Upon a certain Time, a Beggar asking Alms of this Prince, for the Sake of St. John the Evangelist, he gave him out of his abundant Charity, a Ring; some Time after two Pilgrims, Englishmen, being at Jerusalem, met a third, who saluted them; and enquiring what Countrymen, they told him: Whereupon he deliver'd them a Ring, and bad them recommend him to their King Edward, and tell him he was St. John the Evangelist, to whom he had afore Time at Westminster given a Ring; and bad them further tell him from him, that he should in nine Days Time die. The Pilgrims, surprized at such a Message, told him, That to deliver it in Time, was impossible. He, in Answer, bad them take no Care of that, and took his Leave. After they had walked some Way, being weary, they fell asleep; and upon waking, observed a strange Alteration of the Place: Upon which, seeing some Shepherds in the Field, they inquired of them where they were; who made answer, They were in Kent: Whereat being rejoiced, they made the best of their Way to King Edward, to a Seat of his in Waltham Forest, then called the Bower, and since, Hawering in the Bower, in Essex, and delivered this Message to the King, who accordingly died, as was told him. This Story has been depicted in the Parish-Church where this was, viz. in Rumford Church in the Glass-Windows, where was not long since (perhaps yet remaining) the Picture of this King, and the two Pilgrims, with these Words under, Johannes per peregrinos misit Regi Edwardo - - - The Statues of this King and the Pilgrims are over the Courts of King's Bench and Common-Pleas in Westminster-hall, and over the Gate, going into Dean's Yard; the whole Story is wrought in Basso Relievo, in the Chapel where he lies, on the Backside of the Skreen that divides it from the Altar. It was likewise wrought in the Hangings of their Choir, and formerly painted in a Glass-Window in the South Isle, next that Window over the Door, going into the West Walk of the Cloysters; and, in Allusion to this Story, King Edward II. offered, at his Coronation, a Pound of Gold, made like a King, holding a Ring in his Hand, and a Mark of Gold, which is eight Ounces, made like a Pilgrim, putting forth his Hand to receive the Ring: And this very Ring, among other Relicks, is said to have been given to the Monastery, and is called the Ring given by King Edward to St. John the Evangelist, who sent it him again out of Paradise two Years and a half after, and which was taken off the King's Finger the Night of his Translation, and ordered to be kept in this Place for the Sake of the Miracle.

WHEN this King died, saith an antient Historian, with him, at the same Time, fell all Happiness, Liberty died, and all Power was buried. "At the Exequies of this King were assembled
" Bishops, and a frequent Multitude of Priests " and Religious Men ran thither, Monks went " thither in Doves, and innumerable Crowds of " Inhabitants of Cities and Villages flew together: Hence Psalms resound; thence Tears " and Sighs burst forth; every where Joy and " Grief co-mixed are carried to the Church; and
" that Temple of Modesty, that Seat of Virtue,
" was honourably buried in the Place where himself order'd." The Burial of this King is wrought in Basso Relievo in his Chapel, that Corner of it next King Edward I's Tomb. As for his Friend Edwyn the Abbot, (who retained the utmost Value for him dead) as his Custom was daily to visit him living, so now he was no less constant in paying daily Visits to his Grave; which Custom the old Man continued as long as he lived. Nor was this faithful Priest the only Visitor of that Place, for long before he was inshrined, or remov'd, William the Conqueror, upon his first entering LONDON, paid a Visit to his Tomb, and made an Offering of two Palls to lay over it: Which Tomb not long after he altered, and built him one much more curious of Stone, said to be very costly, and extended his Care so far as to make a Grant to this Church for the Good of his Cousin King Edward's Soul, as did after him King Henry I.

IN King William I's Time was a Miracle perform'd at the old Tomb for Wolstan the Bishop, a great Favourite of King Edward's, before-mention'd: Being upon the Conqueror's Accession required to resign, he made Answer, That as he received that Staff from King Edward, and no other, so would he resign it to him, and no other; and going away to this King's Tomb, he struck against it with his Staff; whereupon it stuck to the Stone, say the Historians of that Time.

THIS, with abundance more Miracles, made so great Noise, that all reputed him to deserve a Place in the sacred Kalendar, but more particularly the Monks of this Church. Upon which the Abbot Gervase de Blois, about the Year 1158, sent over to Pope Innocent II. to solicit for his Canonization. The Person he sent was one Osbert de Clare, Prior of this Church, a Man of extraordinary Learning accounted in that Time; who coming to Rome, found the Pope averse to comply with it: Whereupon he returned home without accomplishing the End of his Message. But this Denial did not discourage them; for the succeeding Abbot, Laurentius, being resolved to make a second Attempt, endeavoured to make

Interest

Interest to back his Designs. In order to which, he preached a publick Sermon in this Abbey Church before not only the Monks, but the Nobility of this Kingdom, concerning the glorious King Edward; the Auditory moved at this, with one Voice, prayed of the Abbot that he would take Care that so glorious a Light should not be hid from the World. The Abbot, pleased with their Importunities, first consulted the Pleasure of King Henry II. concerning it, who agreeing, the before-mention'd Osbert de Clare, and other Monks, were a second Time sent to Rome; where shewing a Catalogue of Miracles wrought by him, (customary before Canonization) and the King's Testimony of the Truth of them, the before-mentioned Pope Alexander III. pronounced in a publick Manner, his Order for his Canonization, placed him in the Catalogue of Saints, and issued his Bull to that Purpose, directed to the Abbot Laurence, and Convent of Westminster, in which he calls him the Glorious King Edward, and excuses the Refusal, or rather Delay, as he calls it, of his Predecessor; and enjoins, that his Body be honoured hereupon Earth, as he himself is glorify'd in Heaven, &c. Consequent to which, King Henry II. having prepared for it (some say at Becket's Instigation) a pretious Feretry, he was translated on the Third of the Ides of October, in the Year 1163, seventy seven Years after his Buriall. This solemn Ceremony was perform'd at Midnight; and upon opening his Coffin, his Body was found uncorrupted, a Miracle frequent at that Time; his Habit in which he was dressed was taken off, and likewise the Ring of St. John, before-mentioned. Of the Burial Clothes, the Abbot Laurence made three Copes.

THIS done, the Body was array'd a-new, and it appeared (if the late Discovery were true) vestimento holoserico, as usual: For the late Discoverer of his Cross says, he drew out of the Coffin Pieces of Gold, coloured and flowered Silk, and Linen. Being thus arrayed, and inclosed in a Chest of Wainscot, he was moved into the before prepared Feretry.

THE Day of his Translation was solemnly observed, and Indulgences granted to those who strictly and religiously kept it, of nineteen Years and one hundred and three Days, with Participation of all Spiritual Benefits, and Remission of a seventh Part of Sins; of which Term Pope Nicholas granted one Year and forty Days, Pope Clement four Years and eighty Days, Pope Innocent IV. three hundred Days, and on the Octaves of the same five Years and one hundred Days. Thus this Body continued till King Henry III. rebuilt the Church; and greatly esteeming this St. Edward, erected for him, in a Chapel dedicated to him, a stately and curious Feretry of admirable Workmanship, in which, say they, he enclosed the two former Shrines, and placed upon him a third of pure Gold, and precious Stones, which was so curiously wrought, that the Workmanship exceeded the Matter. And having removed his Body to this Shrine, with which was likewise enclosed the Heart of Henry, Son to Richard King of the Romans, and Earl of Cornwall, who was slain hearing Mass at Viterbo in Italy, by the then Earl of Leicester's two Sons. The King, upon this Removal, held a stately and magnificent Feast upon this Occasion, particularly for the Feast of the Translation he annually observed, as did the City of LONDON, and all the neighbouring Parishes, who used to come in solemn Procession to this Church, as appears by the King's Injunction. And if by urgent Business he could not be present, he nevertheless order'd some of his Nobility to attend this Festival, as is before mentioned.

THIS King Henry III. having thus a-new enshrin'd him, heap'd upon it Presents of whatever was rich and valuable, resolving to make this the chief Place of his Devotion and Offerings. His Value for this Saint was so great, that he always swore by him, and gave his Name to his Son King Edward I. Yet, in the Year 1243, being straitened by some Exigencies, he was forced to make free with the Jewels and Treasure that had been offer'd to his Shrine, and pawn them to carry on his Expedition. However, he obligated himself, by Writing, to see them safely restored to the Convent. These Heaps of Wealth daily increased; for the preserving which, one of the senior Monks was made Keeper of the Feretry of St. Edward; and, in the Salmon Custom, one John London is said to hold that Place.

BEFORE this Shrine of St. Edward was an Altar dedicated to him, where the Offerings were made, and where, ever since the Reformation, has been one casually erected upon some of our Coronations, and particularly King Charles II. who laid the Regalia there, and was crown'd at it with the Imperial Crown. At this antient Altar, whoever attended Mass, had Indulgence granted them for the Term of four Years and two hundred Days.

BEFORE the Shrine was a Lamp kept continually burning, which King Henry III. gave 5 l. to purchase.

HERE likewise stood an Image of the Virgin Mary, wrought in Silver, which Eleanor, Queen to King Henry III. gave, with the Jewels out of the Bishop of Chichester's Ring.

HERE stood also another Image of the Blessed Virgin, wrought in Ivory; a Piece very curious, and much esteemed by Thomas a Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury, who offer'd to the Shrine of St. Edward.

HERE King Edward I. after his Conquest, offered the Scottish Regalia, and Chair, which is still kept there joining to the Shrine: Whereof more hereafter.

ABOUT the Year 1280, Alphonso, third Son to King Edward I. offered to St. Edward the Golden Coronet of Llewellen Prince of Wales, and other Jewels, which were repositied at, and adorned his Shrine.

ABBOT Berkyng, of this Church, about the Year 1250, gave the Abbot and Convent of this Church, in Honour of St. Edward (duo coremia) for the Use of the Choir, on which were wrought the Life and Actions of our Saviour, and holy St. Edward the Confessor.

AND at the Request of King Henry III. the aforesaid Abbot granted, that three Days following the Feast of this Saint's Translation, should be strictly observed with solemn Service and Ringing of Bells.

ANOTHER great Admirer of this Saint was that unhappy Prince King Richard II. who always esteemed him as his Patron, and wore his Arms; which he likewise, as a singular Honour, granted to the House of Norfolk; which, in Process of Time, was the specious Colour of taking off the learned and gallant Earl of Surrey by King Henry VIII. This Prince likewise was a solemn Observer of his Feast: For, in the Year 1390, on St. Edward's Day, the King kept the Feast in his Robes, and sat crown'd in this Church at Mass with his Queen, having their Scepters in their Hands. It is not improbable the Painting in the Choir, of which we shall speak hereafter, was made upon this Occasion.

THE Arms of this Prince were formerly over the North Porch of this Church, impaled with St. Edward's, and supported between two Angels, he being the first of our Kings who used Supporters; under which was a Hart couchant, gorged.

gorged with a Golden Coronet and Chain under a Tree, his usual Device, which is elsewhere expressed in this Church: His Arms impaled with the King's, was likewise in St. Olave's Church in the Old Jewry, and are still remaining in the Windows of the Church of St. Bartholomew the Less, near Smithfield. It is very probable, that out of the Regard this Prince had to this Saint, Henry V. some Years after removed his Body, and deposited it on the South Side of his Shrine.

THAT King Henry IV. was an Admirer of this Prince, as appears by the last Hours of his Life; for, being upon his Knees before this Shrine, he was seized with a Fit of the Apoplexy, whence being carried and put to Bed in the Abbot's House, he enquired where he was? And upon being answered, That the Room was called Jerusalem, he made this Reply, Lord, have Mercy on me, for here I must die; having been before told so by a Soothsayer, that he should die in Jerusalem; which he, by Mistake, supposed to be that Jerusalem, to which, for expiating the Blood he had spilt, he was going upon the Crusado.

IN the Year 1415, after the famous Battel of Agincourt, on the Morrow after St. Simon and Jude, News being brought to LONDON of that Victory, there were Rejoicings made by all Degrees of People, and Te Deum having been sung in all the Churches of the City and neighbouring Parishes, the religious Men of what Order soever, set out from their different Houses about Nine o'Clock, in solemn Procession to the Shrine of St. Edward at Westminster; and at the same Time went thither likewise the new Mayor, with his Court of Aldermen, and all the Livery Men, who all offered at St. Edward's Shrine. After which Offering he went and took his Charge, and then all returned with great Rejoicings. The same Morning the Queen and the Nobility, with all her Attendants, went to the aforesaid Shrine, and made Offerings upon Account of the aforesaid Victory. This Prince, King Henry V. had engraved on his Seal the Representation of this Saint and King Arthur, with their Arms represented.

Edward Earl of March, upon coming to LONDON, assuming the Name of King, having heard Te Deum sung at St. Paul's, went thence in Procession to Westminster on the 3d of March, where being set in the Hall with St. Edward's Scepter, the People were asked their Choice, Whether he should be King? who assenting, he went forthwith in Procession to this Shrine, and being placed in the Choir during the singing of Te Deum, he made his Offering to this Saint, and returning back to St. Paul's, was proclaimed, and the 28th of July following was solemnly crowned here.

IN the Year 1483, K. Richard III. that Monster of Deceit and Barbarity, to shew his extraordinary Reverence to this Saint, went the Morning he was to be crowned in solemn Procession to his Shrine, from the King's - Bench in Westminster - Hall, with his Queen, bare-footed, having the Regalia carried before them; and having made their Offering at it, returned to their Places in the Choir, where they were crowned. Many other Instances may be given of the great Reverence and Esteem this Saint was held in by our English Princes, and others, it being customary at Coronations and solemn Thanksgivings to repair and make Offerings at this Place; a Custom which, doubtless, continued till the Time of the Reformation, when it was despoiled, not only of its acquired Wealth and Ornaments, but of any future Means of renewing them.

IN this Change of Religion, it had however a Respect paid to the Building, and some remaining Shew of Reverence to the Place; of which this Shrine was for many Years the only Instance. As for the first, the Reformers had so much Regard to it, as being a Repository for a Prince, though they denied its being a Shrine for a Saint, that they despoiled it of nothing but what was valuable: Avarice (in this Case) not Disrespect, being the chief Motive that induced their defacing it. And as to the remaining Reverence paid to it, that was partly Respect to Royal Decency, and partly from the Regalia used upon that Occasion, and the Character that Prince bore, not only as a devout Man, but a wholesome Legislator; Characters that (reminded by his Example,) they promised to bear, and such as were well worthy their Imitation.

ANOTHER Relick repositied at this Shrine, was the Blood (as they say) that issued from our Saviour's Side on the Cross. This was sent from the Holy Land to King Henry III. by one of the Knights Hospitallers, with Letters Testimonials from the Patriarch of Jerusalem, and the Masters of the Knights Templers and Hospitallers, and presented by this King to St. Edward on the Day of his Translation, Anno 1247. Upon which solemn Occasion the King sent Orders to all the Clergy in and about the City of LONDON, that they should assemble together at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, being arrayed in their Surplices and Copes, with their Clerks bearing Crosses, and Wax Tapers lighted, whither the King likewise came; and taking the Vessel of Chrytal in which this holy Treasure was contained, he carried it in a Dish elevated above his Forehead, being poorly habited, viz. bare-foot in a Cope, without a Hood, and so proceeded, without resting, to the Church of Westminster, continually holding up the Vessel, and keeping his Eyes fixed on it. Over all was carried a Canopy, supported by four Spears, and the King's Elbows likewise supported. Thus, attended by Bishops, Abbots and Monks, more than 100 in Number, he proceeded to the Bishop of Durham's House, where he was met by the Choir of Westminster, who returned in Procession with the King, who carried it first round the Church, then round his Palace, and lastly offered it to St. Peter, and his Favourite St. Edward. On this Occasion the Bishop of Norwich celebrated high Mass, and after a Sermon, proving the Reality of this new Treasure, he pronounced to all attending it a hundred and forty Days Indulgence. At this Solemnity Matthew Paris was, he tells you, present: But Matthew Westminster makes this Indulgence six Years and a hundred and sixteen Days, which was after enlarged to all such visiting the Relicks in this Church. This Day the King made a splendid Feast for the Monks of this Church in the Refectory.

IN the following Year, on the Translation of St. Edward, the Fair of 15 Days was kept at Westminster, and many People came on Account of this holy Blood, as well as the Translation; at which Time the King continued in the Church all Night in Watchings and Prayers, and had Morrow-Mass sung by the Choir in precious Vestments of Silk.

AT this Feretry was preserved another famous Relick, viz. the Marble Stone whereon our Saviour stood at his Ascension, and which bare the Marks of his Footsteps. This Stone the Friars Preachers brought with them, which the King presented to this Church.

A third Relick at this Shrine was a large Piece of the Holy Cross, being richly adorned with Gold, Silver, and precious Stones; this King Edward I. brought with him out of Wales, which being carried in solemn Procession, was deposited here Anno 1285.

THIS curious Shrine, as it now remains, has been surveyed and measured by the ingenious Mr. Tallman; where the Mosaick was broken away it is justly supplied: It is composed of various coloured Stones, said by some to be Part of those which Abbot Ware brought to pave the Altar; but there is a large Difference, if we may guess by what remains: The Floor indeed is of the same Materials with that before the Altar, but the Shrine seems to be of a thin Mosaick, like King Henry III's Tomb. The Stone Work is hollow within Side, and within it, about as high as the Top of the Side Arches, is a large Chest banded with Iron, and now almost lost in Dust. Over the Stone Work is a Frame of Wainscot, said in Time past to have been curiously plated with Gold, and adorned with precious Stones. The Frame is very neat and regular, but seems never to have been covered, and as for the Jewels that adorned it, they are still there; for on the Pilasters between the Arches, is a Kind of Mosaick Work of stained Glass, a customary Ornament at that Time, as appears by the Tomb of Edmund Crouchback, on the North Side the Altar, which is inlaid after the same Manner. This Frame was covered at Top, as appears by the Draught in Mr. Sandford; but that upper Frame is much disjointed and sunk in; over which Frame was the curious one mentioned by Paris. This Shrine was undoubtedly repaired or built at several Times, as appears, in some Measure, by the Difference of Workmanship; for Instance, the Pillars at the West End are very unlike, the one having a Dorick Chapter, the other a Wreath of Vine Leaves; the same Dissimilitude is between the East End and the West, the latter standing on a Greave, or the Basis of the Tomb, the former having no Chapter, and the Basis buried in the Earth. But for this, perhaps, a Reason may be given; for under the Chair of the Coronation the Floor is paved with Tiles different from the Mosaick Pavement, in which Place were Steps to descend under the Tomb, where (very probably) the enshrined Body of this Saint lay; the Custom of enshrining being very different; for sometimes the Coffin was placed level with the Surface of the Earth, sometimes upon it, and sometime in altum: The first was to Men of exemplary Piety, who had suffered no more for Religion than what Self-denial, Self-imposed Severities and Abstinence required, which was the Case of this Saint; the other for Men of more early Example, and was first a Custom, as in the Case of Cuthbert before he was Sainted, and others, but afterwards grew a Favour to Saints of the second Rank; the elevated Body was usually for such who had suffered Martyrdom for Religion. The Shrine seems to have been repaired in King Richard II's Time, as appears by the painted Mosaick of Gold, and Black in some Places, but the Frame-Work at the Top seems to have been ab origine. Round the Verge of this Tomb is this Inscription in Letters of Gold on Black:

Omnibus insignis virtutum laudibus heros,
Sanctus Edwardus Confessor, Rex venerandus.
Quinto die jani moriens super Æthera scandit, Sursum corda. Moritur Anno Domini 1065.

THIS Inscription is supposed to have been put on it in the Time of King Richard II. when the old one, which was embossed on it, was worn away, which when remaining was thus:

Anno milleno Domini, cum septuageno,
Et bis centeno, cum completo quasi dexo,
Hoc opus est factum, quod Petrus duxit in actum,
Romanus Civis, homo, causam noscere si vis,
Rex fuit Henricus, sancti præsentis amicus.

Nº 32. VOL. II.

BUT the Letters of the Form being not the usual Character of that Age, it was since renewed. It will be necessary here to take some Notice of a Narrative concerning the finding St. Edward's Body, and the Cross in the Chest inclosed, as before-mentioned, which was thus: "One Young belonging to the Choir of this Church, which Young, by the way, was no other than Henry Keep, who in K. James II's Time being reconciled to the Church of Rome, changed his Name: Some Time after the Coronation of King James II. he observed the Chest before-mentioned to be broken, as he supposed, by the Fall of a Beam from the Coronation Scaffolding, which had broken a Hole in the Lid over the Breast. He went with two Friends who came to see the Tombs, and fetching a Ladder to see if the Report was true, found it so: Upon which, putting his Hand, he turned the Bones, and found under the Shoulder Blades a Crucifix richly adorned and enamelled, and a Gold Chain of 20 Inches long, with Pieces of Linen and Gold coloured Silk. The Head was solid and firm, the upper and lower Jaws full of Teeth, and a List of Gold round the Temples, and much Dust in the Coffin. This Cross he presented the King, who, he says, thereupon ordered the Coffin to be inclosed in a new one two Inches thick, and cramped with Iron Wedges.

ON the South Side of this Shrine was deposited the Body of Editha, or Egitha, Queen to the sainted King Edward; she was Daughter of Godwin, Earl of Kent, a Woman of Beauty and Virtue, whence the Writers of that Time compared her to a Rose growing from a Briar.

Sicut spina rosam genuit Godwinus Edivam.

BUT this Reflection upon Godwin is owing to the Norman Writers, whose Invasions he strenuously opposed, and the Churchmen, whose Rights he sometimes invaded; for the Man himself, setting aside his Pride and arbitrary Management, made brave Head against the Inroaders upon his Country's Rights. But to return: This Lady was, says Ingulphus the Abbot (who knew her personally, being himself bred in the Court,) "A Woman of Beauty, Learning and excellent Conduct of Life, of religious Humility, mild, sincere and obliging. I have, says he, frequently seen her when my Father lived in the Court, and as I have returned from School, i. e. at Westminster, she would often stop me, and examine me in the Classics, and pose me with wondrous Readiness in my Grammar and Logick, and then generally ordered a little Maid that waited on her, to give me three or four Pieces of Money, and having refreshed, dismissed me." Another Author says, Erat pulchra facie, sed morum probitate pulchrior multo. She was fair of Face, but more valuable for the Beauties of her Mind. Brompton says,

"Her Breast was a Storehouse of all liberal Sciences.

AND indeed most of our Historians agree in the same Character of this most excellent Woman: That she was curious in other Arts, and employed in them more than in outward Pomp and Court Ceremony, appears by her having wrought with a Needle those curious magnificent Robes the King appeared in on his Colar Days. But with all these Excellencies, she was an useless Sharer of a Royal Bed; for that Prince, who was superstitious not a little, and full as narrow in his Intellects, had some empty Scruples in his Mind which forbade him knowing her, her, though they always lay together for eighteen Years; some attribute this to the King's Relentment of Godwin her Father's Insolence, and that he married her only to keep his Word, having otherwise no Desire of Marriage; others, that none of Godwin's Blood should mingle with his Race; others, that he foreknew his being Sainted, and declined for that Reason, or to profess Virginity, and that he did it for Mortification; and some, though very few, that he had no Inclination to Women, and that they did it jointly by Consent: And to this agrees an old Manuscript: And natheless tho' ye Kinge had a Wife he lived ev'moe in Chastete and in Clennes wythowten any fleshly Dedes doyinge wyth his Wyfe the Quene; and so dyd the Quene in her Syde. And lastly, Alured, who refutes the former Opinion of mixing with the Blood of Rebels, spiritualizes it in this Apology, Diliget ille sed ne corrumpitur, diligitur illa sed non tangitur, & quasi nova quadam Abisac regem calefacit amore, nec dissolvit libidine; mulcet obsequiis, sed desiderii non emollit. However that was, it is certain, as she herself confessed on her Death Bed, that he never cohabited with her, and it is probable he had otherwise no great Affection to her, for upon Godwin's Insolence he ungenerously revenged the Crime of the Father, then out of his Reach, on the Daughter his Queen, by seizing all her Jewels, and confining her Prisoner to the Abbey of Warwel, where his Sister was Abbess, with only one Maid to attend her; but the Year following (says Sim. Dunelm) received her. This Lady survived her Husband eight Years, and was a Spectator of all the Miseries ensuing his Death, though the Conqueror treated her with the utmost Respect, and allowed her a Place in the King's Seat at Winchester, where she died on the 15th of the Kalends of January, and was, by the Order of William the Conqueror, buried near her Husband in this Abbey, and, upon rebuilding it, her Body, and that of another excellent Woman, were deposited on each Side this Shrine, before laying the Mosaick Pavement, where no Doubt the Coffins still continue entire, having been subject to no Interruptions: She lies on the South Side (says Lib. Consuetud.) in parte aquilonari insigniter erat sepulta. Her Anniversary was observed on 14 Kal. Jan. in albs. and at her Tomb was a Lamp kept burning Night and Day, by Order of King Henry III. as appears by the said Lib. Consuetud. written in his Time.

ON the South Side lies that most excellent Princess Maud, or Matilda, called the Good Daughter of Malcolm Commair, King of Scots, and St. Margaret his Wife, (whose holy Life Turgat of Durham dedicated to her) and Granddaughter to Duncan the murder'd King of Scots. She was espoused to Henry I. King of England, in order to unite the Saxon and Norman Lines; but the Marriage was some Time opposed upon Account of her being a Nun; which Eadmerus, who lived in Court, assures us, was not so, but that at Winton the Lady Abbess put a Veil on her suddenly, to screen her from the Fury of the Danes. This Story, which is variously reported, being overcome, she was married to the King by Archbishop Anselm, Anno 1102. The Character of this Lady is universally extolled; she is generally called the Good, and by Alured, the blessed Queen, who compares her to Hester; Brompton styles her, Mulier Pia & Deo Devota; and the Annals of Waverly tells us, "Her Virtues were so great that a Day would not suffice to recount them." She was so religious that she would desire Leave of the King to spend several Days and Nights together in this Church, and would in Lent come higher barefoot in a Garment of Hair, and wash the Poor's Feet. Alured tells us a Story, that he heard from the Mouth of David, King of the Scots, her Brother, "How that coming into her Chamber he found her incircled with Beggars and Lepers washing and kissing their Feet." Her Bounty was as remarkable, she gave Relicks to this Church, and Plate and Ornaments to others, as appears by the Bishop of Man's Epistle to her; and did many publick Acts, (besides encouraging Musick and other Sciences) as building the Priory within Aldgate, the Hospital of St. Giles, and two Bridges, one at Stratford Bow, and another near Westminster, where Channel-row now is, and an Hospital for Lepers in LONDON, called by Paris, Maud's Hospital. After a Life of excellent Example, she surrendered her Soul to God the 1st Day of May 1118, or, as Wykes says, 1119, and was buried, as some say, in the Old Chapter-house; but if so, she was removed upon rebuilding the Church; for the 4th Part of the Book of Constitutions in King Henry III's Time says, In australi parte magni altaris decentissime erat sepulta, at which Place that King ordered a Lamp to burn Night and Day. Her Anniversary was on the 6th Non. May, and was celebrated in Albs; at which Time for the Pittances and Cup of Charity was assigned 27 s. and 3 s. to the Sacristan for Lights round her Tomb, for which was assigned 30 s. upon a House in Thodenham, which one Laurence Ducket purchased. Mr. Weaver has given us four Lines of an Epitaph on her Death, which he found in an old Manuscript in the Cotton Library, but the rest, he says, are lost; however, these four Lines with four more, viz. the first and two last of her Epitaph, are in the Continuer of Indulphus, which not only as of Right, but also for the Excellency, are here inserted.

O Regina potens Anglorum linea Regum
Scotos nobilitans nobilitate sua.
Et post multa de morum prærogativa sic,
Prospera non lætam fecerit, nec aspera tristem; Aspera risus ei, prospera terror erant.
Non decor effecit fragilem, non sceptrum superbam
Sola potens humilii, solæ pudica decens.
Maii prima dies nostrorum nocte dierum
Raptam perpetua fecit misse die.

Of which take in Part a Translation:

Success ne'er sat exulting in her Eye,
Nor Disappointment heav'd the troubled Sigh:
Prosperity but sadden'd o'er her Brow,
When glad in Trouble she enjoy'd her Woe.
Beauty nor made her vain, nor Scepters proud,
Nor high Estate, to scorn the meaner Crowd;
Supreme Humility was awful Grace,
And her chief Charms a Bashfulness of Face.

ON the North Side of this Chapel, near the Feet of King Henry III's Tomb, is a small Table Monument covered with a Slab of black Ly-dian, finely polished, on which are remaining the Nails that fastened Plates of Brass, now stolen away. This was placed in Memory of Elizabeth Tudor, second Daughter of King Henry VII. who died at Eltham in Kent, the 4th of September 1495. But for the rest of the Monuments, see them hereafter in their proper Order.

A VIEW of the present Building of the Church of St. Peter's.

THIS antient and venerable Pile is at present so incumbered by adjoining Buildings, that it is difficult to take a just View of it: The North Side, being the most beautiful, hath, by many, from its curious Form, been called Solomon's Gate. This magnificent Porch was founded by that unhappy Prince Richard II. as appeared formerly by his Arms carved in Stone over the Door, and impaled with those of Edward the Confessor, with a Hart couchant, and two Angels for the Supporters. This stately Portico is now lately beautified, the Time-eaten Sculpture and Masonry pared away, the Gothic Order justly preserved, and the Whole adorned with a magnificent Window, designed by the ingenious Mr. Dickenson, Surveyor of this Building. This Pile, excepting the Western Towers, has nothing but its lofty Roof to make it eminent to distant View. There was indeed a Design in Abbot Islip's Time, of a Middle Tower and Spire but the Pillars, curiously taper, and very lofty, were thought too weak for such a Weight, so that the Work remained unfinished. There was in the old Church a Tower raised in the Cloisters, for there is Mention made of some of the Abbots buried in australi parte claustris, prope Cymbalum; but there are not now any Remains of it. The Form of this Church is that of a Cross, and gave Pattern to most Collegiate Churches in England. The Chapel of King Henry VII. is, properly speaking, a different Building, the old Church and Form being compleat without it, the Apex being Edward the Confessor's Chapel: From the East End of which this arises by Steps, and extends itself 122 Feet further.

To view the inward Glories of this Structure, let us enter the West Door, from which Entry, at one View, the Church opens itself to your Eye, the Pillars dividing the Nave from the Side Isles, being so curiously taper as not to obstruct the Side-Openings; nor is the Sight terminated to the East by any Thing but the curiously painted Window over the Portico of King Henry VII's Chapel; which Sight was undoubtedly of old more surprising, when the Altar was low, and the gloriously adorned Shrine of Edward the Confessor overlooked it, and was visible from the most distant Parts of the Church. This Range of Pillars continue to the Sacristary, and there with a Sweep form a Semicircle round the Chapel of that King. These Pillars are, as well as the rest of the Building, of Suffex or Grey Marble, and are distinguished by Fillets on the Top; these reaching Westward to the Gates of the Choir, being filleted with Free-Stone, which point out to us how far Henry III. extended his Building: Those extending to the West Door are filleted with Brass, as appears by the black Colour of the Rings. This Part of the Building was what the Abbots, and some succeeding Benefactors, carried on; of whom Edward I. was one, and Edward III. and Richard II. This Range of Pillars end in acute Angles, and throw the Roof into Variety of Intaglio, of which those over the Choir are curiously gilt. On the Arches of these Pillars are Galleries of double Columns, and double arched, lying open to a Deambulatory of Brick 15 Feet wide, covering the Side Isles, and enlightened by a second Tier of Windows in the Out-Prospect, and over this upper Tier of Arches are large Windows. Thus the Nave of this Church lifts itself by beauteous and magnificent Degrees; as does likewise the Cross, answering in the same Manner, and turning off at four stately Pillars supporting the Dome, and rising over the Pavement before the Altar; stretches itself North and South. The Window of the South Cross is large and noble, and was repaired in the Year 1705. The Window of the North was answerable, but of late beautifully renewed. Besides these Pillars that support the Nave, there are Side Columns adjoining to the Wall, and between them Gothic Arches raised eight or ten Feet, as we see over Dr. Goodman's Tomb, and that of Jeffrey Chaucer; between the Arches of which were the Arms of Great Men at the Time of building this Church, with their Titles in Saxon Characters over them; many of which are now broken away to make Room for new Monuments; which, instead of the former Gothic Regularity, display now an irregular Variety; no Care having been taken to supply the Injury of the old Form, except in the Case of two lately erected, over which are curious Gothic Arches, reared in some Imitation of the former, which, had they been done in other Cases, had made a venerable Appearance. The Arms (of which many remain, and others supplied) were as follows, beginning with the antientest, which is:

OVER these are a Row of arched Windows, which, as well as the former, were finely painted, but now ruin'd; and particularly there remains in the Windows on the North Side of the Nave, toward the great West Door, the Arms of King Henry III. before his Marriage, viz. two Lions, and afterward three Passant. And in the Window, over Smith's Tomb, by the Door entering the West Cloister, the same, and the Arms of Queen Eleanor, viz. Or, four Pallats, Gules. Two Windows from which, on the same Range, toward the West, was painted in Glass, the Story of Edward the Confessor and the Pilgrim, reckon'd by Caxton a very curious one, and the finest painted among them; under each of which were several Verses in Latin; the first under the Pilgrim was thus defaced:

 ———gratia petit.

BUT we may guess, by those under the King, they were asking an Alms.

Rex cui nil aliud præsto fuit, accipe, dixit, Annulum, & ex digito detrahit ille suo.

THE Story see before. In a South Window of this Abbey was the Picture of K. Richard II. with a White Hart Couchant, gorg'd with a Golden Coronet and Chain under a Tree; a fatal Badge to his Followers. In the Windows on the West Side of the North Cross were, not long since, the Arms of Queen Eleanor, Wife to King

VOL. II.

Edward I. viz. Quarterly Gules, a Castle Or, and Argent, a Lyon Rampant Purple; the third as the second, the fourth as the first. At the West End, in the great West Window, is still remaining a Painting very curious, though small, of King Edward III. and some other Pieces; which Window was beautified by Abbot Kirton. In the Window South of this, built by John de Estny, Abbot, is a Painting of one of our Kings, but the Colours being of a Water Blue, no particular Face can be assign'd. Some have made it for Edward the Confessor; but that pacifick Prince is never represented in Armour; it's true, his Arms are underneath it; and from thence it may be conjectured to be King Richard II. who bore them, or else the Arms have been injudiciously patch'd in. In the Window on the North Side the West Door is a Portraiture of Edward the Confessor in his Robes, the Face of which seems lively to represent the Simplicity of that Prince; under the Feet are likewise his Arms, viz. Azure, a Cross Patonce between five Martlets, Or. In the Windows over his Shrine, at the East End of the Church, are several Paintings, which together cast a religious Gleam, but are so confusedly placed, that little or no Conjecture can be made. These are the Remains of those once curious Paintings.

HAVING thus in general described this Building, to be more particular, we must next take a Walk round it. First, at the Entrance of the West Door, which is now repairing (a considerable Sum being given for that and other Repairs of the Abbey by the last Parliament) there are two Squares, one on each Side inclosed so far in the Church, as the two first large Pillars which support the Western Towers. In the Inclosure on the Right Hand, is the Consistory Court, with a Seat raised for the Judge; from which Court is a Passage through a Door into the Dean's House. Almost over this Court is an antient Bay-Window, jutting into the Church, and gives Light to a Gallery in the Dean's House, perhaps designed for View of Coronations, and other Processions. The Square answering to the Consistory-Court is the Bellfry. Advancing from the West Door Eastward, about two Thirds of this Nave and Side Isles, you come to the Gates of the Choir, which extend Westward from the four great Pillars that support the Dome, to four of the Pillars of the Nave, and Eastward to two, being the Breadth of that and the Sides, and confined and fixed to those Pillars. The Entrance into it is by a Pair of handsome Gates, grated with Iron, gilt; the Pilasters and Pyramids finely carved and gilt; over which is a stately Organ, lately set up. The Floor of it is paved with the finest black and white Marble, paved at the Charge of Dr. Busby, Prebendary of this Church, and Master of Westminster School. The antient Stalls are covered with Gothick Acute Arches, supported by small Pillars of Iron and painted Purple; below which are Seats for the Choir; and in the Length of the Choir are Seats on each Side, with Mats on the Floor for the King's Scholars, as usual, in the College Chapels. On the Right-Hand Side, at the Entrance in the Dean's Seat, formerly the Abbot's, and on the Left the Sub-Dean's, formerly the Prior's, from whence the Prebends Stalls proceed. These Sides of old were called Choirs; that on the Right the Abbot's, or Superior, and that on the Left the Prior's, or Inferior; and in such Sense the Word is used by several of our antient Writers, when they speak of the Choirs of a Church. Thus Paris, speaking of a Novice of his House preferred, Et si fuerit de parte prioris (quam nos chorum Prioris appellamus transferetur ad Chorum Abbatis ubi supremus statuetur.) The Choirs

Choirs chanted alternately, as usual; and from thence the same Historian says, That upon a Solemnity in this Church there was such Shouting, that one Choir could not hear another. On the South Side, at the upper End of the Dean's Row, is the Pulpit, by which is remaining an antient Painting of that unhappy beautiful Prince Rich. II. sitting in a Chair of Gold, dressed in a Vest of Green, flowered with Flowers of Gold, and the Initial Letters of his Name, having on Shoes of Gold pondered with Pearls; the whole robed in Crimson lined with Ermin, and the Shoulders spread with the same, fastened under a Collar of Gold; the Pannel plaistered and gilt, with several Crosses and Flowers of Gold embossed. The Length of this Picture is six Feet and 11 Inches, and the Breadth three Feet seven Inches. This Piece was justly taken, among other curious Things in this Church, by that curious Preserver of Antiquities, J. Tallman, Esq; and by him communicated to the Society of Antiquaries. The lower Part of this Picture is much defaced by the Backs of those who fill that Stall, which is usually the Place of the Lord Chancellor, when the House of Lords repair hither.

PROCEEDING, we rise by the first Ascent towards the Altar, which was called, The second Pavement, where was formerly placed a Wax-Light all the Time of Easter; for it is said, in the Life of Abbot Sudbury, that he was buried ante pavement. ubi cereus paschalis solet stare; and Thomas Henley in the lower Pavement, before the high Altar. On each Side of this Pavement are Doors entering into the North and South Crosses. From hence, by another Ascent, we come to the Altar, inclosed with a curious Ballustrade, within which is a fine Pavement of Mosaick Work, made at the Charge of Abbot Ware. Round this Pavement, as well as in the Choir, are buried many of the Abbots of Westminster, and other Persons of Note; which see in the Survey of Tombs. The Altar, now standing, is a stately and beautiful Piece of Marble, and was removed from the Chapel at Whitehall; on it is this Motto:

Anna augusta, pia, felix, augusta parens patriæ. D.

Shewing it to be the Present of that religious and munificent Prince. On each Side the Altar are Doors in the Marble arched, and within them the old wooden cancellated Doors going into the Chapel of St. Edward, where our Kings retire and refresh themselves at their Coronations, and change their Dress; which Place is then hung with Tapestry kept for that Purpose in a large Chest in the old Revestry. This Part of the Choir, within the Rails, was formerly hung with Cloth of Arras, which contained on one Side the Story of St. Edward, Hugoline and the Thief, with Verses; which see before, and the Story of the same King and the Pilgrim: On the other, the Coronation of our Kings, with this Distich under it:

Hanc Regum sedem sibi Petrus consecravit Edem, Quam tu Papa regis insignit & unctio regis.

But the Sides are now closed up, and the Backs of Valence's, Crouchback's, and other stately Tombs, once open to the Altar; and Mr. Keep says, to be seen in his Time, if you withdraw the Hangings, are now wainscotted on this Side, and only to be seen in the Sacristary: Over which Wainscot are now curious Hangings of fresh Tapestry, representing the Story of Abraham and Lot parting on one Side, and the Meeting with Melchisedech on the other. On this Altar was formerly placed a large Cross of Silver, to be touched at great Solemnities. Beyond this Altar is the Work of the old one remaining, about 15 Feet high, and level at the Top, that so the Shrine of St. Edward might be more visible; at the Back of which, by a Rise, is the Chapel of that King; and at the extreme Semicircle, one inclosed with Iron Doors for King Henry V. the End of which looks to the Turn of the Area, and fronts the Ascent of Steps to K. Henry VII's Chapel on the other Side. On the Inside of the Walls of this Chapel, are Presses of Wainscot, with Shelves and Folding-Doors, very neat; there are in all six, viz. four on the two Sides, i.e. the Lining of the Side-Walls; and on each Side the Altar is one smaller. The Altar is ascended by two Steps; one crosses the Chapel, from the Extremes of the Side-Presses; and the other nearer the Altar, which is broke away, the Places where it was fastened to the Wall visible; over it are several Images, viz. St. George, St. Edward, and a void Nitch over the Altar, not improbable our Saviour's Passion, pulled down at the Reformation. There are others of Saints, not to be easily distinguished. There are in this Chapel the Trophies of this Warlike Prince, viz. his Helmet, placed on the Wall, over-looking St. Edward's Shrine; his Shield, which is small, the Handfast broken away, and the Colours of it not to be distinguish'd; his Saddle of Blue Velvet, pondered with Flowers-de-liz of Gold, the Velvet dusty, but substantial, and the Colour tolerably fresh; three large Rests for Spears; a large Caparison Cloth, tolerably fresh, being Quarterly of four, viz. the first in a Field engrail'd, the Colour not visible; a Fez Cheque Sable and Azure; the second, three Flowers-de-liz, Or, in a Field, Azure; the third as the second; the fourth as the first. Over the Cross is a Cloth, the Colour lost, but on it are painted in Gold several large Harness-Buckles; the whole Cloth is surrounded with a Fringe of Brown and Gold Silk. Round this Chapel within, and likewise on the Out-Walls, looking to the Area, are several Devices, viz. 1. A Hart chained to the Stock of a Tree, on which is a Beacon. 2. A Swan. 3. A Stork, holding a Fish in its Mouth, &c.

HAVING thus described the Choir, and Ascents from it, we return into the Body of the Church; where, in the North Isle, through two large arched Doors, we descend by several Steps into the West and East Walk of the Cloisters, of which, with the other Places, we shall treat hereafter. Entering the North Cross we see an open Gallery on the West Side, lying over the Cloister, being the Office of the Register of this Church, where the Deeds are preserved in good Order in Presses. And against the Wall in this Office, is a Hart painted large as the Life, the Badge of King Richard, as before-mentioned. At the South End of this Cross is the Chapel of St. Blase, where stands the Clock, and is now used as a Vestry; but the old Revestry is beyond, going on one Side of this Chapel to it; for the Chapel of St. Blase was square, and surrounded with a Stone Wall, as the East End now is, till the Wainscot was lately placed, to part it off quite to the West Wall, before which the Way to the Revestry lay open to this Cross Isle, on one Side the Chapel. This Revestry (which is called the Chapel of King Henry VIII. for what Reason is unknown, unless for that he stripped it of its Furniture) is inclosed with three Doors, the Inner cancellated; the Middle, which is very thick, lined with Skins like Parchment, and driven full of Nails. These Skins they, by Tradition, tell us, were some Skins of the Danes, tanned, and given here as a Memorial of our Delivery from them. The Doors are very strong, but were, notwith-notwithstanding, broken open not many Years since, and the Place robbed. In this Revestry, at the upper End, is a Rife of Stone in a Circular Form; over which is a very antient Painting of a Woman, with her Hair hanging loose, and in her Hand an Instrument, seemingly of six small Bars of Iron, an Inch Distance, and four or five long, holding it on her Finger by a Ring; 'tis in the Left Hand, and not unlikely to have been the Representation of some Musical Instrument. This Picture seems to be made for Eleanor, Queen to King Edward I. who was a great Benefactress, and upon Account of whom this Church was repaired, and for the Good of whose Soul it was endowed. Another Reason why it should be her, is, there is a Benedictine kneeling at her Feet, as has been likewise painted on her Tomb. At the other End are a Set of Cranes of Wood, swinging, as if in a Rack, on which, formerly, the Copes and Vestments in common Use were hung. Going hence, in the South East Angle of the North Cross, is a low arched Door leading to the Old Palace, before which a Lamp usually burned; and, proceeding Northward, we enter the Sacristary, or Area, round the Chapel, or raised Ground of St. Edward's Shrine, which bounds it on the Right, and the several Chapels of this Church answer on the Left, being swelled out beyond the high Building; as see in the other Prospect, and curiously arched over, some in six, some eight, or more acute Gothick Angles.

The first is St. Benedict's, whose Altar was where the Countess of Hertford's Monument stands. 2. St. Edmund's. This is not the antient Chapel of St. Edmund, which Abbot Crokesley built, Anno 1246; for that was juxta Septentrionale ostium Ecclesie sue, near the North Door of the Church, in which Chapel that Abbot was buried; but this, as Fleet observes, was in Time decayed, and his Body removed. In this Chapel St. Edmund's Altar was, where are now the Tombs of Knowles and Seymour. 3. St. Nicholas's Chapel. There was a Chapel dedicated to this Saint, through which was a Church Door for Agelricus, Bishop of Durham, buried in the Porch of St. Nicholas's Chapel in Westminster, Anno 1072. The Altar here was near where is the Tomb of Fane. Next is the Ascent to Henry VII's Chapel; of which hereafter. 4. St. Paul. This Skreen was built for Robert's Tomb, as appears by the Devices on it. The Altar was where is now the Tomb of the Countess of Suffex; and there are Pieces of St. Paul's Story in Relieve by Fullerton's Tomb. 5. That of St. John Baptist, on which are some Relieves of Scripture Story; the Altar near Lord Hunsdon's Tomb, and by it Lockers for Books.

THE Places where these Altars have been formerly affixed in this Church, may, with the utmost Ease, be discovered; there being generally a Rife, cross the Floor of the Chapel ascending to them; and likewise by taking Notice where the antient Tombs lie, who generally chose to have their Bodies laid near on the Sides of them: As for Instance, 1. In St. Benedict's, the Tomb of Langham directs its Feet to the North Side of the Altar belonging to that Saint. 2. In St. Edmund's, the Tomb of John Eltham, and the small one for Edward III's Children. Here the Rife is visible, and the Place which was distinguished till after the Reformation. The Dutchess of Suffolk, and others, had their Tombs there. 3. St. Nicholas's, near where Carew's old Tomb is.

THERE are several Ascents to the Roof of this Church, viz. at the West Corner of the North Cross, and the East of the South, &c. and over the South West Tower are small Chambers, said to have been formerly the Habitation of Bradshaw, the Mock-President of the Rebels bloody Court. This melancholy Wretch, it is said, ended his Course in the blackest Desperation.

St. Erasmus, or Islip's Chapel, of which see the Work over his Tomb. This Roof he made and the Chantry over, and inclosed it from the Area; for we must not suppose he built it, the Place shewing us it answers to St. Benedict's from the original Foundation. Over the Door of St. John Baptist, where the Letters St. Erasmus are, is a Nitch for a Statue, and the Devices of Islip round it, viz. an Eye and Slip of a Tree, and a Hand slipping a Tree; and in the Chantry over his Chapel, where the old Statues of our Kings are, was formerly painted an Hieroglyphical Device of Cremer, some Time Abbot here, and Scholar in Chymistry to Raymund Lully, which was painted by his Order in this Place; but some, in the Rebellion, supposing it a Popish Story, have White-washed it over. The next Chapel is that of St. John Baptist, next that of St. Michael. Lastly, That of St. Andrew; where is a stately Tomb erected for the late Duke of Newcastle. They are now laid into one, and are taken out of the North Cross on the East, in Proportion to what the Cloisters take from the South Cross on the West.

BESIDES these were the Chapels of St. Catharine and St. Anne. Of the latter is little or no Mention; but the former was a large and very antient one, and, in the old Church, of considerable Consequence; for Anno 1189, in King Richard I's Time, Geoffrey de Lucy, Bishop of Winton, and Hubert Walter of Salisbury, consecrated in it by Baldwin, Archbishop of Canterbury, and so early as the Time of the Abbot Laurence, the King, Archbishops, Bishops, and most of the Nobility, were convened here. In the Year 1173, in King Henry II's Time, a Council set in this Chapel, where Richard, Archbishop of Canterbury, swore Fealty. There are several Instances of this Kind, but all before the rebuilding this Church.

THIS Sacred and Reverend Structure has happily escaped the Fury of all Changes, saved in the Main, though with much Difficulty. She once had a sad Prospect of being laid level with the Earth, when in the Reign of King Edward VI. his Uncle, the Duke of Somerset, a Man whose chief Religion was Interest, and who stopped at nothing that might gratify his Avarice; an Avarice the most sacrilegious that any History affords us, taking its sordid Flight at the most stately Structures, and levelling the chief Glories of our Nation. This Man came after the first Gathering of King Henry VIII. and finding not so plenteous a Harvest, rather than not partake of the Plunder, he pulled the very Orchard Trees that were left, meerly for Fuel. The Abbies being gone, his Sacrilege assaulted the Cathedrals of this Land, of which St. Paul's was a melancholy Instance, when he removed many Cart-loads of the Bones of Persons of all Degrees, and carried them to Finsbury, to raise the Soil for a Windmill to stand upon, that he might employ the Materials of the Cloister, and curious Chapel where they lay, to his own Use. At this Time he demolish'd the inimitable Painting of Holbens, called the Dance of Death, unequal'd and invaluable. Another Instance of this Man's Rapine was his blowing up the stately and antient Church of the Knights of John at Jerusalem with Gunpowder, after its Grandeur moved even King Henry VIII. to spare it, that he might build his House with the Materials, which, with the Ruins of several Churches, he effected. By these Degrees of Sacrilege he arriv'd (O daring Thought!) to attempt to throw down this celebrated and venerable Church, expose the Royal Ashes of our Princes in such Manner as he did the others, and employ the curious Materials of this this to the same Use of Building. But a Thought of this Kind being in itself so unreasonably mischievous, he was prevented putting it in Practice, but not without the Gift of fourteen Manors in Lieu of it. Of the Revolutions of this Building, since his Attempt, and the Havock made there in the late Wars, with its History to this Time, the Reader will find when we treat of the modern Affairs of this Church.

CHAP. II.

A View of the MONUMENTS in WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

IN this solemn Survey we shall take the same Method with the late Mr. Dart, in his Antiquities and History of this Church, and enter in at the Door of the South Cross; close to which, on the left Hand, against the Wall, is erected a neat Marble Monument with a Busto in Basso Relievo, to the Memory of Ben. Johnson, the first who regulated the English Stage, after the Manner of the Antients. This Gentleman was the Son of a Clergyman in Westminster, and was educated in the College belonging to this Abbey, while Mr. Cambden was Master of it, whose Care over him he gratefully acknowledged. After his Father's Death his Mother married her second Husband, a Bricklayer, and taking him from School, forced him to work at her Husband's Trade; during which Time, 'tis said, he worked upon some Buildings in Lincoln's Inn, with his Trowel in one Hand, and Horace in the other; but his Master Cambden taking Pity that excellent Parts should be lost, recommended him to Sir Walter Raleigh, whose Son he attended in his Travels; upon his Return they parted, and Mr. Johnson went to Cambridge, where he was elected into St. John's College; his Stay here was uncertain; but afterwards coming to LONDON, and eager to try his natural Bent to Poetry, he applied himself to a private Booth, or Playhouse, called the Green Curtain near Shoreditch, or Clerkenwell; but he made a poor Progress there: Afterwards, with the Advantages of politer Conversation, he attempted a second Time, and succeeded so well as to gain the prime Character among the Dramatick Writers of that Time. He left the World in his 63d Year, Anno 1637, viz. the 16th of August, and was three Days after buried in this Abbey, in the North Isle, under the antient Escutcheon of Robert de Roos, over whose Tomb one Young, afterwards a Knight in K. Charles II's Time, of Great Milton in Oxfordshire, placed a Stone, which cost eighteen Pence, and on it this Inscription:

O rare Ben. Johnson!

Which Stone is still remaining. There was, 'tis said, a considerable Sum of Money gathered among the curious Men of that Time, for erecting a Monument or Statue over him, but the Rebellion breaking out, prevented it. The Monument which is now set up in this Place we are speaking of, was done by some Person of Quality whose Name was desired to be concealed. It has only the old Inscription, O rare Ben. Johnson! and is a neat Piece of Work; but a Mistake of the Sculptor, in setting the Buttons on the left Side of the Coat, occasioned the following Epigram:

O rare Ben. Johnson! What, a Turncoat grown!
Thou ne'er wer't such till clad in Stone.
When Time thy Coat, thy only Coat impairs, Thou'lt find a Patron in a hundred Years:
Then let not this Mistake disturb thy Sprite,
Another Age shall set thy Buttons right.

NEXT to Ben. Johnson's is a rough Monument of coarse Marble, which, by the Moisture and Injury of the Weather, looks much older than it is. This is erected to the Memory of Mr. Edmond Spenser, a Man of great Learning and so luxuriant a Fancy, that his Works abound with as great Variety of Images, and curious Paintings, as any Author in our own or any other Language afford. The present Inscription on his Monument is as follows:

Heare lyes (expecting the second comminge of our Saviour Christ Jesus) the Body of Edmond Spenser, the Prince of Poets in his Tyme, whose Divine Spirit needs noe othir Witnesse then the Works which he left behind him.
He was borne in LONDON in the Yeare 1510, and died in the Yeare 1596.

By what Cambden and others say of this Monument, the Original was in Latin, and is thus Englisht:

Edmond Spenser, born in LONDON, and chief Poet of our Age, which his Works, written with a happy Spirit and masterly Genius testify. He died by a too early Death in the Year 1598, and lies buried near Chaucer, who was the first that successfully wrote Poetry in the English Language; over whom are written these Epitaphs:

Here plac'd near Chaucer, Spenser claims a Room,
As next to him in Merit, next his Tomb.
To Place near Chaucer, Spenser lays a Claim,
Near him his Tomb, but nearer far his Fame.
With thee our English Verse was raised on high;
But now declined, it fears with you to die.

As for the first Part, which are Mr. Cambden's Words, there is no Mention made of his Birth. And it is rightly enough to be perceived that the Verses are two distinct Epitaphs, the Thought in the first and second Lines being repeated in the third and fourth with very little Difference: But whether they were both placed on the Monument, or not, is doubtful. Perhaps the latter might (according to Mr. Cambden's Custom) be an Improvement of his own on the former former. But what has raised the chief Dispute concerning the Epitaph, is the Date of Mr. Spenser's Birth, which upon the Tomb was said to be in 1510. This indeed squares but ill with Mr. Camden's Expression of an early Death: Yet however, (if poetically placed) may only relate to the too hasty Loss of such a Man, and allude to his Merit rather than his Years. That Mr. Spenser was an old Man at his Death is generally supposed, but of what Age is doubtful, and was perhaps when this Inscription was placed here, which was not till the Year 1631; and therefore this of 1510, being added to supply the Vacancy, requires no great Strefs to be laid upon it.

Butler.

ON the other Side Spenser's Monument, affixed to the Wall, a Stone Busto, is erected to the Memory of Mr. Butler, the celebrated Author of Hudibras.

Mr. Butler was buried in the Church-Yard of St. Paul's Covent-Garden. The Latin Epitaph on his Tomb is thus translated:

Sacred to the Memory
Of
SAMUEL BUTLER,
Who was born at Strensham in Worcestershire, 1612, and died at LONDON, 1680.

A Man of extraordinary Learning, Wit, and Integrity, Peculiarly happy in his Writings, not so in the Encouragement of them;

The curious Inventor of a Kind of Satire amongst us,
By which he pluck'd the Mask from pious Hypocrisy,
And plentifully expos'd the Villany of Rebels:
The first and last of Writers in his Way.

Left he, who, (when alive,) was destitute of all Things.
Should, (when dead,) want likewise a Monument,
John Barber, Citizen of LONDON, hath taken Care,
By placing this Stone over him, 1721.

Shadwell.

FRONTING the Door, and next to Butler's, is a Monument fixed to the Wall, erected in Memory of Mr. Shadwell; this Gentleman, whose Talent lay much in the Comick Part of the Drama, had the Misfortune to fall under the Lash of Mr. Dryden, in those two severe Satires, the Character of Ogg, in the second Part of Abolom and Achitophel, and Macflecknoe. He died at Chelfea, by taking Opium, to which he had been long accustomed, and was there buried. But his Son, Sir John Shadwell, some Years after, set up this Monument in the Abbey, the Latin Inscription on which is thus Englisch'd:

Sacred to the Memory
Of
THOMAS SHADWELL, Esq;
Descended from an antient Family in Staffordshire, Poet Laureat, and Historiographer in the Reign of King William and Queen Mary. Died the 20th Day of November, Anno Dom. 1692, and in the 55th Year of his Age.

John Shadwell, Son of Thomas, Doctor of Physick, in Perpetual Testimony of Filial Duty to his dear Father, hath caused this Monument to be erected.

Prior.

NEXT to the last mentioned, is a stately Marble Monument, erected to the Memory of Mr. Prior, the Poet; the Busto was the Work of a famous Statuary in Paris, named Rigault, and made a Present of by the late French King to Mr. Prior, who ordered it to be set up in the Abbey, and, for this Piece of Posthumous Vanity, as he expressed it in his Will, he left the Sum of Five Hundred Pounds.

VOL. II.

HE died at Wimple, a Seat of the present Earl of Oxford, in Cambridgeshire, from whence he was brought to the Jerusalem Chamber, and buried in this Church.

HE had his Education at Westminster School, and St. John's College in Cambridge, of which he continued Fellow to the Time of his Death.

IN the Year 1690 he was sent Secretary, by King William and Queen Mary, to the Congress of the Allies at the Hague.

IN the Year 1697, in the same Capacity, to the Ambassadors at the Treaty of Ryswick.

HE was afterwards a Commissioner of the Customs; lastly, he was sent by Queen Anne, Plenipotentiary to the French King Lewis XIV. in the Year 1711, to negotiate the Peace afterwards concluded at Utrecht; and while he was designing to write a History of his own Time, a Fever creeping on him by Degrees, broke both the Thread of his Life and his Work.

Sept. 18. Anno Dom. 1721.

Ætat. 57.

ON the Right Hand of Mr. Prior's, and in a Line with Mr. Shadwell's Monument, is a very neat Table Monument, with his Busto, erected to the Memory of Monsieur St. Evremond, a Gentleman of a very gay Turn of Humour as well as Writing. He was a perfect Master of what the French call the Belles Lettres, as appears by his Writings. He had a very great Value for the Dutcheſs of Mazarin, with whom he kept an Intimacy to the last. He lived to a great Age, and preserved his Humour and Intellects to the last. He fell ill of a violent Fit of the Stranguary, to which he had been long addicted, together with the Loss of his Stomach; whereupon he settled his worldly Affairs, in order to leave it, and made his Will on the 24th of August, Anno Dom. 1703; wherein was one Legacy worth Remark, which is here set down with the Preamble:

"I under-sign'd Charles de St. Dennis le Guast, Lord of St. Evremond, of the Parish of James Westminster, being in Sound Mind, of Memory and Understanding, and willing to dispose of such Goods as I shall be possessed of at my Death: In the first Place, I implore God Almighty's Mercy, and surrender my Soul into his Hands. I leave to the Executor of this my last Will, the Care of burying my Body, without Pomp, in such Manner as he shall think most fitting. I bequeath to the poor French Refugees the Sum of twenty Pounds Sterling. I also bequeath to the poor Roman Catholicks, or of any other Religion, the like Sum of twenty Pounds Sterling, &c." He died the 9th of September; the Latin Inscription on his Monument is thus Englisch'd:

CHARLES de St. DENNIS, Lord of St. Evremond, Descended from a noble Family in Normandy; Who, when young, apply'd himself to Military Affairs, And, by several meritorious Advances, was preferr'd to be Marshal in the Army, Where he more than once gave Proofs of his Probity and Courage

With Conde, Turenne, and other famous Generals. At length, leaving his Country, he came into Holland, And was from thence invited into England by King Charles the Second. He very happily cultivated Philosophy, and the usual Parts of Learning;

He polished, adorned, and enriched the French Language, By his Writings both in Prose and Verse. He deservedly gain'd Favour and Bounty of the Kings of England,

And the Esteem and Friendship of the Nobility. And having reach'd beyond his 90th Year of Age, he dy'd the 9th of September 1703.

That this ingenious Man may be remembered Among the best Writers of his Age, His Friends (concern'd at his Loss,) Have plac'd this Monument.

NEXT

NEAR the Corner of St. Blase's Chapel, on the West Side of the South Cross, was buried William Bedel, and Cecilia his Wife; over whose Grave upon a Brass Plate remaining in Weaver's Time, was this Epitaph:

In English thus:

Here lies William Bedel, Esq; and Cicily his Wife, Daughter and Heir of Sir Robert Green, Knt. and also Heir of Sir John Cley, Kt. which William was Treasurer of the Household to the excellent Princess Margaret, late Countess of Richmond and Derby, Mother of K. Henry VII. and also Treasurer of the Household to the Reverend Father in God, and Chancellor of this Kingdom, and Priest-Cardinal of the Holy Roman Church by Title of St. Cecilia; which William died the 3d of July 1518.

Rowe.

In this South Cross lies buried, without any Monument yet erected to his Memory, Mr. Nicholas Rowe, who was late Poet Laureat. He has written several Plays which have pleased the Town, and finished, not long before his Death, a Translation of Lucan's Pharsalia.

Drayton.

OVER-AGAINST Mr. Prior's Monument, is one of blue Marble, erected to the Memory of Mr. Drayton, with this Inscription in Letters of Gold, but now faded:

Michael Draiton, Esq; a memorable Poet of this Age, Exchanged his Laurell for a Crown of Glory, Ann. 1631.
Oe, pious Marble, let thy Readers knowe,
What they, and what their Children owe.
To Draiton's Name, whose sacred Dust
We recommend unto thy Trust.
Protect his Mem'ry, and preserve his Storye, Remaine a lasting Monument of his Glorie;
And when thy Ruines shall disclaime
To be the Treas'rer of his Name;
His Name, that cannot fade, shall be An everlasting Monument to thee.

THIS Gentleman was no indifferent Poet in his Time, and his Compositions have some Beauties in them which might become the best of our modern Writers. He was a Man much versed in our English History, as well as the Antiquities of our Country. The first appears by his Epistles and Legends; and the latter by his Polybion, which the learned Selden thought worthy his Comment.

NEXT adjoining to Mr. Drayton's, and between that and Chaucer's Monument, is a curious Cenotaph of white Marble, to the Memory of Mr. John Phillips, on which is a Bust in Relieve, having on one Side a Lawrel, and on the other an Apple-Tree weaving an Arbour over it, and on a Scroll at the Top, this Motto, Honos erit huic quoque pomo; which Quotation from Virgil, is not only a Compliment to the Place of his Birth, that brave County Herefordshire, but also to his Writing an excellent Poem on Cyder; not to the Honour of that County only, but of all England in general, to which Book this Motto was prefixed. This Gentleman wrote but few Pieces; and prodigious it is to think those few could be so correct and finished in the too few Years of his Life. In his Blenheim he has shewn us what a riper Age could have performed in the Epick Way. His Cyder, though it is not properly a Georgick, is something as good, and the very best of its Kind, since Virgil wrote in that Manner. And that he was a perfect Master of Horace, and had the very Soul of him, in the Lyrick Way, appears by his Ode to my Lord Bolingbroke, on Tobacco. The Splendid Shilling is intirely his own, and one of the best Pieces, excepting only Milton's Paradise Lost, that ever was wrote in English Blank Verse. This Gentleman bid fair for obliging the Age with many Excellencies, but that Hope was destroyed by an immature Death. He died at Hereford, and was there buried, as is said, in the following Inscription, upon his Cenotaph in this Church:

Mr. John Phillips.

In the Church of Hereford lies the Body;
In this is erected the Effigies,
And through all Britain is spread the Fame
of JOHN PHILIPS,
Who, esteemed alike by all good and learned Men,
His immortal Wit, (cultivated with various Kinds of Learning,)
Adorn'd and embellish'd
With extraordinary Candour of Mind,
And Plainness and Sincerity of Manners.
That early Thirst of Learning,
Which (when a Boy) seized him at Winchester,
He continually gratified while a Student at Christ Church;
In which Seat of the Muses,
Fir'd by the curious Performances of his Collegians,
And intently familiar with the best of Authors,
He attempted Poetry in the English Language,
Happily drawn from the Greek and Latin Springs,
And well worthy an Attick or Roman Ear.
The Jingle in Verse in Rhyme he gave up,
For that antient, free, and various Manner,
Suited and attemper'd to Things themselves,
Not always returning in the same Round of Measure,
Nor meeting in the same Close of Sound.
In this single Instance of Fame he was second to Milton,
But in the first, equal to him.
Whenever he undertook to embellish any Subjects,
Whether they were low, lofty, or mid'ling,
He both discovered and imitated,
Whatever was beautiful in others.
To whatever Subject he adapted his Style,
He was just in his Expression, and curiously inventive of Words;
O Chaucer, Father and Founder of English Poetry.
Suffer this, tho' a bold Deviator from thy antient Law of Rhyme;
A Place adjoining to thee.
For surely it will not misbecome thy Dust,
To be encircled by a Chorus of Bards every where around thee;
Simon Harcourt, Knight,
Who, (in regard he was valuable both for Character and Writings.)
Was whilst living, his Encourager,
After his Death, in respectful Remembrance of him,
Hath erected this Monument.

J. Philips, Son of Stephen Philips, D. D. Archdeacon of Salop, was born at Brampton in Oxfordshire, Dec. 30, 1676, died at Hereford, February 15, 1708.

ADJOINING to this of Mr. Philips, is an antient Monument of grey Marble in the Wall, erected to the Memory of the Father of our English Poets, Jeffrey Chaucer, who was born in LONDON, in the Year 1328. His Father was Sir John Chaucer, employed in foreign Affairs by Edward III. Our Poet was first brought up at Cambridge, then at Merton in Oxford; hence he studied the Law in the Middle-Temple. After this, he grew a Favourite at Court, was Valet to the King, and Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber; afterwards Shield-Bearer to the King; then Master or Comptroller of the Customs of LONDON, and Ambassador to Genoa; and lastly, lastly, to Monstreuil. He was a great Favourite of this Prince, who granted him many Pensions and Favours. In the Time of King Richard II. he fled for High Treason; but was taken, and committed to the Tower; where he wrote his Testament of Love. He and the Duke of Lancaster; John of Gaunt; marrying two Sisters, the Daughters of one Payne Roet, he grew a great Favourite with Hen. IV. but died at LONDON in the 2d Year of his Reign, aged 72 Years, and was buried before the Chapel of St. Bennet, where his Stone of broad grey Marble was not long since remaining; but was taken up when Mr. Dryden's Monument was erected, and sawed to mend the Pavement. Upon the corner Pillar of St. Bennet's Chapel hung antiently a leaden Plate, with his Epitaph, written by Surigoniis; a Poet of Milan, printed before his Works. This was all the Monument Chaucer had till about the Year 1555. Mr. Nicholas Brigham erected this in a convenient Place, as near his Grave as he could, on which was formerly painted his Picture in a Blank on the North Side the Epitaph, but now quite defaced. It was exactly like the Painting of Ocklese, printed before the old Edition, and was remaining in Mr. Asmole's Time, who in one of his Treatises has given us the Monument. It is likewise expressed in the same Manner before the new Edition of his Works. There was formerly round the Verge of the Tomb these Verses :

Si rogitas quis eram forsan te fama docebit,
Quod si fama neget mundi quia gloria transit,
Hæc monumenta lege.

ON the Inside of the Tomb was his Arms, now gone, but the same are painted over it under the Arch of the Church. The Latin Epitaph is but short, and signifies: That Geoffry Chaucer, who was formerly the chief Poet in England, lies buried there, and that he died October 25, in the Year 1400.

Death is the Repose of the Weary.

Nicholas Brigham, a Lover of the Muses, erected this 1556.

ADJOINING to Chaucer's is Mr. Cowley's Monument, of white Marble, with the Epitaph, Abraham Cowley, &c. In English thus :

Cowley.

Near this Place lies

ABRAHAM COWLEY,

The Pindar, Horace, and Virgil of England, And the Delight, Ornament, and Favourite of his Age.

While sacred Bard far Worlds thy Works proclaim,

And you survive in an immortal Fame :

Here may you blest'd in pleasing Quiet lie,

To guard thy Urn may hoary Faith stand by ;

And all thy favourite tuneful Nine repair,

To watch thy Dust with a perpetual Care.

Sacred for ever may this Place be made,

And may no desperate Hand presume t' invade.

With Touch unhallow'd, this religious Room,
Or dare affront thy venerable Tomb :

Unmov'd and undisturb'd, till Time shall end,

May Cowley's Dust this Marble Shrine defend.

" So wishes, and desires that Wish may be sacred to Posterity, George Duke of Buckingham, who erected this Marble Monument for that incomparable Man. He dyed in the 49th Year of his Age, and was carried from Buckingham-House with honourable Pomp ; his

" Exequies being attended by Persons of illustrious Character of all Degrees, and buried the 3d of August, Anno Dom. 1667.

ON the Pavement before the Monument is a large blue Stone, thus engraved :

ABRAHAMUS COWLEIUS, H. S. E. 1667.

ON a Table Monument, adjoining to St. Benedict's Chapel, placed high on a Pillar, is a Latin Inscription, thus Englished :

Sacred to the Memory of

MARTHA BIRCH,

The Daughter of Samuel Viner, Esq;

She was first married to Francis Millington, Esq;

Afterwards to Peter Birch, a Prebendary

Of this Church.

She was religious, modest, and prudent.

The best of Wives to both her Husbands.

She died the 25th of May 1703,

Aged 50 Years.

NEXT to Mr. Cowley's Monument, and fronting the Chapel of St. Benedict, towards the South Cross, being inclosed with a Ballister, and Wings of Iron Rails, the Breadth of the Chapel, is a Monument of Marble erected to Dryden, plain, majestick, and just, equal to the great Imagination of the Patron who erected it, and the Merits of the Poet whose Name it bears.

Dryden,

J. DRYDEN.

Born 1632. Died May 1, 1700.

John Sheffield, Duke of Buckinghamshire;

Erected this Monument 1720.

Mr. Dryden was by Descent a Gentleman of a good Family in Northamptonshire; and born, as he himself says, in a Village belonging to the late Earl of Exeter in that County. He had his Education at Westminster School (being King's Scholar there) under the learned Dr. Busby; and in the Year 1650, he was elected from thence to Trinity College in Cambridge, where he pursued his Studies, with his worthy Friend Sir William Bowyer of Denham Court.

Mr. Congreve speaks thus of Mr. Dryden's Writings :

" As to Mr. Dryden's Writings, I shall not take upon me to speak of them; for to say little of them, would not be to do them Right; and to say all that I ought to say, would be very voluminous. But I may venture to say in general Terms, that no Man hath written in our Language so much and so various Matter, and in so various Manners, so well. Another Thing I may say was very peculiar to him; which is, that his Parts did not decline with his Years: But that he was an improving Writer to his last, even to near 70 Years of Age; improving even in Fire and Imagination, as well as in Judgement; witness his Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, and his Fables, his last Performances.

" He was equally excellent in Verse and Prose: His Prose had all the Clearness imaginable, together with all the Nobleness of Expression, all the Graces and Ornaments proper and peculiar to it, without deviating into the Language or Diction of Poetry. I make this Observation only to distinguish his Style from that of many Poetical Writers, who meaning to write harmoniously in Prose, do in Truth often write meer Blank Verse.

" His

" His Versification and his Numbers he could " learn of no Body; for he first possessed those " Talents of Perfection in our Tongue; and they " who have best succeeded in them since his " Time, have been indebted to his Example;
 " and the more they have been able to imitate
 " him, the better have they succeeded.

" As his Stile in Prose is always specifically " different from his Stile in Poetry, so on the " other hand, in his Poems, his Diction is, where-" ever his Subject requires it, so sublime, and " so truly Poetical, that its Essence, like that of " pure Gold, cannot be destroy'd. Take his " Verses, and divest them of their Rhimes, dis" joint them in their Numbers, transpose their " Expressions, make what Arrangement and Dis" position you please of his Words, yet shall
 " there eternally be Poetry, and something which " will be found incapable of being resolved into
 " absolute Prose; an incontestable Character" istic of a truly Poetical Genius.

" I will say but one more Word in general of " his Writings; which is, that what he has done
 " in any one Species, or distinct Kind, would " have been sufficient to have acquir'd him a " great Name: If he had written nothing but " his Prefaces, or nothing but his Songs, or his
 " Prologues, each of them would have intitled
 " him to the Preference and Distinction of ex" celling in his Kind.

ON this Side the South Cross, and not far from this Place, was buried one Sir John de Shorditch; of which Name there were two; the first a Man of Character in the Time of King Henry III. by whom he was sent Ambassador to Rome; the second in like Favour with King Ed- ward III. by whom he was sent Ambassador to France, and was the Man who vindicated to the French King his Master's bearing the English Pards in his Arms before the French Lillies. If what the Historians of this Church say, is true, that Helena his Wife lies buried here, it should seem to be the latter; for he and Helena, in the 14th of King Edward III. granted to one Cros- tone, their Chaplain, certain Lands in Hackney, where he had a Seat call'd Shorditch Place, now,
 by the ignorant People, Jane Shore's House.
 But then, if it is the latter, it seems strange that Fleet mentions Abbot Curlington's being buried near the Tomb of this Knight, when he died in 1331, in the 7th of King Edward III. And this was in the French Wars in the 14th, when he made the aforesaid Assignment. If it is urged, that was a Tomb of Distinction, and Fleet took it as a Mark for the Place, he had no Need, the Abbot's Tomb bearing his Image, and an Inscription. To which of them this Tomb belonged, there are no Remains of it at this Time, unless that plain Grey Stone between Hauke and Dryden, be it: But the antient Account of its Place was in the South Cross, before the Altar of St. Benedict, under a Lamp there burning, near the Door.

ON the Pavements before Mr. Dryden's Monument, as far as the Pillar of the Cross, is an antient Stone of grey Marble, on which, by the Marks, has been an Image of a Man in Armour, but the Plates are torn off. Under this lies the Body of one John Hauke, who was a Soldier in King Edward III's Army; and having at the Battle of Nazers in Spain, together with one Schakel, taken the Earl of Dene Prisoner, he delivered his Son as Surety. Upon their coming to England, the Duke of Lancaster demanded him for the King, who would give them little or nothing for him: Upon denying which, they were thrown into the Tower; but escaping thence took Sanctuary here, whither Sir Ralph Ferreris and Sir Alan Buxhal, Captain of the Tower, (or as others say; the Lord Latimer; for all of them who were Creatures of the Duke, respected the Church no more than their Master,) with 50 Men armed came, and having wiled Schakel out of the Bounds, they attempted to seize Hauke, who stoutly resisted them, but at length was slain in the Choir, before the Prior's Stall, not in the Chancel, as Weaver says, commending him to God, the Avenger of Wrong: They slew a Servant of the Abbey, who pleaded for him, upon Account of Church-Privilege. This was on the 11th of August, 1378.

FRONTING the South Cross, and erected against the Outside Wainscot of the Choir are two stately Monuments of Marble, to the Memory of two very excellent Men: The first is Dr. Busby, whose Epitaph has been thus rendered in English:

See! underneath lies

The Image of BUSBY:

Such as he appeared to human Eyes:

If you desire to see,

That part of him more deeply impress'd in their Minds, Dr. Busby

Thoughtfully survey the shining Characters

Of both Universities, and the Law,

And the leading and principal Men,

In the Court, the Parliament, and the Church.

When you have view'd around,

Such a full sown and plenteous Harvest of ingenious Men;

Only consider what must he have been who sow'd it.

This must be he, who the natural Genius in every one

Nicely discover'd,

Usefully managed,

And happily improved.

This he,

Who, by his Instructions, so form'd and nourish'd

The Minds of Youth,

That they learn'd to grow wise, as they learn'd Language;

And while they were educated as Boys,

They improved as Men.

As many as taught by him,

Appeared in Publick,

So many faithful and strenuous Asserters were rais'd

To the Monarchy and Church of England,

Lastly, whatsoever Fame

The School of Westminster boasts,

And whatever Advantages Mankind shall reap from thence;

Is principally owing to Busby,

And will be owing to him in all Ages.

So useful a Member of the Commonwealth,

God was pleas'd to bless with Length of Days,

And Encrease of Riches.

And in Return, he chearfully devoted himself and his

For the Promotion of Piety,

To relieve the Poor,

To encourage Learning,

To repair Churches.

These were his Ways of enjoying Wealth;

And what he did not employ in Life-Time to this Purpose,

He bequeathed at his Death.

ON the Pedestal :

Richard Busby, of the County of Lincoln, D. D.
Born at Lutton 1606, Sept. 22.
Made Master of Westmin. Coll. 1640, Dec. 23.
Elected { Prebend of Westminster } A. D. 1660. { July 5. and { Treasurer of Wells, } { Aug. 11.
Died 1695, April 5.

THE other is to the Memory of Dr. South,
the Inscription on which is thus Englified :

Not far from this Monument.

ROBERT SOUTH, D. D.

Gave Orders his Ashes should rest near those of his Master Busby :

A Man of Learning, Piety, and Simplicity of Manners.

He was Scholar of Westminster School, then Student of Christ Church ;

And after the Restauration of King Charles, by the Interest of my Lord Clarendon,

Prebendary of both Colleges where he was educated :

A firm and indefatigable Champion for the Church,
In her flourishing and afflicted State.

A stout Asserter of the Christian Faith.

Excellent in his Sermons for a new Method entirely his own,

But illustrious and admirable ;

Infomuch that, vers'd in all these Qualities, there is no room to doubt,

Whether he was most excellent

In his fine Turn of Thought, or Force of Argument,
The Richness of his Doctrine, or the Beauty and Weight of his Language.

With these Assistances, being undoubtedly at the same Time possess'd,

He not only gained upon the Souls of his Audience, but inflamed and moved them.

In orthodox Divinity, as well as human Learning,
he was scarce equall'd ;

And, at the same Time, familiar with the School-
Men,

Out of whom he made use of whatever was wholesome and nourishing.

And having reliev'd it from their nice and intricate-Distinctions.

And Cloud and Jargon of Words,

He set it off in fine Language.

If at any Time he was severe in his exposing the Vices of Men or the Times,

It ought not to be ascribed to Party or ill Nature,
For in all these Cases he openly expressed,

What he had before deliberately weigh'd in his Mind :

And, being well assured of his own Innocence,

He, warm'd with a generous Indignation,

Exposed whatever was base in Life, or superficial or affected in Religion.

Intent on these Studies, and his Mind working that Way,

When he was more secluded from Men in his Conversation,

He was not wanting to them in his Assistance :

How munificent, how pitiful he was in his Temper, to those in Distress,

Is evident from his extended Charity when living, and Legacies at his Death.

Upon the Pedestal :

He was Rector of Ilip, where he rebuilt the Rectory,

And founded and endowed a School for the Education of poor Children :

An Encourager of Learning both at this Place and Christ Church :

VOL. II.

For enlarging the Buildings of which College, he left by
His Will the Sum of one thousand Pounds, three hundred

Of which to be paid in one Year after his Decease ;

Lasting Monuments of his Piety to God, and Beneficence towards Men.

He died the 8th of July, A. D. 1716,
Aged 82 Years.

ADJOINING to this Tomb is the Opening of the Area leading to the several Chapels, enclosed with fine Pallisades of Iron, where Persons attend to explain and shew the Tombs. Of which Chapels, the first is that of St. Benedict :
In order to enter which, we must go to the South Side of Mr. Dryden's Monument, where is a Door made in the Iron Rails adjoining to his Tomb, and which with that, separates this Chapel from the South Cross: This is called by some the Dean's Chapel, because the two first Deans of this Church were buried here.

ON the North Side of this Chapel, and adjoining to the Area, is a very handsome antient Tomb of Free-stone, railed round with Iron, and a Canopy of Wood, almost broke away at the Coronation of King George I. on which lies the Image of a Bishop in his Habit : This was erected to the Memory of Simon de Langham, a great Benefactor to this Church, in which he was brought up, being a Monk of this House, and afterwards Prior; and lastly Abbot; then Bishop of Ely, London, and lastly, Archbishop of Canterbury : He was likewise Archdeacon and Treasurer of Wells, which he held in commendam.
He was immensely rich, which, whether he acquired by the many Places he held, for he was both Treasurer and Chancellor of England; or whether from Oppression, which he was charged with when Bishop, is doubtful; but that he was reflected upon for the latter, is plain from this Distich made on his being removed from Ely to Canterbury.

Letentur Celi quia Simon transit ab Ely, Cujus in adventum flet in Kent millia centum.

AFTER having sat Archbishop two Years, he was made Cardinal of St. Sixtus by Pope Urban V.
whereupon he went to Avignon, where he founded a House of Carthusians; and being made Bishop-Cardinal of Præneste by Pope Gregory XI.
he lived there eight Years, and died of a Palsy;
with which he was seized at Dinner, on the 22d of July, 1376, and was buried in the Church of the Carthusians, there, whence being removed three Years after, as himself had appointed, his Bones were brought here, and buried. The Epitaph round his Tomb, on a Brass Ledge, is now in a great Measure torn away; but when entire, was thus: Hic jacet Dominus Simon de Langham quondam Abbas hujus loci, Thesaurarius Angliæ electus London. ep. Elien. Cancellar. Angliæ Ar-chiep. Cantuar. Presbyter Cardinalis, & postea Cardinalis ep. Prænestin.

THERE was, says Weaver, an Epitaph in Verse; (though there are now no Remains of it at his Tomb) signifying, " That he was Monk, Prior,
" and Abbot here; then Bishop of London and
" Ely; Primate and Chancellor of England;
" Priest, Cardinal, afterwards Bishop-Cardinal " of Præneste, and Nuncio from the Pope; and " that he died on the Feast of St. Mary Mag" dalen, in the Year 1376; on whose Soul God
" have Mercy, and grant him the Joys of Hea" ven, for the Merits of his Mother.

IN the Midst of this Chapel is a stately and curious Monument of Black and White Marble;

on which are two Images in a cumbent Posture, representing an antient Nobleman in his Robes, with his Lady. This Monument was erected to the Memory of Lionel Cranfield, Earl of Middlesex, by his Relict the Lady Anne, as appears by the Inscription thus translated :

“ Sacred to the Memory of “ LIONEL Lord CRANFIELD, Earl of “ Middlesex, who by that discerning Prince King “ James I. being called to attend the Court,
 “ was for his excellent Parts and Wit, bounti“ fully rewarded both with Honours and Profit;
 “ Master of the Requests, Wardrobe, President “ of the Court of Wards, and Privy Counsellor.
 “ The New and Illustrious, as well as difficult “ Province of Lord Treasurer of England he “ filled; which Service, how indefatigably he “ underwent; his Titles of Knight, Baron “ Cranfield, and lastly, Earl of Middlesex, with “ various other Honours, abundantly testify.
 “ From hence Envy swelling, all its Efforts were “ made to raise Storms against him. Whilst he “ briskly standing on his Guard, encouraged by “ his Assurance of Innocence, was shamefully “ tossed about; and barely escaping Shipwreck, “ in a composed Winter cast Anchor; and spent
 “ and finish'd his Life in a retired Leisure; here “ lying concealed, being whilst weary'd out “ first, and wasted afterwards, this Pilot was “ roused up to undertake a safer Voyage; and “ made the Port of Heaven. He died the 6th “ of August, Anno Dom. 1645, about seventy “ Years of Age.

“ He had two Wives, both which brought “ him Issue. Elizabeth, the first, bare him “ Daughters, Elizabeth, now Countess of Mul- “ grave, Martha, Countess of Monmouth, and “ Mary, who died before Marriage. His other “ Wife surviving, Anne, now Countess of Middle- “ sex, and who, when God shall please, is to be “ buried in this Tomb, on which is placed her “ Effigies, bare him James, Heir to the Honour, “ and Earl of Middlesex, Lionel and Edward,
 “ now living; and of the other Sex, Frances “ Lady Buckhurst, and Susanna, who died an “ Infant the 25th of June, 1647.

NEAR Simon de Langham's Tomb, and on the Backside of Mr. Dryden's Monument, is raised about a Foot and a half from the Ground, on which is engraved on a Brass Plate, the Image of an antient Man, in a Doctor's Habit, and four Escutcheons, of which one is torn from it. This was erected to the Memory of Dr. William Bill, round which is an Inscription upon a Brass Ledge, as follows:

“ Here lies William Bill, D. D. Dean of West“ minster, President of Eaton College, and Head “ of Trinity in Cambridge, and Chief Almoner “ to the Most Serene Princess Queen Eliza- “ beth. He died the 15th of July, Anno Do“ mini 1561.

ON the South Side of this Chapel, and under the Arch adjoining to Dr. Goodman's, is a neat Table Monument of white Marble affixed to the Wall, signifying, That George Sprat, Son to the late Lord Bishop of Rockester, lies there. The Epitaph is as follows: H. S. E. Georgius Sprat, &c.

Here lies GEORGE SPRAT.
 Second Son to the Reverend Thomas Sprat, D. D.
 And Dean of this Church, and of Helena his Wife, Descended of the antient and honourable Family
 Of the Wolfleys
 In Staffordshire;

Born the 8th of the Ides of October, 1682.
 And died on the Kalends of October, 1683.
 Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven!

ON the East Side of this Chapel, in that very Place where once stood the Altar of St. Benedict, is erected a stately Monument of various Kinds of Marble, on which, in a cumbent Posture, is the Statue of a Lady in her Robes, her Feet supported by a Lion. This Monument was erected to the Memory of the Lady Frances, Countess of Hertford, upon which are the following Inscriptions:

“ Here lies intombed the noble Frances, Coun“ tress of Hertford, dear Spouse unto the noble “ Edward, Earl of Hertford, and Baron Beau- “ champ, Son to the renowned Prince Edward, “ Duke of Somerset, Earl of Hertford, Viscount “ Beauchamp, and Baron Seymour,

“ A Lady descended of a right noble Lineage, “ being Daughter of the noble Lord William, “ Baron Howard of Effingham, Companion of “ the most famous Order of the Garter, High “ Admiral to Queen Mary, and Lord Chamber“ lain of the Household, and Lord Privy Seal to “ Queen Elizabeth. He was Son to the right “ noble Prince Thomas, Duke of Norfolk and “ Earl of Surrey, Earl Marshal of England, and “ Father to the noble Charles, Earl of Notting- “ ham and Baron of Effingham, of the said most “ noble Order of the Garter, Knight, and Lord “ High Admiral of England.

“ This Lady, highly renowned for her many “ virtuous Gifts and Graces both of Mind and “ Body, greatly favoured by her gracious Sove“ reign, and dearly beloved of her Lord, after “ long Sickness, in firm Faith in Christ, and con“ stant Patience, departed this Life at forty “ four Years of Age, the 14th Day of May, Anno “ Dom. 1598, in the fortieth Year of the most “ happy Reign of our most gracious Sovereign “ Lady Queen Elizabeth, to whose Memory the “ said Earl, her loving Lord and Husband, much “ lamenting her Death, in Testification of his “ great Love towards her, and of his careful Di“ ligence in this doleful Duty, doth consecrate
 “ this Monument.

ON the South Side of this Chapel is a Monument affixed to the Wall, whereon is represented an antient Clergyman kneeling. This was erected to Dr. Gabriel Goodman, Dean of Westminster; the Inscription informs us, that he was fifth Dean of this Church, which he governed with great Applause for the Term of forty Years; that he founded an Hospital at Ruthen in Denbighshire, where he was born, and endowed a School there (viz. in the Year 1595;) a Man of regular and devout Life, and beloved of all good Men. He set out for his heavenly Country on the 17th Day of June, A. D. 1601, aged 70 Years. He was a great Friend to Mr. Camden, who calls him Patron of his Studies, and made him second Master of Westminster School. He likewise defrayed Mr. Camden's Expences in some of his Journeys after Antiquity.

BEFORE we take Leave of this Chapel of St. Benedict, it is proper to mention what Persons lie there without Inscriptions, viz. Catharine Daughter to Dr. Dolben, Lord Bishop of Rockester; a Countess of Kildare in Ireland; and a nameless Archbishop of St. Andrew's.

LEAVING this Chapel, and going to the Area, there is affixed in the Wall, between the two Chapels, a Monument of Mosaick Work, the Sides in the plain Pannels, but the Top of the Table wrought in Figures, said to be done with the same Stones as the Floor before the Altar.

This

This Monument was erected for three of the Children of King Henry III. viz.

Richard, his third Son, who derived his Name from his Uncle Richard, King of the Romans and Almain, who died an Infant.

John, the fourth Son of the said King, who died likewise an Infant,

Henry, his sixth Son; who likewise died in his Infancy.

Catharine, youngest Daughter to the before-mentioned Prince, who was born Anno 1253, at LONDON, on the 25th of November, being St. Catharine's Day, whence she had her Name given her by Boniface, Archbishop of Canterbury, her great Uncle, who stood her Godfather. She died before the 5th Year of her Age, and was here buried. Over this Tomb is something which seems to have been a Piece of Church-Perspective, but scratched, and almost entirely defaced. And there is no Doubt but the Tomb itself was formerly a rich and curious Piece of Work; for it appears by the Records in the Tower, that at the Time of his Daughter Catharine's Death, viz. 1257, the King ordered a sumptuous Monument to be here erected to her, and gave Orders to his Treasurer, and Chamberlains of the Treasury, to deliver to Master Simon de Wells five Marks and a Half, for his Expences in going to LONDON for a certain Brass Image to set upon her Tomb, returning home again. And upon this Tomb was likewise placed a Silver Image, for which William de Glocester, the King's Goldsmith, was paid seventy Marks. In this Place likewise are said to be buried four Children of King Edward I. viz.

John, his eldest Son, who died whilst under the Care of Richard, King of the Romans, during his Father's Voyage into Syria; Henry the second Son, who died young; and Alphonfus, eldest Son, according to the Annals of Weaverly; but by Sandford, said to be his third, born at Maine in Gascoigne, in November, Anno 1275, on the Vigils of St. Catharine, who, as before mentioned, offered a Crown and Jewels at St. Edward's Shrine. He died in the eleventh Year of his Age, according to some; to others, before the tenth, on the 14th of the Kalends of September, viz. on the 19th Day of August, being Sunday, Anno Dom. 1284, and was buried near the Feretry of St. Edward, by the Archbishop of Canterbury, on the Sunday after St. Bartholomew.

Eleanor, sixteenth Child of the aforesaid King, and his only Daughter by Queen Margaret, his second Wife, who died an Infant. Mr. Strype says, that of the Children of King Henry III. and King Edward I. there were ten; yet he enumerates but seven; and perhaps there were no more: To make up which, we may add Berenger his fourth, or Alice his fifth Daughter, who both died Infants. He tells us likewise, they were buried in St. Thomas's Chapel; but where that was is uncertain. These Children were buried in several Places on this Side the Area, which lay open to St. Edward's Shrine, before they erected their Tombs in this Chapel.

LEAVING the Chapel of St. Benedict, the next to it, in the Area, is that of St. Edmond; at entering which, on the left Hand Side of the Door, is an antient Monument of White Stone, with Gothick Spires, on which is the Image of an Armed Knight, of White Alabaster, erected to the Memory of John of Eltham. The Head of the Statue is encompassed with a Coronet of greater and less Leaves, and is the first of that Kind known, they usually being represented with a Circle only as Valence before-mentioned, and Lacy Earl of Lincoln, who lay some Time in St. Paul's. This John of Eltham was second Son to King Edward III. and so called from Eltham in Kent, where our English Kings had some Time a Seat, in which he was born on Ascension-Day, Anno 1315. In the Year 1328, the second of the Reign of King Edward III. his Brother, he was, in a Parliament held at Salisbury, created Earl of Cornwall; the Year following; was Custos of the Kingdom, and King's Lieutenant, while he went beyond Seas. In the Year 1333 Proposals of Marriage were made between him and Joan, Daughter of Ralph Earl of Eu; in the following Year with Mary, Daughter of the Count of Blois; neither of which being concluded, a Third was moved for Mary, Daughter of Ferdinand King of Spain; for which an Agreement was drawn up; but he lived not to consummate it: For the Month following, being in Scotland at St. John's Town, he died in October 1334, at his nineteenth Year of Age. From whence being brought up; he was solemnly interred in this Abbey, in St. Edmond's Chapel; on the South Side of the Choir; which Funeral was so stately and magnificent, that the Prior and Convent of this Church demanded one hundred Pounds, (a vast Sum in those Days) for Horse and Armour offered there upon the Day of his Burial.

Not far from this Monument, is a small one rais'd about two Feet from the Floor, on which are two small Images, as here expressed, said, by some of the Writers of this Church, to be Children of King Edward II. but, by Mistake, for King Edward III. in the Dress of which Time they appear, the Girl having a horned Head-dress, like the Statue of her Mother Queen Philippa (of which frightful Dress, Stow tells us, great Complaint was made); and the short Doublet of the Boy, (an Indecency of Dress then common) which Chaucer's Parson complains of. The Names of the Children were as follows, viz.

William of Windsor, so called from the Place of his Birth, sixth Son of King Edward III. died a Youth, being no otherwise mentioned in History, than that he was buried in a little Tomb of Free-stone in St. Edmond's Chapel in Westminster.

THE other Blanch de la Tour, so called from being born in the Tower of LONDON, and the Name of her Brother's Wife, the Dutches of Lancaster. She died also an Infant, An. 1340. There was a Fillet of Brass round this Tomb with an Epitaph upon it, but now torn away. The Statues of these Children were in like Form placed in Niches among others on the North Side of their Father's Tomb in this Church; the Niches are, and the Arms under them, still remaining.

NEAR this Tomb is another raised from the Floor about three Feet high, on which is the Effigy of a Lady in Robes, representing the Dutches of Suffolk. This Lady was a Daughter of Charles Brandon, the fine and gay Duke of Suffolk, by Mary the French Queen, Daughter to King Henry VII. who is said to fall in Love, seeing him at a Tournament; and after the Death of Lewis XII. which was in three Months Time from their Marriage, came over into England, and wedded him. This their Daughter Frances was twice married, first to Henry Grey, Marquis of Dorset, afterwards created Duke of Suffolk, who was beheaded on Tower-hill the 23d. of February 1554, in the first Year of Queen Mary's Reign: By him she had the Lady Jane Grey, proclaimed Queen of England; but with her Husband the Lord Gilford Dudley, and both their Fathers, the Dukes of Northumberland and Suffolk, beheaded. Her second Daughter Catharine was married to the Lord Herbert, Son to the Earl of Pembroke, and afterwards to Edward Earl

Earl of Hertford. This Lady Frances, after the Execution of her Husband and Daughter, was prosecuted by some of the Ministry for having been a very great Espouser of the Reformation in King Edward VI's Time, even to a Fault, and for dressing a Cat in a Rochet, and ridiculing in that Manner the Order of Episcopacy: But the most dangerous Cause of Resentment she had given, was to Dr. Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, who being in Disgrace, and confined in the Tower in King Edward VI's Time, as the Dutchess went by, pulled off his Cap, and made her a low Bow from his Window: At which she, in a scornful Manner, looking at him, told him, It was well for the Lambs, now the Wolves were shut up. This Indignity he remembered; and she, fearful of the Danger, fled. During which Disgrace, she married one Adrian Stokes, or Stock, a Country Gentleman, and was reduced (says Mr. Fox, who tells a lamentable Tale of her) to that Degree, as to lie all Night in a Church-Porch. She lived private till Queen Elizabeth came to the Crown, and then grew a Favourite with her. The Time of her Death is not on her Tomb; but it should appear, by a Warrant to the Heralds, that it was in December, the second Year of that Queen's Reign: For the Queen, out of the great Love and Regard she had to this Lady, and for that she was lineally descended from King Henry VII. gives Orders to Sir Gilbert Dethick, Knt. Garter, and one Harvey, Clarencieux, to allow of, and enter in their Books, that this Lady and her Posterity should bear an Augmentation of the Arms of England, viz. with a Border Goubony, Gold and Azure; and orders them, at her Funeral, to place it with her Ancestors Arms in Banners, Bannerolls, Lozenges and Scutcheons, &c. These Arms are accordingly quartered on the Monument which was erected to her by her Husband Adrian Stokes.

Not far from this is a curious Monument of white Marble, representing a Youth armed, sitting on a Greek Altar. This was erected to Francis Holles, Son of the Earl of Clare, as appears by the following Inscription:

Whatso thou hast of Nature, or of Arts,
Youth, Beauty, Strength, or what excelling Parts
Of Mind and Body, Letters, Arms, and Worth,
His eighteen Years beyond his Years brought forth;

Then stand and read thyself within this Glass,
How soon these perish, and thyself may pass.
Man's Life is measured by the Work, not Days,
No aged Sloath, but active Youth, hath Praise.

" To the Memory of Francis Holles, a brave
" Youth, (who returning home from making a " Campaign in the Netherlands, died the 12th
" Day of August, in the Year of our Lord's Age
" 1622, and of his own the 18th:) His afflicted
" Father, John Earl of Clare, hath to this his " valued and lamented Son, erected this Monument.

In this Chapel, not far from the aforesaid Statue, and within the Rail of Lord Russel's Tomb, is a curious Monument made after the Manner of an antient Altar, on which is a Figure of white Alabaster, sitting in a Chair of the same. This Monument was erected to the Memory of Elizabeth Russel, (Daughter of the Lord Russel), by her surviving Sister Anne, married to the loyal Marquis of Worcester. The common Tradition of this Church is, that this Lady died with a Prick of her Finger, which is heard with much Concern by the ignorant Spectators; but the same is told of several Monuments resembling this in other Churches. This Story, it is likely, had its Rise from a Posture in which she is placed; which is, with her Finger pointing downwards to a Death's Head, under her Right Foot, upon which she has been contemplating till she is fallen asleep. Which, as it was, no doubt, the curious Design of that ingenious Family, Sir Anthony Cook's, so it signifies, That before her Death, she made Death itself so familiar to her, that her Departure, regular and composed, might properly be called a Sleep; to which the Motto under her Feet alludes:

Dormit, non mortua est.

" She is not dead, but sleepeth.

AND at a lower Distance:

Feliciſſimæ, &c.

" Sacred to the happy Memory of Elizabeth
" Russel her afflicted Sister Anne hath erected
" this Monument.

NEAR this, affixed to the Wall, is a Monument erected to the Memory of the Lady Jane Seymour, with this Inscription:

The noble Lady Jane Seymour, Daughter of the renowned Prince Edward, Duke of Somerset, Earl of Hertforde, Viscount Beauchampe, and Baron Seymour, and the right noble Lady Anne, Dutchesse of Somerset his Wyfe, departed this Lyfe in her Virginitie, at the Age of xix Years, the xix Daie of Marche, A^o. M. cccc lx, in the second Year of the moste happy Raign of Queen Elizabeth, and was honorablie buried in the Floore of this Chapel: To whose Memorie Edward Earl of Hertforde, and Baron Beauchampe, her deare Brother, hath caused this Monument to be made.

NEAR this is another Monument, likewise affixed to the Wall, erected to the Lady Knolles, first Cousin to Queen Elizabeth, Niece to Anna Bullen, Grand-daughter to the Earl of Wiltshire, and Sister to the Lord Hunsdon, of whom hereafter. This Lady was Wife to Francis Knolles, by whom she has a Daughter, Leticia, married to Walter Devereux, Earl of Essex, by whom she had that great Favourite the Earl of Essex.

THE following Inscription on the Front of this Monument,

The Right Honourable Lady Katherin Knollys, cheefe Lady of the Quenes Majesties Bed-Chamber, and Wife to Sir Francis Knollys, Knight, Tresorer of her Highnes Howsholde departed this Lyffe the 15th of January, 1568, at Hampton-Courte, and was honourably buried in the Flower of this Chappell, this Lady Knollys and the Lord Hunsdon, her Brother, were the Children of William Caree, Esquier, and of the Lady Mary his Wiffe, one of the Daughters and Heires to Thomas Bulleyne, Erle of Wylshier and Ormand, which Lady Mary was Sister to Anne, Quene of England, Wyffe to Kinge Henry the Eight, Father and Mother to Elizabeth Quene of England.

NEXT to this is a very stately Monument of coloured Marble and Alabaster, painted and gilt, erected to the Memory of John Lord Russel, Son and Heir to Francis Earl of Bedford, and his Son Francis, an Infant. This John Lord Russel died before his Father, viz. in the Year 1584. He married with Elizabeth, Daughter of Sir Anthony Cook, Knt. of Giddy-Hall, near Rumford in Essex, by whom he had this Francis, who who died an Infant in the Year 1584, and two Daughters, Anne, before-mentioned, and Elizabeth married to the Marquis of Worcester. This Lady Elizabeth, his Wife, was esteemed a Woman of the best Learning in that Age, as were likewise her two Sisters, the Lady Burleigh and another, all of them admirably versed in the Latin and Greek Languages, and excellent Poets. Some of their Verses Dr. Fuller has given us; but we need not go farther for a Specimen than this Tomb, of which the Inscriptions, viz. three in Latin, one in Greek, and another in English, are the Composition of the former; those in Latin and Greek are here translated. This Lady Elizabeth was married first to Sir Thomas Hobby, by whom she had a Son, who has likewise bestowed the last Epitaph on his Father-in-Law.

The English Epitaph :

Right noble twice, by Virtue and by Birth,
Of Heaven lov'd, and honoured on the Earth,
His Country's Hope, his Kindred's chief Delight,
My Husband dear, more than this World's Light, Death hath me rest. But I from Death will take His Memory, to whom this Tomb I make.
John was his Name, (ah was!) Wretch, must I say;
Lord Russell once; now my Tear thirsty Clay.

THE first Latin Inscription is thus translated.

A POEM of an afflicted Mother to her surviving Daughters.

Now weep, my Girls, now make your pious Moan,
Alas! the Glory of your House is gone:
Death, hasty Death, hath seized the Stock that grew,
And flourish'd with a Stem of beauteous Hue,
Your Sire, esteem'd by all, by all desired,
For Learning and for Piety admired.
Then you, his Heirs, be what he was before,
Who shone by Birth, but shone by Virture more.

THE second (being Greek) thus :

The once bright Glory of his House, the Pride
Of all his Country, dusty Ruins hide:
Mourn, hapless Orphans, mourn once happy Wife;
For when he dy'd, dy'd all the Joys of Life.
Pious and just, amidst a large Estate,
He got at once the Name of Good and Great.
He made no flatt'ring Parasite his Guest,
But ask'd the good Companions to his Feast.

THE third thus :

One of the same Lady, on the same Subject in Latin.

How was I startled at the cruel Feast,
By Death's rude Hands, in horrid Manner drest;
Such Grief as sure no hapless Woman knew,
When thy pale Image lay before my View.
Thy Father's Heir in beauteous Form array'd, Like Flowers in Spring, and fair, like them, to fade;
Leaving behind unhappy wretched me,
And all thy little Orphan Progeny:
Alike the beauteous Face, the comely Air,
The Tongue perswasive, and the Actions fair,
Decay; so Learning too in Time shall waste;
But Faith, chaste lovely Faith, shall ever last.

THE fourth thus :

A POEM of the afflicted Lady Elizabeth Russell, on the Death of her Son.

Behold! the Grandfire's Joy, his Sire's Delight!
My very Soul, dire Fate hath clos'd in Night!

N^o 33. VOL. II.

O! that th' Almighty Will before this Day,
From this vain World had taken me away!
But I in vain expostulate with Jove,
Who bids me only seek for Joys above.

THE fifth thus :

On the DEATH of the Hon. the Lord John Russell, an EPICEDUM of his Loving Son-in-Law, Sir Edward Hoby, Knt.

Ah Russell! Death in Sleep hath clos'd thine Eyes;
But thy free Soul, far hence above the Skies,
Expatriates; thoughtful now of Death no more,
Whose virtuous Life hath taken Care before
For such an End: And having yielded Breath, Still lives a glorious Conqueror over Death.
Who and what Man thou wast, thy Race portend,
Thy virtuous Life, and thy lamented End.
Accept this Verse I offer at thy Stone;
You was my Sire in Love, and I your Son.

FRONTING the Entrance into this Chapel, and placed in the Wall under the Window, is an antient Monument representing a Knight in a cumbent Posture, and armed: This was erected for one Sir Bernard Brocas, who was Chamberlain to Anne, Queen of King Richard II. as appears by an Inscription round the Verge of the Tomb.

Hic jacet Bernardus Brocas Miles T. T. quondam Com.

Annæ Reginae Angliæ: cujus animæ propitiatur Deus. Amen.

THIS Sir Bernard Brocas was a faithful Adherer to his deposed Master King Richard II. which cost him his Life; for being concerned in the Conspiracy with the Lord John Holland, and others, at Reading in Berkshire, he took Arms with them; and by the Colour of one Maudeline, Counterfeit King, sought to raise Forces. He was with others taken by the People of Reading, and confined in the Abbey there; whereupon they attempted an Escape, by firing several Houses in the Town: But this, on the contrary, so enraged them, that they drew out, and executed several of them instantly: But this Sir Bernard was reserved for a more publick Execution; for being brought to LONDON, he was beheaded in January, Anno Dom. 1399, and here buried.

AT the Entrance of this Chapel, on the Right Hand, is an antient Monument of Grey Marble, on which is placed a Chest of Wainscot, whereon lies an armed Knight with a deep Shield on his Arm. The Statue is covered with gilt Copper, and had a Fillet of the same round the Head set with Stones, now picked out, but the Sockets remaining; and the Shield, as well as the Surcoat, is enamell'd with small Escutcheons. The Statue is Wood, and the Copper from one of the Feet taken away, and that cut and abused. The Chest, as well as Figure, was formerly plated with Copper, but now there is but a small Shew of it at the Edge; and round it thirty small Images, viz. twelve on each Side, and three at each End, under little Niches of Brass, and at their Feet Escutcheons; but these are now almost gone, with several of the Niches, as is likewise the antient Inscription. This Tomb was erected to William de Valence, Earl of Pembroke. He was Son of the Earl of March, by Isabel, Widow to King John; and being half Brother to King Henry III. was a chief Favourite with that Prince, and had committed to him the chief Management of all Affairs: Cui Rex totius consilii sui habenas commiserat, says Matthew Paris. In the Year 1237, this Valence finding himself hateful to the Barons, left England; and his Lands and Wealth, which, by the King's Bounty, was very great, he committed to one Aaron, a Jew, at York, as a Pawn for 90 Marks of New Sterling; and being thus loaded with Gold, Royal Furniture, Horses, Mares, &c. he set out for Dover, attended by the King and several Courtiers. His Wealth he distributed abroad, and returned empty. About the Year 1239, the King made Interest to get him the Bishoprick of Winchester, afterwards that of Norwich; but being a Man of Blood, the Monks refused him. He was no small Actor against Simon de Mountfort, and the disaffected Barons. This Valence, in the Year 1258, upon some Agreement between the King and Barons, was banished, with his three Brothers, Gaufride, Guydon, and Aymer, with other Strangers. After some Time he was recall'd. Lastly, setting out with Edmund, Earl of Lancaster, his Nephew, to Gascoign, he, after performing many notable Exploits, was slain at Bayon by the French, as says the Epitaph, in 1304. This, according to Harding, was Anno 1296, on the 5th Day of June (however the Epitaph says it was in May) by Means of an Ambushment, which came unawares upon them from an adjoining Wood. His Body was brought over to England, and honourably buried in this Church, with an Inscription, some Time remaining in Saxon Characters, but now torn from it.

For the Prayers of all devout People offered up for the Soul of this Valence at his Tomb, was granted Indulgence for the Term of 100 Days. Before we leave this Tomb, we shall take an Account from Matthew Paris of a great Instance of his arbitrary Power and Oppression in England. This Valence had for his Seat Ely Castle, from whence coming to Town, he forcibly entered the Park of the Bishop of Ely, which was near his Manor of Haethfeld, now Hatfield, and hunted there without the Bishop's Leave. After being tired with his Sport, he went to the Bishop's House, where being thirsty, and finding no Drink but Ale, he broke open the Doors, which were very strong, and barr'd, making great Noise and Tumult, and raging most horribly, swearing, and cursing the Ale, and those who brew'd it; he ordered the Spigots to be pulled out of the Pipes of Wine, consuming great Quantities of the Liquor; and having drank his Fill, distributed it to his Attendants, and gave it about as tho' it were Water, or Small Beer, and beat a Servant of the Bishop's. After they had all got drunk, they never put in the Taps, but went away laughing at their Mischiefs.

ANOTHER Instance he gives of his Tyranny, and of those under him: For at LONDON a certain Squire of his drew his Knife, and swore to wet it in the Blood of the Citizens, wounded some of them without Cause, and back'd his Actions with Threats and Abuses. Upon which the Citizens swarming around him in Heaps, and little heeding his Power, Valentiam (here Matthew puns upon his Master's Name) slew him with Stones, &c. As he was dying, being carried into a neighbouring House, he uttered these Words: For God's Sake, let not this my Death be charged upon any but myself, and my own Folly; for we, relying upon our Master's Power, have basely oppress'd and trampled upon, without any Difference, both the Guilty and Innocent; and so he dy'd. When his Master heard this, he made heavy Complaint to the King; and, to affect him the more, had the dead Corpse brought before him. Upon which the Mayor and Commonalty were sent for, who related the Provocation, and dying Confession of the Man. At hearing whereof, the King made Answer, Let him have his Deserts, a Villain! However, this Valence bore great Revenge to the Citizens, which he not long after put in Execution.

NEXT adjoining to the West Side of Brocas's Tomb is a lofty Monument erected to Sir Rich. Peckfall, Knt. Master of the Buckhounds to Queen Elizabeth. The Inscription on this Monument is as follows:

" To God and future Ages.
" Here rests, expecting the glorious Resur" rection of Christ, Richard Peckfall, Kt. ex" cellent in his Religion and Probity; he mar" ried first Alianor, Daughter of William Paw-
" let, Marquis of Winchester, and Lord Treas-
" surer of England, who bare him four Daugh" ters. His second Wife was Alianor, Daugh" ter of John Cotgrave, and after his Death
" married to Sir John Savage, Kt. of the Coun" ty of Chester; who out of respectful Regard " towards her dear Husband, and in perpetual " Memory of their Marriage Faith, hath, at " her Charge, freely and willingly erected this " Monument.

ON the Basis of the Pillars adorning this Monument are Latin Verses, which are thus translated:

Death can't disjoin whom Christ hath join'd in Love.
Life leads to Death, and Death to Life above.
In Heaven's a happier Place, frail Things despise.
Live well, to gain of future Life the Prize.

ON the Right Hand Side of this Chapel, between this and Valence, is a stately and magnificent Monument, inclosed with a Grate, but great Part of it stolen, erected to the Lord Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, and his Lady, whose Effigies in their Robes, painted and gilt, lie on a black Marble, supported by a Pedestal of Alabaster. The whole Monument is composed of various coloured Marbles, and curious Carving, with its Epitaph, which gives Account of them, and in English thus:

Sacred to the Memory
Of EDWARD of the noble Family of the TALBOTS,
The eighth Earl of Shrewsbury, Westford and Waterford,
Lord Talbot, Earl of Badenbach, Valence, Mont-cheney, Strange de Blackmere, Gifford de Brimesfield, Clifford de Corham, Furnival Verdon and Lovetoft.

A Person every Way equal to his Titles;
Of such sincere, just, and yet obliging Disposition,
That the Greatness of his Dignities took not from him the Honour.

He was no less remarkable for his Descent and Family,

Than for his Piety and Purity of Life;
Nor was he tainted with any of those Vices,
To which great Men are too frequently addicted.

He was honourable without Pride,
Potent without Ostentation,
Religious without Superstition,
Munificent both in his Mind, and with his Hand;
Warded always against Fortune.

His whole Life was a Path of Justice;
And his Innocence escaping Envy.
Continued thro' the whole Course of his Life.
Lastly, certain of future Fame by a good Conscience, while he lived;

He now enjoys it, and with it an unfulfilled Character,

And Rest after the Troubles of Life;
Of which, that she may be a Sharer, is the Desire of.

His

His afflicted Wife, Jane Cuthbert, eldest Daughter of the Baron Ogle.

Who being drown'd in Tears, hath, out of pious Regard, erected this Monument.

He died the 8th of February 1617,

In the 57th Year of his Age.

Here likewise lies the Lady Jane, Countess of Shrewsbury, Widow of the before-mentioned Earl of Shrewsbury, interr'd near the same Monument.

ON the Floor of this Chapel is a Tomb raised two Feet from the Ground, on which is a Lady cut in Brass, in a Widow's Dress, with a Barb and Veil; and round the Brass Ledge of the Tomb this Inscription:

Cy gift Alianore de Bohune eifne fille & un des heires a l'honorable Seigneur Monff. Humphry de Bohune, Compte de Hereford, d'Essex, & de Northampton, & Constable d'Engleterre, femme a puissant & noble Prince Thomas de Wodestocke, fils & tres excellent & trepuissant Seigneur Edward Roy d'Engleterre, puis le Conquestries Duc de Gloucester, Compte d'Essex, de Buckingham, & Constable d'Engleterre, qui mourit le tier jour d'October, l'an de Mil. ccc. lxxxix.

" Here lies Alianor de Bohun, Daughter and " Coheir of the Honourable Knight Sir Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, Essex and " Northampton, and Constable of England, Wife
" to the mighty and noble Prince Thomas of " Woodstock, Son of the thrice excellent and " mighty Prince Edward, King of England, the " Third, since the Conquest, Duke of Gloucester, Earl of Essex and Buckingham, and " Constable of England, who died the 3d of " October, in the Year of Grace, 1399.

THIS Lady, who was the greatest Heiress in England, and by whom the aforesaid Titles came to her Husband, had the Misfortune to have him taken from her at Plesky, a pleasant Seat in Essex, where his Nephew Richard II. called to visit, and in Duty he thought to wait on him, in the Evening, Part of the Way to Town; but was hurried away to Stratford by Persons placed for that Purpose; thence carried to Calais, and stifled between Feather Beds. After this melancholy Accident, she spent the Remainder of her Widowhood in the Nunnery at Barking in Essex, which was two Years; and making her Will on the 6th Day of August, in the Year 1399, died the 3d Day of October following, and being brought from Barking, was here buried.

ADJOINING to this Tomb, nor much differing in Height, is a Table Monument of white Marble, a little veined with Blue, erected to the Memory of Mary Countess of Stafford, married to Sir William Howard, Knt. of the Bath, who was first created Baron, and then Viscount Stafford; and being in the Year 1678, one of the Lords sent to the Tower for High Treason, he was condemned and beheaded on Tower-Hill the 29th of December 1680. She was, after his Death, by Patent created a Countess. On her Tomb is this Inscription:

" Mary Countess of Stafford, Wife of William
" Viscount Stafford, descended from the Royal
" Stock of Thomas Woodstock, and Eleanor de " Bohun, Duke and Dutcheffs of Gloucester, and " from the Barons and Earls of Stafford, and a " Daughter and Heir of the House of the Dukes
" of Buckingham, lies buried here near the " Ashes of her Ancestors. She died on the Ides " of January, in the 74th Year of her Age, and
" of our Redemption 1693.

NEAR the Foot of the Dutcheffs of Glocester's Monument is a flat Stone of Marble, with five Escutcheons engraven on Brass Plates, and a Mitre in the Midst of them, with this Inscription on Brass round the Verge of it:

" Here lies Henry Ferne, D. D. eighth Son
" of Sir John Ferne, Knt. of the City of York;
" Head of Trinity College in Cambridge, and
" at the same Time Bishop of Chester, in which " he sat but five Weeks, and dy'd the 16th of " March, A. D. 1662, in the 59th Year of his " Age.

THIS Dr. Ferne was originally of St. Mary's Hall in Oxford; thence removed to Cambridge, where he commenced Doctor. He was, upon the Restoration of King Charles II. made Dean of Ely, and afterwards, as before-mentioned, Bishop of Chester. He was a Man of extraordinary Learning and Character.

NEAR the Tomb of Brocas is an antient Monument of Grey Marble, raised three Feet, on which, in plated Brass, is the Figure of a Knight in Armour, his Head reclined upon his Helm, and one of his Feet placed upon a Leopard, the other on an Eagle. The whole Tomb is embellish'd with Variety of Arms. This Monument covers the Body of Humphrey Bourchier, who was Son and Heir of John Bourchier Lord Berners; who espousing the Part of King Edward IV. was slain at the famous Battle at Barnet-Field on Easter-Day, 1471, and brought and interr'd here.

NEAR the Dutcheffs of Glocester's Monument is another, a flat Stone on the Pavement, on which, engraven in a Plate of Brass, is the Effigy of an Archbishop in his Mass Habit. This is placed over Robert de Walby, an Augustin Monk, who, when young, attended Edward, the Black Prince, into France; where he prosecuted his Studies for many Years, and grew an excellent Proficient in Languages, Natural and Moral Philosophy, Physick, and the Canon Law, an eloquent Man, and an admirable Preacher. For which Qualities, and his profound Knowledge in Divinity, he was made Chairman, or Divinity Professor, at the University of Thoulouse. He was a great Favourite of Prince Edward, and of his Son King Richard II. who made him Bishop of Man. From thence he was removed to the Archbishoprick of Dublin in Ireland; thence to Chichester; and lastly, made Archbishop of York; in which See, before he sat three Years, he quitted it, together with this World, on the 29th of May 1397. There was a Latin Inscription round the Ledge of this Tomb; but it is now almost torn away.

ON the West Side of this Chapel is another Grave-stone of Black Marble, over the Lord Herbert; on which, under his Arms, is this Epitaph:

" EDWARD Lord HERBERT, Baron of
" Cherbury in England, and Castle-Islands in " Ireland, dy'd on the 9th of December 1678,
" in the 64th Year of his Age, and lies buried
" under this Stone.

IN this Chapel, but without any Inscription, lies buried Dr. Nicholas Monk, Lord Bishop of Hereford. He was third Son of Sir Thomas Monk, of Potheridge, in the County of Devon, Knt. descended from King Edward IV. and Brother to the great Restorer of King Charles II. and was no small Assistant in that happy Design. This Gentleman was educated at Wadham College, where he was entered at his 17th Year, viz. Anno 1626; and having gradually risen there, entered into Holy Orders. After the Grand Rebel-

Rebellion broke out, he was a Sufferer with other valuable Loyalists; but in some Time Sir John Greenville, his Kinsman, who was afterwards Earl of Bath, gained some Preferment for him. In the Year 1659, he began by Letters to influence his Brother General Monk, then in Scotland, to attempt the Restoration of the King, and went himself thither in Person. In the Year 1660, he was made President of Eaton-College, and soon after, by King Charles's Letters to the University, created Doctor in Divinity. In which Letters his Majesty was pleased to give him this Character: That he was well assured of his particular and eminent Sufferings and Service for himself, and the Church, during the late Destructions, &c. Afterwards nominated to the See of Hereford, to which he was consecrated in this Abbey Church on the 6th (Sandford says the 13th) Day of January, by the Archbishop of York, Bishops of Durham, Chichester, Lincoln, and Peterborough. But this valuable Prelate lived not a Year to serve in this eminent Station, and from whence, doubtless, he would have risen to the highest in the Church; for, on the 7th Day of December (Sandford says the 11th) 1666, he died at his Lodgings in the Old Palace-Yard in Westminster, and on the 20th was buried in this Chapel of St. Edmond, his Brother the Duke of Albemarle being chief Mourner; and the Sermon was preached by the Lord Bishop of Glocester. He left two Daughters, the second of which, Elizabeth, was married to Curwen Rawlinson, of Cark-Hall in Cartmale in Lancashire, and Member of Parliament for Lancaster, by whom she had two Sons, Monk Rawlinson, who died at Cark-Hall, aged 21 Years, and Christopher Rawlinson, now living, who has rather added, than derived Honours from his Family, by being a fine Judge, and generous Encourager of Learning, and obliging the World that Way, particularly by publishing Boetius de Consolatione, in Saxon; which he printed at his own Charge, while Gentleman-Commoner of Queen's-College, Oxford.

LEAVING this Chapel, brings us to the Chapel of St. Nicholas. Soon after entering this Chapel, you see on the Left Hand a Monument of curious polish'd Black Marble, raised from the Ground, round which are Cherubims Heads of Alabaster, and on a Scrole of the same an Inscription, informing, That under it lies the Lady Jane Clifford. The Monument hath this Inscription as follows:

Here lies the Right Honourable the Lady Jane Clifford, youngest Daughter to William Duke of Somerset, Granddaughter to Edward Earl of Hertford, and great Granddaughter to Edward Duke of Somerset, and Uncle to King Edward the Sixth, Protector of his Realmes and Governour of his Royall Person.

She was married to the Right Hon. Charles Lord Clifford and Dungravan, Sonn and Heir apparent to Richard Earl of Burlington in England, and Cork in Ireland, Lord High Treasurer of Ireland, and to Elizabeth his Countesse sole Daughter and Heiress to Henry late Earle of Cumberland, Lord Clifford, &c. The last Male of that noble Family. Shee had Issue five Sonns and six Daughters, of whom two Sonns and three Daughters are now living.

Shee lived an Honour to the Family shee was descended from, and the great Comfort of that into which shee was married, and died much lamented on the 23d Day of November, in the Year 1679.

Aged 42 Years 4 Months and 17 Daies.

ADJOINING to the Left Hand Side of the Door is a Monument of Alabaster, curiously carved and gilt; at the Corners of which were four small Pillars of black Marble, (of which one is broke away,) supporting a fine polished Table of Lydian. This Monument was erected to the Memory of the Lady Cecil, Daughter of the Lord Cobham, Lady of the Bed-Chamber to Queen Elizabeth, and married to Sir Robert Cecil, Knt. Son of William Lord Burleigh, Treasurer of England, the last of August in the Year 1589. She died in Childbed two Years after, in the Year of our Lord 1591.

ON the Base of the Monument are these Verses:

A Brooke by Name, the Baron Cobham's Child,
A Newton was she, by her Mother's Side,
Cecil her Husbände, this for her did Builde,
To prove his Love did after Death abide,
Which tells unto the Worldes that after come
The Worlde's Conception, whilst here she held a Rome,
How Nature made her wise and well befeeminge,
Wit and Condition, silente, trew and chaste,
Earth coude not yealde more pleasynge earthy
Blisse,
Blest with two Babes, the third brought her to this.

NEAR this Monument, and adjoining to the East Wall of the Chapel, is a stately Monument of various coloured Marble, erected to the Memory of Anne, Dutcheß of Somerset, Wife to Edward Duke of Somerset, Brother to Queen Jane Seymour, and Uncle to King Edward VI. and Protector of England. This Duke was beheaded for Felony in the Reign of his Nephew. Of this Lady see more in the Inscription on her Monument, thus translated:

" Here lieth entombed the noble Dutcheß of " Somerset, Anne, dear Spouse unto the renowned Prince Edward, Duke of Somerset,
" Earl of Hertford, Viscount Beauchamp, and " Baron Seymour, Companion of the most famous
" Knightly Order of the Garter, Uncle to King
" Edward VI. Governor of his Royal Person, and " most worthy Protector of all his Realmes, Dominions and Subjects, Lieutenant-General of all
" his Armies, Treasurer and Earl-Marshall of " England, and Captain of the Isles of Guernsey and Jersey, under whose prosperous Conduct glorious Victory hath been so often and
" so fortunately obtained over the Scots vanquished at Edinburgh, Leith, and Musselborough-Field.

" A Princess descended of noble Lineage, being Daughter to the worthy Knight Sir Edward Stanhope, by Elizabeth his Wife, that " was Daughter to Sir Foulke Bouchier, Lord
" Fitz-Warren, from whom our modern Earls of " Bath are sprung: Son was he to William Lord Fitz-Warren, that was Brother to Henry Earl of Essex, and John Lord Berners, whom William
" their Sire, some Time Earl of Eu in Normandy, begot on Anne, the sole Heir of Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester,
" younger Son to the mighty Prince Edward III.
" and of his Wife Eleonore, Coheir unto the " tenth Humfrey de Bohun, that was Earl of " Hereford, Essex and Northampton, High Constable of England.

" Many Children bare this Lady unto her Lord, of either Sort, to wit, Edward Earl of Hereford, Henry, and a younger Edward,
" Anne Countess of Warwick, Margaret, Mary,
" Katherine and Elizabeth; and with firm Faith
" in Christ, and in most mild Manner, rendered
" she

" the this Life, at 90 Years of Age, on Easter-
 " Day, the 16th of April, Anno 1587.
 " The Earl of Hertford, Edward, her eldest " Son, in this doleful Duty careful and dili" gent, doth consecrate this Monument to his " dead Parent, not for her Honour, wherewith
 " living she did abound, and now departed,
 " flourisheth; but for the dutiful Love he bear-
 " eth her, and for his last Testification thereof.

ADJOINING to the Dutcheſs of Somerſet's is a ſtately Monument erected againſt the Wall of Marble, and painted in divers Colours. This Monument was erected to the Lady Elizabeth Fane, as appears by the Inſcription, thus Engliſhed :

" This Lady, Elizabeth Fane, remarkable for " her antient Deſcent, but more ſo for her own
 " Virtue, Daughter of Robert, Baron Spencer,
 " of Wormleighton, and Wife to the Honour" able Sir George Fane of Buſton in the County
 " of Kent, Kt. a chaſte, modeſt, and religious " Wife, who in moſt ardent Ejaculations, fre" quently repeated, with a loud Voice, recom" mended her Soul to her Redeemer,

In the Year { of our Lord } 1618 } with great Character.
 { of her Age } 28 }
 { of her Marriage } 10 } leaving no Iſſue.

" Her moſt afflicted Husband, to this his " matchleſs Wife, hath gratefully placed this " Monument; who, as his Effigies is placed near " hers, ſo intends their Aſhes ſhall be united.

UNDERNEATH this Monument, affixed to the Wall, is an antient Monument of grey Marble, having ſmall Pillars and Arches wrought on the Side, but without either Plates or Inſcription :
 This was placed over Nicholas Baron Carew, and the Lady Margaret his Wife, who died within a Week of each other. Theſe Carews were an antient Family of Carew Caſtle in Pembrokeſhire.
 The Son of this Lord Dinham was beheaded in the Time of Henry VIII. for the Conſpiracy about ſetting up Cardinal Pole, and was buried in Aldgate, in the ſame Vault with Thomas Lord Darcy, beheaded in the ſame Reign. This Lady Margaret was Daughter of John Lord Dinham.
 Which three Families had been long united in their Intereſt : For in the Year 1469, Sir Robert Darcy, Father of the aforeſaid Lord Darcy, choſe the Lord Dinham, Brother to this Lady, Overſeer of his Will. The Inſcription on this Monument is as follows :

In Engliſh thus :

" Pray for the Souls of Nicholas, ſome Time
 " Baron Carew, and the Lady Margaret his " Wife, Daughter of John Lord Dinham, Kt.
 " which Nicholas died the 6th Day of Decem" ber, Anno Dom. 1470, and the aforeſaid Lady
 " Margaret died the 13th Day of December
 " 1470.

NEXT adjoining to the Monument of Fane, is a ſtately Monument of Porphyry, and other Kinds of Marble, gilt with Gold. This was erected by the Lord Burleigh, High Treasurer of England, to the Memory of Mildred his Wife, and the Lady Anne Counteſs of Oxford, their Daughter.

THE Inſcription is too long to be tranſlated, without giving Pain to the Reader; but the Meaning of it is this : It is made as if the Image of Burleigh itſelf explains the Monument, and tells the Spectator, That if he would know who that venerable greyheaded old Man is, kneeling; and rob'd with the Enſigns of the Garter; and

VOL. II.

who thoſe two Women are enrobed, and who thoſe are kneeling at their Heads and Feet, he ſhall know by the Inſcription.

The firſt, ſays he, is, alas ! my long-loved Wife Mildred, and the other my loved Daughter Anne. Mildred was married in 1546. lived with me forty three Years, and was Sharer in all my good and bad Fortune, in the Reigns of Henry VIII. Edward VI. Mary, and Elizabeth
 now reigning. She brought me many Children, of which only three lived to Years, i. e. two Daughters, Anne and Elizabeth, and one Son, Robert. Anne was married to Edward Earl of Oxford, Lord Chamberlain, and bore him, among other Children dying young, the three at the Head of their Mother; the firſt Elizabeth, the ſecond Bridget, the third Sufanna. My Daughter Anne, after an excellent Conduct of Life, died, and was by me and my Wife here buried. The Mother ſoon after followed, who was well verſed in the ſacred Writers, and thoſe chiefly of the Greeks, as Baſil the Great, Chryſoſtome, Gregory, Nazianzen, &c. She was a Benefactor to ſeveral Colleges in both Univerſi-ties. She gave a Scholarship in St. John's College in Oxford, and took particular Care at her Death of the Poor of Rumford, where ſhe was born, and Cheſthunt; where ſhe lived, by leaving Money and Food for them, to be diſtributed every firſt Sunday in the Month for ever, to Widows and Orphans at Cheſthunt, frequenting the Church; and in both Places left Money to poor Tradesmen to be given every other Year. She died the 4th of April 1589, aged 63, in Burleigh-Houſe at Westmiſter.

Anne, Counteſs of Oxford, was born the 5th of Decemb. 1556, married at fifteen to Edward Vere Earl of Oxford, by whom ſhe had many Children, but left only three Daughters. She died of a Fever the 5th of June 1588, in the Palace of Greenwich, &c.

AGAINST the Weſt Wall of the Chapel is erected another very lofty Monument of various coloured Marble adorned with Gold, enclosed with a Grate, erected to the Memory of the Lady Winifred, firſt Wife to Sir Richard Sackville, Knt. Chancellor of the Exchequer, and afterwards to John Paulet, Marquis of Wincheſter.
 She ſurvived her Lord, and died a Widow in the Year 1586.

AGAINST the South Wall of this Chapel is an antient Monument of Free-Stone, on which was formerly an Image of a Biſhop cut in Braſs, but the Plate is torn away; round the Ledge of it was the following Inſcription :

Hic jacet Gulielmus de Dudley, & familia Baronum de Dudley Dunelm Episcopus. Obiit Ann.
 Dom. 1483.

" Here lies William de Dudley, of the Fami" ly of the Barons of Dudley; Biſhop of Dur" ham. He died Ann. 1483.

THIS William Dudley; who was likewiſe named Sutton, was Son of John Lord Dudley.
 He was firſt Dean of Windsor, and thence removed to the See of Durham in the Year 1476, in which he ſate ſomething more than ſix Years.
 This Prelate was Uncle to that blood-ſucking Dudley; King Henry VII's Creature, and who afterwards met with a Reward due to ſuch Monſters, who dare oppreſs, pillage and terrify a People; to gratify the Deſires of an arbitrary
 Prince, and an avaricious Court.

IN the Miſt of the Floor of this Chapel is a raiſed Tomb of the fineſt black and white Marble, curiouſly poliſhed, on which is the Ef-figies

figures of a Knight armed with a Helmet, and by him a Lady in her Robes. This Monument was erected to the Memory of Sir George Villars, Knt. of Brokesby in the County of Leicester, whose Son, Mr. George Villars was that Duke of Buckingham, the Favourite of King James, and stabbed at Portsmouth, of whom hereafter. His Lady was Mary Bealmon, said on the Monument to be immediately descended from five of the most powerful Princes in Europe, created by King James (at her Son's Request) Countess of Buckingham. This is that Sir George Villars, of whom the Lord Clarendon relates a Story, that he appeared after Death to an antient Servant of his, giving him a Charge to his Son; of which see the Particulars in that History.

ON the West Side of this Chapel is a Monument seemingly very antient, by the white spungy Stone whereof it is made, on which is the Image of a Lady veiled, and leaning on her Left Arm. The Monument hath no Inscription, but as appears by the Arms and the Herald's Register, was erected to the Lady Elizabeth, commonly called the Lady Ross, who was Daughter of Edward Earl of Rutland, by Isabella, Daughter of Sir Thomas Holcroft, of the Vale-Royal in the County Palatine of Chester, who was buried at Stepney in Middlesex. This Lady Elizabeth, their only Child, married with William Cecil, Knight of the Garter, Lord Burleigh and Earl of Exeter. She died in the House of her Grandfather, Sir Thomas Holcroft, in Tower-street, LONDON, on the 11th of April, 1591, Ann. 33 Elizabeth, and was buried here the 19th of May following, leaving by my Lord Burleigh one Son, named William, one Year old, who at her Funeral, after the Service in the Church, was proclaimed by the Title of Lord Ross of Hamlake, Trusbut and Belvoir. This William, in the Time of King James I. claimed in Right of his Mother the Baronies of Ross and Hamlake, Trusbut, Belvoir, against Francis Mannors, Earl of Rutland: Thereupon the King awarded, that the said William Cecil should be stiled Lord Ross of Holderness; and the said Francis Earl of Rutland should keep the Title of Lord Ross of Hamlake, and take Place below him. This William dying at Naples without Issue, the Barony of Ross revolved again to the Earls of Rutland.

IN this Chapel, near the Tombs of the Lady Cecil and Lady Clifford, is a curious Pyramid of black Marble. This was erected over an Infant Child of Nicholas Bagenall of Anglesea, and at little more than the End of two Months overlaid, as appears by the following Inscription:

This Monument is erected to the Memory of NICHOLAS BAGENALL, Son of Nicholas Bagenall, of the Isle of Anglesea, Esq; and of the Right Honourable the Lady Charlott Bagenall, his Wife, one of the Daughters of the Right Honourable Robert, late Earl of Aylsbury, Lord Chamberlain of his Majesties Houshold who was born the 31st Day of December, Anno Domini 1687.

And by his Nurse unfortunately overlaid the 7th of March following.

ON the South East Corner of this Chapel is a neat Pedestal of black Marble, raised on a Stone Basis, and supporting a Pyramid of white Marble. On the Top of the Pyramid is a Cup, in which was deposited the Heart of Anna Sophia, Daughter of the French Ambassador. She died here in England 1695.

AGAINST the West Wall of this Chapel, and raised on high over the Lady Ross's Tomb, is a curious Montument of veined polished Marble, erected to the Memory of that excellent and learned Prelate Dr. Thomas Sprat, Lord Bishop of Rocheſter, and Dean of this Church, and his Son Mr. Thomas Sprat, Archdeacon of Rocheſter, with Inscriptions, which are attempted in English.

Here lies

THOMAS SPRAT, D. D.

Son of a Clergyman, born in the County of Dorset, Fellow of Wadham College in Oxford.

Whilst he was but a young Poet he published several Specimens

Of an extraordinary Genius and Learning;
But soon leaving the Muses, (however favourable to him)

He resign'd this Glory to his Cowley,
And chose rather to pursue the Beauties of Prose;
In which Study being equally exercised and delighted,

He made the earliest Appearance amongst those Who undertook to polish the English Tongue.

And transferr'd to his native Language
All the Graces of the Greek and Roman Eloquence,

For which being deservedly esteem'd by Men of the first Character,

He was soon made known to George Duke of Buckingham,

And by him to that nice Judge of Politeness

King CHARLES,
Who bestowed on him a Prebendary in the Churches

Of Westminster and Windsor:
Not long after he was made Dean of this Church;
And lastly, Bishop of Rocheſter;
Both which Provinces he govern'd with the highest Reputation.

He, both in his Writings and common Conversation,

Expressed that Politeness,
Which evidently shew him conversant with Great Men,

He carried it obligingly to all;
And yet ever preserved that Distance
Which he seemed least to arrogate to himself.
In dangerous, as well as prosperous Times,
He stood firm in his Integrity to the Church and Monarchy,

And by that Means kindled the Envy of wicked
Men,

Who by invented Crimes,
Brought him in Danger of his Head:
But being happily delivered from these Troubles,
His Life afterwards flow'd on with an even Temperament,

Neither burthensome to himself nor his Friends;
At length falling at once by full Ripeness of Age,
He died with the same Calmness that he liv'd,
May 20, 1713, in the 77th Year of his Age.

On the Pedestal.

Here also Thomas Sprat, A. M. Son of this most happy Prelate, ordered his Ashes to be laid near those of his Father's.

He was Archdeacon of Rocheſter,

And Prebendary
Of the Churches of Rocheſter, Winchester and Westminster;

Who from his earliest Youth learn'd to pursue
All Parts of Learning and genteel Education;
And emulating the Virtues of his excellent Father,

Liv'd not, alas! to reach his Years.
He died the 10th of May, Anno 1720, aged 41.

JOHN

JOHN FRIEND, M. D.
Who had for him the utmost Reverence;
That he might here shew it Hath consecrated this Monument jointly to their Memories.

ON the Right Hand, as you enter the Door, is an antient Monument of Free-stone against the Wall, where is the Effigies of a Lady in Robes, of an antient Form, under a Canopy of Wood, formerly painted with a Sky, and Stars of Gold, and our Saviour's Passion. This Tomb was erected over the Lady Philippa, second Daughter and Coheir to John Lord Mohun of Dunster, and married to Edward Plantaganet, Duke of York, Earl of Cambridge, Rutland and Cork, Constable of England, and Knight of the Garter, by whom she had no Children. After whose Death she married Sir Walter Fitzwalter, Knight; and dying Anno 1433, was here buried, over whom the said Fitzwalter erected this Monument. The Inscription round the Ledge is as follows:

Philippa, filia & hæres Johannis Domini Mohun de Dunster, Uxor Edwardi ducis Eboracensis, moritur, Anno Dom. 1434.

“ Philippa, Daughter and Coheir of John Lord Mohun of Dunster, and Wife of Edward Duke of York, died in the Year 1433.

ON a Grave-stone, the Feet of which comes near the Tomb of Carew, is the Portraiture of a Man in Armour cut in Brass, with four Escutcheons round him, and this Inscription cut in Brass under his Feet.

“ Here lies Humphrey Stanley, Knt. Esquire
“ of the Body to the most excellent Prince Henry VII. King of England, who died the 12th of “ March, Anno Dom. 1505, on whose Soul God “ have Mercy. Amen.

THIS Stanley was a Relation of the Lord Stanley, and was with him on the Side of King Henry VII. at the Battle of Bosworth Field, where for his signal Services that Day, the King conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on him, with several others.

NEAR the aforesaid Tomb, and at the Feet of Sir George Villiers's, was some Time buried two of the Children of the present Duke of Somerset, but a few Years ago, in the Beginning of January, taken up and deposited all Night in the old Revestry, and the next Day carried down to the Burial-Place of his Grace's Family.

NEAR these, at the South West Angle of Villiers's Tomb, was buried the Body of a Son of the Marquis of Hamilton, who died in the Year 1633.

THERE is likewise an old Stone of Grey Marble, on Part of which the Tomb of Villiers stands, which, it is very probable, might be laid over the Countess of Derby, who was buried in the Floor of this Chapel Anno 1626.

NEAR whom was likewise buried the Lady Elizabeth Norris, in the Year 1645.

ON the South East Corner of Villiers's Tomb, and near those of Harley and Dudley, are two Grave-stones, the first covers the Body of George Sprat, Son to the Bishop of Rocheſter, bearing the same Inscription literally with that on his Monument in St. Benedicts Chapel. The other covers the Bodies of Bishop Sprat, and his Son Thomas, and on it is this Inscription:

THOMAS SPRAT,
Episcopus Roffensis,
Hujusce Ecclesiæ Decanus,
Obiit 12mo Maii MDCCXIII.
Ætatis suæ LXXVII.

AND at a little Distance:

THOMAS SPRAT,
Archidiaconus Roffensis,
Hujus & Winton. Eccles. Preb.
Obiit Maii x. A. D. MDCCXX.
Ætatis suæ XLI.

THE Body of Archdeacon Sprat lies under the Coffin of the Bishop, according to his particular Directions.

THE Lady Barbara Fielding was buried in this Chapel Anno 1641. As we leave this Chapel, going out of the Door; we tread upon the Ruins of that great and learned Antiquary Sir Henry Spelman, who dying at more than 80 Years of Age, was buried at the Door of this Chapel in the Year 1641.

LEAVING this Chapel, we ascend to that of Henry VII.

AT the East End of the South Isle of which Chapel is a Monument of Black Marble and Touch-stone, on which is an Image of Copper, gilt. This Tomb was erected to Margaret Countess of Richmond, Mother to King Henry VII. She was sole Daughter and Heir to John Beaufort Duke of Somerset, by Margaret Beauchamp, and was first married to Edmund Tudor, Son of Owen Tudor, and Catharine, Widow of King Henry V. Which Edmund was by Patent, dated 1452, created Earl of Richmond, by whom she had King Henry VII. After his Death she married Sir Humphry Stafford, a younger Son of Humphrey Duke of Buckingham, whom surviving likewise, she married a third Time with Thomas Lord Stanley Earl of Derby, but had Children by neither of them. She was a great Encourager of Learning, and founded two Colleges in Cambridge, Christ-Church, and St. John's. She instituted a Divinity Lecture in each University, still called by her Name. She was a great Encourager of Printing, when first begun in England, and was a chief Supporter of Caxton, or Wynk in the Wend; who styles himself, in a Piece of Bishop Fisher, her Confessor's Works, Printer to her Highness's Grace, Margaret the King's Grandame. She always stiled herself Mother to the illustrious Prince Henry VII. This being in King Henry VIII's Time, was an Augmentation to her Title. She died the 3d of the Kalends of July, (Mr. Weaver, by Mistake, says the 12th of July) and was buried here, Bishop Fisher preaching her Funeral Sermon, in the first Year of K. Henry VIII. viz. Anno 1509. Of her particular Charities, see in the Preface to her Funeral Sermon, lately reprinted at Cambridge; and of some Particulars, see in the Inscription round the Tomb, and engraved under it on the Plate. Her plain and just Epitaph was written by Erasmus, for which he had a Reward of 20 s.

The English is thus:

“ The Tomb of Margaret of Richmond, Mother of King Henry VII. Grandmother of King Henry VIII. who gave a Salary to three Monks of this Convent, and founded a Grammar School at Wimbourne, and to a Preacher throughout England, and two Interpreters of Scripture, one at Oxford, the other at Cambridge; where she likewise founded two Colleges, one to Christ, and the other to St. John his Disciple.

AT the West End of the said Isle is a curious Monument of Marble, enclosed with Rails of Iron. On the Tomb is a Lady robed, of fine Alabaster, and on each Side it four Children kneeling. This Tomb was erected to Margaret Daughter

Daughter to Margaret Queen of Scots, Daughter to King Henry VII. and the Earl of Angus. This Lady was born at Harbottle Castle in Northumberland, Anno 1515, at which Place her Father and Mother resided, being in Exile, (through Dissentions among the Scottish Nobility.) This Lady, who was very beautiful, was in the Year 1537 sought for in Marriage by Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, who was upon that Account, together with this Margaret, committed to the Tower, and the Duke was in Parliament convicted of High Treason, for affiancing her without King Henry VIII. her Uncle's Consent, where he died. After some Time, she being releas'd, married Matthew Earl of Lenox, by whom she had the beautiful Lord Darnley, who at seventeen was married to Mary Queen of Scots. Of the eight Children round this Tomb, Mention is made but of three; for four Daughters and one Son died Infants. Of these three, was the Lord Henry, before-mention'd; Charles, Father to the Lady Arabella Stuart; and another, Henry, who died at nine Years old, and lies in the Chancel of Stepney Church, near LONDON. This Lady died the 10th of March, in the Year 1577. On this Monument are the following Inscriptions:

Henry second Sonne to this Lady was K. of Scotts and Father to James the 6 now King. This Henry was murthered at the Age of 21 Yeares; Charles her youngest Sonne was Earle of Levenox Father to the Ladie Arbell. He died at the Age of 21 Yeares, and is here intombed.

This Ladye had to her Great Grandfather K. Edward the 4. to her Grandfather K. Henry the 7. to her Uncle K. Henry the VIII. to her Cousin Germane K. Edward the VI. to her Brother K. James of Scotland the 5. to her Sonne Kinge Henry the first. to her Granchild K. Here lyeth the noble Ladye, Margaret Countess of Levenox, Daughter and sole Heire of Archibald Earle of Anguise, by Margaret Q. of Scotts his Wife, that was eldest Daughter to K. Henry the 7. whoe bare unto Matthew Earle of Levenox, her Husband, 4 Sonnes and 4 Daughters.

Here lies also the before-mentioned Charles Stuart, Earl of Lenox, third Son of the said Lady Margaret, who was born in England, and took to Wife Elizabeth, Daughter of Sir William Cavendish of Chatsworth. He died in the 21st Year of his Age, and was here buried in a little Vault, containing only two leaden Coffins, his and his Mother's; which being placed over it, has by its Weight so injured the former, that when it was opened some Years since, the Skull, dry'd Sinews, and Skin like shrivell'd Parchment, was visible.

In the same South Isle, between the former of the Countess of Richmond and this is a magnificent one of various coloured Marble, erected to Mary, the unfortunate Queen of Scotland. This Lady, who was Daughter and Heir to James the Vth of Scotland, was born Anno 1542, and being an Infant when her Father died, was proclaimed Queen in her younger Years. Overtures were made to marry her to Edward VI. King of England; but that Match not taking Effect, she was married to Francis, Dauphin of France, who soon after succeeded as King, but reigned no more than seventeen Months and odd Days, leaving this Queen without Issue; who going into Scotland, married the young Lord Henry Darnley, her Cousin, by whom she had King James VI. of Scotland, and First of England. But not long after this second Match, this young King Henry was strangled in the Night, and the House blown up with Gunpowder. After which, being destitute of Power to make Head against Murray and the rest of the Faction, she was constrained to marry James, Earl of Bothwell. After which the Faction grew more hot against her, stirr'd up by Knox and other Incendiaries, who charged her with the Murder of her Husband, the Lord Darnley, and afterwards marrying with his Murtherer. Bothwell flies, and the Queen they seize, and commit Prisoner to Loch Leven. Queen Elizabeth interposes in these Affairs, and sends Sir Nicholas Throckmorton; but to no Purpose. At length the Queen, to save her Life, resigns the Kingdom to her young Son, and placed Murray, the prime Rebel, Viceroy during his Minority: But not long after, escaping out of Prison, she declares these forced Resignations void, and raised Forces: But they, upon engaging Murray, were defeated, and the Queen, with much Difficulty, escaped, by travelling sixty Miles in one Day to the Lord Heris. Thence she sent a Ring to Queen Elizabeth, which she had received from her as a Pledge of Friendship, desiring her Aid; but (rashly) before the Messenger returned, she, with the Lords Heris and Flemming, enter'd a small Vessel, and landed at Workington in Cumberland; where, instead of an Asylum to her Distress, she was denied Access to the Queen, and committed Prisoner to the Earl of Shrewsbury, and was confined in Chatsworth-house in Derbyshire, now a Seat of the Duke of Devonshire. After eighteen Years Confinement, during which she had struggled for Liberty, she was, upon State-Views, charged with acting to the Prejudice of England; and by an unprecedented Proceeding tried, and sentenced for High Treason; which Sentence was accordingly put in Execution; for on the 6th of the Ides of February 1587, she was beheaded in the Castle of Fotheringhay in Northamptonshire, upon a Scaffold erected in the Hall of that Castle.

AFTER which Execution, Queen Elizabeth detested the Act, and declaring it done without her Privity; ordered the Corpse to be solemnly buried in the Cathedral of Peterborough, on the first of August 1587 (the Countess of Bedford being chief Mourner) where she rested, and had a sumptuous Hearse erected to her, till King James her Son, soon after coming to these Crowns, removed her privately, and buried her in a Vault made for that Purpose, near this Monument.

IN the same Vault, and under the Coffin of the Queen of Scots, lie several Persons of Character; of whom, that we may not interrupt the Course of Monuments, we will speak particularly hereafter.

AT the East End of this Isle, above the Tomb of Mary Queen of Scots, near where stood an Altar before the Reformation, is a Royal Vault; so called from being the Repository of King Charles II. for whom it was made, and whose Figure of Wax-work stands over it in a Case of Wainscot, dressed in his Coronation Robes, which is all that marks it from the common Pavement.

ANOTHER Wainscot Press of the same Form is placed at a Corner of the great East Window of this Chapel, in which is the Effigies of the Lady Mary, Dutches of Richmond, who was Daughter to James Duke of Richmond and Lenox, and Heiress to the Honours and Estate of her Family after the Death of Duke of Esme her Brother. She married with Richard Butler, Earl of Arran in Ireland, second Son to James Duke of Ormond. She is dressed in Robes worn by a Dutchess on the Coronation.

A late Writer has the following Words concerning these Waxen Figures, "Which are placed so curiously up and down this venerable Building, particularly the King William and Queen Mary, which have been lately so amicably shut up together in the same Box. To oblige them therefore, and in Compliment to the Reverend Dean and Chapter, who permit these noble Decorations, I will throw away a Moment or two in giving my Opinion of them. In the first Place, therefore, with all Submission to better Judgments, I think they are ridiculous and unnatural in themselves, expressing neither Figure like Statuary, nor Colour like Painting. Secondly, I am humbly of Opinion, that they would become a Puppet-Shew better than a Church, as making a mere Farce of what should be great and solemn. And, Thirdly, I think them highly injurious to the Characters they represent, as shewing them like Jointed Babies, to the stupid Admiration of the Vulgar, and the Contempt of Men of Sense; instead of characterizing their Persons, and perpetuating their Virtues. For all which, and many more Reasons, I beg Leave to move, that the whole present Set of Waxen Worthies may be demolished without Benefit of Clergy, and that all their present Patrons and Abettors may be substituted in their Place; and that, as fast as any future Reverence should endeavour to seduce his Brethren to the like Idolatry, he should be immediately chronicled in Wax, and shewn with a Cap and Bells, to distinguish the Extent of his Understanding, and the Perfection of his Taste.

In the North Isle of this Chapel, at the West End, and placed against the Head of Queen Elizabeth's Tomb, is a third Wainscot Press, but without Glass, as the others, in which is the Effigies of General Monk, Restorer of the Royal Family and Monarchy to these Realms. To speak particularly of this great Man: He was Son of Sir Thomas Monk of Potheridge, descended from the Plantagenets, and was after his Father's Death Lord of the Manor of Potheridge. After the Restoration of King Charles, in Reward for his unequalled Services, was created Duke of Albemarle, Earl of Torrington, Baron Monk of Potheridge, Beauchamp, and Teynham, Captain-General of his Majesty's Forces, Master of the most noble Order of the Garter, and Privy Counsellor. He died the 4th of January 1669, and was buried after a most honourable Manner, on the last Day of April following; at which Funeral he had a Hearse erected in this Church, and on it this Effigies was placed. He lies in a Vault near this Place, made for him and his Family, of which we shall give a particular Account hereafter.

In the Nave of this Chapel stands the sumptuous and magnificent Tomb of the Founder of this Chapel, Henry VII. and his Queen Elizabeth. She died in Childbed in the Tower of LONDON, on Saturday the 11th Day of February, being likewise her Birth-Day, Anno 1502, in the 37th Year of her Age, after having sat Queen sixteen Years; upon whose Death solemn Diriges and Masses, with ringing of Bells, were ordered throughout England. Her Body being embalmed, for which sixty Ells of Ell-broad Holland was allowed, together with Spices, Wine, Wax, &c. was cased, and then, by the King's Plumber, enclosed in Lead; which, with an Epitaph in Lead, was enclosed with Board, covered with Black Velvet; a Cross of White Sarcenet was placed in the Tower Chapel under a Hearse with Lights; and Windows, railed a good Height, were hung with Black Cloth, and filled with Tapers. The Corpse was covered with a rich Pall of Black Velvet, with a Cross of Gold; and after Pater noster said for the Soul of the Defunct, it was conveyed into a Chair or Hearse covered with Black Velvet, with a Cross of Cloth of Gold, fringed, and an Effigies in Robes laid on it, with a Crown, and the Hair dishevelled; a Scepter in her Hand, and Rings on her Fingers. She was drawn to Westminster, having White Banners of our Lady, signifying she died in Childbed; then followed eight Ladies of Honour on Palfries; then the Mayor and Commonalty, Orders of Religious Houses, &c. Thus they proceeded through the Streets, illuminated with Torches, to Charing-Cross, where the Choir of St. Paul's left them, and the Abbots of Westminster and Bermondsey met them, with the Convent, who received the Corpse, and at the Church-yard of St. Margaret's it was removed out of the Chair, and conveyed into the Abbey, where was provided a sumptuous Hearse. Dr. Fitz James, Bishop of Rochester, preached the Funeral Sermon upon this Text, Miseremini mei; miseremini mei, saltem vos amici mei, quia manus Domini tetigit me. After which King Henry left Orders that her Image of gilt Copper should be placed near his, upon a Tomb he intended should be erected.

Henry VII. having survived his Queen seven Years, died at his Palace of Richmond on the 21st of April 1509, in the 53d Year of his Age, and in the 24th of his Reign. After his Death, his Body was placed in the Great Chamber, and then in the Chapel, under Hearses; at which several Places it had solemn Mass and a Dirige, sung by a Bishop. On Wednesday the 9th of May it was conveyed in a Chair covered with Cloth of Gold, drawn by five Horses covered with Black Velvet, adorned with Escutcheons, on which was his Effigies, placed in his Robes, with the Crown, Scepter, and Ball. Before the Body went several Prelates and others praying, and 600 Torches followed it; thus they proceeded to St. George's-Fields near Southwark, where they were met by the Religious Orders, &c. the Mayor and Aldermen, who brought it to St. Paul's, where it rested under a stately Hearse, while the Bishop of Rochester said solemn Mass and preached a Sermon. The next Day it was conveyed to Westminster, where it was placed under another Hearse while the Choir sung Placabo and Dirige, which closed the Solemnities of that Day. The next Day solemn Mass was sung by three Bishops, at the last of which was offered the Banner, Coarser Coat, Armour, Sword, Target, and Helmet; and the Nobility offered their Pall of Cloth of Gold, and Baudekin; then the Choir Libera me, and the Corpse was interred, the Great Officers breaking their Staves, and Garter proclaiming King Henry VIII. his Title; they went to Feast at the Palace.

In the Place where he was interred he gave Orders to his Executors to erect a Monument over him and his Queen, which for its curious Form and Structure is unequalled. It is enclosed in a Sacellum, or Chantry Chapel, of Brass, curiously cast in Entaglio and Devices, at the Corners of which are several Statues of Brass; some Time gilded, but they are now in a great Measure gone, there being but four remaining; St. George, St. James, St. Bartholomew, and St. Edward. In this curious Enclosure stands the Tomb of black Marble, with the Effigies of this Prince and his Queen in their Robes of Copper, gilt. At the Head of this Tomb is a large Rose crowned, and supported by a red Dragon, the Ensign of Cadwallader, the last King of the Britons, from whom he derived his Title, and in Honour of which Ensign is instituted a Herald, so called. This red Dragon he had painted on white and green Silk in his Standard at Bosworth, and is likewise supported by an Angel at the Foot of the Tomb. His Monument is adorned with Portcullis, in Memory that he descended by his Mother's Side from the Beauforts. There is likewise on his Monument Roses twisted, alluding to the Union of the Houses of York and Lancaster. And at each End of his Tomb is a Crown in a Busk, alluding to the Crown of King Richard III. found in a Hawthorn at Bosworth Field, with which he was there crowned. This Monument was made by Peter Florentine, who received for Materials and Workmanship no more than 1000 l. Sterling.

At the East End of this Tomb was an Altar, where solemn Mass was said for his Soul, on which four Tapers burnt perpetually, as before-mentioned.

At the Head of King Henry VII.'s Chantry lies buried King Edward VI. his Grandson, who dying at Greenwich the 6th Day of July, 1553, in the 16th Year of his Age, when he had reigned six Years, five Months, and nine Days, was buried on the 8th of August following; at whose Burial were carried several Banners and Trophies; the Marquis of Winchester was chief Mourner. An Hearse was set up for him at Westminster with Bannerol, Penfiles, and Escutcheons, and an Imperial Crown over it. The Service was in English, by the especial Favour of his Sister Queen Mary, who erected over him a stately Monument at the Head of King Henry VII. being an Altar of Brass, gilt, having on the Back the Resurrection of our Saviour wrought; but this, as several other Pieces of Value, was (perhaps for that it had two Angels on the Top kneeling, the one holding a Cross, the other a Pillar of our Saviour's Passion) by the hot-brained Zealots in 41 demolished, so that not the least Footsteps now remain. In Mr. Camden's Time it was remarkable; for, speaking of this Prince, he says, Ad caput avi Henrici septimi requiescit sub altari ex ære deaurato, & artificiose alaborato.

On the South Side of the Tomb of Henry VII. in a small Chapel, which contains a most stately and sumptuous Monument of cast Brass, where, on a Marble Table, are, in cumbent Postures, the Effigies of a Nobleman and his Lady robed, under a Canopy of curious Workmanship, supported by four Figures of Brass, large as the Life, representing Faith, Hope, Charity and Prudence. This was erected to the Memory of Lewis Stuart Duke of Richmond, and the Lady Frances his Dutcheß, as appears by the Inscriptions engraved on the Tomb, and here Englished:

Here lies buried the Body of the most illustrious and most excellent Prince Lewis, Son of Esme Stuart Duke of Lenox, Grandson of John, Nephew to the Serene Prince King James I. Duke of Richmond Lenox, Earl of Newcastle upon Tine and Darnley, Chamberlain and Hereditary Admiral of Scotland, Lord High Steward of the Household, first Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber and Privy Counsellor to his sacred Majesty King James, Knight of the Garter, Ambassador from Scotland to France; a Prince born to every Thing that was great and good, but gone to far better. He lived 49 Years, 4 Months and 17 Days.

2 Sam. 3. 38.

CHRONOG.

Know ye not that a Prince and a great Man is this Day dead, 16 February. Designed the first of the Princes of this Land.

THE second thus:

The most illustrious and most excellent Princess Frances Dutcheß of Richmond and Lenox, Daughter of Thomas Lord Howard of Bindon, Son to the Duke of Norfolk, by Elizabeth Daughter of Edward Duke of Buckingham, Wife of Lewis Stuart, Duke of Richmond and Lenox, who, ever mindful of this her dearest Lord, hath to him who well deserved it, and to herself, erected this Monument. She died the 8th of October, Anno Dom. 1639.

At the Feet of this Monument, and within the same Chapel is a Pyramid of black and white Marble supporting a small Urn. Round the Pyramid is a Coronet of Brass, gilt. This was erected to the Memory of Esme Stuart, Duke of Richmond and Lenox, by his Lady Mary, Daughter to the Duke of Buckingham. He died in France in the Year 1660, aged 10 Years, leaving the Honour and Estate to his Sister Mary. He was brought over, and his Heart repositied in the Urn over, and his Body under the Pyramid.

Of this illustrious Family are others buried near this Place without Monuments; an Account of whom see in a separate Survey of such Interments: Only give me Leave to observe, that in an old Wainscot Press adjoining to this last mentioned Tomb, were the Effigies or Hearse-Statues of the Duke and Dutcheß of Richmond before-mentioned, but (being decayed) a Batton is nailed a-cross the Foldings, and has been for some Years.

Crossing the Feet of King Henry VII.'s Chantry and Tomb, leads us to a small Angle, designed and used formerly as a Chapel, where is lately erected one of the most magnificent Monuments in this Abbey, composed of the finest veined Marble, where on an Altar, lies an Image of a General in a Roman Habit, and at his Feet is a Lady weeping; the first representing John Sheffield, late Duke of Buckingham, and the latter his Dutcheß now living. Over all is a Figure of Time carrying several Busto's in Relief, of Children of this noble Couple. The Inscription upon this Monument is as follows, viz, on the Ledge:

Often for my Prince, ever for my Country.

ON the Table over the Effigies:

I liv'd doubtful, not dissolute;
I die unresolved, not unresign'd;
Ignorance and Error
Are incident to Human Nature.

I trust in an Almighty and all good God.
O! thou Being of Beings! Have Compassion on me.

ON an Oval under the Altar:

Sacred to the Memory

Of John Shefflyd, of the illustrious Race of the Shefflyds, who from the Reign of King Henry III. have by a direct Succession of Male Heirs preserved its Name even to this Day:

Duke of Buckinghamshire, Duke and Marquis of Normandy, Earl of Mulgrave, Baron Shefflyd and Botterwick, and Kt. of the noble Order of the Garter.

He first married Ursula Countess of Conway:
His second Lady was Catherine, Countess of Gainsborough,

His third, Catherine Countess of Anglesey, Daughter of King James II. and

Catherine Sedly, Countess of Dorchester,

Who

Who bare him, 1. Sophia; 2. John, 3. Robert, 4. Henrietta Maria, (all now resting in the Bosom of Time) 5. Edmund, now the only Comfort of his afflicted Mother.

IN the Reign of King Charles II. he was General of the Dutch Troop of Horse, Governor of Kingston Castle upon Hull, and first Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber. After which, in the Reign of King James II. he was made Lord Chamberlain, and in the Reign of Queen Anne, Lord Privy Seal and President of the Council.

IN his Management of the Publick Affairs in the House of Lords, for the Space of 54 Years, it is doubted whether was more, his graceful Elocution, or ready Application: His Vigour of Body declining, he preserved that of his Mind to his last Breath. At length his Strength gently decreasing, he lay down under his Burthen the 24th Day of February, and went to Rest in the 75th Year of his Age, and of our Redemption, Anno 1720.

ROUND the Verge of the several Busto's are these Inscriptions, viz.

ON that Shield carried in the Left Hand of Time:

John Marquis of Normandy, born Sept. 1710, and Sophia Shefflyd, 1709.

The one died four Days old, the other three Weeks.

ON that in his Right Arm:

Henrietta Maria Shefflyd, born 24 Feb. 1713. died 20 Dec. 1717.

ON that resting on the Altar at his Foot:

Robert Marquis of Normandy, born 2 Decemb. 1711. died 1 Feb. 1714.

ON the Ledge of the Tomb:

Catherine, Dutcheß of Buckingham, much afflicted, gave Orders to erect this Monument, Anno 1722.

THIS great and excellent Nobleman, amongst the many Commendations applicable to him, shines in the first Rank of our English Writers, and as such has been for many Years celebrated. As he was himself a fine Judge, and an excellent Master of the English Poetry, so was he a generous and friendly Encourager of it in others; to whom his Favour was so extensive, that even the meanest partook of his Bounty, though none but those his nice Eye discovered to be the greatest, shared his Friendship: Of which two Instances give us a Taste, viz. Mr. Dryden, the Glory of the last, and Mr. Pope of the present Age; to the first of which his Care extended even after Death, by erecting a Monument well worthy of him; and to the latter he has raised a no less lasting Monument in his Works, by a Poem in Praise of him, in which he has preserved the Dignity of the Nobleman, the Majesty of the highest Critick, and yet the Familiarity and Friendship due to such Merit, as evidently shews, that as his Grace was a perfect Master of the antient Writings, so was he of the antient Patronage; and that, as the Spirit of a Mecenas required no nauseous Flattery, so neither did it preserve any haughty Distance. And he who maintained the highest Dignity, and distinguished himself even with almost the greatest Characters in this Land, knew how to unbend himself, and share the most social Familiarity with the more private, though more excellent ones in Learning. And that (as he was above foreign Praise, his Works and himself disdaining it) he also was without any View; but that which always actuates the greatest Souls. His Grace's Works he submitted to the Care of Mr. Pope.

IN a small Chapel North of King Henry VII's; is another stately Monument, but of a more antique Form, composed of black Marble; Touch; and other curious Marbles, having several Figures of Brass, large as the Life, and gilt with Gold, sitting round the Tomb, on which are the Statues of George Villiers Duke of Buckingham, that great Favourite of King James I. and who, in the Reign of King Charles, was stabbed at Portsmouth by one Felton, a Lieutenant, a melancholy and zealous Discontent of that Time.

HE married Catharine, Daughter of the Earl of Rutland, who erected this Monument, and lies buried with him.

LEAVING the Nave of this Chapel, we enter the North Isle, at the East End of which is a Vault, wherein are repositied the Bodies of King James I. and his Queen Anne; of whom, as crowned Heads, though not distinguished by Monuments, we shall here speak.

HE was Son of the Lord Darnley, by Mary Queen of Scots, and was; while an Infant; crowned King of Scotland, during his Mother's Troubles. After her Death, he was by Queen Elizabeth declared her Successor to England, of which he was crowned King the 25th of July, 1603. He took to Wife Anne, Daughter of Frederick II. King of Denmark and Norway, by the Advice of Queen Elizabeth. This Prince reigned over Scotland 59 Years, three Months; and 12 Days, and over England 22 Years and three Days. He died between Twelve and One before Noon, the 16th of March, 1625, aged 60 Years, at his Palace at Theobalds in Hertfordshire, from whence his Body was carried to Denmark-House, now called Somerfet-House; where having rested about a Fortnight, it was brought into this Church, and placed under a Hearse erected for that Purpose, and buried in this Vault the 14th of May, King Charles, his Son and Successor, being chief Mourner, supported by the Earls of Arundel and Rutland.

IN the same Vault lies interred Anne of Denmark, his Queen. She was Daughter of Frederick II. King of Denmark and Norway, born at Scanderburgh on the 14th of December 1574, and married to this Prince at her 16th Year of Age by Proxy at Cornenburgh; after which Marriage the King sailed to Norway, and consummated it. She died at Hampton-Court on Tuesday the 2d of March 1618, about Two in the Morning, in the 43d Year of her Age. Her Corpse was brought in a Barge to Denmark, or Somerfet-house, where it lay in State nine Weeks; and was on Tuesday the 13th of May, conveyed hither in State, and buried in this Vault. On her Coffin is no Inscription; but the leaden Urn which contained her Bowels had Anna Regina, and the Year 1619 on the Top; which Urn is now in the Vault of General Monk; perhaps removed there by the Workmen, when this Vault was opened for the Bones of King Edward V. and his Brother.

OVER this Vault is a small Tomb of Marble and Alabaster, gilt, with the Figure of a Child lying on it, resting on its Left Arms. This was erected to Mary III. Daughter of King James I. born at Greenwich in 1605, and soon after committed to the Care of the Lady Knevet, in whose House at Stanwell she died on the 16th Day of December, 1607, aged two Years five Months, and odd Days. The Body of this Child was brought in a Coach to the House of Dr. Richard Neyle, Neyle, then Dean of Westminster; and the following Day conveyed privately through the Cloisters, and buried here.

ADJOINING to this is another small but curious Monument, representing a Child lying in a Cradle; this was erected to Sophia, 4th Daughter to King James, who was born at Greenwich on Sunday Morning the 21st of June, 1606, and lived not three Days. She was carried by a Barge to Westminster, and buried here in State; at which Time the Workmen were erecting Queen Elizabeth's Tomb.

BETWEEN the former two, and fixed in the East Wall of this Isle, is a beautiful Altar of white Marble. This was erected by King Charles II. to the Memory of King Edward V. and his Brother; who by their treacherous Uncle Richard were ordered to be smothered in the Tower, now called the bloody Tower, being near the Water-Gate. This horrid Act was committed by Miles Forrest and John Dighton, under the Command of Sir James Tyrrel. After which their Bodies were buried in a great Heap of Rubbish, near the Foot-Stairs of their Lodging, where now is the raised Terrass, on the Left Hand as you go from the inner Arch of the Water-gate to the Tower Chapel, near the Stair-Case to that Terrass. But here they rested not long, for King Richard gave Orders to remove them; which Care was committed to the Priest of the Tower, who dying soon after, left the World in the Dark as to the Place. Various were the Conjectures of the Historians for many Years. Sir James Tyrrel, when he was in the Tower for High Treason against King Henry VII. being examined concerning this Matter, together with Dighton, confessed the Murther and Circumstances, perhaps as melancholly as most, which some of our Historians give at large; but they confessed they knew not the Place of their second Burial. Others (as Historians love to work in the Dark) write, that Sir Robert Brakenbury's Priest closed them in leaden Boxes full of Holes, and let them down into the Sea at the Mouth of the Thames, in a Place called *the Black Deep*s. But however this Story was represented, the Place was brought to Light after 200 Years; for in July 1674, there being Orders to rebuild some Offices, and clear the White Tower from those adjoining, as they were taking away the Stairs going from the King's Lodging into the Chapel of the White Tower, the Workmen discovered, about 10 Feet deep in the Ground, some small Human Bones in a wooden Chest; which Bones being nicely examined, were found to have been those of two Boys, the one of 13, the other of 11 Years of Age; the Skull of one whole, but the other broken by the Labourers, as were several of the other Bones, and likewise the Chest; who, not heeding them, cast them away with the Rubbish; whereupon they were commanded to sift it, and so preserved all the Bones. This being brought to the Ears of King Charles II. his Majesty ordered them to be put in a Marble Urn, and repositied here. These Princes were as follows, viz.

Edward of York, eldest Son of Edward IV. was born in the Sanctuary belonging to this Church, whither his Mother fled during the Contest between the two Houses, his Father being driven out of the Realm; so that his Birth was in Trouble, and his End answerable. His Birth was the 4th of November 1470. At the eleventh Year of his Age, he was, upon the Death of his Father, crowned King; which Title he held something more than two Years, and was murder'd the 9th of the Kalends of June, 1483, being thirteen Years old.

Richard of Shrewsbury, Brother to the former, was born May 28, 1474. He was made Duke of York, Norfolk, and Earl Warren. He was, while a Child, married to Anne Mowbrey, Heiress of Norfolk, in the Year 1477. He was constituted Lieutenant of Ireland; but, by Reason of Minority, deputed. He was with the former smothered, as before rehearsed, being 11 Years old. This Inscription on the Monument, which King Charles ordered, the English is as follows:

Here lie

The Reliques

Of Edward V. King of England, and Richard Duke of York;

These Brothers being confin'd in the Tower,
And there stifled with Pillows, were privately and meanly buried,

By the Order of

Their perfidious Uncle Richard the Usurper, Whose Bones, long enquired after and wished for,
After 201 Years

In the Rubbish of the Stairs (i. e. those lately leading to the Chapel Of the White Tower)

Were on the 17th Day of July, 1674, by undoubted Proofs discover'd, Being buried deep in that Place.

Charles II. a most compassionate Prince, pitying their severe Fate,

Ordered these unhappy Princes to be laid

Amongst the Monuments of their Predecessors, Anno Dom. 1678, in the 30th Year of his Reign.

PROCEEDING Westward in this Isle, we are almost forbid Passage by a large and stately Monument, erected to the Great and Glorious Queen Elizabeth. This Monument, of various Kinds of Marble, gilt, and Arms and Cognizances of the English Kings, is, together with its Inscription, which being the just Character of her Actions, will require no other Translations for the English Reader, viz.

To the eternal Memory of Elizabeth Queen of England, France and Ireland, Daughter of King Henry VIII. Granddaughter of King Henry VII. Great Granddaughter to K. Edward IV. Mother of her Country, a Nursing Mother to Religion and all Liberal Sciences, skill'd in many Languages, adorned with excellent Endowments both of Body and Mind, and excellent for Princely Virtues beyond her Sex. James, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, hath devoutly and justly erected this Monument to her, whose Virtues and Kingdoms he inherits.

ON the other Side:

Sacred to Memory:

Religion to its primitive Purity restored, Peace settled, Money restor'd to its just Value, domestick Rebellions quelled, France relieved when involved with intestine Divisions, the Netherlands supported, the Spanish Armado vanquish'd; Ireland, almost lost by Rebels, eas'd by routing the Spaniard; the Revenues of both Universities much enlarged by a Law of Provisions; and lastly, all England enrich'd. Elizabeth, a most prudent Governor 45 Years, a victorious and triumphant Queen, most strictly religious, most happy, by a calm and resigned Death at her 70th Year left her mortal Remains, till by Christ's Word they shall rise to Immortality, to be deposited in this Church, by her establish'd and lastly founded. She died the 24th of March, Anno 1602, of her Reign the 45th Year, of her Age the 70th.

THIS

THIS excellent Princess died at Richmond, where her Body was embalmed and closed in Lead, and brought by Water to Whitehall, from whence being attended by 1600 Mourners, to this Church, it was buried the 28th of April 1602.

IN the same Grave lies her Sister and Predecessor, Queen Mary; who, after a short and bloody Reign of five Years, four Months, and eleven Days, died at St. James's, where her Bowels lie in the Chapel, and her Heart, which was separately inclosed in a Box covered with Velvet, and bound round with Silver. Her Body being embalmed, was enclosed in Lead, and put in a Coffin covered with Purple Velvet, which was covered with a Pall of Cloth of Tissue, with a Cross of White Cloth of Silver, adorned with Escutcheons, and placed under a stately Hearse in the Chapel; and on Tuesday the 12th of December she was conveyed in an open Chariot, with her Effigies, to the Church, in which was placed an Hearse for the Corpse, while Garter asked Prayers for her Soul. After the Ceremonies of Burial, she was interred in this Place, and had no Memorial, till King James I. erected this Tomb to Queen Elizabeth.

NEXT, Westward to the Tomb of Queen Elizabeth, on the South Side of this Isle, is a Monument of white Marble, with a Bust of George Saville, late Marquis of Hallifax.

WESTWARD from which is a stately Monument, being a Pyramid of veined Marble, of an extraordinary Height, supported by two Griffins of Brass, gilt, on a Pedestal of the most curious Marble, and the Arms of Brass likewise gilt. This was erected to the Memory of that great Encourager of Learning, the late Earl of Hallifax, whose Character see in the Inscription of this Monument thus Englished:

Here lies

CHARLES MOUNTAGUE,

Son of the Honourable George Mountague of Horton, in the County of Northampton, Nephew of Henry Earl of Manchester, who was a Scholar in the Royal College of this Church, Fellow of Trinity College in Cambridge. He so studied the Polite Parts of Learning, that he shone among our first Poets and Orators, altho' by a different Bent of Study, yet with an equal Applause. Being well instructed in the Liberal Sciences, he left the Academick Walks, and came forth into the World, and from being first the Ornament, soon arriv'd to be the Encourager of Learning; for this Gentleman, from his just Oratory in the Parliament, and his Care in the Council, and his fine Language, Integrity and Influence in both, applied himself to the Affairs of our Coin; where opportunely undertaking the intricate Affairs of the Treasury, the Silver Coin being clipp'd, to the great Loss of the Publick, he restored it to its primitive Value. This vast and laborious Undertaking, even at the Time we were in a long War, he both engag'd with and compleated. And lest in the mean Time the Subsidies of the Nation, and Necessaries to it, should be wanting, he wisely took Care that the Private and Publick Credit should not in the least be upon the Totter. For these Deserts to his Country and his Prince, united with well Wishes to both, he added new titular Honours to the antient Glory of his Race, being created first Baron, and then Earl of Hallifax, being the fourth Nobleman of the Name of Mountague. He was lastly honoured with the Garter. While for promoting the Publick Welfare and Profit he wholly employed his Mind, labouring in the Midst of these Designs, he (O! slippery Fate of human Things) died, with Grief of all good

VOL. II.

Men, the 19th of May, Anno Dom. 1715, aged 54.

THESE two last Gentlemen lie in General Monk's Vault, with many others; of which Vault, and the Persons there, as well as the other Vaults in this Chapel, Mention will be made hereafter.

LEAVING this Royal Chapel, the next in the Area is the Chapel of St. Paul.

ON the Left Hand, when you enter this Door, and against the West Wall of this Chapel, is a stately Monument of various coloured Marble, erected to Sir John Puckering, Lord Keeper in the Time of Queen Elizabeth. The Inscription on the Monument in English is as follows:

Sir John Puckering, Knt. remarkable for his Knowledge in the Laws, Piety, Wisdom, and many other Virtues: Privy Counsellor to the serene Princess Elizabeth Queen of England, and Keeper of the Great Seal, after he had given just Decrees for four Years with singular Integrity and Equity, fell asleep in the Lord, and lies here. He lived 52 Years, and died the 30th of April, Anno 1596.

The Publick Care and Laws engag'd my Breast,
To live was toilsome, but to die is Rest.
Wealth, Maces, Guards, Crowns, Titles, Things that fade,
The Prey of Time and Sable Death were made:

VIRTUE FIRES MEN.

His Wife this Statue rears to her lov'd Spouse,
The Test of Constancy and Marriage Vows.

I trust to see the Lord in the Land of the Living.

ADJOINING to the former is a Monument of Black and White Marble, now pretty much broken and injured, on which are two Statues, a Man and a Woman in a cumbent Posture, and over them a Table of Black Marble, bearing only an Inscription on one Side of it. This Monument was erected to Sir James Fullerton, with the following Inscription thereon:

Here lyes the Remnant of Sir James Fullerton, Knight, first Gentleman of the Bedchamber to King Charles the First, (Prince and King) a gracious Rewarder of all Virtue: a severe Reprover of all Vice: a profest Renouncer of all Vanitie. He was a firm Pillar to the Common Wealth: a faithful Patron to the Catholique Church: a faire Patterne to the British Court. He lived to the Welfare of his Country to the Honour of his Prince: to the Glory of his God. He dyed Fuller of Faith: then of Fears: Fuller of Resolucon then of Pains; Fuller of Honour then of Days.

IN the Middle of this Chapel is a Tomb of White Marble, enclosed with Rails, with two antient Statues lying on it, which covers the Body of Sir Giles Daubney, Knt. a Man of great Authority in the Time of King Henry VII. of whose Bedchamber he was. The Inscription, as Mr. Camden has given it us, is thus:

Here lieth buried within this Tomb Sir Giles Daubney, Kt. Lord Lieutenant of Calais, Lord Chamberlain to the Noble King Henry VII. The which Giles died the 22d Day of May, in the Year of our Lord God 1507. And Dame Elizabeth his Wife, the which died in the Year of our Lord God 1500, on whose Souls Jesus have Mercy. Amen.

NEAR

NEAR the Tomb of Fullerton is a very magnificent Monument of Alabaster, with Pillars of Marble and Lydian, gilt, on which is the Effigies of an anrient Person in a Chancellor's Gown, with eight Children kneeling at his Feet. This Monument was erected to Sir Thomas Bromley, as appears by the Epitaph thus translated :

Thomas Bromley, Kt. remarkable for his Wisdom, Piety, and Knowledge of the Law, Privy Counsellor to Queen Elizabeth, and Lord Chancellor, when he had for eight Years delivered Equity with singular Integrity and Temper of Mind, being snatched hastily away, to the Grief of all good Men, was here buried. He lived 57 Years, and died the 12th of April, Anno 1587. He left by his Lady Elizabeth, of the Family of the Fortescues, eight Children. Henry his Son has to the best of Fathers erected this Monument.

ON the Pedestal :

By Labour and Industry. — By Study and Diligence.

ON the East Side of this Chapel is a beautiful Tomb of Alabaster, and other Kinds of Marble, on which is the Effigies of a Lady rob'd, with a Coronet on her Head. This Monument was erected to the Memory of Frances Countess of Suffex, as appears by the following Inscription :

Here lieth the most Honourable Lady Frances, some Time Countess of Suffex, Daughter of Sir William Sidney of Penshurst, Kt. Wife and Widow to that most noble, most wise, and most martial Gentleman, Thomas Ratecliffe, Earl of Suffex ; a Woman, while she lived, adorned with many and most rare Gifts both of Mind and Body, towards God truly and zealously religious ; to her Friends and Kinsfolk most liberal ; to the poor Prisoners, to the Ministers of the Word of God always most charitable. By her last Will and Testament she instituted a Divinity Lecture to be read in this Collegiate Church ; and by the same her Testament gave also 5000 l. towards the building of a new College in the University of Cambridge, with sufficient yearly Revenue for the continual Maintenance of one Master, ten Fellows and twenty Scholars, either in the same College, or else in another House in the said University, already built, commonly called Clare-Hall. She lived 58 Years, and died the 9th of March, and was buried the 15th of April, 1589.

NEXT to this Monument is a stately one of black Touchstone, raised against the Wall, and at the Top of it a Bust of white Marble in a circular Frame of gilt Brass, and on a Table of the same an Inscription. This was erected to Anne Lady Cottington, Baroness of Hanworth.

AT the Feet of which Monument is another curious one, raised like a Table, of black and white Marble, on which, resting on the Left Arm, is the Effigies of Francis Lord Cottington, to whom this was erected, as appears by an Inscription over it. Of this Lord Cottington see much, as well as his Character, in my Lord Clarendon's History of the Rebellion :

Dedicated

To the Memory of ANNE, the pious and beloved Wife of FRANCIS Lord Cottington, Baron of HANWORTH in the County of Middlesex, Daughter of Sir William Meredith of the County of Denbigh, Knt. and of Jane his Wife, Daughter of Sir Tho. Palmer of Wingham in Kent, Knt. and Baronet, who having lived in long and perfect Conjugal Affection, died full of Christian Comfort the 22d Day of Feb. Ann. 1633, ætatis 33, having had one Sonne and fower Daughters ; of which Frances, Elizabeth and Anne, now living, Anno 1635.

Here lyes Francis Lord Cottington of Hanworth, who in the Reign of King Charles I. was Chancellour of his Majesty's Exchequer, Master of his Court of Wards, Constable of the Tower, Lord High Treasurer of England, and one of his Majesty's Privy-Council : He was twice Ambassador in Spain, once for the said King, a second Tyme for King Charles II. now reigning : To both which hee most signally showed his Allegiance and Fidelity during the unhappy Civil Broils of those Times, and for his faithfull Adhearance to the Crown (the Usurpers prevailing) was forced to fly his Country, and during his Exile died at Validolid in Spaine, on the 10th of June, An. Dom. 1652, Æt. suæ 74, whence his Body was brought and here interred by Charles Cottington, Esq; his Nephew and Heir, An. 1679.

NEXT which, in the Skreen of the Chapel, and indeed the whole Skreen is properly Part of the Monument, is an ancient Tomb of grey Marble, under a low Gothick Arch, on which are Boards raised like the Lids of Coffins, or Chests, in old Time, under which, say some Writers, lay the Bodies to whom this Tomb was built in Lead Coffins ; but upon searching under them, there cannot be discovered the least Remains, or the least Likelihood conceived of such Things. Over the Arch, the Skreen is painted with many Arms, of which we have preserved all that remain, for many are gone ; and along the upper Ledge, between these Escutcheons still remains in Text Letters of Gold this Inscription :

Non nobis Domine, non nobis, sed Nomini tuo da gloriam.

BESIDES that which was on the middle Ledge, another but now gone ; however in Mr. Camden's Time it was thus :

Learn to die, to live ever.

AND another in French :

L'honneur adieu, a nous merci.

THIS Monument was erected to one Lewis Robsert, a Native of Hainault, and his Wife Elizabeth, Daughter to Sir Bartholomew Bouchier : He was Standard-Bearer to King Henry V. Knight of the Bath, afterwards Knight of the Garter, and Lord Bouchier. He died Anno 1431. On the Monument are several Arms of the Englisch Gentry, and those of Hainault. This Robsert should seem to be a Relation by Marriage to Jeffry Chaucer, our Poet ; for the Crest to his Arms is that of Sir Payne Roet's of Hainault, Father to Chaucer's Wife, and Catharine Swinford, Dutcheß of Lancaster. The Arms of Roet are likewise on the Skreen, viz. three Wheels, Or, in a Field, Arg. Chaucer's Arms are likewise there, viz. Argent and Gules per pale, a Bendend counterchanged.

THE next Chapel is that of St. John Baptift. In which, on the Right Hand, after entering, is a curious Monument of fine Marble, the Side Pillars of red, and on it a Lady kneeling, representing Mrs. Mary Kendal, of whose excellent Qualities read the following pathetick Inscription, which is on her Tomb :

This

This Monument was erected by Captain Thomas Kendal.

Mrs. M A R Y K E N D A L,
Daughter of Thomas Kendall, Esq; and of Mrs.
Mary Hallet, his Wife, of Killigarth in Cornwall, was born at Westminster, Nov. 8. 1677.
and dyed at Epsom, March the 4th, 1709-10.
having reached the full Term of her blessed Saviour's Life; and study'd to imitate his spotless Example. She had great Virtues, and as great a Desire of concealing them, was of a severe Life, but of an easy Conversation, courteous to all, yet strictly sincere; humble, without Meaness; beneficent without Ostentation; devout without Superstition. These admirable Qualities, in which she was equalled by few of her Sex, sur-pass'd by none, render'd her every Way worthy of that close Union and Friendship, in which she liv'd with the Lady Catharine Jones; and in Testimony of which, she desired, that even their Ashes after Death, might not be divided; and therefore, order'd herself here to be interr'd, where she knew that excellent Lady designed one Day to rest, near the Grave of her belov'd and religious Mother, Elizabeth, Countess of Ranelagh.

ON the South Wall of this Chapel is a handsome Monument, being two Statues of white Marble, resting their Arms on a Marble Table;
on which Table was formerly an Inscription, shewing that one Edward Popham, an Officer, and Colonel in the Rebels Army against King Charles I. lay there; and shewing what was there called the Merits and Glory of that Rebellion:
For which after the Restoration, this Monument was ordered to be defaced; but upon Application made to his Majesty King Charles, by some of the Lady's Relations, who had served the Royal Party, it was suffered to remain, only the Inscription was turned inward.

NEAR the North East Angle of this Chapel, is a handsome Table-Monument of white Marble, erected to the Memory of Thomas Cary, second Son to the Earl of Monmouth: He was of the Bed-Chamber to King Charles I. and died, as is thought, of Grief, soon after the Murder of his Master, viz. Anno 1648, aged 33
Years, and lies in the Lord Hunsdon's Vault.

IN the Midst of this Chapel is a very large Monument of black Marble, of which are, in cumbent Postures, the Effigies of a Nobleman, in the Robes of the Garter, and a Lady on his Right Side, with Space on his Left for another.
This Monument was erected to that great Statesman, Thomas Cecil, Earl of Exeter, as appears by an Inscription round the Ledge, in English thus:

Thomas Cecil, Earl of Exeter, Baron of Burleigh, Knt. of the Garter, Privy Councillor to King James, with his two dearly loved Wives, Dorothy Nevil, Daughter and Coheir to the noble Lord Latimer; his first Wife, and Frances Bridges, of the noble Family of the Chandois, his second Wife: They rest under this Monument in firm Hope of a Resurrection.

AGAINST the East Wall of this Chapel, where was formerly the Altar of St. John Baptist, is a most magnificent Monument of various Marble and Alabaster, gilt with Gold, and adorn'd with Sculpture. This Monument was erected to the Memory of Henry Carey, first Cousin to Queen Elizabeth, by the Mother's Side. This Gentleman, tho' much esteem'd by the Queen, could not attain those Honours he deserved;
which, as they were always the Rewards of Merit, so came they very seldom from the Hand of that wise and judicious Princess. This Gentleman at length took the Disappointment to Heart, at which the Queen, moved too late, created him a Baron, and ordered the Patent and Robes to be laid upon his Bed; but Honours appearing to him then in a juster Light, when wisely instructed by Death, he left them and the World together, and lies in a Vault near this Tomb, Anno 1596.

AGAINST the West Wall of this Chapel, under an Arch, is an antient Monument of grey Marble, plated with Brass, insculp'd with the Figure of a Knight in Armour, under his Head his Helmet, with an Unicorn's Head for the Crest, and Escutheons at each Corner, with some Remains of other Engraving; the Ledge is gone, but when in Being, some Time since, bore
this Inscription:

Thomas Vaughan — & Thesaur. Comer. Edwardi IV. & Camerar.
Principis & primogenitis — requiesca-- in pace
Amen.

ON the South Side of this Chapel is an antient Monument of Free-Stone, where under a Gothick
Canopy, lies the Image of a Bishop in his Habit.
This was erected to the Memory of Thomas Ru-thall, Bishop of Durham, born at Cirencester, in Glocestershire, educated at Cambridge, where he commenced Doctor of Laws, preferr'd by Henry VII. to the See of Durham, made Privy Counsellor to Henry VIII. who employed him, as being a wise and learned Man, in several Embassies. The odd Manner of this Gentleman's Death, take from Bishop Godwin.

It pleased the King one Time to require him to set down his Judgment in Writing, concerning the Estate of his Kingdom in general, and particularly to inform him in certain Things by him specified. This Discourse the Bishop writ very carefully, and caused it to be bound in Vellum, gilt, and otherwise adorned in the best Manner. Now you shall understand, how that it chanced him about the same Time to set down a Note of his own private Estate, containing an Inventory not only of his Utensils and Household-Stuff in every of his Houses, with their Value, but also of his Monies, either owing to him, or Deniers contained ready in his Coffers, which amounted to an infinite Treasure, no less than 100,000 l. This Account was written in a Paper Book of the same Fashion and Binding that the other was, which he had provided for the King; whereby it happened, that the King sending Cardinal Wolsey for the other Draught that he had so long before required of him, the Bishop mistaking, delivered that which contained the Report of his own Wealth and private Estate:
This the Cardinal soon espying, and willing to do the Bishop a Displeasure, (for there had been long and great Emulation between them) delivered it as he had received it, to the King, shewing how the Bishop had happily mistaken himself; for now (quoth he) you see where you may at any Time command a great Mass of Money, if you need it. As soon as the Bishop understood his own Error, the Conceit thereof touch'd him so near, as within a very short Time after he died.

THIS Prelate's Death happen'd in the Year
1523. He built the great Chamber at Aukland, Part of the Bridge over the River Tyne, and intended to rebuild the Parish-Church of Cirencester, but was prevented by Death. On his Tomb was this Inscription:

Hic jacet Thomas Ruthall, Episcopus Du-nelmen. & Regis Henrici septimi Secretarius, qui obiit 1524.

ADJOINING to this is another antient Monument of Free-stone, with the Image of a miter'd Abbot. This was raised over one William de Colchester, Abbot of this Church.

A third antient Monument is the Westward of the three; it is plain, arched in the Skreen, and grated with Iron. Towards the Area, and on the Frieze of the Stone-work, is Flacket in a Cypher, intimating, that George Flacket, Abbot of Westminster, in the Time of Henry VII. lies here.

ON the Tomb of Flacket is a large Stone Coffin, with a Cross on it, said by some to contain the Body of one of the Bokun's, Earls of Hereford; by others, Thomas Milling, Bishop of Hereford, and some Time Abbot of this Church. True it is, that when Camden wrote of these Monuments, Milling lay in medio hujus Sacelli; but that he was removed upon making the Earl of Exeter's Monument, is meer Conjecture. Certain it is, that one Richard de Crosseby, Abbot in Henry III's Time, being bury'd in St. Edmund's Chapel, and that Chapel in Time decaying, his Body was carry'd to that of St. Nicholas, and laid under a little plain Stone; but afterwards, in Henry VI's Time, the Body was taken up, and seen in a Stone Coffin whole and sound, dressed in his Mass Habit; and it is not unlikely that it rested there above Ground till a more convenient Repository happened on the Tomb of one of his Predecessors. Another Reason that makes it doubted to be Milling's, is, the antient Form of it, and the Matter itself; for Stone Coffins were very rarely, if at all, used here in the 14th Century: But however doubtful the Name of the Owner of it is, the Historian of this Church, Mr. Keep, was much mistaken in asserting that it contained a Body visible, but somewhat defaced by its Removal; which if it was so, it has in thirty Years, notwithstanding its Stone Security, met with strange Alteration; for, upon Inspection, there are not the least Remains of Bones, or any Appearance that it had been inhabited; were it not for three or four Oak Boards (once the inward Chest, a firmer Proof of its Antiquity) fallen flat one on the other, and lying at the Bottom of the Stone Coffin.

NEAR the Lord Hunsdon's Vault is a small Grave-stone, with this Inscription:

Charles Howard, third Son of the Right Honourable Charles Earl of Carlisle, who was born the fifth Day of September, Anno Dom. 1668, and died the third of April 1670, and lieth here interred.

LEAVING this, we come to the Chapel of Islip, call'd commonly, St. Erasmus.

IN which Chapel, in the Midst, is a plain Marble Table, with four small Pillars of Brass supporting it; under which Table was a Skeleton of Alabaster, in a Shrowd, now taken away, representing John Islip, Abbot of Westminster, in the Time of Henry VII. Founder of this Chapel, and a great Benefactor to this Church.

ON the East Wall of this Chapel, is a handsome Monument of white Marble, erected to Sir Christopher Hatton, Knight of the Bath, by his Lady Alice. He died the 23d of July, 1596. Aged 72.

OVER this Chapel is the Chauntry of Islip, to which we ascend by Stone Steps; in it are two large Presses of Wainscot, containing the Effigies of our Princes, and other great Persons who have been buried here, which were carried in open Chariots at their Funerals, and laid on Hearses, in this Church: There are many of them, but sadly mangled; some with their Faces broke, others broken in sunder, and most of them stripped of their Robes.

In the Chapel of St. John the Evangelist. At the Entrance into this Chapel, and under the Skreen which incloses it from the Area, are two antient Monuments of Free Stone, raised four Feet from the Ground; on that on the Right Hand, is the Image of an Abbot in his Mass Habit, curiously sculp'd in Brass.

THE Monument on the Left Hand, bears the Figure of a Knight armed, sculp'd as the former, resting his Feet on a Lyon, and his Head on a Greyhound. There has been an Inscription, but it is now torn from the Ledge, excepting these Words, Mensis Maii ———.

UNDER which, the Register of this Church informs us, lies buried Sir John Herpedon, Knt. who died Anno 1457.

ON the North Side of this Tomb, and within the Chapel, is a large Tomb of Free-Stone, with a Brass Inscription round the Ledge; on which were, in Brass Plates, several Escutcheons and Verses, now torn away. Under this is buried Sir Thomas Parry, Knt. Treasurer of the Household, Master of the Court of Wards and Liveries, who died the 15th of December 1560. Anno 2 Eliz. as the Inscription expresses it: Hic jacet Thomas Parry, Reginae, Obiit 15 Decemb. A. D. 1560.

AGAINST the East Wall, on a Basis bearing in Relievo the Siege of a Town, is a Statue in a Roman Habit, with a Battoon and Shield, one of the Eyes sabled as if lost, and on each Side the Pedestal a Pallas curiously carved. This Monument was erected to Sir George Holles, Nephew to Sir Francis Vere, at whose Feet he lies, and Brother to John Earl of Clare. His Epitaph mentions his being Major-General in the Netherlands, with his Uncle Sir Francis; and that he died the 14th Kal. of January, 1626, being aged 50 Years, three Months and four Days.

IN the Midst of this Chapel is a monumental Table, covered with a Coat Armour, supported on the Shoulders of four Knights kneeling, under which lies the Effigies of Sir Francis Vere, Knt. in a Gown, on a Quilt of Alabaster. A Gentleman of singular Character, both for Arms and Letters; of the first, his being trained up from his Youth in the Camp, being 30 Years in the States Service, and 20 Years the Queen's General over the English, are sufficient Proofs; and for the second, his learned and excellent Commentaries will witness. He died the 28th of August 1608. On the Basis of the Tomb, being black polished Marble, is this Inscription in Letters of Gold: "Francisco Vero Equiti aurato Galfridi F. Johannis Comitibus Oxoniae nepoti, Briellæ & Portsmouthæ præfecto, Anglicarum copiarum in Belgio ductori summo; Elizabethæ Uxor viro charissimo, quo cum conjunctissime vixit, hoc supremum amoris & fidei conjugalis monumentum moestissima & cum lacrymis gemens, posuit. Obiit 28 die Augusti, An. Salutis 1608. Etatis suæ 54."

NEAR the Tomb of his Ancestor lies buried Aubrey de Vere, the last Earl of Oxford of that Name, which had continued from the Conquest in that Earldom, and for the most Part retained the Christian Name. He was Lieutenant-General of her late Majesty's Forces, of the Privy-Council, and Knight of the Garter: He died March the 12th, 1702, without any Male Issue, whereby that Earldom, with that of Earl Mortimore, were by the Queen conferred on the Right Honourable Robert Harley, first Lord of the Treasury. In the same Place, on his Left Side, lies his Lady Dianah, Countess-Dowager of Oxford; she was interred here on the 16th Day of April, 1719, in a Coffin of Lead. And on her Left Hand is a Stone Coffin, but the Owner of it is doubtful.

NEAR

NEAR the Foot of Holles is the late Duke of Newcastle's Grave-Stone, with the Inscription; of whom, when we come to his Monument in the North Cross.

THE next or middle-most of the three, now one with them, and looking to the North Area, is the CHAPEL of St. MICHAEL.

ON the East Side of this Chapel was some Time since a Monument of Alabaster and Marble, representing the Effigies of a Lady in a Ruff and the Elizabeth Dress, cumbent, and resting on her Right Hand, with two Children kneeling by her. This Monument, which, in repairing the Church, has, notwithstanding the utmost Care, been broken to Pieces, was erected with Intent to perpetuate the Memory of Catharine Lady St. John, who died in the Year 1614.

ON the same East Side of this Chapel is another, erected to the Dutches of Somerset, with an Inscription, thus Englised:

Here lies the late most illustrious Sarah Dutches of Somerset, ever celebrated for her Charity and Beneficence, who erected a Grammar-School for Boys at Tottenham in the County of Middlesex, enlarged the Income of the Green-Coat Hospital at Westminster; largely endowed Brazen-Nose-College in Oxford, and St. John's in Cambridge, for the educating and nourishing Youth in Piety and good Literature: She was likewise an Encourager of Trades and Handicrafts, and had a tender Regard to Old Age, by erecting an Alms-house at Froxfield in Wiltshire for thirty Widows. She was very charitable to the Poor of St. Margaret's Westminster, where she instituted a Lecture, and gave many stately Ornaments to the Church. She died the 25th of October 1692.

CHAPEL of St. ANDREW.

ON the North West Corner of this Chapel is the antient Grey Marble Tomb of Abbot Kirton.

AGAINST the East Wall is a Table Monument, to preserve the Memory of Sir John Bourgh.

THE Narrative Part of which Epitaph on the Monument is thus in English: The Magnanimous Illustrious Man John Bourgh, Son of the Noble Baron the Lord William Bourgh, descended from that brave Hero Hubert de Bourgh, some Time Earl of Kent, and the Noble Lady the Lady Catharine Clinton, Daughter of the Lord Edward Clinton, Son to the Earl of Lincoln, late Admiral of England, famous for his Exploits both by Sea and Land; Governor of Duisburgh, twice honoured with Knighthood, first in the Netherlands by the illustrious Earl of Leicester, Governor of her Majesty's Forces, and those of the United Provinces; afterwards by Henry IV. King of France, at the Victory of St. Andrean. At length, endeavouring to take and bring into England a huge Spanish Ship, called a Carack, laden with Jewels, Gold, Silver, Indian Spices, &c. a Prize worthy a Naval Crown, and deserving the highest Applauses; whilst he, led by an unhappy Security of Mind, despised the Enemy, tho' too well guarded, and boldly defended superior to his Force, he met an untimely Death, to the Grief of his Friends, and Loss of his Country, in the 32d Year of his Age, on the 7th of March 1594. Thus snatched away, he here waits the Trumpet of a general Resurrection. In the mean Time, to stay the flying Memory of so great a Man, this Monument, &c.

HERE also near him lies Sir John Burrough, Governor under the Earl of Essex in the Time of Queen Elizabeth.

N^o 34. VOL. II.

IN this Chapel lies also buried, by the particular Directions of Queen Elizabeth, Henry Noel, Esq; Brother to Sir And. Noel. He was Gentleman Pensioner to the Queen, and much esteemed at Court for genteel Address, and Skill in Musick. He died in February 1596.

IN the Middle of this Chapel, under a most magnificent and curious Monument of various Marble and Alabaster, adorned with Relieve, and beautified with Painting and Gilding, lies buried Sir Francis Norris, a famous Warrior in the Netherlands, in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, by whom he was created Lord Norris of Rycott; and his Lady. Their Statues are at full Length on the Tomb, but there is no Inscription, nor it's likely ever was; for Mr. Keep, in his Time, tells us he could see no more Remains of any.

ON the West Side of this Chapel is the Back of the late Duke of Newcastle's Tomb, the Front being to the North Cross.

HAVING thus gone through all the Chapels; wherein are Monuments, for in that of St. Blase there are no Remains of any; we now return through the three last Chapels, now laid open into one, where in Keep's Time the Lower Convocation sat, into the Sacristary, or circular Passage surrounding St. Edward's Chapel, and affording a Passage to the others, in which Area, the several Tombs erected, and Persons of Distinction buried, we next proceed to mention. And first to begin with the three antient ones, on the West End and North Side of it, fronting the Chapels of St. Erasmus and St. John the Evangelist on one Side, and enclosing one Part of the Pavement before the Altar, and once open to it on the other, which in Keep's Time were thence to be viewed by withdrawing the Tapestry Hangings, but since erecting the new Altar wainscotted close up, and one of them to be by no Means seen, and the others only from the Side next the Area.

THE first of these, which is entirely clos'd up, is the Westernmost of the three; and near the Iron Rail Gates, enclosing the Area from the North Cross, where, till of late Years, they attended to shew the Tombs, as they do now in the South Side. The Tomb is of Free-stone, made like a close Bed, the Back of it wall'd toward the Area, against which Bishop Duppa's Tomb is placed; the Tomb is covered with an antient Gothick Arch, almost a half Circle, and an Obtuse Rising over it, and adorned on the Top with a Fleur-de-liz; on the Side of the Arch are Vine Branches in Relievo, the Roof within is composed of many Angles, under which lies the Image of a Lady in a very antient Dress, muffled under the Chin, and a Veil partly over her, her Feet resting upon two Lyons, and her Head on Pillows, supported by Angels sitting on each Side the Effigies, gilt and painted; on the Side of the Tomb are six Niches, on which seem to have been painted, Six Monks; and on the Pedestal, towards the Area, are Remains of Painting. This Tomb may, by the Curious, be seen justly engraved in Mr. Sandford's Genealogical History of the Kings of England. It was erected for Aveline Countess of Lancaster, Daughter to William de Fortibus, Earl of Albemarle and Holderness, by Isabella, Daughter and Heir of Baldwin, Sister and Heir of Baldwin de Ripariis, or Rivers Earl of Devon; she was married to Edmond Earl of Lancaster, Son to King Henry III. on the 6th of the Ides of April 1269, being Thursday before St. Ambrose; at which Marriage the King was present. In Right of this Lady, as Heir both to Father and Mother, her Husband had the Earldoms aforesaid, and the Isle of Wight. She died the same Year of her her Marriage. Dugdale mentions one Aveline Countess of Lancaster, married this Year, who died at Stockwel, near LONDON, 4 Id. of Nov. 1293, and was buried in the Priory of Bromore in Wilts.

ON the Back of which is a Table-Monument of white Marble, erected for Dr. Duppa, Bp. of Winchester, and Tutor to King Charles II. All in general who mention him gave him the Character of a Person of excellent Qualifications, singular and exemplary Piety, of a resigned Humility and extensive Charity; to which, if we add, a graceful and comely Personage, he was every Way qualified for the Tuition of the Prince; and the Conversation of the distressed King, who, when a Prisoner in Carisbrook Castle, used to say his Confinement was much relieved by that Divine's Conversation, and whose exemplary Conduct had raised such Reverence for him in his Royal Pupil, Charles II. that the Day before his Death that Prince came to Richmond, and at the Bed-Side asked his Blessing on his bended Knees: He lived universally beloved, and died equally esteemed. He lived not two Years after the Restoration, and in that Time he was a considerable Benefactor to Christ-Church College, and that of All Souls in Oxford, to all the Cathedral Churches over which he had formerly presided; founded an Hospital at Greenwich, where he was born, with this Inscription over the Door, A poor Bishop vow'd this House, but a great and wealthy one built it; and lastly, he founded that remarkable Hospital at Richmond, where he died. These Instances are sufficient Proofs of this great and good Man. Upon this Prelate's Death, his Body was removed to York-House in the Strand, and thence in State hither, Dr. King, Bishop of Chichester, preached his funeral Sermon. His Epitaph translated into English is as follows:

BRIAN DUPPA, Votive to immortal Memory here deposited his Mortality, who was born at Greenwich towards the End of the Year 1588, on the 10th of March, first a Scholar at Westminster School, where he was instructed in Hebrew by the then Dean, Lancelot Andrews, next Student of Christ-Church in Oxford, elected A. M. in All Souls, created D. D. and made Chaplain to the Elector Palatine; afterwards revisiting his College of Christ-Church, he presided as Dean there the Space of ten Years; but higher Cares waited for, greater Employment required so eminent a Person. He attended as Tutor to the Prince of most Royal Expectation; from whence being graced with three successive Mitres, he became the Ornament of as many Churches, Chichester, Salisbury; and lastly, upon King Charles's Restoration, of Winchester; with which Title he was distinguished, and that of Prelate of the Garter. In the Beginning of his 74th Year, A. D. 1662, on the 26th of March, being at Richmond, where he lived while the Prince's Tutor, where he lay concealed in the troublesome Times, and where he founded a remarkable Hospital. He, folded in the Arms of his Royal Pupil, breath'd forth his pious Soul.

HE lies under the Pavement between the Tomb of Valence, and Erasmus's Chapel: Over his Body is a large Stone of Blue Marble, thus inscribed: Hic jacet Brianus Winton.

THE next, being the middle-most of the three antient ones before-mentioned, is composed of Gothick Arches, and Spires of grey Marble inlaid, after the Mosaick Manner, with stained Glass, and the Effigies on it dressed in Scarlet, painted and gilt, with a Surcoat of Arms; this Monument was erected over Alhelmer, or Aymer, surnamed Valence, third Son of Wm. Earl of Pembroke, before-mentioned, by Joan his Wife: He was a famous Warrior in the Time of King Edward III. in the 25th Year of whose Reign he attended him in his Expedition into Flanders; in the 26th Year he went against the Scots; in the 29th, Ambassador into France; in the 34th, Guardian of the Marches, and the King's Lieutenant in Scotland, and went against Robert de Bruce, whose Wife he took in the Castle of Kentire, and Nigel his Brother; the latter of which he hanged, and all the rest in the Castle, after a barbarous Manner. He attended Edward I. in his last Expedition into Scotland; and Burgh upon Sands, where the King died, was appointed by him on his Death-Bed to carry his dying Charge to his Son against Gavestone, &c. In the first Year of Edward II. he was sent to the Pope, and the Year following joined with others in pulling down Gavestone, the King's Favourite, and was one of them that seized him in Scarborough Castle, whence he was taken and hanged. In the 10th of Edward II. he was at the Battle of Bannocksbourne, and in the same Year was taken Prisoner abroad, and obliged to ransom himself for 20,000 l. of Silver. In the 11th of Edward III. he was Governor of Rockingham Castle, and siding with the Change of the Government, ungenerously and unjustly was one of the Judges that gave Sentence on Thomas Earl of Lancaster, which (as some say) occasioned his own Death soon after; for the 17th of King Edward III. attending Queen Isabel into France, he was there murdered on the 23d of June, dying without Issue, though he had three Wives, the last of which who survived him was Mary of St. Paul. He was a tall pale Man, says Walsingham, and from thence came the Joke made on him by Gavestone, who floutingly used to call him Joseph the Jew.

THE third and Eastermost of the three is more stately and lofty than the former, painted, gilt and inlaid with stained Glass, the Inside of the Canopy being a Sky with Stars, but by Age turned into a dull Red. This was erected for Edmund Crouchback, fourth Son to Henry III. by his Wife Isabel, Daughter and Coheir to Raymond Earl of Provence, born 16 Jan, 1245, or according to Wykes, 1244. He was surnamed Crouchback, as some think, on Account of bowing or bending his Back; which Opinion is by others accounted ridiculous; and Harding particularly says, it was a Reflection made upon him Parties in Government, for indeed Lancaster's Claim arose from him: Others suppose it given him (according to the Custom of those Times, surnaming from Features or Dress,) upon Account of his Journey into the Holy Land with his Brother Edward, and comes from the Word Crouch, a Cross, then worn as Distinction on that Affair; and Wykes observes, that upon this Expedition vast Numbers were eager of it; Caractare Crucis humeros suos adornabant. Others assert, he is no where in Writings called by any Title but Gibbosus, Bunchback, and that is most probable. At 19 Years old he was, upon Simon de Montfort's Forfeiture, created Earl of Leicester, and Steward of England: At his 21st Year he was made Earl of Lancaster; which Title he always used, and had afterwards the Earldom and Estate of Ferrars Earl of Derby, together with that of Campaign, about the Year 1255. Upon the Death of the Emperor Frederick, the Pope offer'd the Kingdoms of Sicily, Apulia, and Calabria to Richard King of Almain, on Condition to pay him a vast Sum of Money that he had disbursed in defending them, and of the Papal Patrimony; but he refusing, the Pope sent a Ring by one of his Bishops, in order to invest this Edmund with those Dominions, although Conradus was then living: Upon which (says Matthæw Paris) his Heart exulted, as though he had already ready the Fealty of the Subjects, and Possession of the Kingdoms, and instantly he vowed a Journey thither: The King, no less pleased with this titular Honour, sent Peter de Eglebank, Bishop of Hereford, to Rome, who accordingly obligated the Nation for the Payment of a vast Sum in Marks of Silver, but this proving only a Slight of the Court of Rome, to impose upon that credulous Prince his Father; after this prodigious Imposition it ended in fumo, though to further it there were several Pieces of Gold stamped with this Title, Aidmundus Rex Siciliae. He married two Wives, the first Aveline before-mentioned, the other Blanch, Queen of Navarr, Widow of Henry, by whom he had three Sons, Thomas Earl of Lancaster, executed, and reputed a Saint in Edward II's Time; John Lord of Monmouth, and John who lived in France: Lastly, Being sent in the Reign of his Brother Edward I. into Aquitain, with an Army, he there performed many notable Exploits; but being disappointed by his Soldiers falling from him, he took it to Heart and died at Bayon, on the Feast of Pentecost, in the Year 1296, giving Order on his Death-Bed not to bury him till his Debts were paid; and was two Months after brought into England, and interred here with great Solemnity. Harding says, he was slain at Bayon, at the same Time with William of Valence. These three Tombs formerly inclosed this Side of the Chancel, and made a glorious Appearance from the Altar. On the Base of this Tomb, towards the Area, are the Remains of a curious, and perhaps the antientest Painting extant, but much defaced, being ten Knights armed with Banners and Surcoats of Arms, and cross-belted, representing, undoubtedly, his Expedition into the Holy Land, the Number so suiting what Matthew Paris says, that there was himself, Brother, four Earls, and four Barons, of which some may be discovered, as one with a Surcoat Checquee, representing the Lord Roger Clifford. The Annals of Waverly mention William of Valence and Thomas de Clare, but they are not distinguishable, the Colours on their Surcoats being lost.

ON a small Monument of White Marble, adorned with an Urn, and affixed to the Corner of St. Erasmus's Chapel, erected to the Memory of Mrs. Christian Ker, is this Inscription: Here lies the Body of Mrs. Christian Ker, the most deservedly beloved Wife of William Ker, of Charro, in the County of Twigdale in Scotland, eldest Daughter to Sir William Scot of Harden, Baronet, in the said County. She departed this Life upon the 16th Day of May, in the 41st Year of her Age, Anno Dom. 1694.

ON a Grave-Stone: Here lies interred the Body of Rebecca Foliot, Daughter of the Honourable Henry Lord Foliot, who departed this Life, Sept. 5, 1697, the eleventh Year of her Age.

ON the Pavement near the Grave-Stone of Bishop Duppa, and at the Feet of the former, is a Blue one with this Inscription: Johannes Doughty, S. T. P. hujus Ecclesiae Prebendarius. Obiit xxv. Dec. M d c lxxii. Aetatis suae lxxv.

THIS Gentleman, who was a Friend of the Bishop's, was born at Martley in Worcestershire, was Fellow of Merton-College, Oxon 1619; afterwards Chaplain to the Earl of Northumberland; presented by his College to the Rectory of Lapworth in Warwickshire; but, upon the breaking out of the Grand Rebellion, he left all, and retired to the King at Oxford, where he was (by Bishop Duppa) preferr'd to be Lecturer to St. Edmund's Church in that City. After the King's Forces were routed in the West, he retired to LONDON, and liv'd with Sir Nathaniel Brent in Little Britain; after the Restoration, he was made a Prebendary of this Church, Rector of Cheam in Surrey, and commenced Doctor in Divinity. He lived to be childish a second Time, by Age, and died at Westminster on Christmas-Day, as before-mentioned.

NOT far from the Chapel of St. John the Evangelist, and joining the Bottom of Abbot Estney's Tomb, are two old Grave-stones plated with two Images of Monks of this Church, one of them for Thomas Brown, the other for Humphry Roberts.

SOMEWHAT lower than which, and nearer King Henry VII's Chapel, is another plated Grave-stone, with this Inscription:

Hic jacet frater Gulielmus Amundisham quondam Monachus hujus Loci Receptor. nostri Canonici. Qui obiit Anno Dom. 1420. Mense Julii Die Decimo quarto; cujus Animæ propitietur Deus. Amen.

AFFIXED to a Pillar on the East Side St. Erasmus's Chapel Door, a Monument for Jane Crew, Daughter of Sir John Poultney, Knt. and Wife to Sir Cloppesby Crew; she died the 2d of December, Anno 1639, aged 30 Years.

ON the other Side one of the like Materials, with this Inscription:

Juliana Crew Virgo pientissima, clarissima & unica Filia Ranulphi de Crew Equitis Aurati, Regi Tribunalis Capitalis Justiciarii, ex Juliana de Cloppesby conjuge, vetustæ familiæ de Cloppesby in agro Norfolciensi Cohæredes suscepta, Redemptoris adventum his expectat. vernante ætate in Patriam, obiit 22 Apr. 1621.

That is,

Julian Crew, a most pious young Lady, the dearest and only Daughter of Ralph de Crew, Kt. Chief Justice of the King's Bench, by Julian de Cloppesby his Wife, a Coheiress of the antient Family of Cloppesby in Norfolk, here expects her Redeemer's coming. She died in the Flower of her Age, on the 22d of April 1621.

UNDER a Grave-stone near it, and at Dr. Doughty's Feet, lies John Crew of Crew in Cheshire, who died Anno 1683-4.

ADJOINING to the Base of King Henry III's Tomb lies buried John Lord Viscount Fitzharding: On his Grave-stone this Inscription: Here lieth the Body of John Fitzharding, Lord Viscount Fitzharding, of Bear-haven, and Baron Berkeley of Rathdown in the Kingdom of Ireland; he was one of the four Tellers of the Exchequer, and Treasurer of the Chamber of her Majesty Queen Anne, and Custos Rotulorum of Somersetshire. Who departed this Life the 19th Day of Decemb. 1711. in the 63d Year of his Age.

UNDER a Gravestone at his Feet lies his Lady.

ON the opposite Side the Area, and near the Bases of Ruthal and Colchester's Tombs, is an old Grave-stone plated with Brass, representing a Man, but much worn, for John Windsor, Nephew to Sir William of Windsor, a famous Man in the Reign of King Edward III. Lieutenant of Ireland, and who married to the famous Alice Perers, the King's reputed Mistress. This John, who liv'd at Stanwel, had been a Soldier in his Youth, and was a great Commander in the Wars in Ireland, and in the Battle at Shrewsbury with King Henry IV. but repenting him of his Bloodshed, finished his Life in Piety, and died in the 2d of King Henry V. on Easter-Eve, viz. 7th of April 1414.

THE next Monument in the Area, is a curious one of White Marble, representing a Lady on her her Death-bed, with Mourners weeping, done finely in Relieve, but the Light (not being consulted in affixing it) falls so strongly on the Nose of the dead Person, that it represents it as a Dent, and entirely ruins the Beauty of the Face. This Monument was erected for Esther de la Tour de Gouvernet, the Lord Eland's Lady; the Inscription in English thereon, is as follows:

ESTHER DE LA TOUR DE GOUVERNET,

A Name renowned in France: And which her excellent Endowments of Mind and Body rendered much more illustrious, Was the best of Wives, And soon the Widow of the most Noble Lord Eland, Eldest Son of the Marquiss of Halifax. Her extraordinary Goodness towards all, Her singular Dutifulness to her Parents, Made her beloved of all, But by her Mother above all. Her Soul thus adorned with heavenly Graces she early resigned to Heaven, and her Body to this Tomb, Which her Mother (herself almost buried in Sorrows) As the least Mark of her unspeakable Grief made for her. She dyed the 28th Year of her Age; Of the Christian Account 1694.

NEAR the same Place is likewise buried the Lady Esther, Marchioness de Gouvernet, Mother of the above-mentioned Lady; she dyed July 4, 1722, aged 86 Years, and was buried from the Jerusalem Chamber on Tuesday July 10. These two Ladies lie in a handsome Vault near the aforesaid Tomb, in which lies the Mother of the last mentioned, and Grandmother of the first. There is Room for four Coffins remaining.

BETWEEN King Henry III's Tomb and St. Paul's Chapel Door is a Grave-stone thus inscrib'd: Sir Thomas Peyton of the County of Kent, died Feb. 11, 1683-4. And under it, on the same Grave-stone: Here also lies Dame Catharine Longville, Relict of Sir Thomas Longville, of Wolverpton in the County of Bucks, Bart. and second Daughter to Sir Thomas Peyton of Knowlton in Kent, Bart. Died Dec. 30. 1715, aged 70.

ON a Grave-stone adjoining: Here lies Elizabeth Longville, Wife to William Longville, Esq; of the Inner Temple, London, and third Daughter to Sir Thomas Peyton of Knowlton in Kent, Bart. died Jan. 14, 1715, aged 69.

NEAR them, but with no Inscription, lies William Longville, Esq; who died March 1721, aged 21 Years, and was buried March 30.

ON a Grave-stone near St. Paul's Door: Here lies the Body of George Wild, Esq; lately a Member of the Honourable House of Commons in Parliament; Son of George Wild, late Sergeant at Law, deceased, and youngest Brother of John Wild, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer. Obijt 15 die Jan. 1649. In vita honest. in lege & literis erudit. in morte fortis & pius.

THIS Wild, who is here called Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, must not be look'd on as a Judge, but an Executioner, he being a Creature of Cromwell's, and made use of in all his bloody Designs, and was the Person who barbarously condemn'd Captain Burley for attempting the King's Escape from the Isle of Wight, and was the first that hanged a Man for High Treason in adhering to his Prince; and soon after acquitted Rolph for attempting to shoot the King; for which, says the Noble Historian, this infamous Judge was made Lord Chief Baron.

THE next Monument in the Area is at the Corner of St. Nicholas's Chapel, and near the Steps to King Henry VII's Chapel; it is of Alabaster and Marble, adorned with a neat Urn, erected for Sir Thomas Ingram, Knt. a famous Loyalist, Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaster, and Privy Counsellor to King Charles II. The Inscription follows:

Here lies interred, in full Assurance of a glorious Resurrection;
the Body of the Right Hon^{ble} Sir Thomas Ingram, Knt. who for his eminent Loyalty, Sufferings and Services to and for their Majesties King Charles the 1st and 2d, was by the latter made Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaster, and one of his most Honourable Privy Council.

He married Frances Daughter of Tho. Lord Vice count Faconberge, by whom he had Issue Mary his only Childe, who died in the 12th Year of her Age, An^o Dom. 1651. and lies likewise here interr'd. He was primitively religious and eminently (without Ostentation) charitable, an excellent Subject, a most affectionate Husband and a faithful Friend, and to the great Grief of his Lady and Relations Loss, to his Prince and the Publick he exchanged his Earthly for a Heavenly Habitation the 13 Day of Feb. 1671. to whose dear Memory this Monument was erected by his disconsolate Lady.

OPPOSITE to it, and fixed to the Corner of King Henry V's Chapel, on this Side, as Madam de Gouvernet's is, on the other, and under Phillippa's Tomb, is a Monument of Black Marble, with a Bust of Brass, gilt, for Sir Robert Aiton, Knt. a Person of great Virtue and Learning, especially in Poetry: He was a Gentleman of the Privy Chamber to King James, and sent Legate into Germany to the Emperor. He died Anno 1638.

AFFIXED to the Pillar dividing St. Nicholas's from St. Edmund's Chapel, is a Monument of Alabaster, being a Bust, gilt in some Places with Gold, erected for Richard Tufton, Esq; with this Epitaph:

Here lies the Body of Richard Tufton, Esq; third Son of Sir John Tufton, of Hothfield in Kent, Knight and Baronet, by Christian Brown, his Wife, one of the Daughters and Coheirs of Sir Humphry Brown, Knight, one of the Justices of the Common-Pleas, and Anne his Wife, Daughter to George Earl of Kent. Which Sir John Tufton left Issue married, by the aforesaid Christian his Wife, Nicholas Baron of Tufton and Earl of Thanet, Humphrey Tufton, Knight, the aforesaid Richard Tufton, and William Tufton, Baronet, of Ireland, Cicely Countess of Rutland, and Mary Countess of Dunbar; the rest died unmarried. This Richard married Crisogon, youngest Daughter and Coheir of Herbert Morley of Gline in Sussex, Esq; The other Daughter of the said Morley being Margaret, and the eldest, was married unto Sir Humphry Tufton before-named, who erected this Monument in Memory of his Brother Mr. Richard Tufton, who departed this mortal Life, leaving Issue John, Mary, and Christian, the 4th of October, Anno Dom. 1631.

IN this Part of the Area lie three Grave-stones for the Honourable Persons following, thus inscribed:

ON the First, adjoining Abbot Berkynges's Grave-stone; Dame Frances Apsley, who died Sept. 22. 1698.

ON the Second, Sir Samuel Apsley, who departed this Life Octob. 15. 1683.

ON

ON the Third, Allen Apsley, Esq; who died Aug. 5, in the Year 1691.

BETWEEN the Basis of King Richard II's Tomb, and that of King Edward III. lies Thomas Bilson, D.D. he was some Time Warden of Manchester College, next made Bishop of Worcester 1595; having sat there two Years, was translated to Winchester, and made Privy Counsellor to King James I. He died June 18, 1616, aged 69 Years.

NEAR this is an antient Stone, but the Plates torn off, which was for Ralph Selby, Doctor of the Civil and Canon Laws, and Monk of this House; he was in great Favour with King Henry IV. and his Son, and died Sept. 29, 1420, in the 8th of the latter's Reign.

NEAR the Basis of King Richard II's Tomb, in the Area, is an antient flat Stone in the Pavement, formerly plated with a Man's Effigies, and a Canopy, with Arms, and an Inscription round it, of which no more is remaining than broken Words: Under this is buried Sir John Golofre, (or Holofre) called Lord of Langley, natural Son of Sir John Golofre, Kt. by Johannet Pulham. This Golofre was a famous Man in King Richard II's Time, by whom he was sent Ambassador into France, Anno 1389, and was one of the King's Favourites, prosecuted by the discontented Lords, and had suffered as Burleigh and others, but that he was abroad. He married (as some say) the Lady Philippa Fitzwalter, and Dutcheß of York, who lies buried in St. Nicholas's Chapel; yet Dugdale says he married Elizabeth Countess of Sarum, Sister to the said Philippa. He died at Wallingford in the County of Oxford, 20 Richard II. 1396, having directed his Body should be buried in the Chapel of the Friars Minors Church at Oxford, near his Father's, if he should die before his Wife; but notwithstanding that, the King gave Orders for his Burial in this Church. At the End of his Will, dated three Days before his Death, it is said, That whereas he willed his Body to be buried in the Grey Friars at Oxon, yet the King disposed of it otherwise, viz. that it should be buried at the Conventual at Westminster.

ON a Grave-stone near Golofre's was some Time this Inscription in Brass: Here lieth Cecil Ratcliffe, some Time chief Gentlewoman with my Lady Dudley, on whose Soul God have Mercy. Amen. Mercy, Grace, and Forgiveness.

AT the Door of St. Benedict's Chapel lie three or four Grave-stones cross the Area to Sebert's Tomb: On one Side this Inscription: Here lieth James Cranfield, Earl of Middlesex, who died the 16th of September, An. Dom. 1652.

ON another: Near interr'd lieth the Body of Lionel Earl of Middlesex, Baron Cranfield of Cranfield in the County of Bedford, one of the Gentlemen of his Majesty's Bedchamber. He was second Son of Lyonel Earl of Middlesex, Lord High Treasurer of England; the last of that Honourable Family. He died the 26th Day of October, in the Year of our Lord 1674.

ON a Third, this: Under this Marble lies the Body of Anne, Countess Dowager; Wife to Lyonel Earl of Middlesex, Lord High Treasurer of England. She departed this Life the third Day of February, in the Year of our Lord 1669.

NEAR these Grave-stones is the curious Mosaick Tomb erected for King Henry III's Children.

PASSING from this Area through the Hatches, in the South Cross, we turn in at a Side Door which brings us into the Choir, before the Rails of the High Altar, and through them, upon the curious Mosaick Pavement, which is esteemed unequalled in its Kind. About the Year 1258, when Richard Ware was elected Abbot of this Church, he going to Rome for Consecration, in his Return through France, purchas'd, from the Ruins of a decayed Building there, the Materials of a Mosaick Pavement, which Work was formerly, i. e. towards the Decline of the Roman Empire, in great Esteem, and consisted of small Pieces of Clay painted and burnt like Bricks, and being of various Colours made, by a just Disposition, Variety of curious Figures, more beautiful and durable than the finest Marble; but this is suppos'd to be compos'd of real Marble, as Porphyry, Touch, Jaspar, Lydian, Alabaster, and Serpentine; it is form'd in several Squares and Circles; the Stones are square, and about a Finger in Length, of which, a great Number being taken up at the erecting the new Altar, some of them are with the Right Honourable the Earl of Oxford. The Pavement, at erecting that Altar, was threaten'd with a total Dissolution by the Workmen, whose mercenary and misjudging Notions destroy whatever is venerable; but, by the Influence of the Lord of Oxford, and the Care of the then Bishop of Rocheſter, it was for the most Part saved; yet they broke it up under where the Altar stands, and where the Marble Slabs lie round the Edges on the Sides. What is left makes a most beautiful Appearance, and seems to brave all the Injuries of Time, but for that the Brass Circles of Letters are almost worn out.

ON the North Side of this Place lay once open the magnificent Tombs of Valence, Crouchback, and his Lady; and under them, in the Pavement, were old Tomb-stones plated for Abbot Ware, Abbot Henley, and Abbot Sudbury. There was one likewise for Sir Thomas Clifford, Knt. Governor of Berwick.

ON the South Side was once open the Tomb of Sebert, which is already described; and near another of Free-Stone, having on it, in a Cypher A. C. and on the Sides the Arms of Cleve and Fuliers; it was erected to the Memory of Anne of Cleve, Sister to William Duke of Cleve, a Lutheran Prince of Germany. This Lady was contracted in Marriage by King Henry VIII. She was received in great Triumph at Blackheath, on the 3d of January 1539; on the 9th of the same Month married, and the July following, by the King and the Archbishop of Canterbury's Authority, divorced, with Liberty to re-marry. After this Divorce, the Queen liv'd single in England, and was called the Lady Ann of Cleve; and sixteen Years after, viz. in the 4th of Queen Mary's Reign, she died at Chelsea, and was here buried, without any Epitaph.

IN the Pavement near her, lies buried a more unfortunate Queen, viz. Anne, Wife to King Richard III. Daughter to Nevil Earl of Warwick. She was, as most think, poisoned by Order of that Usurper her Husband, to make Way for a Marriage with Elizabeth, Daughter to his Brother King Edward IV. and was the fifth Royal Life he had taken away to secure his ill-gotten and short-liv'd Power.

ON the same Side was formerly a Grave-Stone plated for Abbot Wenlock, and about it for several other Abbots. Before the Rail lies buried Dr. South and Dr. Busby, under blue Grave-Stones, their Graves join, and are turned over with Arches of Brick. Passing hence through the Doors on the Sides of the High Altar, brings us into the CHAPEL of St. EDWARD.

WHICH Chapel is paved with the same Mosaick Work as that before; in the Midst of it stands the Shrine of that Saint, and round it the Tombs of our English Kings. The Chapel is but small, but so solemn and venerable that it strikes a greater Idea of religious Solitude and Contemplation, than any Place perhaps in the World.

ON the North Side of St. Edward's Shrine is a small Tomb (almost of the same Fashion with that we have before-mentioned for Princess Elizabeth, Daughter of Henry VII.) placed over another young Princess, viz. Margaret, surnamed of York, viz. of the Family, Daughter to Edward IV. King of England, by Elizabeth Woodville his Queen: She was born the 19th of April, 1472, and died the 11th of December following, being not nine Months old, and was here buried. Mr. Sandford gives us this Inscription, of which Part still remains:

Nobilitas & forma, decorque, tenella, juvenus
In simul hic ista mortis sunt condita cista,

AND alludes to a verge Inscription, which was thus:

Margareta illustrissimi Regis Angliæ & Franciæ Domini Edwardi quarti, & Domine Elizabethæ Reginæ serenissimæ consortis ejusdem filia, & quinta proles, quæ nata fuit 19 die Mensis Aprilis, Anno Dom. 1472, & obiit 11 die Decembris, cujus animæ propitiatur Deus. Amen.

IN English thus:

Margaret fifth Daughter of the most illustrious Edward IV. King of England and France, and Elizabeth his Queen, his most serene Consort: She was born the 19th Day of April, Ann. Dom. 1472, died the 11th of Dec. on whose Soul God have Mercy. Amen.

High Birth and beauteous Form, and Youth in Bloom,

At once lie chested in this silent Tomb.
All that remains to tell thee what she was,
Around the Margin see insculp'd in Brass.

It is observable, that Mr. Weaver takes no Notice of the Prose Inscriptions, neither of this nor that of the Princess Elizabeth, which makes one incline to believe they were torn away at the Time of the Reformation; for that such Inscriptions were there, is plain Proof, not only from Records, but the Verses of this latter refer to the Prose.

AT the West End and South Side of this Chapel is a large plain Stone of grey Marble, composed of seven Stones; four makes the Sides, two the Ends, and one the Cover; this plain and rough Monument was placed over the glorious King Edward I. This Prince was Son of King Henry III. and born at Westminster the 17th of June, 1239, and four Days after christened by the Legate Otho; he was called Edward from his Father's Favourite, St. Edward the Confessor, and Longshanks, from the Tallness of his Stature; he was, at his Father's Death, warring in the Holy Land, where he had been successful against the Infidels; but returning was crowned in this Church the 19th of August, 1274. He was a Prince of martial Spirit, and overcame the Welch, and subdued Scotland, bringing away the fatal Stone, and offered it at St. Edward's Shrine in this Church. He was a Prince every Way of extraordinary Accomplishments, and in his Time many wholesome Laws were enacted. Lastly, Hearing the Scots had rose, and shook off their Allegiance, he marched against them, but, being afflicted with a Disentery, or Bloody-Flux, he returned to Carlisle, where sending for his Son, Prince Edward, he gave him in strict Charge, That he should carry his Bones about him thro' Scotland, till he had brought it to Subjection. 2dly. That he should send his Heart to the Holy Land, with 140 Knights, and the 32,000 l. he had provided to that Purpose; and that he should not recal Gavestone from Banishment; neither of which the Prince performed. After which, proceeding on his Journey, he fell ill at Borough, or Burgh, upon the Sands in Cumberland, the 7th of July, Anno 1307; but according to Wykes, by Mistake, 1304, having reigned 34 Years, seven Months and 21 Days, and lived 68. After his Death, Peter of Spain, the Cardinal made solemn Processions, and gave a Year's Indulgence to all saying Pater-Noster, and Ave Maria for the King's Soul, whose Death Robert Archbishop of Canterbury, is said to have seen in a Vision, being then at Rome; his Body was brought to Waltham, and there remained 15 Weeks; Walsingham says six; every Week the neighbouring Monasteries sending six Monks or Canons to wait Day and Night round his Body, whence being conveyed in a solemn and magnificent Manner to LONDON, he was interr'd here on the 28th of October, being St. Simon and Jude's Day: Anthony Patriarch of Jerusalem, and Bishop of Durham performing his Exequies. On the North Side of his Tomb are these Words painted in Black, not long since; and under them the Stone rubb'd, where, 'tis probable, was the original Inscription, of which this is a Copy.

Edwardus primus Scotorum malleus hic est
1308, pactum serva.

THERE was so great Respect paid to his Memory, that so long after as King Richard II's Time, his Great Grandson, there was an Order to renew the Cerecloths for preserving his Body, which is as follows:

Rex Thesaurario, &c. in English thus:

THE King to his Treasurer and Chamberlains, Greeting. We command you that the Cerements round the Body of our Progenitor, of celebrated Memory, Edward late King of England, Son of King Henry, which Prince lies buried in the Church of St. Peter at Westminster, be renewed at our Cost, as hath heretofore been accustomed. Witness the King at Westminster, the 11th of July.

ON a Table hanging by his Tomb were Verses in Latin and English not now legible; the English is as follows:

Death is too doleful which doth join
The highest Estate full low:
Which completh greatest Things with least,
And last with first also.
No Man hath been in World alive,
Nor any may there be,
Which can escape the Dint of Death,
Needs hence depart must we.
O noble and victorious Man,
Trust not unto thy Strength;
For all are subject unto Death,
And all must hence at length.
Most cruel Fate from worldly Stage
Hath wrest a worthy Wight;
To whom all England mourned loud
To see his doleful Plight.

Edward

Edward is dead, which was adorn'd
 With divers Graces here,
 A King, or fragrant Nardus Height,
 A gracious Princely Peer.
 In Heart the which was Lybard like,
 Right puissant, void of Fear:
 Most slow to Strife, discreet and wise,
 And gracious every where.
 In Arms a Giant fierce and fell,
 Attempting famous Facts,
 Most prudent, did subdue the Proud
 By Feat of martial Acts:
 In Flanders Fortune gave to him,
 By Lot right good Success,
 In Wales he wan: The Scottish Rout
 With Arms he did suppress.
 This King without his like alive,
 Did firmly guide this Land:
 And what good Nature could conceive,
 He had it plight at Hand.
 He was in Justice, and in Peace,
 Excelling: Laws took Place,
 Desire to chase all wicked Works
 Did hold this King's good Grace.
 He now doth lie intomb'd here,
 Which furthered each good Thing:
 Now nought he is but Dust and Bones,
 Which was a worthy King.
 The very Son of God, whom erst
 This King did love right dear,
 Hath given to him immortal Bliss,
 For his good living here.
 Whilst liv'd this King, by him all Things
 Were in most goodly Plight:
 Fraud lay hid, great Peace was kept,
 An Honesty had Might.

This English Version seems to be added, says Mr. Dart, some considerable Time after the Latin; for Mr. Weaver gives us no Version, nor hints at any being fixed here; but on the contrary give us a Translation of them out of Fabian, which he calls his Ballad Royal, and begins thus:

This sorrowful Death, which bringeth Great full low,
 And moost and least he joineth into one, &c.

ON the North Side the Chapel is a most magnificent Tomb, admirably curious in the Workmanship, considering that Age, and inimitably rich in the Materials; the Side and End Pannels of the Table being of the most polish'd Porphyry, of a clear Red, and the Work round them Mosaick, of Gold and Scarlet; it is upon an Ascent of Steps, and under it are three Ambries or Lockers, lined with the same Mosaick; the Corners of the Table are Serpentine Pillars, gilt and enamelled, and upon it the Effigies, in Brass gilt, so as still unfaded, of King Henry III. the Canopy of Brass and Gothick Pillars, which lay at the Head, and down the Sides of the Statue, are torn away; the Top of the Table is Brass, engraved Lozengy with Flowers. This Prince was Son of John, King of England, born October 1, 1206, and took the Crown at nine Years of Age; he reigned a long, but troublesome Reign, by Reason of the Animosities raised against his Father, which upon the least Hint took Fire, and occasioned the Insurrection of the Barons; the Consequence of which was the Great Charter, and that of the Forest, which were so strictly observed by our Forefathers as the undoubted Security of our Country, and indispensable upon any Exigence whatever. He was a Prince rather devout than wise, in actibus secularibus minus putabatur prudens; as appears by his hearing Mass three times a Day, at the same Time that he refused to hear any Complaints made against his Court-Parasites, as the Valences, &c. whom he enriched to the improving himself, and promoted their foreign Creatures to Places where they might insult his People; a Practice which we have found severely true, where the Prince is their Friend, and Power in their Possession; nor was his Regard to the Poistavins more pernicious to England than his bigotted Obedience to the Pope, who made him his Property, and drew Supplies from us till we had no more to take: Of which Exactions, and the King's Indiscretion, Paris inveighs much. He was a Man of a middle Stature, well set, had a Cast with one Eye, even to hide Part of the Ball and Pupil. A Man of Vigour and Strength, and supposed by Paris to be foretold by Merlin, under the Allegory of the Leopard.

He fell ill at St. Edmund's-Bury in Suffolk, as he returned from Norwich, and died at Westminster, Anno 1272; according to Wykes, 71, on the 16th Kal. Dec. aged 65 Years, and having reigned 56, and the Sunday following, viz. on the Feast of St. Edmund the King, he was buried magnificently in this Church; his Body was drest in his Royal Robes, with the Crown upon his Head, and all the Nobility attending; the Templers carrying the Body; which Shew was so magnificent, that he shew'd more magnificent (says Wykes) when dead, than he appeared when living; his Body was buried before the High Altar, but his Heart he gave Order should be buried at Fonteverard in Normandy, which accordingly was delivered to the Lady Abbess of that Place, by the Abbot of Westminster, in the Presence of many of the Nobility, on the Monday next before the Feast of St. Lucy the Virgin, Anno 20 King Edward I. Matthew Westminster attributes many Miracles to him after Death. Round the Verge of his Tomb is this Inscription, embossed in Saxon Characters:

Ici: Gift Henri, Jadis: Rey: De: Engletero: Seygnur De: Hirlande: Duc: De: Aquit-ayne: Le: Filz: Li: Rey Johan: Jadis: Rey:
 De: Engleterre: A: Kidou: Face Mercy:
 Amen.

ON the North Side, toward the Area, this in gilt Letters.

Tertius Henricus est Templi conditor hujus, 1273. Dulce Bellum Inexpertis.

ON a Table some Time hanging by, were these old Latin Rhimes, with Fabian's Translation on them:

Tertius Henricus jacet hic pietatis amicus,
 Ecclesiam stravit istam quam post renovavit;
 Reddet ei munus qui regnat trinus & unus.

THE English on the same Table:

The Friend of Piety and Almsdeed:
 Henry the Third whilome of England King,
 Who this Church brake, and after his meed
 Again renewed to this fair Building:
 Now resteth here, which did so great a Thing
 He yield him Meed that Lord of Deitie,
 That as one God reigns in Persons three.

At the Feet of Henry III. is an antient and curious Tomb of grey Marble, on the Sides of which are engraven the Arms of Castile and Leon, Quarterly, and those of Ponthieu, hanging on Vines and Oak-Trees; on the Table is a Covering of Copper, gilt, engraven with the Arms of Castile and Leon, Lozenge; upon which lies, of gilt Copper, the Effigies to Aleonor, Queen to Edward I. large as the Life; over all, a Canopy of Wood; and round the Copper Verge is embossed this Epitaph in Saxon Characters:

Icy gift Alianor Jadis Reyne de Angleterre, Femme al. Re. Edward Fiz.

AND on the North Side has been Painting, but now worn out; yet there appears a Sepulchre, at the Feet of which are two Monks, at the Head a Knight arm'd; and a Woman with a Child in her Arms; over which, in modern Characters, but defaced with the Ledge where they are engraved, is to be seen this Inscription:

Regina Elionora, Confors Edvardi primi fuit Alionora 1298. Disce mori.

THIS Lady was Daughter of Ferdinand III. and Joan, Daughter to John Earl of Pontive, and whereby she was Heir to that Earldom. She was married to King Edward I. in the Life-time of his Father, and was a Sharer with him in all his Journies and Enterprizes, travelling with him to the Holy Land, where, as Fame reports, she cur'd him of a Wound received by a poison'd Arrow, by sucking the Wound: But Walsingham, tho' he says she was nobilis genere sed multo nobilior morum gravitate, is silent in this Instance; and Knighton, on the contrary, tells us, that when his Wound was to be dress'd, the King ordered Edmund, and John de Vesey, to carry her out of the Room, while he was dress'd, which they did, she shrieking and making great Lamentation. She was his Wife thirty-six Years, and attending the King to Scotland, fell ill, and died in the House of one Richard de Weston, at Hardey, in the County of Northampton. Wykes says at Grantham, on the 27th of November, Anno 1290, in the 19th Year of her Husband's Reign; upon whose Death the King returned to LONDON with her Corpse, and erected, (that Passengers reminded might pray for her Soul) a Marble Cross at every Place where it rested, with her Effigies on them, as at Lincoln, Grantham, Stanford, Giddington, Northampton, Stony-Stratford, Dunstable, St. Alban's, Waltham, and Charing; of which, several still remain; that at Charing was pulled down as a Piece of Superstition, in the Beginning of the Grand Rebellion; on that at Waltham, is the Queen's Statue, like that on her Tomb, with others, and on the Sides the Arms of Ponthieu, viz. Three Benlets within a Bordure, &c. and the Arms of Leon. Her Bowels were first buried in the Cathedral Church of Lincoln, where was a Cenotaph erected for her with her Effigies on it in gilt Copper, and round it, in Saxon Characters, an Inscription.

THE Corpse being embalmed, and put in a Coffin filled with Spices, was brought to LONDON; and her Heart, put in a separate Box, was buried in the Choir of the Friars Predicants in LONDON, and her Body in this Church, on the Sunday before St. Thomas the Apostle, viz. Kal. Jan. the Bishop of Lincoln performing the Ceremony, for the then Archbishop of Canterbury would not appear in it; for that upon a Quarrel between him and the Abbot of this Church, he had interdicted it; and the King gave to Walter, then Abbot, twelve Manors, which were for yearly Obiits for the Queen, with Money to be distributed to the Poor. And to all such as should devoutly, in this Church, pray for her Soul, was granted Indulgence for the Term of five Years and two hundred and fifteen Days: Her Anniverfary was observed 3d Kal. December.

ON a Table, once hanging near her Tomb, was this Inscription in English:

Queen Elenor is here interred,
A worthy Noble Dame,
Sister unto the Spanish King,
Of Royal Blood and Fame.
King Edward's Wife, first of that Name,
And Prince of Wales by Right; Whose Father Henry, just the Third,
Was sure an English Wight,
Who crav'd her Wife unto his Son,
The Prince himself did go
On that Embassage luckily,
As Chief, with many mo.
This Knot of linked Marriage
Her Brother Alphonso liked,
And so 'tween Sister and this Prince,
The Marriage was up striked.
The Dowry Rich and Royal was,
For such a Prince most meet:
For Pontive was the Marriage Gift,
A Dowry Rich and Great;
A Woman both in Council wise,
Religious, fruitful, meek,
Who did encrease her Husband's Friends,
And larg'd his Honour eke.

Learn to die.

WE next come to the Chapel and Tomb of King Henry V. which is at the East End of St. Edward's, and parted off by a Skreen of Iron made in the Time of King Henry VII. on each Side which are Stair-Cases adorn'd with Images, as big as the Life, according to the Chantry over it, as before described: In this Chapel lies interred that glorious and warlike Prince Henry V. Son of King Henry IV. He was surnam'd of Monmouth, the Place of his Birth, which happened Anno 1388. In his early Years he was guilty of many Follies and Extravagancies, ill becoming his Dignity, and, upon coming to the Crown, wore it with the utmost Applause. He was crowned in this Church the 9th of April 1414, and reigned nine Years five Months and fourteen Days, after having boldly proved his Right to the Crown of France, by that glorious Victory at Agincourt: But whilst he was in Pursuit of further Conquest, and endeavouring to lay France under quiet Subjection, he fell ill at Suley of a Fever and Flux, as he was marching to relieve Coffney, then besieged by the Dauphin; from whence being removed to Bois de Vincennes, he departed this Life on the last Day of August 1422, aged 34 Years. Immediately upon his Death, his Bowels were buried in the Church of St. More de Fosses; afterwards, his Body being seared and closed in Lead, was attended by the Nobility of England and France to the Church of Notre Dame at Paris, where he had his Exequies performed; from whence he was brought to Rhoan, from thence to England, in an open Chariot, on which was laid his Image of boild Hides of Leather, and painted to the Life, having on its Head an Imperial Diadem, and in his Hands a Scepter and Ball of Gold. As this Procession pass'd through any noted Town, a rich Canopy was born over it by Persons of Quality; thus accompanied by the King of Scots, and the first of our Nobility, following two Miles off, he was brought thro' Abbeville, Hedin, Monstreuil, and Bulloign to Calais, thence to Canterbury, where, as Walsingham says, his Exequies were celebrated, thence by Water to LONDON, whither it was brought the 10th of Nov. and rested in the Cathedral of St. Paul's. On the Covering of the first Horse that drew the Chariot was embroider'd the Arms of England, 2d England and France quarterly, 3d France, 4th of King Arthur, viz. three Crowns of Gold in a Field Azure.

Azure. At St. Paul's he had solemn Exequies, and thence was brought to this Abbey, as in his Will he had given Orders; to be interred in great State, his Effigies being on the Coffin in a Robe of Purple and Ermines, holding in one Hand his Scepter, in the other the Ball and Cross, having a Golden Crown on his Head, and the Royal Sandals on his Feet, and so placed in an open Chariot; that he might be seen; around the Chariot 1400 Tapers were carried by venerable Persons. He lies at the Feet of Edward the Confessor, in a Place set apart for keeping Reliques, where his Queen erected a Monument over him of grey Marble, whereon was placed his Statue of Heart of Oak; on which was a Head of Silver, and likewise his Scepter, and other Regalia, with a Plate of Silver inscrib'd with these stupid Verses, the Product of the darkest Age England ever saw, our Learning declining sensibly in the hurried Affairs succeeding Richard II's Death, and the Usurpation consequent. Such as they were take them:

Dux Normanorum, verus conquestor eorum
Heres Francorum decessit, & Hector eorum.

BUT all these Silver Ornaments, the Head not excepted, became the Prey of pilfering, avaricious and sacrilegious Hands, so that the headless Trunk is all that remains. This Tomb was enclosed with Grates and Gates of Iron, finely wrought, by King Henry VII. and over it is a Chantry Chapel, as mention'd in the Description of the Church, with his Weapons Caparison, Cloth &c. His Tomb, and the Head supply'd, is in Sandford and Dart's Westminster Abbey, taken from an antient Painting. This Prince was very tall of Stature, a long Neck, his Body lean and slender, and his Bones small, yet he exceeded most Men in Strength; he was brave, courageous, but very merciful and generous, as appears by his Concern for King Richard II's Murder. He had undoubtedly raised England to almost over-balance Europe, had not Death put a Stop to his Designs, which however might still have been effected, had not his Blood degenerated its Heat, in that mild Prince his Son, as indeed had been the Case at most Times in that Age, viz. King John and King Henry III. King Edward I. and King Edward II. the Black Prince, King Richard II. and this Prince and King Henry VI.

On a Table hanging near:

Gallorum matrix jacet hic Henricus in Urna, 1422. Domat omnia virtus.
Pulchra virumque suum sociat tandem Katherina.
Otium fuge.

O merciful God, what a Prince was this!

Which his short Time in martial Acts spent In Honour of Conquest that Wonder to me it is,
How he might compass such Deeds excellent,
And yet for that his Mind nothing dent,
All ghostly Health for his Soul to provide,
Out of this World ere he fatally should slide.

So though I had Tully his Eloquence,

Or of Seneca the grave Morality,

Or of Solomon the perfect Sapience,

Or the sweet Ditties of Dame Calliope;

Yet might I not in Prose, or other Ditty

Accordingly advance this Princess' Fame,

Or with due Honour to enhance the same.

Considering his Acts, whereof Parcel appear:

In this rude Work, with many more left out,

The Time also was less than ten Year;

That he so shortly brought all Things about;

By divine Grace furthered out of Doubt

Vol. II.

That mightful Lord he help his ghostly Knight
With Grace and Honour to pass this Worlds fight
And to have Reward double, and condign,

And first for martial Acts by him done;

To be advanced amongst the Worthies nine,

And for his Virtues us'd by him eftsoon,

With many good Deeds which he on Earth had done.

Above the Hierarches, he is I trust now stall'd
That was on Earth King of Kings call'd.

ON the Pavement close to the Side of the former Tomb, lies an old wooden Chest or Coffin, in which is inclosed the Body of Catharine, Queen to the aforefaid King Henry V. This Lady was youngest Daughter to Charles VI. King of France, and Isabel his Queen; she was born the 27th Day of October, Anno 1400, and being a Lady of extraordinary Beauty, the King, upon seeing her, was so taken, that he told the Duke of Burgundy, he would either (with other Demands) enjoy the Lady Catharine; or drive the King of France out of his Kingdom; and him from his Dukedom; which Resolution being entered upon, they were obliged to comply with his Demands, and, upon a Meeting at Troys in Champaign, he was affianced to her, and declared Heir apparent to the Crown of France, and on the 3d of June following, being the Day after Trinity Sunday, their Marriage was pompously celebrated in the Church of St. Catharine at Troys, by Henry de Savoissy, Archbishop of Sens; to whom the King gave in Dowry 10,000 Marks and returning with this Prize into England, she was crowned in this Church by Archbishop Chickley, King James I. of Scotland being present; the Feast upon this Occasion being covered Messes of Fish. By her the King had one Son; viz. King Henry VI. whom she bore at Windsor the Year following their Marriage; and not long after, going over Sea to the King her Husband then reducing France to Obedience, she had the Grief to attend his Corpse into England. After the King's Death, she married with Owen ap Meredith ap Tudor, a Welsh Gentleman, belonging to the Court, of small Fortune, but antient Descent, having a direct one from the British Kings, to which add the most beautiful Personage of that Time. This Marriage was kept secret till the Queen's Death, as Stow reports; but it is most probable that it was discovered before, because this Tudor was in Newgate, and broke from thence the Year after her Death. By this Owen she had Edmond Tudor, Earl of Richmond, and Father to King Henry VII. Jasper, Duke of Bedford, and Owen Tudor, who took the Religious Habit, and died a Monk of this Abbey, in which he lies buried. Queen Catharine herself died in her 38th Year, in the Abbey of Bermondsey, near Southwark, (where she retired) on the second (Sandford says the third) Day of January; Anno 1437; from whence being brought to the Thames Side, she was conveyed by Water to the Collégiate Church of St. Catharine near the Tower of LONDON; on the 8th of February following, from thence carried to the Cathedral of St. Paul; and lastly brought to this Abbey, where she was interred in the Chapel of our Lady: But some Years after, when her Grandson King Henry VII. pulled down that in order to build a sumptuous Chapel, her Body was taken up, and the Coffin being decay'd, it was put in a wooden Chest, and placed near her Husband's Tomb at the East End of the Fryars, (as Stow calls it) where it has ever since continued to be seen, the Bones being firmly united, and thinly cloth'd with Flesh, like Scrapings of tanned Leather; a View fit to represent present to us the End of Beauty, Greatness, and what else sublunary Things we boast. Near which Chest, on a Tablet, Latin Verses were formerly legible, written in King Henry VIII's Time, and as it is supposed, by Skelton.

AND on the same Table these wretched Rhimes, by Way of Translation :

Heres lies Queen Katharine clos'd in Grave,
The French King's Daughter fair,
And of thy Kingdom (Charles the Sixth)
The true undoubted Heir.
Twice joyful Wife in Marriage match'd,
To Henry Fifth by Name ; Because thro' her he nobled was,
And shin'd in double Fame ;
The King of England by Descent,
And by Queen Catharine's Right,
The Realm of France he did enjoy, Triumphant King of Might.
A happy Queen to English Men,
She came right grateful here,
And four Days Space they honoured God,
With Mouth and reverend Fear.
Henry the Sixth this Queen brought forth,
In painful Labours plight,
In whose Empire a French Man was,
And eke in Wight.
Under no lucky Planet born,
Unto himself nor Throne :
But equal with his Parents both,
In pure Religion.
Of Owen Tudor after this
The next Son Edmund was,
O Catharine, a renowned Prince,
That did in Glory pass,
Henry the Seventh, a Britain Pearl,
A Gem of England's Joy,
A Peerless Prince was Edmund's Son,
A good and gracious Boy ;
Therefore a happy Wife this was,
A happy Mother pure, Thrice happy Child, but Grandam she,
More than thrice happy sure.

BETWEEN the Gates of this Chapel, and the Feet of St. Edward's Shrine, almost contiguous to the latter, and partly cover'd with the Step or Ascent of the former, are two Stones of Grey Marble, of which that on the South Side, being broader at Head than Feet, hath some small Remains of a Cross, which sometime reach'd to the Bottom, but now Part of the Top only visible, and that not much : There are likewise the Similitude of Nails saltier'd with it, composed of a pitchy Substance, and not to be injured but by wearing the Stone itself. The Writers of our Church have not heeded it, as appears by Keep's joining it with the other, as belonging to two Children ; but Mr. Dart says, if he may be allowed to conjecture, he takes it to cover the Body of Roger de Wendover, since no other has yet attempted to assign a Place for his Burial. This Wendover was Parson of Bromley in Kent, and elected Bishop of Rocheſter, on the 6. Kal. March, upon the Death of Bishop Sandford, but being thought insufficient by Edmund, the Archbishop, he rejected him, who thereupon appealing to Rome, was received there and confirmed, and afterwards consecrated at Canterbury, on the Morrow after St. Edward the King, Anno 1238, and installed at Rocheſter, by Simon, Archdeacon of Canterbury ; and having sat Bishop 22 Years, he died at Frakenham, 4 Id. October, 1250. Whereupon the King, (quia sanctus habebatur) for that he was a holy Man, ordered him to be buried in this Church. That this is highly probable, appears by the antient Form of the Stone, and the Cross usually impressed on the Coffins and Graves of Bishops and Abbots, and no other ; and this Mr. Dart seems assured of, that no Bishop, or Abbot was ever buried in this Chapel, except John of Waltham, whose Tomb is fair and visible ; and Bishop Courtney of Norwich, who dying so late as 1415, and being more the Statesman than a Prelate, and of a great and honourable Alliance, leaves no Room to suppose a Stone and Cross of such antient simple Form to be placed over him : Yet Weaver says, there lies in the Wall of Bromley Church, a Figure said to be his Portraiture, but says, he cannot contradict his Burial here.

ADJOINING to which is another Stone, Mr. Keep says two, of Marble, laid in the Pavement, under which it is said were buried Margaret and John, two Children of William de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, mentioned before in the Chapel of St. Edward : But here Mr. Keep was strangely misinformed, for Valence had but one Child that died young, (tho' Milles says William likewise ; but he lived long after, and was slain in France, the 7th of King Edward I.) neither is there any Likelihood for this Conjecture, unless the before-mentioned Tomb of Wendover lying by it is taken for the other. This John was eldest Son of William of Valence, by Joan de Monchesey, and dying in his Infancy, his Father procured for all such as should devoutly pray for his Soul, Indulgence for 160 Days.

ON the South Side of this Chapel, and with the Feet adjoining to King Henry V's, is a handsome antient Tomb of black Marble, on which lies the Effigies, in white Alabaster, of Philippa, of Heinault, Queen to King Edward III. She was third Daughter of William Earl of Heinault, and Joan, eldest Daughter of Charles Count de Valois, younger Son of Philip the hardy King of France ; her Brother was William, the fourth Earl of Holland and Heinault, who being slain by the Frisons, this Earldom come to her : She was married to King Edward III. at York, Feb. 25, Anno 1327, and crowned at Westminster the first Sunday in Lent following ; she lived his Wife 42 Years, and bare him no less than 14 Children. Mr. Weaver, from Harding, tells us, That when an Embassy was sent to chuse one of the Earl's Daughters, a certain Bishop amongst them, advised to chuse the Lady who had the largest Hips, as promising a numerous Progeny : This the Event made good. She was a Woman of great Honour and Virtue, and a firm Friend to England ; she was, says Walsingham, Mulier nobilissima & Anglorum ematrix constantissima, strenuously asserting her Husband's Right to France, notwithstanding her close Alliance to that Crown : She died the 15th Day of August, being the Blessed Virgin's Assumption, Anno 1369, the 43d of King Edward III. and was here buried, the King pouring vast Expence in performing her Exequies, and erecting her Tomb ; round the Tomb were formerly the Statues in Brass, and Escutcheons of the following Persons ; at the Head of Edward, Prince of Wales, Lewis the Emperor, King Edward III. John, King of France, and William, Earl of Heinault, the Queen's Father : On the South Side of Joan, Countess of Heinault, the Queen's Mother ; William, Earl of Heinault, the Queen's Brother ; Margaret, Empress of Germany, the Queen's Sister ; Reginald, Duke of Geldres ; Eleanor, Dutcheſs of Geldres ; John, of Bavaria, Earl of Heinault ; Mary, Dutcheſs of Britain ; Lewis, Duke of Bavaria ; Margaret, Countess of Pembroke ; Charles, of Valois, Son to the King of France ; and John, Duke of Brabant : On the North Side of Joan, Queen of Scots, John, Earl of Cornwall ; Joan, Princess of Wales ; Lionel, Duke of Clarence ; Isabel, Countess of Bedford ; John, Duke of Lancaster ; Elizabeth, Dutcheſs of Clarence ; Edmund, Earl of Cambridge ; and

Thomas

Thomas, Earl of Buckingham: And at the Foot, of the Kings of Naverre, Bohemia, Scotland, Sicily and Spain.

ON a Table near the Tomb were formerly these Verses :

Fair Philip, William Henald's Child,
And youngest Daughter dear,
Of Rofeat Huc, and Beauty bright,
In Tomb lies killed here.

Edward the Third, through Mother's Will,
And Nobles good Consent, Took her to Wife, and joyfully
With her his Time he spent.

His Brother John, a martial Man,
And eke a valiant Knight,
Did link this Woman to this King
In Bonds of Marriage right.

This Match and Marriage thus in Blood,
Did bind the Flemings sure
To Englishmen, by which they did
The Frenchmens Wrack procure.

This Philip flowr'd in Gifts full rare,
And Treasures of the Mind,
In Beauty bright, Religion, Faith,
To all and each most kind.

A faithful Mother Philip was Full many a Son she bred,
And brought forth many a worthy Knight,
Hardy and full of Dred.

A carefull Nurse to Students all,
At Oxford she did found Queen's College, the Dame Pallas School
That did her Fame resound.

ADJOINING to this, and between the two Pillars, parallel with the Shrine of St. Edward, is a stately Monument of grey Marble, having over it a decayed Canopy of Gothick Work, on which is a Table Effigies of Copper gilt, representing King Edward III. though his Corpse lies in the same Grave with Phillippa's, as herself desired on her Death-Bed; on the Sides of the Tomb were the Brass Statues and Arms of these his Sons and Daughters, (of which some remain) viz. on the South Side, First, Edward Prince of Wales; Second, Joan de la Tour, called Queen of Spain, Lionel Duke of Clarence, Edmund Duke of York, Mary Dutcheſs of Britain, and William of Hatfield. On the North Side, were the Statues of Isabel, Lady of Concy, William of Windsor, John Duke of Lancaster, Blanch de la Tour, Margaret, Counteſs of Pembroke, and Thomas, Duke of Gloceſter; of these last the Arms only remain; on the Basis of the Tomb are placed on large Shields of Brass, enamelled, the Arms of St. George and King Edward III. On the little Tomb of Margaret, King Edward IV's Daughter, which joins to the Head of this Tomb, is placed the Shield and Sword carried before this King in France; the latter of which is seven Feet long, and weighs eighteen Pounds.

THIS King Edward III. was eldest Son of Edward II. King of England, who being deposed and murdered in the Infancy of this, the Crown was placed upon his Head at his 14th Year; he laid Claim to the Crown of France, in the Right of his Mother Isabel, Daughter to King Philip IV. and made the Claim sure by numerous Conquests under his Conduct, and that of his brave Son the Black Prince. Scotland he reduced to Allegiance, and after the second Revolt, took their King Prisoner. France, by the Battles of Creſſy and Poitiers, he subdued; at the latter of which, John their King was likewise taken; so that he had at LONDON two Captive Kings at once; the first of these, after 11 Years Imprisonment, was released, the latter died in the Savoy.

IN his Time England seemed to shine in her Meridian; Learning was encouraged; Gallantry, and that the most honourable, was practised; the Order of the Garter instituted; the Subjects beloved; the Prince honoured at home, and feared abroad; till after a long Reign, and impaired Age, the Reins of Government began to grow slack; the Prince was imposed upon, and Lancaster, that ambitious Son of his, clouded all the setting Glories of his Reign, encouraging popular Faction, and debauched the King's Hours with a Woman who had too great an Ascendant over him, an imperious arbitrary Favourite, one Perers, having been chief Lady to the Queen, was much esteemed after her Death by the King, not as a Mistress, which some (in Regard she was a Wickliffist) say, and particularly Walsingham, who, with a Heat usual to him, calls her infanda meretrix & verecunda pellex, but out of Respect to his Queen's Memory; this Woman was married to Sir William Windsor before-mentioned. Thus ended this glorious Sun its Course, being upon his Death-Bed deserted by all his Favourites, and particularly the aforeſaid Perers, who even took the Rings from his Fingers before his Breath was gone, and lying alone, gasping almost his last, a Fryar came into the Room, and moved at such an Object, had the Courage to approach, and bad him cry Pardon for his Sins, giving him a Crucifix, the King often kissed its Feet, the Tears flowing a-pace, and was heard to pronounce the Word JESUS, and so expired, at his Manor House of Shene, near Richmond in Surrey, the twenty first Day of June, 1377, in the sixty fourth Year of his Age, having reigned fifty five Years, four Months and twenty eight Days; from whence he was brought and buried here. Round the Verge of the Brass Table were some Latin Verses.

ON a Table near it was this Translation :

Of English Kings here lyes the beauteous Flower
Of all before passed, and Myrror to them shall ſue :

A merciful King, of Peace Conservator,
The III. Edward; the Death of whom may rue
All English Men, for he by Knighthood due,
Was Libarde invict, and by Feat Martial
To worthy Macabe in Vertue Peregall.

NEXT adjoining, and between this Tomb and the back Skreen of the high Altar, is another Tomb, not much unlike the last, being of grey Marble, with empty Niches on the Sides; over it is a Table of Copper with two Effigies of the same, gilt, large as the Life, being erected to King Richard II. and his Queen; his Robing is wrought with Peascod-Shells open, and the Peas out, but upon what Account that Devise was used, is not certain; over the Tomb is a Canopy of Wood, which has formerly been curiously Painted, with the Virgin Mary and our Saviour, still visible, and the Arms of Anne his Queen, viz. Quarterly, an Eagle displayed with two Heads, Sable, the Imperial Arms, and Gules, a Lion rampant, quevee forchee, Argent crowned, Or, the Arms of Bohemia impaled with King Richard II. viz. Quarterly, France, Semeé and England, &c. but are scarcely now visible. This unhappy Prince, King Richard II. was Son to that victorious Black Prince, and Grandson to King Edward III. last mentioned, whom he succeeded in the Throne at his eleventh Year of Age. He was surnamed Bourdeaux, the Place of his Birth, which was Anno 1366. He was a Prince of unequalled Beauty, and had the Excellencies lencies of his Mind equalled those of his Form, he had compleated the Glories his Gransire began; but hurried with the Passions to which Youth is incident, he involved himself and the Nation in many Difficulties, to which the Factions about him contributed not a little; of which Disadvantages, Henry of Bullingbrook taking hold, usurped the Throne, by a canting, far-fetch'd Right from King Henry III. for Conquest nor Resignation were not then pleaded. Soon after which, this hapless dethroned Monarch was imprisoned, first in Leeds, in Kent, then in Pontefract or Pomfret Castle in Yorkshire, where, some say, he died by Famine. Stow says, they vexed him five Days with Cold and Hunger; the Continuer of Ingulphus, that he voluntarily fasted five Days and Nights, and Walsingham says, that for the Grief conceived upon Discovery of the late Plot, Semetipsum extinxit media voluntaria. Others say, that Henry IV. gave Hints to have him destroyed, which one Pierce of Exton hearing, went from Court with eight Men in Company to Pomfret, and entered the King's Chamber armed; who perceiving their Designs, put the Table from him, wrested a Bill from the Hands of the foremost, and slew four of the Assailants; but being drove back to his Chair, where Sir Pierce stood, he with a Pole-Ax struck out his Brains. This was done at Pomfret in the Bloody Tower, on St. Valentine's Day, Anno 1339, Anno 1 King Henry IV. Whereupon his Body was embalmed and inclosed with Lead, all but the Face, and was brought to the Tower, thence to St. Paul's Church in LONDON, to be exposed to publick View for three Days, where Service was performed, at which the Usurper was present: From whence it was conveyed to Langeley, and buried in the Church of the Fryars Predicants, the Office being performed by the Bishop of Chester, and the Abbots of St. Alban's and Waltham, without any Nobility present, or even any Crowd, nor any to invite them afterwards to Dinner, where he rested for some Years till King Henry V. a Prince of great Humanity, reigning, pity'd his Case, and gave Orders to remove him in State to this Abbey, whither he was drawn in a Royal Chair, himself and all the Nobility attending; he was interred near the Shrine of his admired St. Edward the Confessor, over whose sacred Arches the King erected a Tomb of grey Marble, with Niches on the Sides; but without any Statues in them, but on the Tomb is a Table of Brass, gilt, and on it, in gilt Copper, large as the Life, the Effigies of this unfortunate Prince, with his Queen Anne: On the King's Robe are the Devices of Peascod-Shells open, with the Peas out; over all is a Canopy of Wood as before-mentioned. Mr. Keep says, at the Time of writing his History, those Statues were removed, and a late Writer says, they are not there now. How Mr. Keep could make such a Mistake, when Sandford nor any other at that Time mention it, is strange; there not appearing the least Sign of their having been ever removed, though there have been but too flagrant ones of their having been injured, large Pieces of the Copper being cut off from the Table, and the Arms stolen from the Side next the Area, in the Holes of which any one putting their Hands, may turn the Boards of his Coffin. Round the Verge is the following Inscription, an extravagant Proof of the Generosity of King Henry V. by whose Order it was placed there:

Perfect and Prudent, Richard by Right the Second

Vanquish'd by Fortune, lies here now in Stone
True of his Word, and thereto well resound;

Seemly in Person, and like to Homer, as one
In worldly Prudence, and ever the Church in one Upheld and favoured, and casting the Proud to Ground,
And all that would his Royal State confound.

In the same Tomb with him lies his Queen, Anne, Daughter to the Emperor Charles the 4th; and Sister to Wenceslaus, Emperor and King of Bohemia; she was crown'd at Westminster, by William Courtney, Archbishop of Canterbury; by her the King had no Children, and having been his Wife 12 Years, she died the 7th of June, in the Year 1394, at Shene in Surrey, for whose Death the King's Grief was, like his other Passions, so extravagant, that he curs'd the Place of her Death, and ordered the Buildings to be demolished: She was buried at Westminster, in a pompous and solemn Manner, and at prodigious Expence. Stain'd with the Blood of the Earl of Arundel, as Walsingham observes, who never fails affronting this unhappy Prince's Memory, when he can, using the weak and base Supports of Usurpation, Personal Reflection, and Vindication of the Loss, and first Essays of Rebellion, which were quash'd, to give Sanction to the greater more successive and successful ones, under the Consequence of which he lived.

BETWEEN the Shrine of St. Edward, and the Tomb of Queen Philippa, under a large Stone, once finely plated with Brass, with Inscriptions now not legible, lies Thomas Woodstock, Brother to Edward the Black Prince, sixth and youngest Son to King Edward III. and Uncle to King Richard II. He was born at Woodstock, then the Palace, from whence he took his Name, the 7th Id. Jan. 1355. In the 50th Year of his Father he sat in Parliament as Constable of England. On the Coronation of his Nephew, Richard II. he was honour'd with the Title of Earl of Buckingham, with an Annuity of 1000*l.* per Ann. settled on him, and the 22d of June following, he confirmed him Constable of England, and in the Right of his Wife Elleanor, Daughter of Humphey de Bohun, he had the Titles of Earl of Essex, and Northampton. Of which Elleanor, and her Tomb, see more in the Chapel of St. Edmond. He was afterwards advanced by Patent, dated the 6th of August, in the 9th of King Richard II. to the Titles of Duke of Glocester. This Gentleman whom Walsingham calls, Vir optimus & regis patruus in quo posita fuere spes & solatium totius regni communitatis, was extremely careful over the Affairs of the Kingdom, during the unhappy Measures his Nephew took, but too subject to a Warmth of Temper, and a forward Opposition of every Thing his Prince desired; and having once by a Combination of the Lords, brought him under, intended still to keep him subject to his Dictates; which the King, now of ripe Years perceiving, resolved to remove from him, so severe an Observer and reprover of his Actions: In order to which he caus'd him to be surpriz'd at his Castle of Pleshey in Essex, and convey'd to Calais, where he was smother'd between two Feather-beds, by William Serle, — Francis, and others: This was done on Sept. 8, 1397. and but one Year before his Nephew met with as hard a Fate, at Pomfret, and Mowbrey, Duke of Norfolk, the Contriver of it, banish'd for Life. His Body was conveyed to Pleshey, and buried in a College of Canons Regular, which he had founded, under a handsome Tomb, but afterwards his Body was removed and buried in this Place. Upon the Tomb were the Figures of himself, Dutches Elleanor, King Edward III. and Queen Philippa, with his Brothers and Sisters: On the South Side of which, on the Verge was this broken Fragment, some Years since,

since, but now not legible, ore gistseneleze

NEAR the Foot of King Edward I's Monument is another Pavement-stone insculped with Brass, and an Inscription, Part of which was visible in Bishop Godwin's Time, but now gone; on the Plates of which are eight Figures, four on the one Side, defaced by often Passage over that Side, through the Skreen, from the High Altar to St. Edward's Shrine; and the four others in Gothick Letters, Johannes — — — which adorn the Effigies of a Bishop, in his Mass Habit: This was laid over John de Waltham, Bishop of Salisbury, a great Favourite of King Richard II. in whose Time he was Master of the Robes, Keeper of the Privy Seal, and was chose one of the fourteen over the Revenues, and lastly, viz. Anno 1391, made Lord High Treasurer of England; he died in that Office, having supplied it four Years, and that of Bishop seven; his Death happened Anno 1395: He was much lamented by the King, who gave Orders he should be here buried, as Walsingham observes, hoc Anno, i. e. 1395, obiit Jo. de Waltham, Episcopus Sarum & Regni complacuerat, ut etiam (multis licet murmurantibus) rege jubente apud Westmonasterium inter reges meruit sepultura. This Waltham seems to have been a Man of great Spirit, as appears by his opposing the Archbishop of Canterbury, who in his Visitation had been opposed by the Bishop of Exeter; and after bringing him to Submission, proceeded to Salisbury, where this Waltham refused him, upon Account of a Privilege obtained from Pope Boniface, then newly Pope, to exempt his Diocese from any Metropolitan's Visitation, by Virtue of any Power granted from the late Pope Urban; but the Archbishop, who knew his Metropolitan Power of Visitation independent of the Pope, proceeded to Excommunications and Censures, till Waltham was forced to submit.

IN this Chapel was interred the Heart of Henry de Almaine, Son of Richard King of the Romans, who having been long in Foreign Countries, returning to England, as he passed through Tuscany with Philip, after King of France, was murdered at Viterbo, in the Church of St. Silvester, while he was hearing Mass, by Simon and Guido, Sons of Simon de Mountfort, Earl of Leicester, Anno 1270. The Picture of his Murder the Inhabitants had painted and hung in the Church, on which, Matthew Westminster gives us some Verses. His Body was, the following Year, viz. on the 3d Id. May 1271, brought to LONDON, and his Heart put in a Cup, and placed near St. Edward's Shrine; his Body was buried in the Monastery of Hales. The two Murderers were excommunicated by the Pope, and Simon, one of them, died in the Castle of St. Senen, a miserable Vagabond, the Year following.

HERE also lieth interred, without Monument or Inscription, Richard Courtney, of the Family of the Earl of Devonshire, Kinsman to William Courtney, Archbishop of Canterbury, educated at Exeter College in Oxford, first Prebendary of Sneating in St. Paul's, Dean of Asaph, Canon of York, Chancellor of Oxford; Canon, and then Dean of Wells; and lastly, Bishop of Norwich, in 1413; a great Favourite of King Henry V. whom he attended at Normandy, where he died at the Siege of Harsleur, of a Flux, on the 14th or 16th of September 1415, and being brought over to England, was buried near the Shrine of St. Edward.

BEFORE we leave these Chapels, we must not pass over the Persons buried in them, though not distinguished by Monuments, yet of equal, and some of superior Characters to those that are; to which we shall proceed; after describing

The Chapel of HENRY VII. and the private Interments and Vaults there.

THIS Miraculum Orbis, as Leland calls it, on the Outside, would yield a most surprising View, were it not that the Smoke has pretty much injured it, and is adorned with fourteen Gothick Towers jutting out in several Angles, enlightened with Windows, and covered with the most curious Carv'd-work of Portcullises, Flowers-de-liz, &c. and have had a vast Number of Statues placed in Niches round them, but taken away, lest they should fall upon the Heads of those who attend the Parliament; from which Towers, to the Sides of the Roof, are Gothick Arches. The Ascent to the Inside from the East End of the Sacristarea of St. Edward, is by Steps of Black Marble, being — Feet in Length, under a stately Portico, to the Gates opening to the Body or Nave of it; before you enter which, you observe on either Hand a Door-way opening from the Area at the Top of the Ascent into the Side-ises of this Chapel; for it is composed of a Nave and Side-ises, in Manner of a Cathedral; the Entrance to the Nave from the Ascent, is through three noble Portals of Brass, wrought like Frame-work, and in every other open Pannel a Rose and a Portcullis of Hollow Work, alternately: Entering through these your Eye takes in the most beautiful and surprising Prospect in the World; the Roof of it is very lofty, and wrought with the most curious Variety imaginable; the Windows lofty and lightsome; the Stalls of the Choir of Wainscot, curiously carved, with Gothick Canopies, and the Seats with Variety of Devices; the Pavement is of Black and White Marble, done at the Charge of Dr. Killigrew, Prebendary here, as appears by two Plates of Brass fixed to the Rise toward the Founder's Tomb.

THE East View from the Entrance presents you with the Brass Chapel and Tomb of the Founder, and round it, where the East End forms a Semicircle, are the Chapels of the Dukes of Buckingham and Richmond, and the open Spaces and Windows, where is the Tomb of Sheffield Duke of Bucks, and the Effigies of the Countess of Richmond, on each Side the Inlet to the great East Window. The Side-ises open to the Nave at the East End, on each Side the Founder's Tomb. At the East End of the South Isle is the Royal Vault; and of the other, the Monuments of the Two Murdered Prince: The Walls, as well as the Nave of the South Isles, are wrought into the most curious Imagery, and contain 120 large Statues of Patriarchs, Saints, Martyrs and Confessors, placed in Niches; under which are Angels supporting Imperials Crowns, besides innumerable small ones; and these have been esteemed so curious, that Painters, Statuaries, and other Artisans of all Countries have travelled hither to copy them. The Windows, which are thirteen on each Side above, and as many below in the North and South Isles, beside the spacious East Window, jut out into the Gothick Towers, visible without, and have been formerly of painted or diaper'd Glass; and in every Pain was a Red Rose, the Badge and Cognizance of the House of Lancaster, or a Text H. the initial Letter of the Founder's Name, and Portcullises; the Badge of the Beauforts, crown'd, of which many are still visible. The Roof, which is flat-tish on the Outside, is supported on Arches between the Nave and Side-ises, which turn upon twelve stately Gothick Pillars, curiously adorned with Figures, Fruitage and Foliage. The Length of this Chapel, within-side, is 99 Feet, the Breadth 66 Feet, and the Height 54 Feet.

Vaults and Interments in this CHAPEL.

THE first, being the antientest, is in the South Isle, and near the Tomb of Margaret Douglass, Grandmother to King James I. in which that Lady is buried. She lies in a Leaden Coffin, placed on another, in which is the Body of Charles Earl of Lenox, Son to the said Margaret, by Matthew Earl of Lenox: He dy'd Anno 1576. These are all it contains. Upon what Occasion it was opened in Mr. Keep's Time, or whether by Communication with the adjoining Vault he saw those Coffins, is uncertain: but he tells us, the undermost was much shaken and decay'd, so that the Skeleton and dry'd shrivel'd Skin might be seen.

ON the same South Side of this Chapel, is a large and capacious Vault, which King James prepared to receive his Mother Mary, Queen of Scots, and his Family: From her being laid there, it is commonly called the Queen of Scots Vault. And is frequently called the Royal Vault, from the many Branches of that Royal Stem which have since been deposited there. Of which in Order.

Henry Prince of Wales, eldest Son of King James I. who was born the 12th of Feb. 1593, and after giving great Promises of a Blessing to this Land, died of a malignant Fever the 6th of Nov. 1612, at his 19th Year, at St. James's, whence he was drawn in a Chariot, and had a Hearse erected to him in this Abbey, with his Arms, and this Motto, Juvat ire per altum. His Body was inclosed in Lead, proportioned to the Shape of it, and his Heart likewise enclosed by itself, to its Shape, and laid on his Breast, and under it the Figures 1612, with the Prince's Device, Motto, and a Rose and Thistle, with H. P. under it emboss'd. Some Time after, it is thought, this Body was removed; for upon digging to clean Monk's Vault, a Corpse, thus inclosed, was dug out of the Sand; and from a Hole made by the Workmen, issued a black Liquid of intolerable Stench.

Elizabeth, Daughter to King James I. married to Frederick Count Palatine of the Rhine, who was afterwards nominated King of Bohemia; but driven by the Emperor both from those Dominions and his own. This Lady, after the Restoration of her Nephew King Charles II. came into England. She lived with the old Lord Craven in Drury-lane, and died at Leicester-House, on Thursday Feb. 1661, aged 66, and was carried from Somerset-House by Water, and here buried, her Son Prince Rupert being Chief Mourner.

Arabel Stuart, Daughter to Charles Earl of Lenox; she married Mr. William Seymour, second Son to the Earl of Hertford; but this Marriage being consummated without the Consent of King James I. and she being Cousin German to the King, they were both committed Prisoners to the Tower, where this Lady ended her Life without Issue, on the 27th Day of Sept. Anno 1615, and was buried here in a Leaden Coffin without any Inscription, says Sand.

Henry Duke of Gloucester, fourth Son of King Charles I. a Prince of Wisdom, and Courage, and Piety, beyond his Years. He lived a short Time after the Restoration, viz. about four Months, and died at Whitehall the 13th of Sept. following, much lamented by all, but particularly by the King, who was never known to grieve so much upon any other Occasion. He was carried from Somerset-House, by Water, to the Parliament-Stairs, and here deposited. His Coffin was of Black Velvet, and on it a Plate of Silver.

Mary Princess of Orange, eldest Daughter to King Charles I. She died of the Small-Pox, at Whitehall, (being invited into England by her Brother Charles II. soon after his Restoration) on the 24th of Dec. 1660, a Princess of great Virtue, and a kind Assister of her Brother in Exile; she was carried by Water from Somerset-House, and on her Coffin of black Velvet a Copper Plate.

Anne Dutcheß of York, Daughter of Chancellor Hyde; and married privately to the Duke of York, a Woman of excellent Sense, and a Soul suited to her high Station: She died of a lingering Illness, occasioned thro' Weaknesses by Child-bearing, at St. James's, March 31, 1671. Aged 34 Years, and was buried here the 5th of April.

Charlotta Maria, third Daughter, born the 15th of August, and died the 16th of October following.

Rupert, Count Palatine of the Rhine, third Son to Frederick King of Bohemia, remarkable for the Share he had in the King's Affairs, during the Grand Rebellion, of whom see much in Chancellor Clarendon's History. He died at his House the Corner of St. James's Park, near Spring-Garden, the 19th of November, 1682, and was buried in great State from the Painted Chamber, the Earl of Craven being Chief Mourner, Norroy King at Arms carrying a foreign Prince's Coronet on a Cushion of black Velvet; the Coffin was covered with black Velvet, and on a Plate of gilt Copper this Inscription: Depositum Illustriss. AT the East End of this Isle is the Royal Vault.

Richmond's Vault, so called from being the Repository of that Title, is on the Right Side of King Henry VII's Tomb, where is a Chapel peculiar to them. Here are two Coffins covered, one with Crimson, and the other Black, unburied, according to the Custom of Foreigners, whose they were. In this Vault (besides the Family of the Lenox's) have lately been buried these following:

John Earl of Kildare, and Baron Ophaley, buried Dec. 4, 1707.

Walter Lord Blantyre in Scotland, buried here June 23, 1713, aged 30 Years.

Catharine Countess-Dowager of Abercorney, deceased May 24, 1713, late Duke of Richmond, Natural Son of King Charles II.

IN the North Isle:

Monk's Vault, so called from the Burial of that great Man, the Restorer of Monarchy, Religion and Liberty to this Nation, and designed for him and his Family only. It goes down in a little Side Chapel on the Left Hand, and is 15 Feet in Length and seven in Breadth; so that Mr. Keep, who seldom inquired of this Church, than what the open Monuments told him, is grossly mistaken, in saying it was made to hold but two, him and the Earl of Sandwich, as will appear by the Persons following, whereof some have lately been buried there:

George Monk, Duke of Albemarle, the Restorer, was buried here in great Pomp the last Day of April, 1670, and died the 4th of January, 1699.

Anne, Dutches of Albemarle, Widow of the Duke, died Sunday 29 Jan. 1699, aged 54 Years, and was buried here the last of February following.

Christopher, Duke of Albemarle, Son to the General, and Governor of Jamaica, where he died on the 6th of October, 1688; whence his Body, being embalmed and wrapped in Lead, was brought into England, and buried here.

A Son of the said Duke, that died in its Infancy, and was here interred.

Edward Montagu, Earl of Sandwich, Admiral of the English Fleet, and Assistant with Monk in the Restoration; he was Vice-Admiral under the Duke of York, at the Dutch Naval Fight, when the Royal James was blown up, and in her her this noble Warriour, who refused to save himself, but perished with his Ship. His Body, being known by the George, was afterwards taken up and brought into Harwich, where the Governor caused it to be embalmed; and the King sent for it, and buried it here at his own Charge, with great Solemnity. His Death was on the 28th of May, 1672, being aged 74 Years.

THESE three were in Pieces upon opening the Vault in 1714, at which Time that of Monk's of Lead was firm, but since, by placing another upon it, is squeezed together.

George, Marquis of Halifax, whose Coffin is of Lead.

Elizabeth, Lady Stanhope, Wife of the late Lord Stanhope, and Daughter of the said Marquis, by Gertrude his Wife, buried September 12, 1708, aged 35 Years. Upon her Coffin is placed that of Charles late Lord Halifax, whose Titles are inscribed upon his Coffin in French.

Catharine, Dutchess of Northumberland, buried the 3d of June, 1714.

George Fitzroy, Duke of Northumberland, third Son of King Charles II. by the Dutchess of Cleveland, buried here the 11th of July, 1716, aged 51 Years.

THE Right Honourable Joseph Addison, Esq; whose Writings gave him a Character superior to all the honourable Posts he held, and whose Name is the greatest Character, was buried from the Jerusalem Chamber on Friday the 26th of June, 1719, the Dean officiating. He was, at his Death, 47 Years of Age, and left behind him one Daughter by his Lady the Countess of Warwick.

THE next was James Cragg's, one of the Secretaries of State; he died of the Small-Pox, and was buried from the Jerusalem Chamber the 2d of March, 1720.

A small Vault at the Feet of Queen Elizabeth's Tomb, made at the Time that was building for one of King James the First's Daughters; and another small one on the Left Side for the other.

KING James I. and Anne of Denmark, his Queen, rest in a Vault by the old Duke of Bucks's Tomb, eight Feet 10 Inches long, four Feet six Inches wide, three Feet high.

UNDER the great East Window of this Chapel, is a large Vault called by the Registry of this Church, Ormond's, from its having been the Place of Sepulture for several of that truly noble Family. It is likewise called Oliver's, for here, it seems, the Body of Oliver Cromwel was deposited till after the Restoration, when it was taken away. What Number of Burials have been here, or what Removals, is uncertain; but from the Account of the Register we find the following Persons:

Eliza. Butler, Dutchess of Ormond, married to that famous and ever-memorable Assertor of Monarchy and the Church of England, at once against the equally dangerous Rebels of England and Ireland, whose remarkable Courage, exemplary Piety, and unshaken Loyalty, will make even the Name of this Family esteemed by all who either have or value any of those Excellencies. The Dutchess died in her House in St. James's-square, on the 26th of January 1685.

Ja. Botelar, Earl of Offory, eldest Son of the aforesaid Duke and Dutchess, and Father to James Butler, the present Duke; he was Privy Counsellor to King Charles II. and Knight of the Garter.

Richard Botelar, second Son of the aforesaid Duke and Dutchess of Ormond, Earl of Arran in Ireland, and Baron of Weston in Huntingdon- shire in England; which last Title was conferred on him for his Service against the Rebels at Carickfergus, and in the Dutch Fight under the Duke of York. He died the 26th of Jan. Anno 1685, whether these three were removed afterwards to Kilkenny, the Burial Place of their Family is uncertain. Mr. Keep mentions only the Earl of Offory, as lying here in his Time, and but three others, viz. Charles Earl of Doncaster, Son to James Duke of Monmouth, by the Lady Anne, Daughter to the Earl of Bucclugh in Scotland; born the 24th of August, 1672; he died the 9th of February, 1673, aged one Year, five Months, 15 Days.

Charles Fitz Charles, Earl of Plymouth, Natural Son to King Charles II. by Mrs. Catharine Peg, born in 1658; he died of a Bloody-Flux at Tangier in Africa, while it was besieged by the Moors, on the 17th of October 1680, aged 23 Years.

Mary Dutchess of Southampton, Daughter to Sir Henry Wood, Knt. and married to Charles Fitzroy, eldest natural Son to King Charles II. She died without Issue, Anno 1680, and was buried here the 16th of that Month. These three last were the only ones, when Mr. Keep wrote, besides which are these following interred:

He publiſhed a fair and juſt Hiſtory of the Affairs of that Kingdom, and has been, for that, eſteemed the trueſt Hiſtorian that Country has produced. The Inscription on his Plate was thus: Thomas Episcopus Rossensis hujus Ecclesiæ Dec. obiit 20. Maii 1713.

Devereux, Earl of Essex, and General on the Rebels Side against King Charles I. and for some Time the Darling of the Presbyterian Faction, afterwards being much slighted by the Army and Independents, he resigned his Commission, and, in a retired disconsolate Manner, ended his Life, on the 14th of September 1647, as some suspected, of Poison. The Two Houses of Parliament, so called, attended his Funeral, towards which, they ordered 5000 l. to be paid. Sir Edward Sprague, another brave Man, as famous at Sea as any it has carried; he was by King Charles II. appointed Envoy in the Affairs of the Netherlands to the Constable of Castile. He was in the famous Dutch Fight, 1673, where finding his Ship disabled, and going to another in order to board Van Tromp, with the Earl of Offory, the Boat he was in was shatter'd to Pieces, and he drowned in the Sea. It was said, when he left the King, he told his Majesty he would bring Tromp alive or dead, or perish in the Attempt; which happened accordingly: His Name was long formidable to the Dutch, and one of their Writers has lately given him the Character of the bravest Admiral England ever had.

He attended Queen Isabel into England, with other Malecontents, and was appointed, in the Name of the People, to depose Edward II. which he impudently did, by renouncing his Allegiance to him. After the Murder of that King he was made Escheator-General on this Side Trent; but being still meddling, he opposed his Brother-Rebel Mortimer, and was forced to fly; but after his Fall, viz. the 4th of King Edward III. was restored to his Place: He was Constable of Beaumarès in Anglesey, Commissioner to treat with France, the 9th of King Edward III. and had 1000 Marks given him. In the 13th of King Edward III. he was Admiral of the Royal Navy; was in an Expedition in Flanders and Scotland; and in the 15th was summoned as Baron; he was Ambassador to France, the 20th of King Edward III. and was one

Edward Earl of Clarendon, Lord Chancellor of England, and the most excellent Historian of the late Times, who for his firm Religion, unshaken Loyalty, sincere Love of his Country, unbiassed Integrity, and universal Humanity and Munificence, was (after serving the martyr'd Father in his Affliction, conducting the exiled Son and restoring him, preserving his Country's Privileges, after the Restoration, and mitigating the just Displeasure of the King against the Rebels) by that very Prince he had served, that Country he had preserved, and those Factions he had with Lenity endeavour'd to moderate, rewarded with Banishment in his old Age. He died of the Gout at Rhoan in Normandy.

S O U T H - C R O S S .

OUR beginning this Survey being at the Door entering this Church into the South-Cross, one Side of it, in our Way, hath already been described; returning therefore, we proceed on the other Sides, till we enter the North Isle, &c. And in this Cemetary of Men of Learning, who honour this Pile (though without Tombs to point them out) more than the splendid and more magnificent Monuments of Dead Greatness, or Living Vanity, we shall be the more particular, and shew them at one View, that the Reader may, with the greater Reverence, enter this Part of the Church, and contemplate the better upon what a Variety of Literature he treads at every Step, and raise from hence a plain Proof, that this Church affords great Characters with no Monuments, and great Monuments with no Characters.

First then, in our Way as we pass by Dryden's Tomb, the Pavement adjoining as you go into St. Benedict's Chapel, covers the Ashes of Francis Beaumont, the Dramatick Writer, who assisted John Fletcher, in composing that Number of Plays that go under their Names. He was much complimented by the Poets of that Time, as Customary, from which, and his Plays, the Reader may know more of him. He died in LONDON the Beginning of March, 1615, and was buried here the 9th, without Tomb or Inscription.

NEAR Chaucer's Tomb was buried Nicho. Brigham, who erected that Monument over him, a Gentlemen equally valuable for his Knowledge in Poetry, History, and the Municipal Laws; he published a Book intituled, De venationibus rerum memorabilium, (from which Bale has borrowed much) and other miscellaneous Pieces, Poems, &c. He died at Westminster in December 1559, and is supposed to be here buried; nor is it improbable, since in his Life he buried his Daughter Rachel here, a Child of four Years old, as appears by this Inscription, visible in Mr. Camden's Time, but now gone:

Unica quæ fueram proles spesque alma parentum,
Hoc Rachel Brigham condita sum tumulo.
Vixi Annos quatuor, mensibus tribus diebus quatuor horis 15.

PASSING hence to the South West Angle of this Cross, over five or six antient Stones stripped of their Brass Plates, and only known by Conjecture, of which hereafter, lies buried, without Memorial inscribed, Sir Robert Stapylton, a remarkable Poet in the Time of King Charles the First, whose Cause he followed, and for whom he suffered in the Times of Usurpation: Upon King Charles II. being restored, was made one of the Gentlemen-Ushers of the Privy Chamber; he wrote several Comedies, translated

Juvenal

Juvenal and other Pieces, and died the 11th of July, 1669.

AGAINST the West Wall of this Cross, is a Monument of white Marble, raised to the Memory of Dr. Outram. The Inscription in English is thus : Near this Place lies William Outram, D. D. born in Derbyshire, Fellow of Trinity and Christ College in Cambridge, Canon of this Church, and Archdeacon of Leicester, a deep and finished Divine in all Respects; a nervous and accurate Writer an excellent and constant Preacher, first in Lincolnshire, afterwards at LONDON, and at length at St. Margaret's, Westminster, where he finished his Course of Life with great Applause, and no less Success; but in so great Labours and Intenseness of Mind, he being so inflamed with the Study of Scripture and the Holy Father's, grew much distempered with the Gravel, with which being long afflicted, and at length worn out, he ended his Life with the utmost Composure of Mind, Aug. 23, Anno Dom. 1679, having compleated his 54th Year.

AFTER a long and religious Course of Life, and 42 Years of Widowhood, here rests Jane, Wife of Dr. William Outram, who for a well-regulated Life, Piety to God, Sincerity to Friends, Charity to the Poor, was esteemed by Heaven, dear to many, admired by all. She died October 4, 1721.

ON a Grave-Stone : GULIELMUS OUTRAM, S. T. P. hujus Ecclesiæ Canonicus Jana Outram. Obiit 4th Octobris, 1721.

ON a Grave-Stone on the Right Side the other : H. S. E. Depositum Reverendi admodum in Christo patris Edwardi Wetenhal S. P. T. primo Corrugiensis, An. 20. Deinde Kilmorienfis & Ardaghensis, An. 14. in Regno Episcopi Hibernia, ob. Nov. 12. An. Dom. 1713. Ætatis suæ 78, i. e. Here lies buried the late Reverend Father in Christ, Edward Wetenhal, D. D. first Bishop of Cork in Ireland 20 Years, afterwards of Kilmore and Ross 14 Years. He died the 12th of November 1713, aged 78.

IN a Grave near was buried his Lady, who died the 18th of April, 1717, and on her Coffin was laid Robert Freind, a Child, Son of Dr. Freind, Prebendary of this Church, and Master of the School, which Child died Anno 1722.

ON the same Line with Wetenhal's, is a Monument erected to the Memory of Dr. Grabe, who published an Edition of the Septuagint, with Notes. This Monument was raised at the Expence of a noble Peer, and has on it the Doctor's Effigies of Marble, sitting, indeed in an odd Posture. The Author of A Critical Review of the Publick Buildings has the following Remark upon this extraordinary Statue : "Elevated on a high Sort of Funeral Chest, with a Lamp on his Side, and open in his Hand to represent, I suppose, his unwearied Application to Study in his Life-time; but then the ridiculous Height of the Statue, the Clumsiness of the Attitude, and the Oddness of the Employ, never fail to excite Laughter in all who behold them : In short, he looks like a Boy on a high Joint-stool, kicking his Heels about, and afraid of tumbling every Moment.

ON the Left Side, adjoining Dr. Outram, on a Blue Grave-stone : Hic situs est Thomas Chiffinch Serenissimi Caroli Secundi a teneris annis in utraque fortuna fidus affecla. ac proinde a regis cimeliis primo constitutus. Vir notissimi candoris & probitatis. Obiit vi. Id. April. An. Dom. 1666. i. e. Here lies Thomas Chiffinch, a faithful Page of the serene Charles II. in either Fortune. A Man of known Candour and Probity. He died the 6th of the Ides of April 1666.

NEAR the Feet of which, distinguished by a small White Stone a Foot square, and thus inscribed, [O rare Sir William Davenant,] lies that once noted Poet; he was Son of John Davenant, a Vintner at Oxford, where he was born in Feb. 1605-6, his Father being then Mayor of that City; his Mother was a Woman of good Wit and agreeable Conversation, which occasioned a Resort of the Polite Men to their House; among whom Shakespeare is said to take up his Lodging frequently. His Education was in Lincoln College; after leaving which he became first Servant to Frances Dutchess of Richmond, and next to Fulk Lord Brook; after whose Death he took to writing Plays, and grew acquainted with Endymion Porter, Henry Fermain, and Sir John Suckling. This Sir William was Poet-Laureat to King Charles I. upon Ben. Johnson's Death, but had the Misfortune to make no graceful Appearance in that Station, having lost his Nose by an odd Accident, for which he was cruelly banter'd by the Wits of that Time. In the Year 1641 he was accused of seducing the Army against the Parliament; upon which he was seiz'd at Feversham in Kent; but being afterwards bailed, he fled into France. In 1643, he was Knighted at the Siege of Gloucester; but the King's Cause declining, he went again into France, at which Time he wrote his Gondibert; afterwards being taken at Sea by the Parliament Ships, he was committed Prisoner to the Isle of Wight, thence removed to the Tower of LONDON, in order to be try'd for his Life by the High Court of Justice; but at Milton's Intercession, he escaped. At length, having lived to see the Stage flourish after the Restoration, he died in his 63d Year, in his House in Little Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, Anno 1668, and was two Days after buried in this Place, whence his Antagonist, May, had not long before been removed. He was succeeded as Laureat by Mr. Dryden.

NEXT is a Monument of White Marble, with a Bust for Dr. Isaac Barrow, Head of Trinity College, Cambridge. He travelled into several Countries, and learned many Languages; in 1660 chosen Greek Professor of that University, and two Years after, Geometry Professor in Gresham College; in 1672, elected Master of Trinity. See his Life before his Works, published by Archbishop Tillotson. The Inscription on his Monument is in English, viz.

Isaac Barrow, D. D. Chaplain to King Charles I.

A Man well nigh Divine and truly Great,
Of Piety, Honesty, Sincerity, great Learning, and as great Modesty, Strictness of Life, and Sweetness of Temper.
Geometry Professor of Gresham College in LONDON, and of Greek and Mathematicks at Cambridge,

And was an Ornament to all his Places, his Church and Country.

He adorned Trinity College, while Head of it, and much enlarg'd the Royal Library there, Wealth, Honours, and the general Pursuits of Life,

He, born for greater Ends, despis'd not, but resign'd to the World.

God whom from his Childhood he had served,
He in the strictest Manner imitated, in wanting little,

and doing Good to many, and even to Posterity, to whom, even dead, he now preaches.

What

What further and more excellent you would know concerning him may be found in his Writings.

Reader, go thy Way and imitate him.

He died the 4th of May, Anno 1677, aged 47 Years.

His Friends erected this Monument.

BETWEEN the Basis of Dr. Barrow's Monument, and the Range of Pillars, lies buried another Mathematician, viz. Sir Robert Murrey, Knt. Secretary of State for Scotland, and Privy Counsellor for that Kingdom to King Charles II. He was one of the Contrivers of the Royal Society, and first President of it; and, says a late Writer, while he lived, he was the Life and Soul of that Body. He was skilled in Chemistry, and a great Admirer of the Rosy-crustians, and had a Genius like Peiriski, as described by Gassandus. He was well versed in experimental Philosophy; and being a great Favourite with King Charles II. and having a Pavilion in the Garden at Whitehall, he died there suddenly, on the 4th of July, 1673, and was buried here at the King's Expence.

ON a Grave-stone farther East, and at some Distance from the Door of St. Blase's Chapel, lies William Barnaby, Esq; died November 8, 1716, in the 23d Year of his Age.

ON a Grave-stone adjoining: T. Car, obiit 7 die Junii, Anno Domini 1712. Ætat 93.

Old Parr.

NEAR these, under a square Stone, lies Parr, the Nester of our Land, with this Inscription: Thomas Parr, of the County of Salop, born in Anno 1483. He lived in the Reigns of Ten Princes, viz. King Edward IV. King Edward V. King Richard III. King Henry VII. King Henry VIII. King Edward VI. Queen Mary, Queen Elizabeth, King James, and K. Charles. Aged 152 Years, and was buried here Nov. 15, 1635.

ON the Right Side of which Stone is Mr. Rowe, the late Poet-Laureat, buried five Feet below the Pavement, on Friday Dec. 19, 1718.

BEFORE the Door going into the hither Vestry lies buried Christopher Sutton, some Time Vicar of Raneham in Essex, Parson of Caston in Hampshire, of Woodrising in Norfolk, of Murley-Bromley in Essex; and lastly of Crantworth in Norfolk; and, for his florid and excellent Preaching, made Prebendary of this Church by King James I. This Gentleman preached Mr. Camden's Funeral Sermon, he published several Tracts of Divinity, and, dying in May or June, 1629, was here buried, having bequeathed 5 l. to the Gentlemen of the Choir.

THE next Monument we meet with, is, adjoining North to Dr. Barrow's, of white Marble, to commemorate Dr. Triplet, some Time Prebendary of this Church. This Gentleman was born near Oxford, and educated in the College of Christ-Church in that University, where he was esteemed a Wit, a good Grecian, and a Poet. In the Year 1645, he was made Prebendary of Presrov, in the Church of Sarum, and had likewise a Benefice; but being sequestered in the Rebellion, he taught School at Dublin in Ireland, where he was when King Charles was Beheaded. He afterwards removed to Hays in Middlesex, where he taught till the Restauration, at which Time he was made Prebendary of this Church, and of Fenton in the Church of York. The Inscription on his Monument is thus translated:

Here resteth the Reverend Dr. Thomas Triplet of Oxfordshire,

Prebendary of this Church,

Who having for 70 Years approv'd himself for Piety and Devotion to God,

VOL. II.

and uncommon Knowledge of the Greek Language,

Munificence to Men of Learning, and Charity to the Poor, and with innocent Chearfulness in Conversation made himself dear to all Men.

Pass'd from this Life to a better on the 18th of July, Anno Dom. 1670.

NEXT adjoining is a Table Monument of White Marble for Sir Richard Cox, Knt. Taster to Queen Elizabeth, and King James I. to the latter of which he was Steward of the Household; a Man commended in his Epitaph for his Religion, Humanity, Chastity, Temperance, Friendship, Beneficence, Charity, Justice, &c. He died a Batchelor, aged 60, on the 13th of December 1623. The Epitaph follows in English, thus:

To the Great and Good God.

Here resteth in the Lord Richard Cox of Porters, Knight,

Third Son of Thomas Cox of Beymonds in the County of Hereford, Esq;

Servant in the Royal Palace for many Years, And approved for his Fidelity, Diligence and Prudence,

Taster to Queen Elizabeth and King James; To the latter of which he was, at length, made

Steward of the Household, a Man of pure Religion,

Social Behaviour, Chastity of Body, temperate in his Desires, loving to his Friends, beneficent to the Poor, charitable to all, just in his Dealings.

In the 60th of his Age, being unmarried, After having prepared himself for a better Life, by much Vigilance, Self-denial,

He chearfully resign'd his Soul to God

the 13th Day of December, 1623.

John Cox of Beymonds, Esq; 2d Brother and Heir, hath as a Testament of his Love, erected this Monument.

AT some Distance from the Basis of this Eastward, is a large Stone of Grey Marble, with an Inscription round the Ledge, in Saxon Characters; the Manner of it is very antient, but broken Letters, by no Means to be connected.

AT some Distance East, lies ——— Harstal, B. D.

ON a Grave-stone adjoining North, Dame Mary Steel, Wife of Sir Richard Steel, Knt. Daughter and sole Heiress to Jonathan Scurlock, Esq; of the County of Caermarthen, died December 26, 1718, aged 40 Years; leaving Issue one Son and two Daughters, Eugene, Elizabeth, and Mary.

ON a Grave-stone adjoining North: Hic jacer Gulielmus Craig, A. M. hujus Ecclesiæ Prebendarius, obiit 10 die Febr. 1720.

ON another near the West Wall: " Here lieth " the Body of John Osbaldiston, of Leland in the " County of Lancaster, Esq; Page of the Bed- " chamber to King Charles II. He died the 1st " of March 1666, and was buried the 3d Day of " the same Month, aged 55 Years.

AND near it, against the West Wall, adjoining to Cox's Monument, is one of White Marble erected, in Honour of that profound Scholar and admirable Critick, Isaac Casaubon: He was Library-keeper to the King of France, afterwards invited by King James I. into England. His Writings and Character are universally known. He died 1614, aged 55. This Monument was erected by Dr. Moretton, Bishop of Durham, with its Epitaph, as follows:

ISAAC CASAUBON.

Ye Men of Learning rise with Respect
To this so venerable a Name Whom Gallia produced for the Good of the learned World:

And Henry IV. the powerful King of France
call'd from his Studies,
And made Keeper of the Royal Library at Paris, and while he lived ever esteemed him.
After his Murder, King James, Monarch of Great Britain, the most learned of the Kings, and most indulgent to learned Men, Invited him to England and munificently en-courag'd, and whom Posterity will ever admire for Learning.

Here he lies superior to Envy, Breathing out his Soul in Christ. He enter'd into Eternity, on the Kal. of July 1614. aged 55 Years.

To this most excellent Man, well worthy Immortal.

Thomas Moreton Bishop of Durham, pleased with the Memory of his Conversation erected.
He that would know Casaubon, let him not read Monuments but Books,
Superior to Marble and more useful to Posterity.

NEAR the Corner, going into the South Isle, is a Monument of White Marble, with a Demy Effigies, and the Inscription thus in English:

WILLIAM CAMDEN,

Who illustrated the British Antiquities,
by antient Truth, and indefatigable Industry, and adorned his innate Simplicity with useful Literature,
And illustrated his Pleasantness of Humour with Candor and Sincerity, lies here quiet, in Hope, of a certain Resurrection in Christ.
He died the 9th of November 1623.
Aged 74 Years.

OF this Father of our Antiquities, take this Account: His Father was one Sampson Camden, Citizen and Painter-Stainer of LONDON, in which City this William was born, in the Old Bailey, on the 2d of May 1551. His first Education, i. e. of Reading, was in Christ-Church
Hospital, then newly founded, afterwards at St.
Paul's School, whence he was sent to Magdalen
College in Oxford, Anno 1566, where he was a Choirister; there meeting with Disappointment, he was removed to Broadgates, now Pembroke
College; afterwards he grew in Favour with Dr.
Goodman, Dean of this Church; and in 1575 he was made Master of the School of this Abbey, about which Time he prosecuted his Search into Antiquities, incited thereto by Dr. Goodman. In 1588 he was made Prebendary of Ilfarcomb, in the Church of Salisbury, which he kept till his Death. In March 1593, he was made head Master of Westminster School. In 1596, he was made Richmond Herald, and the next Day Clarencieux

dangerously ill, he founded his History-Lecture at Oxford. In August 1622, he fell from his Chair, and never recover'd, dying at his House at Chiffelhurst in Kent, on Sunday the 9th of November 1623, about Four or Five in the Morning; whence he was carried to his House at West- minster, where he lay in State some Time; and was thence brought to this Church. His Monument was defaced in 1646, when the Hearse and Effigies of Robert Earl of Effex, the Parliament-
General, were cut in Pieces and defaced.

IN this Cross are two Tablet Monuments affixed to the Pillars, the first to Dr. Barton, Prebendary of this Church, who died 1715, aged 68. The Inscription is in English, thus:

Near this Column lies
The mortal Remains of SAMUEL BARTON, D.D.
Prebendary of this Collegiate Church.
What he was, learn in few Words,
A Man of remarkable Genius, Learning, Honesty and Piety,
And lastly, an unfeign'd Love for his Church and Country.
He died 18 Kal. of Septemb. 1715.
Aged 68.

Deeds of Humanity to several in Distress,
And in Sickness. Indefatigable Pains in Preaching
at St. Mary Savoy 26 Years.
Sermons which wonderfully abounded
With that primitive Piety, and strict Severity, and smooth florid Oratory, which was famous far and near, and procured him great Fame from all good Men.
worn out with great Pains,
Which he went through, in Discharge of his Duty.

" Sacred to the eternal Memory of the most rare Matron, the Lady Sophia Fairholm, Marchioness of Anandale, born in Scotland, whose Elegance of Sense and Behaviour contended for Preference, with an excellent and beautiful Form of Body; renowned for the Praises of the Mother and Wife, so diligent a Governor in her Family, that she sustained the Weight of her Family Affairs with a manly Conduct equal to it; adorned with such and so many Virtues, that she finished a Life admired by all, by a Death universally lamented. Christ is my Life, and Death is my Gain;

Phil. i. The Day of Death is the Birth-Day of eternal Life.

ON the West Side of the Cloister-Door, on a small oval Tablet fixed to the Wall: " Near these Steps lies the Body of Mrs. Anne Wemys, Daughter of Dr. Lodowick Wemys, some Time Prebendary of this Cathedral; and of Mrs. Jane Bargrave his Wife, who departed this Life the 19th Day of December, in the 67th Year of her Age, 1698.

OPPOSITE to this Cloister-Door, and against the Back of the Choir, next to Thynne's, is a large and noble Monument of black Marble, on which is the Effigies of a Judge in his Robes, with a Collar of SS's. representing Sir Thomas Richardson, Kt. Speaker of the House of Commons in the 21st and 22d Years of King James I. Chief Justice of the Court of and Common-Pleas; and lastly, by King Charles I. made Lord Chief Justice of England. He died 1634, in the 66th Year of his Age. This is the Substance of his Epitaph. This is that Judge Richardson, who, to please the Faction of his Time, issued out an Order against the antient Custom of Wakes, and ordered every Minister to read it in his Church. This Incroachment on the Ecclesiastical Authority, was complained of by the Bishop of Bath and Wells, and a Certificate was signed by seventy of the ablest Clergy of the Diocess, to prove prove the Antiquity and Inoffensiveness of those Diversions, which being sent, a Bishop reported it at the Council Table, where Richardson was so severely reprimanded, that he came out complaining he had almost been choaked with a Pair of Lawn Sleeves. This Step was the Means of the Book of Sports, so fatal to that good unhappy Prelate.

NEXT to this Westward; and divided from it by one of the Pillars, is a handsome Monument of white and veined Marble, on which are two Bustos in Relieve, representing Judith and Elizabeth Freke, with the following Inscription thereon :

“ Near this Place lyes all that is mortal of “ Elizabeth and Judith, Daughters of Ralph “ Freke of Hannington in Wiltshire, Esq; by Cecilia his Wife, Daughter of Sir Thomas Colepeper of Hollingbourn in Kent.

“ Elizabeth was married to Piercy Freke of West Bilney in Norfolk, Esq; and was the Mother of Sir Ralph Freke, Bart. deceased, the Father of a flourishing Posterity there. She was of excellent Life, frugal to be Munificent, a lively Christian Pattern of Charity and Self-Denial. She dyed April 7th, 1714, aged 69 Years.

“ Judith was the Wife of Robert Austin, of Tenterden in Kent, Esq; and the Mother of a very considerable and hopeful Family in that County.

“ She dyed the 19th of May 1716, aged 64 Years. They were both great Examples to their Sex, the best of Daughters, the best of Wives, and the best of Mothers.

“ Francis Lady Norton, Widdow of Sir George Norton, of Abbots Leigh in Somersetshire, their mournfull Sister, has in the Year of our Lord 1718, erected this Monument of her Love; and recommends the Imitation of the Virtue of her dear Sisters to their Descendants for ever.

“ Which said Lady Norton has ordered, by her Will, her Executor to bury her near this Place by her Daughier, Lady Gethin's Monument.

THE next Monument, bearing the Effigies of a Lady kneeling, with two Angels, one holding a Crown over her Head on one Side, and the other a Chaplet on the other, was erected for Grace, Lady Gethin, Niece to the afore-mentioned two Ladies. She was famed for exemplary Piety, and endowed with good Sense. There is extant a small Octavo Volume of Devotions, written by her, before which is printed a Cut of her Monument; and Mr. Congreve has Verses, among his other Poems, in Commendation of her. The Inscription on her Monument is as follows :

“ To the pious Memory of Dame Grace Gethin, Wife of Sir Richard Gethin, of Gethin-Grott, in Ireland, Bart. Daughter of Sir George Norton, and Grand-daughter of Sir George Norton, and Great Grand Daughter of Sir William Owen of Salop, Sir Thomas Freke of Dorset, and Sir Thomas Colepeper of Kent, Kts. who being adorned with all Graces and Perfections of Mind and Body, crowned them all with exemplary Patience and Humility; and having, the Day before her Death, most devoutly received the Holy Communion, which she said she would not have omitted for ten thousand Worlds: She plainly evidenced her sure and certain Hope of future Bliss, and thus continuing sensible to the last, she resign-

“ ed her pious Soul to God in fervent Transports
“ of spiritual Joy and Comfort, for her near Approach to the Heavenly Glory.

“ Obitt 11th October, in^d of her Age 21.

“ the Year _____ of our Lord, 1697.

“ Her dear and disconsolate Parents, for a lasting Memorial of this her Godly and Blessed End, have erected this Monument, the bearing the last of their Issue.

UNDER the Right Hand Pillar :

“ Also lieth near this Place interred, George “ and Elizabeth Norton, Children of Sir George Norton, Knt. by his Wife Dame Frances Norton, both of them dying young in the “ Year _____

Sir CLOUDESLEY SHOVEL, Kt. Rear-Admiral of Great-Britain, and Admiral and Commander in Chief of the Fleet: The just Reward of his long and faithful Services. He was deservedly beloved of his Country; and esteemed, though dreaded, by the Enemy, who had often experienced his Conduct and Courage. Being Shipwreckt on the Rocks of Scylly, in his Voyage from Toulon, the 22d of October 1707, at Night, in the 57th Year of his Age. His Fate was lamented by all; but especially the Seafaring Part of the Nation, to whom he was a generous Patron, and a worthy Example. His Body was flung on the Shore, and buried with others in the Sands: But being soon after took up, was placed under this Monument, which his Royal Mistress had caused to be erected, to commemorate his steady Loyalty, and extraordinary Virtues.

HE lies under a Canopy, the Curtains turned aside: Two rich Marble Pillars support two Boys, having a Trumpet in one Hand, and his Coat of Arms in the other, which is, Gules, a Chevron Ermin between two Crescents, Argent; and a Flower de Lys in the Base.

THIS Monumant of Sir Cloudesly Shovel is, very justly, thought to be executed in the worst Taste of any Thing of that Kind in the Abbey, the following Remark is made upon it, by the late Mr. Addison, in the Paper called the Spectator.

Sir Cloudesly Shovel's Monument has very often given me great Offence; “ Instead of the “ brave rough English Admiral, which was the “ distinguishing Character of that plain gallant “ Man, he is represented on his Tomb by the “ Figure of a Beau, dressed in a long Perriwig, and reposing himself upon Velvet Cushions, under a Canopy of State. The Inscription is answerable to the Monument; for instead of celebrating the many remarkable Actions he had performed in the Service of his Country, it acquaints us only with the Manner of his Death, in which it was impossible for him to reap any Honour. The Dutch, whom we are apt to despise for want of Genius, shew an infinitely greater Taste of Antiquity and Politeness in their Buildings and Works of this Nature, than what we meet with in those of our own Country. The Monuments of their Admirals, which have been erected at the publick Expence, represent them like themselves, “ selves, and are adorned with rostral Crowns and

“ and naval Ornaments, with beautiful Festoons “ of the Sea Weeds, Shells and Coral.

HE was buried here on the 22d of December, 1707, at the Foot of his Monument, his Right Side joining the Foundation.

ON a Table near it.

To the Glory of the Lord of Hosts,
Here-under resteth Sir Richard Bingham, Kt.
of the antient Family of the Binghams, of Bingham Melcomb in the County of Dorset, who from his Youth was train'd up in military Affairs,
and served in the Time of Q. Mary at S. Quintin's, in the Western Isles of Scotland, and in Britain, in the Time of Queen Elizabeth,
at Leith in Scotland,
in the Isle of Candy under the Venetians,
at Cabo Chrio,
and the famous Battle of Lepanto against the Turks,
in the Civil Wars of France,
in the Netherlands,
and at Smerwick,
where the Romans and Irish were vanquish'd.
After he was made Governour of Connaught, where he overthrew the Irish Scots, expelled the traiterous Orourke, suppressed divers Rebellions,
and that with small Charges to her Majesty, maintaining that Province in a flourishing Estate,
by the Space of thirteen Years:
finally, for his good Service,
was made Marshal of Ireland,
and General of Leinster, where at Dublin, in an assured Faith in Christ,
He ended this transitory Life,
the 19th of Jan. An. Dom. 1598. Ætat. 70.

THIS is done by Sir John Bingley, some Time his Servant.

NEAR which, and against the same Wall, is a handsome Monument of veined Marble, with its Epitaph, erected to the Memory of Dr. Knipe, Master of Westminster School: The Inscription is thus translated into English:

Thomas Knipe, D. D.
Prebendary of this Church, gave Direction his Body should lie in that Part of the Cloysters opposite to this Monument, where Anne his Wife,
with five of their Children were buried.
For the Space of fifty Years he,
in the School of Westminster labour'd for the promoting Piety and Learning, and for sixteen Years was Head Master there, which Province
he happily administer'd being deeply acquainted with the Helps of Learning
practis'd to indefatigable Industry, and made up of the most humane Sweetness:
From hence he supplied the University with Youth vers'd in the best Discipline, many of which are now Ornaments in the Church and State.
and more there are who now give Earnest of being hereafter so. To these Praises he added these other Virtues which speak the good Man, as Piety and Munificence, Socialness and Benevolence, Candor and Sincerity, and ready Bounty to those in Distress.
He enjoy'd a firm Health and long Age, attended with all the other Comforts of Life,
till decaying gradually, by a ling'ring Distemper,
Vol. II.

Which at length violently encreasing upon him he died, beloved by the Poor, his Scholars, Friends, Relations and Wife,
8 Id. Aug. Anno 1711, aged 73.
To this her dear Husband,
Alice, his second and most afflicted Wife,
hath erected this Monument,
one Day intending her Ashes shall rest in the same Tomb.

OPPOSITE to Dr. Knipe, and placed against the back of the Choir, between the second and third Pillars from the North West Corner of it, is an antient Monument of Marble and Alabaster gilded, and the Effigies of a Judge at length, in Scarlet Robes, leaning on his Left Arm, erected to signify the Burial of Thomas Owen, Esq; near it: This Owen was born at Candover in Shrop- shire, educated in Broadgate's Hall, Oxon, studied the Law at Lincoln's-Inn, was Lent Reader of that House, after created Judge of the Common- Pleas, and not, as Sir William Dugdale says, of the King's-Bench; which Place he faithfully discharged for five Years. He hath published Reports in that Court, printed 1656. It is to be observed, that Roger Owen, his Son, hereafter mentioned, was a Knight much commended by Cam- den, a strenuous Vindicator of the Clergy in Parliament, 11 Jac. I. and died in a distracted Condition, universally lamented, Anno 1617, on the 29th of May.

Sacred to the Triune God.
Expecting the 2d Coming of Christ our Redeemer,
under this Tomb lies Thomas Owen, Esq; Son of Richard Owen,
by Mary, Daughter and Heir of Thomas Otely of the County of Salop, Esq; who from his Youth was instructed in the Study of the municipal Laws of England
so prosper'd in industrious Application, Readiness and Judgment that he was first chosen Serjeant at Law to Queen Elizabeth, afterwards one of the Just. of the C. of Common-Pleas,
among whom, when he had sat five Years with singular Integrity, Equity, and commendable Prudence:
And by Sarah his Wife,
only Daughter and Heir of Humphry Baskerville;
had five Sons and as many Daughters:
And married Alice his second Wife,
who survives him,
He devoutly slept in Christ the 21st Day of Decemb.
in the Year of our Redemption, 1598.
Roger Owen, his most afflicted Son, hath, as a Proof of his officious Duty, and Regard to the Memory of this best of Fathers,
erected this Monument.

The Souls of the Righteous are in the Hand of God.

AGAINST the South Wall of this Isle, almost opposite to Owen's, and adjoining South to Knipe's, is another Monument, as rich for Marble and mean in Design as that of Sir Cloudestly Shovel's, but erected to the Memory of a much greater Man, viz. Mr. Stepney, a Gentleman equally conversant with the World of fine Letters, and that of Business, of whose Character learn more in the Inscription, which in English is thus:

Here lies interr'd George Stepney, Esq;
for his ready Genius, Knowledge of Learning, Sweetness of Temper, Experience

Experience of the World,
Acquaintance of Great Men,
Elegance of Language, Stile, and Life, Eminent Stations he held,
of Britain and of Europe,
much celebrated in his Time,
and ever to be celebrated to Posterity.

He conducted several Embassies with that Integrity, Application and Facility, that he ever discharged the Trust reposed in him, by those august Princes, William and Anne,
and generally exceeded even Expectation.

After a length of Honours, which he passed through in a short Space of Time,
after a narrow Life, but extensive Fame,
He calmly breathed out his Soul to higher Regions.

ON one Side of the Pilasters of the Basis:

GEORGE STEPNEY, descended from the honourable Family of the Stepneys

of Pendegraft in Pembroke-shire, was born at Westminster, An. Dom. 1663. elected into the College of St. Peter's Westminster, 1676.

and to Trinity in Cambridge, 1682.
made Commissioner of Trade, 1697.

and attended by a great Concourse of the Nobility,

Electors of Brandenburg, Anno 1692.

Mr. Stepney's Leaden Coffin lies close to the Foundation, and on it a Plate thus inscrib'd:

Here lies the Ashes of the Honourable George Stepney, Esq; Plenipotentiary and Ambassador Extraordinary from his Prince to the States of Holland, and Commissioner of Trade and Plantations, who died the 15th Day of September, 1707. Aged 27 Years.

UPON his Coffin lies another, containing the Body of his Sister Frances Stepney, who died the 13th Day of March, Anno Dom. 1718. Aged 59 Years, was buried by the Dean on the 23d of the same Month.

ON the left Side Mr. Stepney lies, in a Leaden Coffin, six Feet deep, and close to the Foundation of the two Pillars by Owen's Tomb, John Methuen, Esq; sometime a Master in Chancery, afterwards Lord High Chancellor of Ireland, and lastly, Envoy Extraordinary to the King of Portugal, in which Country he died, the 13th Day of July 1706, and was buried here the 17th of September, 1708. On his Coffin is his Coat of Arms, and the Letters J. M. He was Father to the present Sir Paul Methuen, Kt. of the Bath.

UPON his Coffin lies another Leaden one, containing the Remains of Isabel Methuen, his Daughter; buried April 29, 1711. Aged 29
Years.

THESE three last have no Gravestones nor Inscriptions.

AGAINST the Back of the Choir, between the first and second Pillar from the West Corner, is a Monumental Table, on which is a Man's Figure in white Marble, in a dying Posture, and at his Feet a Cherub weeping, esteemed a very fine Piece of Modern Statuary, and on the Side of the Table in Relieve, some Russians shooting a Gentleman in his Chariot. This Figure represents, and the Relieve points to us, the hapless End of Mr. Thynne, of Longleat, in the County of Wiltshire, a Gentleman who had served in several Parliaments, and was pretty much against the Court Party in King Charles's Time. Having 10,000 l. per Ann. left him by an Uncle, he was secretly married to the rich Heiress of Northumberland, a young Lady, and Widow to the Earl of Ogle. The Noise of this Lady's Fortune, among many others, encouraged Count Coningsmark, a German Lord to attempt her:
However Mr. Thynne's Marriage was managed, the Lady being displeased, thought fit to go over to Holland before it was consummated, or they had ever been bedded: Upon this a Suit of Law was intended, and Coningsmark thought, upon this Difference, if he could remove Thynne, he should bid fair for his Prize, and having sent him two Challenges, which Thynne answered after a strange Manner, by sending six Russians into France to kill him and his Second, Captain Vratz; but they escaped by killing two of them, as the Count said: However, if it were so, he more basely and barbarously turned his own Weapons upon him; for on Sunday Night the 12th of February, as he was going in Pall-Mall, near the Hay-market, in his own Coach, three Men on Horseback assaulted him, and one of them, by discharging a Musquetoon into the Coach, mortally wounded him, and they all made their Escape. Coningsmark was taken at Gravesend, and try'd, but by foul Play, as was thought, cleared; the other three were executed. This was, by some, imagined a just Reward for his Perfidy, in having, at the Duke of Monmouth's Request, debauched a young Lady of Character, basely deserting her; whence came the Saying, That he had escap'd this Danger, if he had either married the Woman he had lain with, or lain with the Lady he had married.
This Murder made a great Noise, and for that Thynne, who was a busy stirring Gentleman, had presented a Petition of Complaint and Uneasiness of the Gentry, it was immediately conjectur'd, the Papists and the Duke of York had done it;
so mean Handles did the Faction use at that Time.
There was an Epitaph design'd at that Time, but prohibited.

AFFIXED to the Pillar at Thynne's Feet, is a Table Monument of white Marble, with this Inscription:

Near this Place lieth the Body of James Kendal, Esq; He was first chosen Member of Parliament in the Year 1684, and served in most of the succeeding Parliaments; he was five Years Governor in Barbados, and soon after his Return to England, was appointed by King William, one of the Commissioners for executing the Office of Lord High Admiral. Some Years before his Death, he retired from all publick Business, excepting only his Service in Parliament. He died at Cane-halton in Surrey, the 10th Day of July 1708, in the 61st Year of his Age.

N. B. Mr. Kendal's Coffin of Lead joins to the Feet of Mr. Stepney's.

ALMOST

ALMOST opposite to this, and directly to Thynne's, against the South Wall, between the third and fourth Pillars from the Door descending to the East Cloyster, is a Monument of various colour'd Marble, erected for Admiral Churchil, Brother to the late Duke of Marborough. The Epitaph in English thus :

P. S. E.

GEORGE CHURCHIL,

2d Son of Sir William Churchill, Kt. of Dorsetshire, and worthy Brother of John D. of Marlborough, from his yearly Youth train'd to Military Affairs, and served with great Honour by Sea and Land, under King Charles II. and King James II.

He was for the Space of twenty Years Gentleman of the Bedchamber to the most serene Prince George of Denmark, to whom his Integrity, Obsequiousness and Virtue, render'd him dear and valuable.

In the Time of King William's Reign, When the French Navy was defeated And burnt by the English at la Hogue, (a Day for ever memorable)

he behaved himself with that Vigour of Soul and Bravery, as became an English Officer.

Soon after he was by that Prince, (who was a true Judge of Merit) made one of the Commissioners of the Admiralty, in which Station, the Sea Affairs which he was Master of, he daily manag'd and adorn'd.

At length, when under the happy Reign of Queen Anne,

the War against the French, (those turbulent Foes of Britain) was renew'd, he was chosen one of the Admirals, and of the Council to the most High Prince of Denmark, Admiralissimo of Great Britain; and was Partaker with his Master of all his Care and Fatigue, which he happily manag'd, till the broken Power of France quitted the Seas, afterwards adhering to that best of Princes to his last,

he then perform'd all the Offices of a grateful and generous Soul.

At length broken with Toil and Diseases, amidst the Embraces and Tears of his Friends, Dependants and Servants, Whom his Humanity, Services and Liberality made grateful, devoted and faithful to him, he being unmarried, died like a pious, calm, and chearful Man, the 8th of May, 1710, aged 58 Years.

N. B. His Body lies at the Entrance, by the Gates of the Choir, in the Grave by Mr. Seymour. And on his Grave-Stone; Depositum Georgii Churchil, Armig. qui Obiit 8 Maii, M.DCCX. Ætat LVIII.

WESTWARD of the afore-mentioned Monument is a Table, one of white Marble, with this Inscription :

Near this Place lieth the Body of Captain William Julius, late Commander of his Majesty's Ship the Colchester, who departed this Life the 3d of October 1698. Aged 33 Years.

AND on the West of that, divided from it by a Pillar, a handsome one of white Marble, between Pyramids of Black, adorned with Relieve, for Sir Palmes Fairbones, as see by the Inscription and Epitaph written by Mr. Dryden.

Sacred to the immortal Memory of Sir Palmes Fairborne, Knight, Governor of Tangier, in Execution of which Command, he was mortally wounded by a Shott from the Moors then besieging the Town, in the 46th Year of his Age, October 24, 1680.

Yee sacred Reliques which your Marble keepe, Here undisturbed by Warrs, in Quiet Sleepe, Discharge the Trust which (when it was below) Fairborne's undaunted Soul did undergoe : And be the Towns Palladium from the Foe. Alive and dead these Walls he will defend, Great Actions great Examples must attend. The Candian Siege his early Valour knew ; Where Turkish Blood did his young Hands imbrow ;

From thence returning with deserv'd Applause, Against the Moores his well flesh'd Sword he draws,

The same the Courage, and the same the Cause. His Youth and Age, and Life and Death combine :

As in some great and regular Design, All of a Piece throughout, and all Divine. Still nearer Heaven his Virtue shone more bright

Like rising Flames expanding on their Height, The Martyrs Glory crown'd the Souldiers Fight. More bravely British Generall never fell : Nor Generall's Death was ere reveng'd so well. Which his pleas'd Eyes beheld before their close, Followed by thousand Victims of his Foes.

To his lamented Loss for Time to come, His pious Widowe consecrates this Tomb.

At the Bottom of this Tomb is Julius's Grave-stone, and adjoining on the Left Side of that another, with this Inscription :

Here lieth the Body of Henry Cornwal, of Bredwardine Castle in the County of Hereford, Esq; whose first Wife was Margarita Laurentia Huyssen, of Middleburgh in Zealand, by whom he had Issue Henry, his eldest Son and Heir, now living, and William Henry, who dy'd an Infant. To his second Wife he had Susanna, one of the Daughters of Sir John Williams, Bart. and by her left Issue two Sons, Velters and James, and one Daughter, named Mary, married to the Honourable Henry Berkely, Esq; Brother of the Right Honourable James, now Earl of Berkeley. He departed this Life the 22d of February, 1716, in the 64th Year of his Age.

WE shall take in regularly the Grave-Stones; not only in this Isle, but those in the Nave or Body of the Church that lie opposite to the Monuments on this South Side of it to the Middle, and likewise those on the North Side of the Nave, of which take one opposite to Fairborne's Monument at the Head of Admiral Churchil's Grave-Sone, with this Inscription :

Here lies interr'd the Body of Dame CONSTANTINE HARDY, Wife of Sir Thomas Hardy, of the Island of Jersey, Knt. She was Daughter of Henry Hook, Esq; Lieutenant Governor of Plymouth, and departed this Life the 28th of April, 1720, in the 88th Year of her Age.

NEAR her, and by the Gates entering the Choir, was buried Jaeneto Borges de Castro, Envoy from the King of Portugal; he died November 4, 1720, and was buried the 9th.

THE

The next Monument in the South Isle is next Fairborne's, and between the same Pillars; it is a Table one of White Marble, to commemorate Major Creed, who was slain, and buried at Blenheim, and has on it the following Inscription:

To the Memory of the Honoured Major RICHARD CREED: Who attended his late Majesty King William III. in all his Wars, during his Reign; every where signalizing himself, and never more himself than when he looked an Enemy in the Face. At that glorious Battle of Blenheim, A. D. 1704, he commanded one of those Squadrons that began the Attack. In two several Charges he remain'd unhurt; but, in the third, after many Wounds received, still valiantly fighting, he was shot through the Head. His dead Body was brought off by his Brother, at the Hazard of his own Life, and buried there.

To his Memory his sorrowful Mother erected this Monument; placing it near another, which her Son, when living, used to look upon with Pleasure, for the worthy Mention it maketh of that great Man, Edward Earl of Sandwich: To whom he had the Honour to be related, and whose heroic Virtues he was ambitious to imitate.

He was the eldest Son of John Creed of Oundle, Esq; and Elizabeth his Wife, only Daughter of Sir Gilbert Pickering, Bart. of Tichmarch in Northamptonshire.

NEAR this Part of the Isle is a Tablet of White Marble, affixed high against the Wall, bearing this Inscription:

Here lies the Body of Mrs. Bridget Radley, the most deservedly beloved Wife of Charles Radley, Esq; Gentleman-Usher, and Daily Waiter to his Majesty; which Place he parted withal, not being able to do the Duty of it, by Reason of his great Indisposition both of Body and Mind, occasioned by his just Sorrow for the Loss of her. She changed this Life for a better the 20th of Nov. 1679.

ON her Grave-stone this: Mrs. Bridget Radley, died Nov. 1672.

On another:

Here lieth interr'd the Body of Sir William Dobson, Knt. obiit 9 Octobris, Anno Dom. 1679.

AND near it, one for Sidney Bagenal; the Inscription intirely obliterated, as are indeed most of the others, by the Feet of Passengers. This Bagenal died 1684.

NEXT Creed's is a stately Monument of Black and White Marble for Sir Charles Harboard, and Clement Cotterel, whose Characters and Fate learn from their pathetick and moving Epitaphs, which follow:

to preserve and unite
The Memory of two faithful Friends, who lost their Lives at Sea together. May xxviii.
MDCLXXII.

Sir Charles Harboard, Knt. third Son of Sir Charles Harboard, Knt. his Majesty's Surveyor General, and First Lieutenant of the Royal James, under the most Noble and Illustrious Captaine Edward Earle of Sandwich, Vice-Admiral of England, which after a terrible Fight maintained to Admiration against a Squadron of the Holland Fleet, for above six Houres neere the Suffolk Coast, having put off two Fire-ships; at last being utterly disabled, and few of her

Men remaining unhurt, was by a third unfortunately set on Fire. But he (though he swam well (neglected to save himself, as some did; and out of perfect Love to that worthy Lord (whom for many Years he had constantly accompanied in all his honorable Employments and in all Engagements of the former Warre) dyed with him, and at the Age of xxxiv. much bewailed of his Father whom he never offended; and much beloved of all for his knowne Piety, Vertue, Loyalty, Fortitude and Fidelity.

Clement Cottrell, Esq; eldest Son of Sir Charles, Knt. Master of the Ceremonies and his Assistant to have succeeded in that Office, for which he was very fit, having a tall handsome Person, a graceful winning Behaviour, and great Natural Parts much improved by Study, and by Converse in most Courts of Europe, where firm to the Church of England: He learned not their Vices, but Customs and Languages, understanding seven, and speaking four of them as his own, though but xxii Years old; yet not content to serve his King and Country at home only, his Excesse of Courage incited by a deep Sense of Honour could not be kept from going Volunteere with the Earl of Sandwich, with whome he had been in Spaine when his Exce was there Ambr Exry with whom (after having returned unwounded into his Ship from being the First Man that had boarded a Dutch one of lx Guns, and pulled downe the Ensigne of it with his own Hand) he also perished universally lamented.

IN the Nave, opposite to it, on a Grave-stone, for Mr. Smith and his Son, whose is the following Inscription:

John Smith, Esq; late of Beaufort's Buildings. Here also lies his Grandson, the Honourable John Bourke, who died the 28th of Dec. 1719, aged three Years, six Months, and three Days.

ON a Grave-stone in this South Isle:

Here lie the Remains of Judith Isham, Daughter of Justinian Isham, Baronet; she died the 18th of May 1679.

ON the one Side the aforesaid Monument of Harboard and Cotterel, is a Busto and Inscription, as follows:

Sidney Earl of Godolphin, Lord High Treasurer of Great Britain and Chief Minister, during the first nine Glorious Years of the Reign of Queen Ann. He died in the Year 1712. the 5th Day of Sept. aged 67. and was buried near this Place, to whose Memory this is offered with the utmost Gratitude, Affection and Honour, by his much obliged Daughter-in-Law Henrietta Godolphin.

THE Lord Godolphin was Member of Parliament in 1661, Groom of the Bedchamber to King Charles II. Commissioner of the Treasury 1679; in 1684 Secretary of State, and soon after Commissioner of the Treasury; and the same Year created Baron of Rialton in Cornwall by King James II. He was made Lord Chamberlain to the Queen, and Commissioner for executing the Office of Lord High Treasurer. After the Revolution he was first Commissioner of the Treasury, and soon after Lord Treasurer. His Coffin lies near the Corner of the Choir, and on his Right Side Sir William Godolphin, his elder Brother, buried Sept. 3, 1710.

ON the other Side Harboard's Monument, is an old fashioned one for the Lady Gifford, a Person of excellent Qualifications, Sister to the famous mous Sir William Temple, and Companion with him in his foreign Embassies. This seems to have been designed by Sir William in his Life-time, as should seem by the Epitaph; for the Lady Gifford long survived him; the Tomb is chiefly of Black Marble, and in Gold bears this Inscription:

To himself and these most dear to him,
To his most beloved Daughter,
Dorothy Osbourn,
To his most loving Wife,
And Martha Gifford
his best of Sisters,
This Monument was erected at the Care of William Temple of Moor-Park
In the County of Surrey, Bart.

DIVIDED from this, by a Pillar, is one of Black and White Marble, for a Lady of Sir Samuel Moreland's, with this Inscription in English:

THE next, being one of the justest and most beautiful in this Church, is a Pyramid and Altar of finely veined Marble, and on the Altar a Lady veil'd, weeping, and resting her Right Arm on a curious Busto in Relieve: Under all, on a Table of White Marble, the Inscription in English, thus:

Near this Tomb lies buried John Smith, Esq; of LONDON, in Beaufort Buildings, descended from the Smiths of Lincolnshire, who died the 6th of July, 1718; he left two Daughters, of which Anne the eldest married first to Henry Parker, Esq; eldest Son of Sir Henry Parker of Hennington in the County of Warwick, Bart. to whom she bare many Children; a second Time to the Honourable Michael Lord Dunkil- lin, eldest Son of the Honourable Earl of Clan- rickard in the Kingdom of Ireland, by whom she has left a Son and a Daughter surviving. NEAR this, viz. four Feet from the Pillar near the last Monument, is a Grave-stone thus inscribed:

Here lies the Body of Sir Joseph Tredenham, Kt. who died April 25, 1707, in the 65th Year of his Age. He was buried the 29th.

VOL. II.

NEXT we pass by the Gates opening to the East Cloister, and on the other Side is a Tablet bearing an Escutcheon, and this Inscription:

Here lieth the Body of Peers Griffith, Esq; Son and Heir to Sir Ree Griffith, and Grandson to Sir William Griffith, Chamberlain of North Wales, who died the 18th of August 1628.

BETWEEN the third and fourth Pillars from the Cloister Gates Westward, is a Table Monument of White Marble, with the Inscription thus translated:

Here lies Henry Wharton, A. M. Presbyter of the Church of England, Rector of the Church of Chartham, and Vicar of the Church of Min- ster in the Isle of Thanet, and Diocess of Canter- bury; Chaplain to the most Reverend and most Religious Prelate, William, Archbishop of Can- terbury, who, for the Increase and Illustration of Learning, and for the Church of Christ, wrote much and intended more. He died the 3d of March, A. D. 1694, aged 31 Years.

THIS wonderful and surprizing Gentleman, to whose Example and Labours the Worlds of Piety and Learning are so much indebted, was Son of Mr. Edmund Wharton, lately Rector of Saxlingham in Norfolk, and of Gonville and Caius College in Cambridge. After he left the Uni- versity, and was recommended to Dr. Cave, with whom he resided, and had a great Hand in that laborious and useful Work, Historia Literaria in 1687, he went into holy Orders, and soon af- ter being recommended to the Lord Arundel of Trerice, to be his Chaplain, and Tutor to his Son; his Excellency's making him very conspicuous, the good Archbishop Sancroft, of Canterbury, prevailed with the Lord Arundel to part with him, and took him to be his own Chaplain, though not twenty-three Years of Age. About this Time the Disputes between the Church of Rome and us growing high, he vigo- rously opposed the former, by his Confutation of the Speculum Ecclesiasticum, printing the Rule of Faith, with a learned and elaborate Preface of the Celibacy of the Clergy, Enthusiasm of the Church of Rome, Translation of Monsieur Del- lon's History of the Inquisition of Goa; and re- vised and fitted several other Pieces in that Con- troversy for the Press. After some Continuance with the Archbishop, he gave him the MSS. of Archbishop Usher's Dogmatical History of the Holy Scripture; which he digested and published with a large Supplement. The same Year the Archbishop gave him the Vicarage of Minster in the Isle of Thanet; and not long after the Rec- tory of Chartham; and conferr'd on him Priest's Orders. And now being so provided for, he set about that great and useful Work, The Anglia Sacra, in which he preserved so many antient Pieces relating to our Church, as must for ever make his Memory dear to the Learned World. His other Works were an Edition of Bede's Com- mentaries on Genesis, and Song of Habakuk; Adhelm's Book of the Praise of Virginity, cor- rected and revised; the Life of Cardinal Pool; Disceptation between the Ambassadors of England and France in Council of Constance; Mr. Strype's History of Archbishop Cranmer; and, which he accounted the happiest Task ever impos'd upon him, The Papers of Archbishop Laud, relating to his Trial and Troubles, were, by Archbishop Sancroft, upon his Death-bed, committed to his Care, with a Charge to publish them; which he did; and which one, who being despised, de- spises all others, says, "Was so weak that Mr. Wharton was one of his greatest Enemies, as Heylin was by publishing his Life." This learned ed Gentleman left several MSS. and intended much for our English History. He was a Person of no less Piety than Learning, and of the firmest Principles. This candid and good Man so strictly plied him to his Studies that nothing could disengage him; and though he had by Nature and Temper a strong Constitution, yet he laid it all out on his Studies; but the entire Ruin of it was hasten'd by a Vomit misapplied; which breaking a Vessel, he languished four Years under a Consumption, and died so young as at thirty-one Years of Age; whose Death even Foreigners regretted, as appears in the Act. Erudit. printed at Leipsick 1696. But if Foreigners paid him this Compliment, much more did his Countrymen, who buried him in a very solemn Manner, the King's Scholars being ordered to attend his Funeral, at which were present the Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Tillotson, and other Prelates, together with vast Numbers of the Clergy; and the Choir, in Procession, sung the Anthems upon this Occasion, compos'd by Mr. Purcell, the Lord Bishop of Rocheſter performing the Burial Service. On his Grave-stone is this Inscription:

Henry Wharton, A. M. obiit 5. Mart. Anno 1694.

NEXT is a fine Marble Monument, erected with the following Inscription:

To the Memory of Mrs. Catharina Bovey, whose Person and Understanding would have become the highest Rank in Female Life, and whose Vivacity would have recommended her in the best Conversation; but by Judgment, as well as Inclination, she chose such a Retirement as gave her great Opportunities for Reading and Reflection, which she made use of to the wisest Purposes of Improvement in Knowledge and Religion; upon other Subjects, she ventured far out of the common Way of thinking; but in Religious Matters, she made the Holy Scriptures, in which she was well skilled, the Rule and Guide of her Faith and Actions, esteeming it more safe to rely upon the plain Word of God, than to run into any Freedoms of Thought upon revealed Truths; the great Share of Time allow'd to the Closet was not perceived in her Oeconomy, for she had always a well order'd and well instructed Family, from the happy Influence as well of her Temper and Conduct, as of her uniform and exemplary Christian Life. It pleased God to bless her with a considerable Estate, which, with a liberal Hand, guided by Wisdom and Piety, she employed to his Glory, and the Good of her Neighbours. Her Domestick Expences were managed with a Decency and Dignity suitable to her Fortune, but with a Frugality that made her Income abound to all proper Objects of Charity, to the Relief of the Necessitous, the Encouragement of the Industrious, and the Instruction of the Ignorant. She distributed not only with Cheerfulness, but with Joy, which upon some Occasions of raising and refreshing the Spirit of the Afflicted, she could not refrain from breaking forth into Tears, flowing from a Heart thoroughly affected with Compassion and Benevolence. Thus did many of her good Works, while she lived, go up as a Memorial before God; and some she left to follow her. She died January 21, 1726, in the 57th Year of her Age, at Flaxley, her Seat in Gloucestershire, and was buried there, where her Name will be long remembered, and where several of her Benefactions at that Place, as well as others, are more particularly recorded.

UNDERNEATH it, on a white Marble:

This Monument was erected with the utmost Respect to her Memory, and Justice to her Character, by her Executrix Mrs. Mary Pope, who lived with her near forty Years in perfect Friendship, and never once interrupted till her much lamented.

AT the End of this Isle is an exceeding fine Monument, erected to the Memory of James Craggs, Esq; His Statue is at full Length, leaning on an Urn, upon which is the following Inscription:

Due to his Merit, and brave Thirst of Praise, Living great Nature fear'd he might outvie at Blaregnies in Heinault, while he, as Aid-de Camp to the most high and couragious Prince John Duke of Argyle

then leading the first Wing of the Confederates Army
he fell bravely fighting.
He was a Son not degenerate from the best of Parents, nor a Soldier unworthy such a Leader.
At home.
He was remarkable for his extraordinary Temper and Benevolence,
Integrity and Modesty, untainted Fidelity to his Friends,
and the utmost Duty to God and his Parents.
In the Army

with so great and so many Virtues private, civil and military,

And so having gloriously ended his Days in the Bed of Honour, lies interr'd at Bavachem, in the Province of Brabant, a principal Part of the English Guards attending his Obsequies; where may his valiant Remains rest in Peace; and the surviving Fame of his Courage, Virtue, and true Piety, (of which this Church was often a Witness) live, grow, and spread, both here and abroad for ever.

NEXT is a Monument of Marble, with a Lady kneeling, and Cherubs crowning her, erected to the Lady Mary Beaufoy, whose Posture points out to us her Practice; and the Epitaph very modestly, instead of dwelling on the Praises of

of the Dead, closes with an excellent Advice to the Living, for whose Instructions, it seems, and not out of Ostentation, this was erected; the Epitaph as follows:

Near this Place lyes the Body of Mrs. Mary Beaufoy, the only Daughter and Heir of Sir Henry Beaufoy, of Guyfcliffe near Warwick, by the Honourable Charlotte Lane, eldest Daughter of George Lord Viscount Lansborough, and now the Widow Lady Beaufoy, who caused this Effigies to be made and erected at her own Charge in Memory of her dear Daughter, the Loss of whom she shall (while she lives) very much lament.

Sacred to the Memory of THOMAS LEVINGSTON, Kt. and Bart.

Viscount de Teviot,

Baron Livingston of Peebles,
 who,

born in Holland, descended from the antient Family of the Levingstons in Scotland.

From his Childhood
 being conversant with Arms, and with Glory advanced to several military Titles, was, at length in the Reign of William III.
 (under whom, while Prince of Orange,
 he had long and bravely fought,

and whom he attended into Britain,

as a Colonel of Foot,) made Lieutenant-General in the Army, and General of the Scotch Forces, Master of the Ordinance, and Privy Counsellor.

While Scotland was inflamed with Civil Broils, he happily engaged the Enemy at the River Spee ;

by that Means securing Peace to his Country, and the Nation to the King ;
 for which brave Actions,
 he was by his grateful Prince,
 added to the Nobility.

To this great Man,
 so well deserving of his Country, Alexander Levingston, Kt. and Bart.
 his only Brother and Heir erected this Monument.

1.

Why do the tuneful Chorus join
 In mournful Songs, regret thy Fate,
 The fleeting Joys of thee and thine,
 And Pleasures of too short a Date ?
 Why my too hasty Scyth upbraid,
 And wail the cruel Wound it made ?

2.

See what a worthless Thing is Bloom,
 Behold my Boy the poor Reward,
 But I, obsequious at thy Tomb,
 Will ever stand a watchful Guard ;
 In letter'd Marble shew thy Name,
 And tell the World thy matchless Fame.

3.

Thy spotless Piety in Youth,
 For Learning thy untold'd desire,
 Thy Manners strict, and antient Truth,
 Shall make the Age to come admire.
 The future wond'ring Youth while I relate,
 Fir'd at thy worth shall strive to emulate.

ON the Foot of the Monument :

The Honourable Youth
 PHILIP CARTERET,
 Second Son of the Lord George Carteret, Baron of Hawnes,

of this Church.

its Inscription, erected for Dr. Peter Heylin, and is thus Englished:

Near this Place lies
the mortal Part of PETER HEYLIN, D.D.
Subdean and Prebendary of this Church,
A Man truly memorable,
endued with excellent Qualifications,
and with a Memory surprisingly retentive, to which he added an unwearied Application to Studies,
Which ceas'd not after his Sight was decay'd,
he wrote much and on various Subjects,
which are now publick,
and delivered very uncommon Arguments,
in a very curious Stile;
in all which he shewed himself a Strict Assertor of the Church and Monarchy, no less in their afflicted than flourishing Estate, and at the same Time a bold Antagonist against the rebellious and schismatick Faction:
despising their Envy,
with an undaunted Resolution.
While he intended more of the same Nature,
Death imposed Silence on him, unable to silence his Memory,

he died aged 63.

on the 8th of May, A. D. 1662.

His afflicted Wife erected this Monument.

THIS Gentleman was born at Burford in Ox- fordshire, Nov. 29, 1599; educated in Hart- Hall, Oxon; Fellow of Magdalen-College; recommended to Archbishop Laud, when Bishop of Bath and Wells; Chaplain to the Earl of Danby; and Chaplain to the King, 1629. He was made Rector of Hemingsford in Huntingdon- shire, and Nov. 1631, Prebendary of Westmin- ster, to the great Disatisfaction of Dean Williams;
soon after the King gave him the rich Parsonage of Houghton; in the Spring, in the Bishoprick of Durham; he was afterwards Rector of South- warborough in Hampshire, and Justice of the Peace for that County; Clerk of the Convocation in 1642. Being then prosecuted by Williams, Prynne, and others, he left all, and followed the King to Oxford, where he wrote Mercurius Aulicus. In 1643 he was sequestered by Parliament, and his Books and valuable Library sold.
Archbishop Laud being beheaded, his Hopes were entirely blasted, and he, with his Family, were much reduced. He left Oxford, and resided some Time at Winchester; but that being betrayed, he escaped in Disguise, and repaired to Minster Lovel in Oxfordshire, where he turned Farmer six Years, and in that Time composed his Book of Geography. After the Restoration; he had his former Preferments, but was reckoned of too warm a Temper for a See, and never rose higher than to be a Subdean of this Church.
He had an excellent Memory, solid Judgment, and ready Wit, and expressed himself with a World of Facility: He had an undaunted Courage, and equally lash'd Popery and Puritanism;
and it is not known whether his unbiassed Integrity, rather than his extraordinary Heat; did not prevent his rising, by having Enemies in both those Parties, which so strongly prevailed after the Restoration. He wrote, besides his Geography, the Life of Archbishop Laud, the History of the Reformation, one of St. George, and many others. He died on Ascension-Day, Anno 1662, and was buried before the Subdean's Stall.

AGAINST the Skreen of St. Andrews Chapel is erected a most magnificent Monument for the late Duke of Newcastle, with its Inscription as follows:

JOHN HOLLES, Duke of Newcastle, Marquis and Earl of Clare, Baron Haughton of Haughton, and Knight Companion of the most Noble Order of the Garter, whose Body is here deposited under the same Roof, with many of his noble Ancestors and Relations of the Families of Vere, Cavendish, and Holles, whose eminent Virtues he inherited, and was particularly distinguished for his Courage, Love to his Country, and Constancy in Friendship, which Qualities he exerted with great Zeal and Readiness, whenever the Cause of Religion, his Country or Friends required him.

In the Reign of Queen Anne he fill'd, with great Capacity and Honour, the several Employments of Lord Keeper of the Privy-Seal, and Privy Counsellor, Lord Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of Middlesex and Nottingham, and of the County of the Town of Nottingham, and of the East and North Ridings of the County of York, Lord Chief Justice in Eyre, North of Trent, and Governor of the Town and Fort of Kingston upon Hull. To which Titles and Honours his Personal Merit gave a Lustre, that needed not the Addition of the great Wealth which he possessed.

He was born the 9th of Jan. 1661-2, and dy'd the 15th of July 1711.

He marry'd the Lady Margaret, third Daughter and Heir to Henry Cavendish, Duke of Newcastle, by whom he left Issue one only Child, the Lady Henrietta Cavendish Holles Harley, who caused this Memorial of him to be here erected in the Year of our Lord 1723.

ON each Side the West Door going into the Choir, is erected a magnificent Monument, one to that great Philosopher Sir Isaac Newton, the other to the late Earl Stanhope.

THE first is as follows: On a Pedestal is placed a Sarcophagus (or Stone Coffin) upon the Front of which are Boys in Basso Relievo, with Instruments in their Hands, denoting his several Discoveries, viz. one with Prism, on which principally his admirable Book of Light and Colours is founded; another with a reflecting Telescope, whose great Advantages are now so well known; another Boy is weighing the Sun and Planets with a Stilliard; the Sun being near the Centre on one Side, and the Planets on the other, alluding to a celebrated Proposition in his Principia; another is busy about a Furnace; and two others (near him) are loaded with Money as new coined, intimating his Office in the Mint.

ON the Sarcophagus his own Figure is placed, in a cumbent Posture, his Elbow resting on the several incomparable Books written by him; two Boys stand before him with a Scroll, on which is drawn a remarkable Diagram, relating to the Solar System; and over that a converging Series, an Invention which shews the utmost Stretch of Human Understanding,

BEHIND the Sarcophagus is a Pyramid; from the Middle of it a Globe arises in Mezzo Relievo, on which several Constellations are drawn, in order to shew the Path of the Comet in 1681, whose Period he has, with the greatest Sagacity determined: And also the Position of the Solstitial Colure, mentioned by Hipparchus, by which (in his Chronology) he has fixed the Time of the Argonautic Expedition.

ON the Globe sits the Figure of Astronomy, weeping, with a Sceptre in her Hand (as Queen of the Sciences) and a Star over her Head on the Pyramid.

“ THE Monument erected in Honour of the late Sir Isaac Newton, says the Author of A Critical Review of the Publick Buildings, has pretty much divided the publick Opinion; some extolling it as one of the most perfect Pieces both in Design and Execution, and others again depreciating it, as no Way remarkable for either; I chuse, says the same Author, to steer between these two Extreams, as nearest to Truth, and agreeable to the best of my Understanding; I therefore make no Scruple to own, that the Statue of Sir Isaac has something in it exceedingly venerable, bold and majestick; it commands Attention, and expresses Importance; but then the Action it is employed in is vain, and of Course out of the Character it represents; Sir Isaac, tho' one of the greatest Men who ever did Honour to Humanity, was at the same Time the least proud and assuming; and delivered some of the finest Principles of Philosophy as doubtful, which all his Readers thought demonstrated: 'twas wrong therefore to give him that Vanity after his Death, which never belonged to him in his Life: If the two Boys at his Feet, which display the Scroll, had done it only to the Spectator, and Sir Isaac had not been concerned in it, it would have answered every Way; and engaging the Philosopher in profound Contemplation in the mean while, had expressed his Knowledge as well, and his Character better.

“ The Bas-Reliefs on the Urn are most excellent, and do great Honour to Rysbrack; the principle Figure in particular that weighs the Sun, and all our planetary System by the Stilliard, is admirable, and the Device is beautiful and fully expressing Sir Isaac's Doctrine of Gravitation, which is the Basis of his Fame: The Boys that are introduced to tell you he was Mint-Master, is trifling and poor, unworthy of the rest, and no compliment to him; neither is the Conceit of the Aloe Plant, in the other Corner of the Tablature less faulty; because it is to the full as insignificant, and abundantly more obscure.

“ THE Globe in the back of the Monument, is almost a general Objection, as projecting too forward on the Sight, and spoiling the keeping of the Whole. I fancy another Pedestal, well proportioned, had been esteemed a more natural Support for the Figure of Astronomy above, and would have had Room in the Middle of it to introduce the Globe to more Advantage; but this I leave to the Determination of better Judges.

“ THE upper Part of the Figure of Astronomy is, without controversy, one of the most delicate Things that can be imagined; the Manner and Action are both faultless, and the Expression of the Face is at once thoughtful and composed, sweet and majestick; I wish the rest of it had been answerable, but it is quite the contrary in all Respects; the Legs are clumsy, and incumbered with Drapery, and so far from being beautifully or naturally disposed, that they are piled one upon another, and put me in Pain for Fear the Figure should roll off the Globe, for want of a due Poise to keep it fast.

“ UPON the Whole, tho' it is, at least one of the most pardonable Monuments I have seen, and I am positive the next Age will be alike pleased to see such another Genius as Newton, and such another Master as Rysbrack to do Honour to his Memory.

SIR Isaac Newton was born the 25th of December, A. D. MDCXLII, and died the 20th of March, MDCCXXVI.

THE other Monument, which is erected to the Memory of Lord Stanhope, has something in the Design of it like that of Sir Isaac Newton's, which makes them seem uniform Ornaments in the Front of the Choir; but the Execution of the last is very bad, compared to the other.

THE Author, above-quoted, gives this Account of it: "It is all alike, huge and heavy; expensively Gothick, and magnificently clumsy; the Design is so trifling and absurd, that not even the Hand of Rysbrack can give you the least Prejudice to its Advantage: The Statue of his Lordship might very easily be mistaken for that of Ajax, if Time and Place could afford the least Help to Imagination. It has the same unmeaning Air and Features which that Heroe is described with, is as enormous in Bulk, and seems as void of Design and Penetration; Circumstances that no Way agree with the Character of Lord Stanhope, and which rather lampoon than do him honour.

"THE Tent behind is most miserably conceived, and the worst adapted of any Thing I ever saw in my Life; and Pallas upon the Top of it has the most uneasy Station imaginable. She is a Giantess too, and seems to have as little Forecast as her Charge below: In short, if either of them have any Beauty, 'tis in being of a Piece with each other; but even that is an Excellency, which, I fancy, no Body will ever envy or applaud.

EARL Stanhope died the 15th Day of February, A. D. 1720, in the 47th Year of his Age.

Arms in Britain, Dunkirk and Tangier ; through the whole Course of the last Wars of England with France. He served in Ireland, in the Low-Countries, and in Germany, was present in every Battle and at every Siege, and distinguished in all by an Activity, a Valour and Zeal, which Nature gave and Honour improved : A Love of Glory and of his Country, animated and raised him above that Spirit which the Trade of War inspires : A Desire of acquiring Riches and Honours by the Miseries of Mankind. His Temper was humane ; his Benevolence universal ; and among all those antient Virtues which he preserved in practice, and in Credit none was more remarkable than his Hospitality. He dyed at the Age of LXXVIII Years, on the XI of November, MDCCLXXIX. To whom this Monument is Thy Country's Friend, but more of human Kind ;

 Oh soft Humanity in Age beloved !
 For thee the hardy Veteran drops a Tear,
 And the gay Courtier feels his Sigh sincere !
 Withers adieu ! yet not with thee remove Thy martial Spirit, or thy social Love :
 Amidst Corruption, Luxury and Rage,

Reader,
 If thou art a Briton,
 Behold this Tomb with Reverence and Regret, Here lye the Remains of DANIEL POULTENEY ;
 the kindest Relation, the truest Friend,
 the warmest Patriot, the worthiest Man ;
 he exercised Virtues in this Age, sufficient to have distinguished him even in the best :
 Sagacious by Nature, industrious by Habit,
 inquisitive with Art :
 He gained a compleat Knowledge of the Interests of Britain,
 Foreign and Domestick ;
 in most the backward Fruit of tedious Experience ;
 in him, the early Acquisition of undissipated Youth.
 He served the Crown several Years, abroad, in the auspicious Reign of Queen Anne ;
 at home, in the Reign of that excellent Prince King GEORGE the First.
 he served his Country always,
 at Court independent,
 in the Senate unbiassed,

at every Age, and in every Station :
 This was the Bent of his generous Soul,
 this the Business of his laborious Life.
 Publick Men and publick Things, he judged by one constant Standard,
 the true Interest of Britain :
 He made no other Distinction of Party,
 he abhorred all other.
 Gentle, humane, disinterested, beneficent :
 He created no Enemies on his own Account :
 Firm, determined, inflexible :
 He feared none he could create, in the Cause of Britain.

 for know,
 the Loss of so much private Virtue

" orthodox; of an undissembled Piety and Up-
" rightness; of a singular Candour and Fidelity
" to his Friends; well skilled in the Languages,
" and otherwise very well furnished with the " best and choicest Learning; who after a pain-

AFFIXED to the Wall under the ——— Arch, is a handsome Monument of black Marble, adorned with Cherubs and Ornaments of Alabaster, with this most florid Piece of Bombast, which is translated into English thus:

Here underneath, near the Ashes of his Brothers, Edward, John,
and Stephen,
lies James Fox, most excellent Youth, fifth Son of the Honourable Sir Stephen Fox, Kt.
and Elizabeth his Wife,
Parents and Son well worthy each other,
of extraordinary Piety (tho' but a Child) towards God,
of singular Dutifulness towards his Parents;
of great Sincerity towards all,
favoured of Beauty and Wisdom, no less than Adonis and Hyacinthus were of Venus and Apollo.
And for his Endowments of Mind and Body, was formerly esteem'd by Men,
as he is now beloved of God.
O Parents! pity his Parents.
Ye Sons, copy the Son from him!
O Posterity, reflect upon your Loss.
embellished with Variety of Learning,
he appeared unwillingly admir'd.
He was a Man, even while he was a Child, and an Hercules both in his Cradle and at his Death.
For being taken off by that cruel Distemper
the Small-Pox,
he from the Fire and invenom'd Shirt, took his Flight to Heaven, the 19th of Nov. 1677, aged 12 Years and an half.

Near this Place, among the Ashes of their three Brothers, Edward, John, and Stephen;
sleep William and James Fox, Sons of the Honourable Sir Stephen Fox, Kt.
and Elizabeth his Wife,
Parents and Sons worthy each other,
whom Love made one in Life,
one Distemper in Death,
and one Grave in Burial.
Each of them was embellish'd with useful Learning, which their Modesty seem'd to conceal,
and in their Youth the Man grew up with them.
They were born for their Country, and to Honours, which the eldest, being Captain in the Army, acquired by his Fatigues over all England.

On a Free-stone fixed in the North Wall:

With Diligence and Trust most exemplary,
Did William Lawrence, serve a Prebendary;
And for his Pains now past, before not lost;
Gain'd this Remembrance at his Master's Cost.
O! read these Lines again, you seldom find
A Servant faithful, and his Master kind.
Short Hand he wrote, his Flower in prime did
fade,
And hasty Death short Hand of him hath made.
Well couth he Numbers, and well measure Land, Thus doth he now that Ground whereon you stand,
Wherein he lies so Geometrical,
Art maketh some; but thus will Nature all.

Obiit Decemb. 28, 1621. Ætatis suæ 29.

Against the North Wall under the last Arch, next the East Door: Beneath lieth the Body of Mrs. Ellen Buft, Widow, who was born in the County of Anglesey, and for above five Years served in the Royal Family in England, France, and Holland. born Anno 1630,
After he had laid the Foundation of sound
Learning,
in the King's School at Westminster;
he was afterwards educated at Trinity College in Cambridge, adorning both Places,
and would have made them very famous had he lived;
for he was a Youth of great Hope,
of as great Ingenuity as any ever was;
of a manly Judgment, even in Youth,
of so happy a Memory as to be env'y'd;
much favoured by the Muses and Apollo,
and deserving of the Lawrel;
but he, like a Flower more beautiful than the rest,
was cut off by the envious Hand of Death,
in the Spring of Life,
how much even to thy Loss, O Reader!
if thou consider it rightly;
for when he was 25 Years old,
he was taken off by the Small-Pox,
in the Year 1655,
who would have been a great Ornament of this Age;
and the Moral thou shalt learn from hence is,
that largest Structures are soonest tumbled down,
and highest Towers most suddenly overthrown.

except by leaving him at her Death,
she bare only one Son named William, who was, instead of many, a Youth of great Genius,

Student of Christ-Church in Oxford, of too short a Continuance,

his most tender Mother chose to be buried near

Sir Geoffrey Mandevill, Senior, and Athelard his Wife, (Mr. Keep mentions those Persons as buried here). Certain it is they were Benefactors to this Church, from whence it is likely he took his Conjecture of their Burial here. The learned Archbishop Usher died, and was, by Oliver Cromwell's Orders, magnificently buried in this Church during the Usurpation.

Persons removed after Burial:

Oliver Cromwell, the Arch-Rebel. He died of an Ague the 3d of Sept. 1658. His Body, for the Stench, was buried privately, on Feb. 26. After which a Coffin was laid to represent him in State, with his waxen Effigies, at Somerset-House; his Burial-shew was at such an Expence, that the second Shadow of him, his Son Richard, could never discharge it. In an open Chariot was his Effigies crowned, carried in the most solemn Manner, and deposited here, where he continued some Time, having a sumptuous Tomb erected for him, where the late Duke of Buckingham's now stands. Of his Removal hereafter.

THAT infamous Wretch Bradshaw, President of the Mock-Court of Justice, where he impudently insulted and gave Sentence of Death against his Sovereign. He was a dark melancholy Miscreant, and as well qualified to kill his Prince or his Father in private, as to give Judgment in publick. He died in Despair, i. e. that he should do no more Mischief; for in other Respects he was infernally infatuated; his Soul went went to its Place on the 18th Day of November, 1659, and left his wretched Carcass in the Dean's House here, which was made a Present to him for his good Services. Thence it was brought into this Church, and buried the 22d following; the Restauration following soon after, there was no Monument for him.

Henry Ireton, Son-in-Law to Cromwell, who, in the Time of the Rebellion raised himself in the Army, Deputy under Cromwell in Ireland, where he fell ill on the 16th of November, 1650, and died there the 26th of the same Month, and in 1651, being conveyed to England, his Carcass landed at Bristol, thence was pompously conveyed to LONDON, where it lay in State in Somerset-House; the Motto on his Hatchment being, Dulce est pro patria mori; which, says Wood, an old Cavalier is thus Englisbed: It is good for his Country that he is dead. He was buried in King Henry VII's Chapel on the 6th of Feb. following, Dr. Owen preaching his Sermon. Afterwards a stately Tomb was erected over his Grave, with his Effigies and his Wife's thereon. His Body was, after the Restauration, taken up with Cromwell's, and shared the same Fate and Re-interment, his Tomb and Trophies being intirely removed.

AFTER the Restauration of King Charles II. his Body, with that of Cromwell, was taken up, on Saturday Jan. 26, 1660, and on the Monday Night following, were drawn in two several Carts from Westminster to the Red Lion in Holbourn, where they continued all Night; the Corpse of Bradshaw, which being buried but little more than a Year, was green and stank, therefore was not taking up till the Morning following, and then was carried in a Cart to the Red Lion, and the Day following being the Day of the Royal Martyrdom, they were drawn to Tyburn on three Sledges, where they were pulled out of their Coffins and hanged on the several Sides on the Gallows, where they hung till next Day Sun-set, at which Time they were taken down, had their Heads cut off, and the Trunks thrown into a deep Hole under the Gallows, which serves for the Monument of their Grave and Merit. Their Heads were fixed on Westminster-Hall.

Eliza. Cromwell, Mother to Oliver, Daughter of Sir Richard Steward, Knt. died at Whitehall the 18th of November, 1654, and was buried in King Henry VII's Chapel. Afterwards, at the Restauration, taken up and buried with others in St. Margaret's Church-Yard.

Eliza. Claypole, Daughter to Oliver, died the 7th of August, 1658, and was buried in a Vault made purposely for her in King Henry VII's Chapel; and removed with her Mother.

William Twisse, D. D. some Time Chaplain to Elizabeth, Princess Palatine, Daughter to King James I. and Rector of Newbury in Berkshire, a famous Disputant in the Armenian Controversy in 1641. He sided with the Rebels, was one of the Assembly of Divines, and Prolocutor to them: He died in 1645, and was buried on the 24th of July, near Dr. Outram's Tomb in the South Cross; and on the 14th of Sept. 1661, was taken up, with May, Marshal, &c. and buried with them in a Pit at the Back-Door of the Prebends Lodgings.

Isaac Dorislaus, a Dutch Man born, first a School-Master, afterwards Doctor of Civil Law at Leyden, coming into England, was entertained by Fulk, Lord Brook; he afterwards was Assistant in drawing the Charge against King Charles I. After which the Rebels sent him Ambassador to Holland, he arrived at the Hague in May 1649, King Charles, then in Exile, residing there; which Impudence of his some Loyalists resenting, went to his Lodging, where he supped with many in Company; there one Colonel Whitford stabbed him in several Places, pulled him down to his Feet, and cut his Throat. This happened the 6th of May, and was never truly discovered. This the Parliament resenting much, caused him to be brought over, and buried magnificently in this Church the 14th of June following.

COLONEL Edward Popham, whose Monument before is described and preserved by the Intercession of his Wife's Friends, yet his Body, by the King's Order, was taken up and carried by his Friends into the Country. This Man had been Admiral of one of the Parliament Fleets, and died of a Fever at Dover the 19th of August, 1651, and was buried here the 14th of September following.

COLONEL Richard Dean, (a meer Seaman, from a common Mariner raised to be a bold Officer) Admiral for the Commonwealth, was killed in a Sea-Fight between the English and Dutch, by a Cannon-Shot from the Rear-Admiral of the latter, on the 3d of June, 1653.

COLONEL Humphry Mackworth, one of Oliver's Council, interred in King Henry VII's Chapel, with great Pomp on the 26th of December, 1654.

COLONEL Boscawen, a Cornish Man.

SIR William Constable, of Flamburgh in Yorkshire, Colonel of a Regiment of Foot, Governor of Glocester, and a Judge against King Charles I. died the 15th of June, 1655, and was buried in King Henry VII's Chapel the 21st of the same Month.

COLONEL John Meldrum, a Scot, killed at Ailresford in Hampshire.

Stephen Marshal, Preacher, buried in the South Isle, Nov. 23, 1655.

William Strong, some Time Fellow of Catharine Hall in Cambridge, Rector of More-Chirchele in Dorsetshire, Minister of St. Dunstan's in the West, one of the Assembly of Divines, and Preacher of the Gospel (so called) in this Abbey Church in the Time of Cromwell's Usurpation, where he was buried on the 4th of July, 1654, Obadiab-Doomsday Sedgwick preaching his Funeral Sermon; after the Restauration he was removed with Marshal, &c.

Thomas May, the Translator of Lucan, and Author of many Poetical Matters, was some Time a great Favourite of King Charles I. and his Queen, but not rewarded as he expected, grew a Malecontent and sided with the Rebels, who made him their Historian. He died suddenly in his Bed, being choaked, as some say, by the Strings of his Night-Cap, as he turned himself, being a fat unweildy Man, Anno 1650, and was buried where Dr. Triplet's Tomb is, in the South Cross, where was a Table Monument, and an Inscription inserted in the Athenæ Oxon. His Body was taken up and re-interred with Marshal, &c. after the Restoration.

William Strode, Member of Parliament for a Borough in Devonshire, for his Fury called the Parliament-Driver. He was one of the five Members demanded by King Charles I. He died in 1645-6. and was buried in Pomp near Mr. Pymm.

Robert Blake, the famous English Admiral, who had given such Proofs of his Courage as will never be forgotten. He was made Admiral by the Rebels in 1649; was a formidable Enemy to Prince Rupert, and the King's Fleet; reduced Scilly to the Parliament; routed Van Tromp and the Dutch Fleet, near the Isle of Wight; was a Terror to the Spaniards after the Fight at Sancta Cruz, in 1657; and a Curb to the Moors after the Attempt on Tunis, after his victorious Fight at Sancta Cruz. He died of a Dropsy in Plymouth Sound, Aug. 17, 1657; his Bowels were there buried in the Church, and his Body sheeted in Lead, whence it was brought to Greenwich, wick, and thence, in a Barge covered with Velvet and Streamers, and a vast Attendance of the Privy-Council, Mayor, and Aldermen, Officers of the Army, &c. attending, was brought to this Abbey and buried in King Henry VII's Vault on the 12th of September, 1661; and then (among others unwarrantably buried there in the Usurpation) taken up and buried in the Church-Yard. He was a brave Man, and wanted nothing to make him Immortal but a legal Power to fight under.

Dennis Bond, one of the Council of State, and Attendant on Cromwell in every Thing but his Death, which happened four Days before him, viz. the 30th of August, 1658, on that windy Day, the roughest known, at which Time Cromwell lying ill, the Report was of the Devil's coming in that Manner; but Wags of that Time turned it into a Proverb, That Cromwell not being prepared, he gave Bond for his future appearing. He was buried here, and three Years after dug up with others, and buried in a Pit in St. Margaret's Church-Yard.

Pym, a Cornish Gentleman, some Time Clerk of the Exchequer, and a long Time Member of Parliament; but noted most for his unhappy Warmth in the long one, and his Fury against the Earl of Strafford; a Man otherwise of good Reputation, and reckoned, in regard to Religion, moderate enough, but by Degrees engaged himself desperately against the King; and, says Lord Clarendon, No Man had his Head or Hand deeper in the Miseries of the Nation than he; and when he had raised this Flame to the Height, died of a Distemper called Morbus Pediculofus. as Lord Clarendon says; but Rusworth denies it, and says his Body was, upon a Rumour, publicly exposed to many in December, 1643, and was buried here, Stephen Marshak preaching his Funeral Sermon: He was buried under Windsor's Stone, on the South Side of the Sacristarea, and afterwards taken up and buried with the others before-mentioned, by an Order from King Charles II. to the Dean, in a Pit in St. Margaret's Church-Yard, near the Back-Door of one of the Prebendaries, on the 12th and 14th of September, 1661, with several Women and Men of no Note.

HAVING now given an Account of all the Persons buried here, we shall speak of other Matters belonging to this Church, and first of the Government of it. Among the antient Officers the Abbot had the greatest Authority, and therefore is first to be taken Notice of. There is little Ground to believe that his Power or Character was very remarkable, any more than his Abbey, till the Time of Dunstan, who being a great Favourer of the Monks, endowed his Friend Wulfine with many Privileges, altogether unknown to his Predecessors; but his short Stay gave Way for his Successors to add to them; which Wlnoth, in Cnut the Dane's Time did, who (says one) procured great Privileges. Nor was this Abbey less successful under Edwyn, who was a Favourite of Edward the Confessor, who raised her to her highest Glory; it was then that this Church and her Abbot outvied any other in Dignity, being made independent of any Episcopal Power or Visitation, the Pope excepted; and this William the Conqueror still enlarged. Laurence, some Time after, attempted the Pall and Ring, which he procured, but left the first Use of them to his Successor. In King Henry III.'s Time, Abbot Berkyng, a great Statesman, procured their great Charter of Liberties, and of Writs and Amerciaments. Abbot Crokefly, Lord Treasurer, and his Favourite, procured the Power of solemn Benediction; and thus by Degrees they accumulated such Honours, that in King Henry IV.'s

Time Walsingham observes, speaking of St. Alban; Ut Albanense propter protomartyris nostri Albani nobile eo loci Martyrium, sacrasque etiam ibi reconditas Reliquias canobium Reliquorum semper princeps, habitum est ita posterioribus seculis Westministeriense maxime eminebat.

THEY generally being near the Court, were Favourites, and assisted at the Births, Coronations, and last Anointings of several of our Princes: In Conventions of this Order they generally presided. On the List of Abbots they took the second Place, and were Barons in Parliament, where Feckenham, the last Abbot, was the only one that fate and voted violently against the Change of Religion in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign. As to their Power in other Cases, they had the Return of Writs, Power of Amerciaments, Trial of Crimes in their Manors, Exemption from Attendance on the Sheriff, or at County Courts, with all those Privileges mentioned in the Benefactions. Of their Government more may be seen a large Account in Lib. Consuet.

Of the PRIOR.

NEXT the Abbot was the Prior, an Office mentioned very early in the Lives of the Abbots, yet perhaps of no longer standing than from the Time of Edgar, when he placed Regulars in this Church: Of which Priors take the best Account that can be gathered from Hints scattered thro' several Writers.

Gilbert Crispinus, afterwards Abbot, was Prior Anno 1080.

Osbert de Clare, or Stoc-Clare, a Person of great Learning, who procured the Canonization of Edward the Confessor: He was Prior in the Times of Herbert, Gervaise and Laurence, Abbots. He placed Nuns in the Cell of Killburn, and died about Anno 1170. See of his Writings in the Life of Laurence, Abbot; besides which, he wrote the Lives of St. Edward, St. Ethelbert, and St. Edburga.

Alquinus, Monk and Prior of St. Alban's, fled from the Persecution of the Abbot Ralph to this Monastery, where he was received by Laurence, the Abbot, who had been his Familiar at St. Alban's. He continued some Years Monk here: and having brought this Convent to strict Discipline by Example, was raised to be Prior. The Time of his Death is unknown.

William Poflard succeeded him about 1170. He was afterwards Abbot.

Edward, whether he succeeded the other is unknown, but such an one was before Abbot Ware's Time, who was buried in this Church.

Robert Prior, lived about the Year 1200: The Time of his Death is uncertain; but he was buried in this Church, where his Anniversary was celebrated the sixth Id. of December, on which he assigned 100 s. to the Keeper of St. Mary's Altar, to relieve 100 Poor.

Robert II. Prior of this Church, from whence he was removed and made Abbot of St. Edmund's-bury in Suffolk. His Anniversary was celebrated here on the 16th Kal. October.

Richard Berkyng was Prior here Anno 1223, and thence elected Abbot.

To him succeeded one whose Name is unknown, but he died 1247, and was, for his singular Holiness of Life buried in the Virgin Mary's Chapel, then building.

Maurice succeeded next, and was removed from being Precentor of this Church: He was a bold Man, and opposed the Pope's Innovations in his Master's Absence; and during all Crokefly's foreign Expeditions, governed the Monastery with great Care, and briskly made Head likewise against the Abbot's Designs on his Convent. The Year of his Death is uncertain.

Peter

Peter de Lereham succeeded him, and was elected Abbot.

Thomas Henly is the next elected Abbot.

Simon Langham succeeded, and was chosen Abbot Anno 1349.

Nicholas Litlington succeeded him as Prior and Abbot.

Edmond Kirton, removed to be Abbot 1444.

John Wratting, Prior, succeeded.

John Fleet was Prior here, in the Reign of King Henry VI; he wrote a History of his Monastery, and several Homilies. The Time of his Death is doubtful, as are his Successors Names, the latter Part of this Church being the darkest, as appears on Account of the Abbots.

Of other OFFICERS.

THE next Officer was the Sub-prior, who is likewise called the Prior of the Cloister, an Office under the Prior, and Assistant to him; then the third and fourth Priors, who are likewise called Exploratores Claustris, whose Business is to look after that Province; next the Master of the Novices, then the Cantor, who instructed the Novices in Church-Singing; under him was another called the Succentor. These Officers immediately belonged to the Church, whose Duty and Instructions are largely set down in the 4th Part, Lib. Consuetud. of this Abbey. But we must not omit dwelling on the last, his Business being chiefly to keep the Church clean, and the Books, Vestments, and Ornaments of it, and to appoint the Places of Burial; also to provide Lights for the Church upon proper Occasions; which Office, giving us the antient Face of Worship here, Mr. Dart, in his History of Westminster-Abbey, enlarges upon it, and mentions what Lights were provided by him, in the Time of King Henry III.

IN the Old Presbytery, i. e. the Sides of the Choir, were formerly kept burning seven Candles Day and Night; but in Abbot Ware's Time, they burned but five; one large Wax, one before the Altar; and hanging at that two Lamps Night and Day; one on each Side the Altar, at the Tombs of Queen Edith and Queen Maud on all Festivals; and on Edith's Anniversary there was placed a large Lamp before the Altar, and three before that which King Henry III. gave Feet to; one Lamp before the Altar of the Holy Cross; one before the Altar of St. Paul; one before a Crucifix, where Devotees went up and down Steps to kiss its Feet; one before the old Altar of the Blessed Virgin Mary; one before that of the Holy Trinity; one before the Altar of St. Benedict; two in the Choir at Evening Song; and one at the West Door of the Choir; four at four Corners of the Choir; and on Festivals he provided likewise over the great Altar three Figures of Saints, each holding four Tapers, two in the Right Hand and two in the Left; which three Figures were of the Virgin Mary, St. John, and St. Catharine. Round two Iron Candlesticks set before the Altar, were placed seven Tapers, two upon (Pedones) broad-setted Candlesticks, on the Right Side the Altar, and two on the Left, and three upon the like Candlesticks, before the three Figures: At the Altar of St. Andrew, and St. Lawrence, Silver Candlesticks were placed in the Window over them. This Account will give an Idea of the antient Face and Appearance of this Church, and the Worship in it, when dressed up according to the showy Devotion of those Times,

He likewise provided Lights for the Chapel of St. Catharine, then the second in the Church, of a large Extent, and used in most Consecrations of Bishops, Convention of Councils, &c. but now demolished, viz. four Tapers upon every Festival, on the Altar there, because it was the second Altar in the Church.

ANOTHER Officer peculiar to this Church, was the Keeper of the Altar of the Virgin Mary, an Officer appointed here before King Henry III. rebuilt her Chapel; the first Officer was Ralph de Gloucester, the next was John de St. Paul, Priest; and next Richard Crossley, afterwards Abbot: This Officer was chosen always in the Vestry by the Chapter; in his Charge (besides much Plate and Jewels) was kept the miraculous Zone or Girdle of the Virgin Mary, of so great Virtue to forward Conception, that while Crossley held this Place he was sent for, and ordered to attend upon the Queen Eleanor with it for that Purpose, while she was in Gascoigne. This Keeper's Business likewise was to see the Lights kept in, and provided for the Lady Chapel, viz. on the Assumption and Purification of the Virgin Mary, twenty Lamps and fifty Tapers, to be placed in the Hands of Statues of Saints. In this Chapel hung a Lamp Night and Day; and afterward Ralph de Gloucester hung two there, upon an Iron Rod, which King Henry III. removed, and ordered a Wax Taper to burn instead of them.

Lastly, There was a Keeper of St. Edward's Shrine, and the Relicks placed near it, where King Henry VI's Tomb now is. These were the Church-Officers.

THE Officers for the Convent were, First, the Cellerer, who was the second Obedientary, whose Care was to provide Drink for the Monks at their ordinary Meals; and the Pincians and Cups of Charity, &c. on publick Occasions, and to Strangers; and likewise Bread and Provisions. Under his Management were the Cook, the Baker, the Hostler, and the Gardiner. This Place of Cellerer was of a great Account, and generally one of the most eminent Monks held it; he had likewise Under-Cellerers, as, Cellerarius Curia, and Cellerarius Coquinx, &c. from which he was distinguished by the Title of Magnus Cellerarius.

NEXT was the Chamberlain, (Camerarius) who had the Care and Management of the Beds and Lodging of the Monks, and had under him Servants or Assistants. One John Fitz John ordered, by his Will, that the Cellerer give to the Under-Officers (Secretario Cameri) one Gallon of Wine on fifteen Festivals.

THE Vestiarius is by some reckoned the same Office with the former; but that is a Mistake, his Business was to provide Clothing and Shoes for the Monks; and he had the Care of the Laundry, for washing the Vestments; he had others under him, called Servi Vestiarii; who had Wine given them as before.

THE Infirmarius, or Keeper of the Infirmary, was one of the House, who provided for the sick Monks, and had the Care and Inspection of those in the Infirmary. To which add the Physician of the Infirmary, who was a Layman.

THE Refectorian had the Care and Charge of the Dining-Hall, and to see the Tables were provided regularly.

THE Almoner had the Care and Charge to distribute the broken and refuse Victuals and other Relief to the Poor, for which there was a Place set apart near the Abbey, called formerly, The Almonry, and now, corruptly, The Ambrey.

BESIDES these were the Subsacrista, the Subcellerarius, the Porter of the Convent, &c. The particular Business, Employment, and Power of all which Officers, may be seen at large in the Fourth Part of the Antient Constitutions of this Abbey. These principal Officers had chiefly their separate Lodgings and Offices on the South and East Side the Cloisters.

C H A P. III.

Of the CORONATION.

The Coronation.

THE Coronation of our Kings doing no small Honour to this Place, it will not be improper here to take Notice of this great Ceremony: How long she has laid Claim to it, has been disputed by some, who make Offa the Great the first who endow'd her with this Honour: But these being only Monks here, are not to be rely'd on, especially in a Falshood so very evident; for it is certain, that Kingston upon Thames, or Winchester, were the chief Places for crowning the Saxon Monarchs; nor do we know of any King crowned here till William the Conqueror, for Harold's Coronation is doubtful: But nothing is more plain, than that Edward the Confessor was the first who fixed that Usage in this Church, and presented the Vestments and Regalia, in which he himself was crowned for that Purpose; of which there is an antient Catalogue in a Manuscript in the Cotton Library of Sporley, before quoted, viz. Tunica, Supertunica, Armilla, an embroidered Pall, a Pair of Buskins, a Pair of Sandals or Slippers, a Golden Scepter, one Wooden Staff, a Rod gilt, (ligneam virgam deauratam) and another Iron one; one Gold Crown (coronam optimam) one Golden Comb and Spoon: Also for the Queen's Coronation, a Crown and two Rods; also for the Communion on that Day, one Chalice of Onix bound, with a Paten of pure Gold; quæ omnia reliquiis preciosis habeantur.

We have but few Instances of Coronations elsewhere, but upon extraordinary Occasions; as King Henry III. was crowned at Glocester, Quoniam Westmonasterium ubi locus est ex consuetudine regia coronatione deputatus, & consecratione, tunc ab inimicis suis fuit obsessum; which are the very Words likewise of Matthew Westm. sed in anno quarto sequenti apud Westmonasterium, est iterum coronatus: Yet afterwards, when King Henry III.'s Son was crowned at Winchester, they made heavy Complaint of it, as a high Breach of Privilege: And when King Henry III. was crowned at Worcester, that Day the Abbot of Westminster, and the Prior of Canterbury, appealed to Rome for the Liberties of their Churches; the first for the Place Sake, the latter for the Archbishop's Right of Crowning.

ADDITIONAL to the Honour, were these Advantages to the Church, viz. the Offerings made to St. Edward, the Hangings, the Throne, &c. to which add the Precentor's Fee, which was one Mark of Gold, Precentor. Westmon. habet unam markam auri in die quo, rex portat coronam apud Westmonaster. and the Convent 100 Symmels, and one Medicum vini, as appears by the aforesaid Charter.

THE particular Ornaments, which have been used on this Occasion, and the varying of them, were as follows:

First, The Crown, an Ornament, though long used in the Western Empire, from Charles the Great, yet not by our English Kings, till the Time of King Athelstan, as Geoffrey Monmouth tells us; and Edward his Successor (says Ethelward) was crowned Stemmate regali; yet the first

Use of them was only Fillets, as in the Coins of Adulph, King of the East Angles, Anno 1164, and of Offa King of Mercia; afterwards King Egbert, Anno 800, becoming absolute Monarch, wore a Stellated Crown; yet Mr. Selden observes, that in the Coins of Alfred and his Successors, to William the Conqueror, they only wore the Fillet Diadem, except Edred and Edmund Ironside, whose were pointed and pearl'd. Edward the Confessor is the first represented with a Crown raised with Flowers-de-lis; these relate to the Coins from whence these Regal Ornaments may be well judged. But to shew the several Sorts, we may better gather them from the Account of several Coronations; and first, in the Coronation of King Richard I. was carried Coronam auream mirifice gemmatam; which doubtless was different from that plain one of St. Edward; yet Brompton calls it only Coronam auream, and mentions two used then, of which the levior Corona he wore at Dinner.

KING Henry III. was crowned Serto, with a Gold Circle, for that King John had lost the former in the Sea; at which Time was an Edict to wear Chaplets for one Month, to make the Coronation known, for Lewis was then in England. These were occasional Crowns; yet, there was doubtless an Imperial Diadem, absolutely necessary on this Occasion, as appears by the last Instance, which not improbably was that King John gave to Pandolphus the Legate. King Edward I. added to the Regalia, the Scotch Crown, &c. But in his Son's Coronation, there is no Mention made of any other used, than St. Edward's, which he gave to Gaveston to carry. In King Richard II.'s Time were many Crowns, and it is one of the Articles against him that he carried the Crowns and Regalia into Ireland. King Henry IV. when dying, ordered the Imperial Crown to be set by his Bed-side, which his Son King Henry V. thinking him dead, took by Way of Possession: These were low Coronets, radiated and mixt with Flower-de-luces or Leaves. King Henry VI. was the first that had the Diadem arched; which still continues. This Imperial Arched Diadem was that which King Richard III. for greater Security, carried with him to Bosworth, and which being found in a Thorn, was placed on King Henry VII.'s Head. These Diadems seem to have been different ones; but the antient Imperial Diadem was that which was preserved in the Abbey, and said to be King Alfred's, as Sir John Spelman, in the Life of that Prince informs us. "In the arched Room in the Cloisters of Westminster Abbey, where the antient Regalia of this Kingdom are kept, upon a Box, which is the Cabinet to the antientest Crown, there is, it is said, an Inscription to this Purpose, Hæc est principior corona, cum qua coronabantur Reges Ælfredus, Edwardus, &c. and the Crown, which is worthy observing, is of antient Work with Flowers, adorned with Stones of some what a plain setting." Here it continued till the Grand Rebellion; when Anno 1642, Harry Martin, being commissioned by the Parliament, broke broke open the Chest, which was Iron; took it thence and sold it with the Robes, Sword, and Scepter of St. Edward, and other Regalia. After the Restauration of King Charles II. had one made like it; it is very richly embellished with Pearls and Diamonds, Rubies, &c. with a Mound and Cross at Top; it has four Flower-de-luces and four Crosses on a Rim of Gold, set with Jewels, and the Cap is of Purple Velvet, turned up with Ermines: This is preserved in the Tower of LONDON. The Story of Blood's stealing it is related in Vol. I.

THERE is likewise a Crown of State, and others occasionally made kept with it.

THE next is the Scepter, a very antient Ensign of Kingly Power, both among the Greeks and Romans, by which they swore in the most solemn Manner, which Homer calls μεγὰ ἐξουίαν, the Great Oath. It among the Jews supposes Kingly Government; it has been in all Ages and Places an Ensign of Power, and spiritually alludes to its being a Weapon to oppose the Wicked, and protect the Good; this of St. Edward was destroyed with the rest. The present Scepter is of Gold, the Handle Plain, and the upper Part wreathed; in Length two Feet nine Inches and a Quarter, and of the same Thickness as the former; the Pomel at the Bottom enriched with Rubies and Emeralds, and small Diamonds; the Top riseth into a Flower-de-luce with six Leaves, whereof three are upright, and the other three hanging down; all enriched with precious Stones: Out of the same Flower-de-luce issueth a Mound, of an Amethyst, garnished with Table Diamonds; and upon the Mound, a Cross wholly covered with precious Stones, with a large Table-Diamond in the Centre.

THE Scepter with the Dove was Edward the Confessor's, as exhibited in his Seal, it was first distinguished at the Coronation of Richard I. though it is marked on the Seal of Henry I. this signifies Mercy and Clemency; it was used by Stephen and Henry II. on their Seals, but omitted on that of Richard I. and Richard II. he assumed it on his Seal, for St. Edward was his Patron, and King Edward IV. used it in Regard of him: King Richard II. used it too: This Scepter was destroyed with the rest: The present one, made at the Restauration, is of Gold, in Length three Feet seven Inches, and three Inches in Circumference at the Handle, and two Inches and a Quarter about the Top; the Pomel garnished with a Circle or Fillet of Table-Diamonds, and in several Places with precious Stones of all Sorts; and the Mound at the Top embellished with a Band or Fillet of Rose Diamonds; upon the Mound is a small Jerusalem Cross, whereon is fixed a Dove, with Wings expanded.

THERE have been divers other Scepters, if we conjecture from the Seals, as with Flower-de-luces by King Henry II. Lillies by King Richard II. and John, &c. as likewise the Hand of Justice and Clemency, used by King Edward III. being a Rod of Ivory, with an Ivory Hand at Top expanded.

THE Queen's Scepter with the Cross, also of Gold, adorned with Diamonds and other precious Stones, is in Length two Feet ten Inches, with a Mound and Cross at the Top, issuing out of a Flower-de-luce, very like the King's, in all the Embellishments thereof, only smaller, and not wreathed, nor altogether so thick.

THE Queen's Ivory Rod has been an antient Monument, as appears by the Seal of Eleanor, Queen to King Edward I. That at present is a Rod or Scepter of White Ivory; in Length three Feet one Inch and a Half, whereof the Pomel and Garniture is Gold; as is also the Mound and Cross at the Top, only the Dove at the Top of the Cross is enamelled with White; the Circumference at the Bottom about two Inches, and at the Top about an Inch and a Half: The Mound, or Globe, with the Cross, is another antient Ornament, signifying Royal Dignity, and is on all Seals, from Edward the Confessor downward; the present one was made with the rest.

St. Edward's Staff is in Length four Feet seven Inches and a Half; it is a Staff or Scepter of Gold, with a Pike or Foot of Steel, about four Inches and a Quarter in Length, and a Mound and Cross at the Top; the Garnishings are also of Gold, and the Diameter is about three Quarters of an Inch.

THE Eagle of Gold is a curious Piece of Antiquity; it contains the Oil with which our Kings were anointed; of which take the following Legend: St. Thomas Becket being at Sens in France, the Holy Virgin appeared to Thomas Becket, then in Exile at Sens in France, and gave him a Stone Vessel of Oil enclosed in a Golden Eagle; which Vessel is called in some MSS. Ampulla, and bid him give it to William a Monk, to carry to Pistavia, and hide it in St. Gregory's Church, under a great Stone, where it should be found for the Use of prosperous Kings: This was, by a holy Man in France, given to Henry III. Duke of Lancaster, in King Edward III's Time. King Richard II. found it among some Jewels, and endeavoured to be anointed with it, but was dissuaded by Archbishop Arundel; which Archbishop afterwards anointed King Henry IV. with it. There is a long Discourse in the Cotton Library concerning this Ampulla of Oil.

THE Spoon which St. Edward gave, is likewise of pure Gold, with four Pearls in the broadest Place of the Handle, and the Bowl of the Spoon finely chased both within and without; by the extreme Thinness thereof, it appears to be very antient. These are now, for their Security, preserved in the Tower, and upon the Coronation, brought to the Abbey the Morning before, and thence carried in Procession by the Dean and Prebendaries to Westminster-Hall. The others, as follow, are kept here in the Church, viz. The Dalmatica, or open Pall, called the Imperial; it was flowered with Eagles of Gold, intermixed with Roses, Flower-de-luces and Crowns; but is now made of rich Brocade, or Embroidery of several Sorts, and lined with Silk; it is somewhat shaped in Imitation of the Roman Toga, having, when spread open, the upper Side strait, and the rest semi-ovular, pointing to a Train; the strait Side falling on each Side the Neck, compose the two Fore-sides, and the rest falls in a Train behind, which sweeps about a Foot on the Ground; this is fasten'd to the Neck before, with a rich Gold Clasp. The Supertunica, or Close Pall, is usually of the same Stuff, with Sleeves coming strait to the Arms; it is in Length a Yard and a Half, more or less, and divided into two Skirts by a Slit behind; it is lined with rich Silk; to this Vest is belonging a rich Belt of the same, wherewith the Sword is usually girded. The Armil is of rich Brocade, about an Ell long, and three Inches broad, with Ribbands to tie it below and above the Elbows. The Colubium Sindonis is formed like the antient Surplice without Sleeves, made of Lawn or Cambric; this is put on after Anointing. The Buskins are of the like Brocade, coming half way up the Leg. The Sandals have double Straps coming over the Feet, and one behind each Heel, of Brocade aforesaid. These are continued in the Abbey.

THE Coronation-Chair is of Hard-wood, six Feet seven Inches high, in Breadth at the Bottom 38 Inches, in Depth 24; from the Seat to the Bottom 25; the Breadth of the Seat within Side 18 Inches, and the Depth 18; at nine Inches from the Ground is a Bottom-board, supported ported by four Lions, and under the Seat is the Prophetick Stone, commonly called Jacob's Pillar; it is oblong, 22 Inches long, 13 Inches broad and 11 deep, of Blueish Colour, veined with Red. The Scotch Writers tell us, that the Stone was first at Brigantia in Spain, and was the Throne of Gathelus, the Scotish King: Simon de Brech, the King, brought it into Ireland 700 Years before CHRIST; and from Ireland, King Fergus removed it into Scotland 370 Years afterwards; and Kenneth, A. D. 850, brought it to Scone, and occasioned to be cut in it this Distich:

Ni fallat vatum Scoti hunc quocunque locatum
Invenient lapidem, regnare tenentur ibidem.

And inclosed it in a wooden Chair, where it continued 'till King Edward I. brought it with other Spoils, and offered it at St. Edward's Shrine; but the Chair now in being is not that of Kenneth, as Mr. Selden seems to intimate, for that was not the Trophy, but the Stone; the fatal Marmor, as Bathius calls it, which was the Throne, together with the Golden Scepter and Crown. King Edward presented it to St. Edward and this Church, and caused it to be fixed in a new Chair, with Intent that it should be for the Church Use, and for a Mass-Priest; to which Harding alludes, speaking of it:

He sent it forth to Westminster for aye,
To be there in a Cheir cleanly wrought
For a Mass-Priest to sit in when he ought.

AND Walsingham, more plainly speaking of King Edward's coming to Scone, and seizing the Regalia, Sublato Lapide, quo reges Scotorum tempore Coronationis solebant uti pro Throno transtulit illum usque Westmonasterium; jubens idem fieri celebrantium cathedram sacerdotium. Whether it has been since then used upon the Coronations, or at what Time appointed to that Purpose, is doubtful; but the Chair of King Richard II. that is painted in the Choir, seems copied from it. There formerly hung a Tablet of Parchment near this Chair with an Inscription.

THE Coronation is always performed by some one of the Bishops; most commonly by the Metropolitan himself, unless there be some Impediment. The Bishop of Winchester crowned Queen Mary I. because the Archbishop was at that Time cast into Prison. And the Bishop of Carlisle crowned Queen Elizabeth, the Archbishop of Canterbury being then dead. But the Venerable Archbishop Whitgift crowned King James I. and Queen Anne his Royal Consort. Part of the Coronation was by him thus performed, (according to the antient Custom of England) after the Sermon, the King coming to the Altar, the Archbishop ministred these Questions, and the King answers them:

Archbishop. Sir, will you grant and keep, and by your Oath perform to the People of England the Law and Customs to them granted by the Kings of England, your lawful and religious Predecessors; and namely, the Laws, Customs, and Franchises granted to the Clergy by the glorious King St. Edward your Predecessor, according to the Laws of God, the true Profession of the Gospel established in this Kingdom, agreeable to the Prerogative of the Kings thereof, and the antient Custom of this Realm?

King. I grant and promise to keep them.

Archb. Sir, will you keep Peace and godly Agreement, according to your Power, both to God, the Holy Church, the Clergy, and the People?

King. I will keep it.

Archb. Sir, will you, to your Power, cause Law, Justice and Discretion, in Mercy and Truth, to be executed according to your Judgment?

King. I will.

Archb. Sir, will you grant to hold and keep the Laws and rightful Customs which the Commonalty of this your Kingdom have? And will you defend and keep them in the Honour of God, as much as in you lieth?

King. I grant and promise so to do.

THEN one of the Bishops reads this Passage to the King: "Our Lord and King, we beseech you to pardon, and to grant, and to keep unto us, and to the Churches committed to our Charge, all Canonical Privileges, and do Law and Justice; and that you will protect and defend us, as every good King to his Kingdoms ought to be Protector and Defender of the Bishops, and the the Churches under their Government."

THE King answers, "With a willing and devout Heart I promise and grant my Pardon; And I will preserve and maintain to you, and the Churches committed to your Charge, all Canonical Privileges, and do Law and Justice: And that I will be your Protector and Defender, to my Power, by the Assistance of God; as every good King, in his Kingdom, in Right ought to protect and defend the Bishops and Churches under their Government."

THEN the King arose, and was led to the Communion Table, where he takes a solemn Oath, in the Sight of all the People, to preserve all the Premises, and laying his Hand upon the Bible, says, The Things which I have here promised, I shall perform and keep. So help me God, and the Contents of this Book. After this, the King returns to his Chair of State again.

THIS Form is agreeable to the antient Form of Coronation used in King Edward II's Time, according to a Roll preserved among the Tower Records, transcribed verbatim, the Manner and Tenor of the Interrogatories, and Oath made thereupon; which was as follows, viz.

"Postea Metropolitanus vel Episcopus eundem [scil. Regem] mediocri distinctaque interrogat voce, si leges & Consuetudines ab antiquis, justis & Deo devotis Regibus plebi Anglorum concessas, cum Sacramenti confirmatione eidem plebi concedere & servare voluerit: & presertim Leges & Consuetudines & Libertates a glorioso Rege Edwardo, Clero Populoque concessas. Si autem omnibus his assentire se velle promiserit, exponat Metropolitanus de quibus jurabit, ita dicendo;

"Servabis Ecclesie Dei, cleroque & populo pacem ex integro, & concordiam in Deo, secundum vires tuas? Respondebit, Servabo.

"Facies fieri in omnibus judiciis tuis equam & rectam justitiam & discretionem in misericordia & veritate, secundum vires tuas? Respondebit, Faciam.

"Concedis justas leges & consuetudines esse tenendas, & promittis per te eas esse protegendas, & ad honorem Dei corroborandas, quas vulgus elegerit, secundum vires tuas? Respondebit, Concedo & promitto.

"Adjiciunturque predictis Interrogationibus que justa fuerint. Pronuntiatis quibus confirmabit se omnia esse servatum Sacramento super Altare protinus prestitum coram cunctis.

"His peractis Metropolitanus vel Episcopus incipiet excelsa voce, Veni Creator Spiritus, prostrato eo [scil. Rege] ante altare, &c.

THE Oath and Promise which King Edward III. made at his Coronation, which was Anno 1326, remains under a Memorandum in the Clause Rolls in the Tower, in these Words: The Archbishop asks him,

“Sire, volez vous grantier, & garder & per vestre Secrement confirmer au poeple Dengleterre, les Leys & les Custumes, a eux grantes per les anciens Rois Dengleterre voz predeceffours, droitus & devotz a Dieu; & nomeement les Leys, les Custumes, & les Franchises grantes au Clerge & au poeple par le glorius Roy St. Edward vestre predeceffour?”

Responf. Ieo les grante & promette.

“Sire, Garderez vous a Dieu & a Seinte Eglise & au Clerge, & au poeple, pees & accord en Dieu entierement, felonc vestre poair?”

Responf. Ieo les garderai.

“Sire, Freez vous fair en toutz voz jugementz ovele & droite justice & discrecion, en misericorde & verite a vestre poair?”

Responf. Ieo Les fray.

“Sire, Grantez vous a tenir & garder les Leys & les Custumes droitureles, lez quelz la Communate de vestre Roiaume aurai eslu, & les defendrez & afforcerez al honour de Dieu, a vestre poair?”

Responf. Ieo les graunte & promette.

AND former Kings of England used, upon Occasion, to mention in their Writs, Statutes, and Proclamations, their Obligation to this their Coronation Oath: And so these Expressions following are frequent in the said King Edward's Reign, Quod ad hoc, or, prout Juramenti Vinculo tenemur & astringimur. And, by the Bond of our Oath we be bound to the Observance and Defence of the Laws and Customs of the Realm. Again, The King, as he is bounden by his Oath to do the same, to be kept as the Law of this Realm. And, The King having Regard to the Quietness of his People, &c. as he is bound by his Oath made at his Coronation.

THE Præcentor's Fee of old, on the Coronation-Day, was a Mark of Gold. So the Record, Præcentor Westmon. habet unam Marcam auri in die quo Rex portat Coronam ap. Westmonaster. (Clauſ. 4 H. 3. M. 10.

Of the SANCTUARY.

THE peculiar Regard which all Nations have paid to Places of Religious Worship, first directed Criminals, or Persons otherwise unhappy in their Circumstances, to shelter themselves there, as under the Protection of the presiding Deity. At length what Religion first prompted, Policy established, and it was thought convenient to encourage such Securities, and preserve the Awe of Religion by temporal Punishments; and therefore some of the greatest Founders of Empire erected Buildings to that Purpose, of which the Ephesians were the first; and Cadmus, who founded Thebes; afterwards Hercules ordained that the Temple of Pity at Athens should be an Asylum; and Herodian observes, that in Egypt there remained in his Time a Temple sacred to Hercules, from whence it was Sacrilege to force any Person, which the Word ὑλάσαι signifies; and sometimes, though there was no Temple erected, yet the Place being sacred to any Deity was equally secure; thus the City of Trezene was inviolable, for that the Island of Caluria, in which it stood, was dedicated to Neptune, alluding to the Security the Sea gave them: Other Places of Refuge we find mentioned, as several in Egypt sacred to Osiris, and in Syria to Apollo, and in Cyprus, Aerias erected one to Venus Paphia, his Son Amathus to Venus Amathusia, and Teucer, Jovi Talaminius, which were likewise such, with many others. Romulus, to people his Establishment, made his Asylum between two Woods before building the City of Rome, of which Virgil, lucum ingentem quem Romulus acceperat Asylum retulit; and this was a Recourse of all the Outcasts of the Earth, where he likewise erected a Temple to Pity; and from this political, rather than religious View, began the greatest of Empires, which being established, such religious Places and Temples were set apart by the Senate for this Purpose, which only, and no others, were secure: Thus the Asylum Junonis in Virgil; and afterwards great Men indulged such particular Places with those Privileges as they thought proper: Thus L. Scipio and S. Sylla, after their Conquests, the one of Antiochus, and the other of Mithridates, made the Temple of Diana Leucophrinæ an Asylum; and Cæsar the Temple of Jupiter, among the Aphrodisians, and of Trivia among the Stratonians for their withstanding the Parthians, &c. Polydore Virgil, who of the Original of most Things takes the least Notice of this, unluckily enough tells us, that the Christians copied from Romulus, and not from the Mosaic Institution. A very unhappy Original! but if you'll compare the Character Tacitus gives of the former, and that very just one the Usurper Richard gives of the latter, you must own the Copy extremely like the Original. Tacitus's Words are these: Crescebant enim Græcæ per urbes. Crebrescebat enim Græcæ per urbes licentia atque impunitas Asyla statuendi: Complebantur Tempia pessimis servitorum: Eodem subsidio obærat adversum creditores, suspectique capitalium criminum receptabuntur. Nec ullum satis validum imperium erat coercendis seditibus populi, flagitia hominum ut ceremonias deum protegentis. That they were unlike the Mosaic Institution is too evident; for the Cities of Refuge among the Jews were only set apart for unhappy Persons, who had accidentally shed Blood, where the Umbrage of the Levites sheltered them, and the Time limited was that of the High Priest's Life; but if it was wilful Murder, then the Avenger of Blood was to take them thence: And in other Cases, or in different Places, there was no other Security. Thus Joab was slain when he held the Horns of the Altar, which was authorized by God himself; “If a Man come presumptuously upon his Neighbour to slay him with Guile, thou shalt take him from mine Altar that he shall die”; and “Athalia was led out of the Temple to receive the Rewards of her Treason, which plainly shew, that the most sacred Place was no Security for those who scandalized the Religion worshipped there.

HAVING shewn the Original and Nature of these Securities among the Heathens and Jews, let us next take a View of the Christian Sanctuary, and particularly in England, in which, setting aside the fabulous Stories of Malmutius, (whose Laws, called the Malmucine, says Brompton, continued to the Time of St. Edward;) and Lucius's Privileges, though the latter gained so much Credit, that Dr. Goodman, Dean of this Church, alledged in Parliament, the Privilege in Westminster derived from him; and come to the Saxon Laws for securing these Asylums; and first we shall find in the Laws of Ina, King of the West Saxons, a Provision for such as fled to Churches: Likewise the Laws of Alured, &c. are full of such Securities. These Sanctuaries generally included the Church-Yard, the Parson or Vicar's House, or Court-Yard; as some of the Greek Princes granted Sanctuary two Miles round round their Temples, in Process of Time, these Privileges were particularly, and in a larger Manner, secured to some Places, where the Church contained the Bodies of Saints, to which, whoever fled, and touched them, were secure from Violence: Thus Athelstane granted them to the Church of Beverly, for in the Church of Hagustald, and Matthew Paris mentions St. Edmund's-bury, and St. Alban's, as antient Sanctuaries superior to others in his Time; but afterwards several other Places procured to their Churches the same Privilege; for not long after, that of St. Martin's le Grand in LONDON was inviolable; and at the restraining these Customs by the Act of King Henry VIII. we find those of Wells, Westminster, Manchester, Northampton, Norwich, York, Derby, and Launceston.

THESE Privileges, if infringed, were looked upon as Acts of the highest Sacrilege; and when the Historians would represent an Enemy to holy Church in his blackest Colours, they charge him with something of this Nature; of which take two or three Instances: Thurstan, Abbot of Glastenbury, ordered three of his Monks to be killed and laid under the Altar, insomuch that their Blood ran down the Steps, (i. e. gradi), these were esteemed very sacred; which Act of his is called, Turpe Scelus; and he was banished for it. King Henry II. say all the Writers of that Time, most shamefully injured Sanctuary. King John had it laid to his Charge as to a main Article of Tyranny; and when Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent, escaped Prison and fled to Sanctuary, the King was severely censured for suffering him to be forced thence and carried back; and the Bishop of Salisbury excommunicated all that were concerned in that Action. Many more Instances might be given to prove that these Violations never were but by arbitrary Princes, or an unruly Rabble. Of the first the Instance of Archbishop Becket's Murder is sufficient, as was the voluntary Penance of the King, and the wretched End of the Assassins of the latter; the Instances of Archbishop Sudbury dragged from the Altar in the Tower Chapel, and beheaded by Tyler's Rabble; and Ayscough, Bishop of Salisbury, taken from the Chapel of Edenden, and murdered by his Tenants. There are other Instances, which will be spoke of when we come to treat of this Sanctuary in particular; but it is not to be omitted, that memorable Regard King Edward IV. paid to Religion, who, after the Battle of Skrewsbury, hot with the Encounter, pursuing his Enemies to the Church, with his Sword drawn, was stopt by the Priest habited, and holding the Sacrament, who forbade him Entrance till he had promised Safety to those within it; a bold Demand in the one to make, and a brave one in the other to grant.

THESE extraordinary Advantages continued till the Time of King Henry VII. when the Pope issued out a Bull in Favour of that Prince upon Symnel's Rebellion, to this Purpose, viz.

First, That if any Person, register'd as a Sanctuary-Man, should sally out of Sanctuary by Night, or otherwise, and commit Trespass, or annoy the Country, and retreat in again; in such a Case the Person was to forfeit the Security of that Place for ever.

Secondly, That notwithstanding the Person of a Sanctuary-Man was protected from his Creditors, yet his Goods out of the Sanctuary should lie open to Seizure and Law.

Thirdly, That if any Person took Sanctuary for Treason, the King might appoint him Keepers to prevent his Escape.

IN the Time of King Henry VIII. this Privilege was again regulated; for, by Act of Parliament in the 32d Year, all Sanctuaries, except Parish-Churches, Church-yards, Cathedral Churches, Hospitals, and Collegiate Churches, and Chapels designed to Churches, were taken away; but with this Exception, viz. Wells, Westminster, Manchester, Northampton, Norwich, York, Derby, and Launceston, which were still to enjoy their antient Privileges; and soon after Manchester was dissolv'd, and Westchester appointed in the Room of it. But this Safety extended not to Persons who were guilty of Willful Murder, Rape, Burglary, Highway, House-breaking, or Treason; and in other Cases this Privilege was allowed but for forty Days; and then the Coroner should cause them to abjure the Realm. As to Number, no Place might shelter more than twenty Persons at one Time; and if the Sanctuary, upon any Person's entering his Name, was full, yet nevertheless he should be skreen'd from Arrest, and the Magistrate should pass him from Place to Place, till he came to the next. As for such as were admitted, it was provided by a former Act, that they should wear Badges, and if found out of the Bounds without one, to forfeit the Privileges. Such Persons likewise were not suffered to carry a Sword, Knife, or other Weapon, except a Whittle for Diet, and then only at Meals. Their Hours likewise were limited, for if they were abroad before Sun-rising, or after Sun-setting, they were for the first Time imprisoned in the Sanctuary two Days, for the second six Days, and for the third to lose the Privilege: But avoiding these, they were safe by an Act of King Richard II. That whoever arrested any Person within the Limits of Sanctuaries, should be imprisoned during the King's Pleasure.

Thus much for Sanctuaries in general: Now to this particular one, which the old Writers say was the antientest, and made by Lucius, into which Error Dr. Goodman fell; but it is believed by others, that Edward the Confessor was the first that procured any Privileges that Way, more than what other Churches had; and this appears by the Bull of Pope Leo, and his own Charter, which limits it; and this was so strictly observed, that we have not one Instance of Injury offered till the Time of King Richard II. when the Case of Hawle and Schakel made such Noise in the Land; of the first, who lies in the South Cross, Mention has been made already. It may be here added what was the Consequence of that barbarous Assassination: Hawle's being murdered in the Choir was instantly complained of to the Bishop of LONDON, by this Convent, who instantly excommunicated all concerned in it, except, his Mother, and John Duke of Lancaster; and the Matter was so aggravated in Parliament by the Bishop, that Schakel was restored to Sanctuary, and soon after to the King's Favour. The next Instance was in the Case of Tresilian, the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, who in the same Reign had taken Sanctuary here; he was dragged hence by the discontented Lords, and hanged at Tyburn the same Day; but upon this the Abbot made such Complaint, that Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, and Sir John Cobham, for Violence done to Sanctuary, asked the Abbot's Pardon and Absolution.

IN the Reign of King Henry VI. Eleanor Cobham, Wife to Thomas of Woodstock Duke of Gloucester, fled hither, but being charged with Witchcraft and High Treason, could not reach the Privilege: Her End is generally known.

Anno 29 of the same Reign, the Abbot of Westminster exhibited a Bill against the Sheriff of LONDON, for drawing a Privilege Person out out of the Sanctuary of St. Martin's in LONDON, belonging to this Church.

IN the same Reign, the Lord Say took Water privily at the Tower; to take Sanctuary here; there were three in the Boat, and a Woman who discovered him: they murdered and threw him over-board, and his Body was thrown up by St. Mary Overies, and 'tis supposed was buried there.

Thomas Barret, Esq; a famous Warrior in France, under the Duke of Bedford, took Sanctuary at this Church, and was taken thence and hewn to Pieces about the same Time.

AFTER the famous Battle of Barnet, John Lord Wells took Sanctuary here, but was enticed thence by King Edward IV. and beheaded.

BUT the most remarkable Case, was that of Elizabeth, Queen to King Edward IV. who had been twice driven hither for Shelter; first when King Henry VI. had fair for recovering his Throne; and at that Time she was delivered of Edward V. in the Abbot's House. The second Case was upon her Husband's Death, when she fled hither with her youngest Son, which occasioned great Disputes concerning the Legality of it. At this Time the Protector moved, that a Message might be sent by the Archbishop of York requiring the Queen to deliver up her Son, otherwise to enforce him thence; but the latter Part was strongly objected to by the Bishop; "for that God would be highly displeased, if the Privilege of that Holy Place should be infringed, which had been preserved so long, and which had been secured by so many Popes and Kings, and which Holy Ground St. Peter, in his own Person, hallowed; for Proof of which (and that a very weighty one too) they kept in that Abbey St. Peter's Cope, which might then be seen; and from that Time till now (continues he) no King was ever so wicked as to violate it, nor Bishop so presumptuous as to consecrate it." And to this answered the Queen's Words, "That no Tyrant had ever been so devillish to break it." The Duke of Buckingham on the other hand inveighed strongly against it, when allowed to any other but such as by Sea-chance, or other, should be involved in Debt; or when Competitors were for a Crown to have a Place of Refuge for either Side, according to the Chance of War: But urges, that Thieves, of which those Places were full, or Wilful Murderers, of which there were two Nefts, viz. the one at the Elbow of the City, the other in the Bowels, (meaning this and St. Martin's le Grand) should have no Advantage, unless they would suppose that God and St. Peter were the Patrons of Wicked Courses. The Nature of these Places he thus farther aggravates: "Now (says he) Spendthrifts and Extravagants run in Debt upon the View of these Places; rich Men run thither with poor Men's Goods; here they live high, build Houses, and bid their Creditors go whistle; hither Mens Wives come, having plunder'd their Husbands, and then say they beat them. Thieves bring Stolen Goods hither, and sell them, and while they enjoy the Privilege, spend the Money, and here cabal and fix their next Design, which might be remedied, and yet Sanctuary not abused; and charges the Pope and Prince that secured them with being more piteous than politick.

THIS Sanctuary being, as before mentioned, among others limited by the Statute of King Henry VIII. the State and Condition of it since, and the Practice used consequent to that Act, is next to be considered, which still was the same in Cases of Debt as before, viz. Security upon delivering up their Effects upon Oath to some Churchman, till they could be distributed among their Creditors; of which is an Instance in King Henry VI's Time, the Case of A. R. a Haberdasher, who exhibited a Bill in Chancery against Foster, Archdeacon of London, for wrongfully detaining from him Goods delivered upon this Account: And thus, after the Act of Sanctuaries, viz. in December 1558, one Geffray Rainmain brought to the Abbot Feckenham nine Cloths; the Owner whereof was one Thomas Bradey, Clothier, whereupon the Lords of the Council sent a Letter to the Abbot to deliver those Cloths, taking Bonds of him to be answerable to such as should by Law claim them.

AFTER Queen Elizabeth came to the Crown, this Sanctuary still continued, but was brought under Regulation, and on Oath administered to such as should claim it, to this Purpose: First, That they claimed it not for Fraud, but only for Safety, till they could pay their Debts. Secondly, That they should give an Account of all their Debts and their Effects, and shew how they came behind-hand. Thirdly, That though they were not able to satisfy their Creditors, yet they would labour by all Means to do it as soon as possible. Fourthly, That they should attend Daily Prayers Morning and Evening in the Collegiate Church. Fifthly, That they should behave themselves honestly and quietly, and avoid all suspected Houses, unlawful Games, and lewd Company. Sixthly, That they should wear no Weapon, nor be out of their Lodging before Sun-rising, or after Sun-set, nor go out of the Precinct without the Dean's Leave (if present) or the Arch-deacon's, in his Absence. Seventhly, That they should be obedient to Mr. Dean, the Arch-deacon, and other Officers, during their Stay. Eighthly, That if they infringe the Articles aforesaid, or be discovered of making a false Certificate, that notwithstanding their Admission to Sanctuary, they should claim no Privilege of it.

THE Manner at that Time of their Admission (says Stow) was thus: First, The Arch-deacon was to declare to them, what a Danger it was before God to defraud any Man wittingly of his Goods; the which was against his Laws, which willed every Man to pay, saying, Reddite omnibus, i. e. Render to all Men. And also against the Law of Nature, which saith, Hoc facias alteri, &c. i. e. Do that to another which you would have another do to you. And what a Rebuke it was to any Man to claim Sanctuary, and a Discredit to his occupying for ever; and to advise him therefore to remember these Premises, and to return before he were known openly.

THEN after this, Knowledge should be given to the Creditors of them that were in the said Sanctuary; or else, if they came unsent for, immediately the said Sanctuary-Men should be called before the said Dean and Arch-deacon to hear their Demands; and if any of the said Creditors could certainly prove that the said Privilege-Men had brought in with them Money or Wares, they should be satisfied thereof presently.

AND if the Creditors did lay unto their Charge that they had more Money, Debts, and Wares, than they would confess, straightway they should be committed to Ward for a certain Time, to make them confess the Truth of the same, if it might be, and thereupon to make an End.

AND then, if they could not make them confess more than was before confessed, to travail from Time to Time, to make them agree; and if any of them would not be ordered accordingly, then to punish him.

AND finally, if it were possible for them, to bring in some honest Persons to justify of their Decay.

THIS was then the Usage here, and the Privilege was upon these Conditions preserved, as appears pears in the Case of Hampton and Whitaker, who betook themselves here for Debts; and the Opinion of Judge Dyer and Southcot in the Star-Chamber confirmed it to them: But not long after an Attempt was made in Parliament to take it away, as appears by the Journal, as follows, viz. Monday October 7, 8 Eliz. A Motion was made in the House to take away Sanctuary for Debt, that of Westminster not excepted; upon which Dr. Goodman, then Dean, alledged the Exemption of his Church; whereupon a Day was appointed to hear him on Friday following, at Nine of the Clock, and to attend with Council to shew Cause why it should be excepted.

Thursday the 10th following, upon Motion made by Mr. Dean, he was allowed further Time, till Wednesday the 16th following.

Wednesday the 16th following, the Dean finally appeared with Council, viz. Mr. Edward Plowden of the Middle-Temple, and Mr. Ford, a Civilian; the Dean himself made an Oration in Defence of it, and alledged divers Charters from King Lucius, and other Christian Kings, and Mr. Plowden urged King Edward's Grant, dated Anno 1066, with great Reasons in Law and Chronicle; and Mr. Ford alledged from divers Chronicles and Stories in Law; whereupon the Bill was committed to the Master of the Rolls, and others, to consider these Reasons, and peruse the Grants, &c.

Thursday the 31st of October, the Master of the Rolls made his Report, and the House ordered the Bill to be engrossed.

Wednesday the 4th of December, the Bill was read a third Time, and dash'd upon a Division of the House, 60 against 71.

THE Places thus privileged formerly, are known by the Name of the broad, or great and little Sanctuary, comes into King's-street, near St. Margaret's Church.

THE following is Edward the Confessor's Charter for this Church's Privilege of Sanctuary:

EDWARD, by the Grace of God King of Englishmen; I make it to be known to all Generations of the World after me, that by special Commandment of our Holy Father Pope Leo, I have renewed and honoured the Holy Church of the blessed Apostle St. Peter of Westminster; and I order and establish for ever, that what Person, of what Condition or Estate soever he be, from whence soever he come, or for what Offence or Cause it be, either for his Refuge into the said Holy Place, he be assured of his Life, Liberty, and Limbs. And over this, I forbid, under Pain of everlasting Damnation, that no Minister of mine, or of my Successors, intermeddle them with any the Goods, Lands, or Possessions of the said Persons, taking the said Sanctuary. For I have taken their Goods and Livelode into my special Protection. And therefore I grant to every each of them, in as much as my terrestrial Power may suffice, all Manner Freedom of joyous Liberty. And whosoever presumes, or doth contrary to this my Grant, I will he lose his Name, Worship, Dignity, and Power; and that, with the great Traitor Judas, that betrayed our Saviour, he be in the everlasting Fire of Hell. And I will and ordain, that this my Grant endure as long as there remaineth in England either Love or Dread of Christian Name.

ONE Sort of Persons here sheltered from ancient Time, were such as were insolvent, and intended to fail; and not being able to satisfy their Creditors, used to save themselves from Arrests, by flying hither for Sanctuary; and so taking Time to agree with their Creditors; yet by Way of Confession; and in Discharge of their Conscience, discovering their Condition to some spiritual Man first, and leaving in his Hands what Goods they had, to be among the said Creditors divided and distributed for their Debts. Thus did one A. R. Haberdasher, in the Reign of King Henry VII. leaving certain Quantities of Cloth in the Possession of John Foster, Archdeacon of LONDON, in Trust for him; but he, out of a covetous Mind, thought to make Advantage thereby, and so forced this A. R. to complain against him in Chancery. The Petition was as follows:

To the moost reverent Fader in God, my Lord of Canterberry, [then Lord Chancellor of England.]

MEkely beseecheth your good and gracyous Lordship, tendyrly to consydre the humble Complayne, and also the trew Intent of me A. R. your dayly and unfeyned Bedman, now abeyding in the Seyntwary of Westmynster. That forasmooche as twelve Moneths past, I consydered well that by the Mean of Mony, and dyvers gret Losses, I was come to that Decay, that I hadde not whereof to pay my Dettys; wherefore, in dyscharynge of my Conscience, I dysclosed my Mynde in that Behalve unto Mayster Johan. Foster, Archdeken of LONDON, and delivered to him bothe my Testement and Inventory of al my Goods and Dettys; and also delivered unto hym XL fyne Cloths, and XII Cloths engreyned; wyllyng and desyryng hym as myne Executour and Ordynary, to do therein as he wolde yf I were dede; and specyally, that as wel the sayd Cloths, as al other Goodys that I had in Erth, myght be retayled, devyded and dysstrybuted among my Credytors, yf they wolde be so contented. And for the Executyon of the same, I valued my greyned Cloths at xv s. the Yarde, and myne other fyne Cloths at xii s. the Yarde, soo as my said Creditours wolde have been wel content. From the which my trew Entent and Purpose the said Mayster Foster many Ways declyned, and varyeth, kepyng styl my sayed Goodys in his Handes, and nother wyll delyver the sayde Goodys to me, or to any other indyfferent Man, to the Entent aforesayd, nor yet unto my Credytours after the Rate; but by many crafty and subtyl Meanes persuadyth, as well to me as to myn sayd Creditours, in such [Sort] as he entended to have gret Lucre and Advantage by hys Occupacyon in this Behave. And rather than he wyll delyver my sayd Goodys unto any other Man to th'Entent aforesaid, he sayd to me in gret Fere and Jeoperdy, that he wyl after his own Wyll and Plesure pay some of my Credytours theyr hole Dettres, though the Remenaunt be never payd; or elles that he wyll cause or suffer the sayd Goodys to be attached in hys Hands by suche of my Credytours as he favoureth; and hath gret Rewards promised unto hym on theyr Behalve.

Wherfor I beseeche your good and gracyous Lordshyp, in my most humble and herty Wyse, to sende a Commaundement unto the sayd Mayster Foster, by your Letter, to delyver the sayd Goodys unto myself, or otherwise into the Hands of such one, as by the Favour and Autorite of your Lordshyp, may dyspose them amonge my sayd Credytours, as shall be thought best to the Pleasure of God, and moost accordyng to ryght and good Conscience.

WE shall conclude the Account of this famous Monastery, with a List of the Names, and somewhat of the Characters of the Abbots and Deans of this Church to the present Time.

ORT H-

ORTH BRIGHT.

604.

AFTER Sibert, by the Advice of his Uncle Ethelred, had founded this Church, he placed over it an Abbot Orbrithus; or Ordbright, who received Benediction from Mellitus, Bishop of LONDON; at which Time St. Gregory the Great was Bishop of Rome, St. Augustine Archbishop of Canterbury, and Ethelbert King of Kent. This Orthbright presided as Abbot for the Space of 12 Years, and dying the 13th Day of January 616, was buried in his Monastery; after whose Death the Church was governed by Priors till the Time of Orbright II. The Reason of which Change seems to be this; not long before this Abbot's Death, Ethelbert died, and his Son, with those of Sebert revolting to Paganism, Mellitus, Bishop of LONDON, fled, and the Christian Church was long clouded in those Parts.

GERMANUS.

616.

AFTER the Death of Orthbright, the Government devolved on Germanus, who had been Prior some Time under him; he governed the Church many Years, but the Number of Years is left blank in the MSS. the Disorder of the Church, and its being scattered, preventing particular Notice of his Death; he was buried in this Monastery.

ALDRED.

To him succeeded Aldred, but the Time of his Commencement is equally doubtful with the Death of the last, as is likewise the Number of Years he presided over this Church; which, however, are said to be many. He died in the Year of our Lord 675, in the last Year of the Reign of Cadwallor, the last British King, and in the Reign of Sebba and Sighere, Kings of the East Saxons, and of Theodore, Archbishop of Canterbury; in which Year St. Erkenwald was consecrated Bishop of LONDON. He was buried in this Monastery. In his Time, viz. 649, Segebert and his Brother were converted to Christianity, by the Persuasions of Oswin, King of Northumbria; of which Cedda was sent to convert the People of this Province, and built Tilbury on the Thames Side, in Essex, making it his Bishop's Seat; so that the Priorship, both of Germanus, and Part of this Aldred's, seem to be only Titular, they leaving their Church when Mellitus fled from LONDON, and this latter returning to it under the calm Weather of Cedda's Mission, when Christianity was restored: But indeed these early Priors seem to have been only Rectors of the Church, which was very inconsiderable many Years after this; however, by being restored, we have the Time of this Prior's Death handed down.

SYWARD.

Syward succeeded him, and sat 10 Years Prior, wanting some Days. He lived in the Times of Dona, Agatho and Leo, Popes, and of Egfrid, King of Northumbria; in whose Time was the Diffention between that Prince and Wilfred, Archbishop of York; and the famous Council at Straensball and Hatfield. He died the Year before St. Cuthbert was consecrated Bishop of Lan-disfarn, and the Death of Sigher, King of the East Saxons, and two Years before the Consecration of John of Beverly to the Church of Hagustald, viz. in the Year 684, and was buried in this Monastery.

OSMUND.

To him succeeded Osmund, in whose Time died Cadwell, King of the East-Saxons, at Rome, and Theodore the Archbishop, and Benedict Abbot, the latter of which founded Gyrwy and Weremouth, the first Abbies of the Benedictines in England, about which Time the Humour of a Monastick Life prevailed much; for Ethelred, King of Mercia, was shorn a Monk at Bardeney Abbey, and afterwards Abbot there, as were likewise Offa, King of the East Saxons, and Kendred, King of Mercia, at Rome; and Ina, King of the West Saxons, relinquished his Kingdom and went to Rome. This Osmund died Anno 705, having sat 21 Years, and was buried in this Monastery.

SELRED.

726.

Selred is mentioned as succeeding Osmund; but there is such Disparity in the Time, that either there was another between them, whose Name is now lost, or an Interval, or else the Dates are mis-placed. This Selred lived in the Time of Cuthbert, King of the West Saxons, Ethelbald King of Mercia, and Ceolulph, King of Northumbria, and of venerable Bede, the Historian, and Neothelm, Archbishop of Canterbury. He died Anno 744. after persiding over this Church near 18 Years, so that his Succession was 21 Years after the Death of Osmund. This Seldred was buried in his Monastery.

ORGAR.

Orgar was next Prior of this Church, in whose Time flourished Offa, the great King of Mercia, who among other Acts of Munificence, was a remarkable Benefactor to Monasteries; but whether his Bounty to this was during Orgar's Time is doubtful. He died A.D. 765, after almost 22 Years governing this Monastery, and was buried in it.

BRITHSTAN.

765.

Brithstanus succeeded him, and governed this Church for the Space of 20 Years in the Time of Offa aforesaid, and dying in the Year 785, was buried in this Monastery.

ORTH BRIGHT II. Abbot.

785.

AFTER the Death of Brithstan, succeeded Orbrith, or Ordbright, and in the antient Records of Chichester, Alubrith, in whose Time Offa took particular Care of this Church, being the only Prince since Sebert the Founder, who had once regarded it near 200 Years. By Acquisitions of Wealth from this Prince, she began to make a considerable Figure. This Prince likewise built Cells for the Monks, and as some say, deposited the Regalia here, and founded a Free-School; which was no more than the Papal Injunctions required, that every conventual Church should have a School adjoining. Thus enriched and edified, her Prior re-assumed, or perhaps first took the Name of Abbot; for the former Orthbright, seems to be crowded in for Sake of antient Title; this Orthbright is mentioned in a Charter of Edward the Confessor, as holding Lands here of old Time, before the Danish Inroads. How long he presided as Abbot here is uncertain, but he was removed to the Bishoprick of Sealsey in Devonshire, being the fifth Bishop of that See, in which he died (says the M. S. of this Church) A.D. 794, in the last 794.

last Year of Offa's Reign; but if we may credit the Catalogues of Bishops in that See, Osa, or Bosa was Bishop in 790, and Alubriht his Predecessor between Sigga and him, viz. between 783 and 790, without any Time fix'd for his sitting in that See.

A L F W I U S.

794. Alfwins called by some, but falsely Alfwinus, succeeded Orbright, but then it must be at some Distance; and is said to have govern'd this Church with great Honour for 24 Years: He is particularly mentioned in the old Martyrology. Being removed from this Abbey, he was consecrated Bishop of Fountain, where he died on the 10th Kal. Feb. 820.

A L F W I U S II.

796. To him succeeded another of the same Name, who is mentioned in a Charter of King Edgar's; he lived in the Time of Egbert the great King of the East Saxons, in the Times of Theologild and Coelnoth, Archbishops of Canterbury; and having been Abbot 17 Years, he died 5th Kal. April, A. D. 837, and was buried in this Monastery.

A L G A R.

846. Algar was next Abbot, in whose Time the Danes made their Inroads in the Reigns of Ethelulph, Ethelbald, and Ethelbert, at which Time St. Edmund the King fell a Sacrifice to their Fury, who having likewise driven Burthred out of his Dominions, over-run the Kingdom of Merca; and in the fourth Year of his being Abbot, they came to LONDON with five Ships, committing all Manner of Hostilities, and destroying the City, (as some say) or as others, that they pillaged it; tho' M. Westminster increases their Fleet to 350, but mentions nothing of their Attempt on LONDON, only that after the Defeat of Bertuff, they marched into Surrey. However it is very probable, that the Places adjoining to LONDON felt their Rage, and among them this Monastery; for Edward the Confessor mentions the Danes Incursions and Injuries to it, nor is there Room to doubt it, when Anno 872, viz. in the 26th Year of this Abbot, they came to LONDON and wintered there; and Huntington mentions Alfred's repairing LONDON, Anno 886, having being ruin'd and dispeopled by the Danes, and the Londoners had deserted it, 'till now by the Safety of Alfred's Conquests, they return'd to their Dwellings; all but such as had been led away Captives: So that no Doubt this Abbot, and the rest of his Convent, fled and were scatter'd abroad, except such as perished by their Fury, when their Church and Monastery felt the Effects of it; but being happily restored, he ended his Days in an advanced Age, after a dangerous and troublesome Government of 43 Years, on the 14th Kal. July, Anno Dom. 889, and was buried in this Monastery. It is to be observed, that between the Death of Alwyus, and the Time allotted for this Algar, was the Space of nine Years, by the Computation of this House; so that either the Danger apprehended from the Danes at Alwyus's Death, prevented another's accepting it, or some Mistake must be in the Computation; which first is most likely, because his Death is said to be in the 19th of Alfred, which was about the Time 89 or 90. This Algar recovered his Lands belonging to this Church, a short Time before his Death, after Alfred had expelled the Danes; for he is mentioned by King Edgar, in his Charter, as holding Lands here in quiet Possession.

E A D M E R U S.

Edmerus, or Eadmerus, succeeded him, in whose Time this Abbey flourished, under the Government of that wise and learned Prince Alfred, who enriched it with Lands, granting to this Eadmerus, and his Convent Lands at Winnington in Essex, and is said to enrich it by Gifts. Eadmerus governed this Church, as is said, 44 Years, and died 4 Kal. September, A. D. 922, which again disagrees, making it but 34 Years from the Death of Algar. He was buried in this Monastery.

A L F O R O D.

Alforodus was next Abbot, and lived in the Times of Edward the Elder, and Athelstan; in whose Time the Abbey was in Peace and Quiet: He governed it for the Space of 17 Years, and dying Anno 939, was buried in this Monastery. And here it is to be observed, that the Affairs of this Abbey, till his Time, are so dark, for two Reasons; the first, the Ignorance of the Times; the second, the Danish Disturbances; and 'tis, for this Reason too, that from Erkenwald till Dunstan, who began to rise in the Time of this Alfnodos, the Affairs of the See of LONDON are not once mentioned, save that Bede takes Notice of one Waldhere in his Time: So that for near 300 Years there is only a bare Succession of Names, without even the Times they lived in; much less then is it to be expected that this small Convent, a Part of, and then in Subjection to that See, should be more remarked for its Affairs.

A L F R I C.

Alfricus was, upon the Death of Alforodus, placed over this Convent, who not sitting long here, was removed upon this Occasion; the West Saxons having been long harrassed with Wars, the Churches had been long scattered and ungoverned; whereupon Plegmund, Archbishop of Canterbury, called a Council, in which a Division of Bishopricks was made, and one fixed at Credyton, now Kyrton in Devonshire, and Werstan placed over it Anno 905, who, says Hocker, settled at Tawton, and afterwards removed here, but wrongly, for he was killed the Year after his Consecration. After him succeeded Putta, then Eadulph, after Ethelgar, and then this Alfric; he succeeded in that See by Interest of Benedictines, who had lately been placed in this See at Exeter, in a Monastery founded by King Athelstane. But here seems some Doubt of his Succession as well as Name; for Alforodus, the before-mentioned Abbot, dying 939, this succeeded him, and sate (says my Author) but a few Years; these, by Computation, must be four Years, and the Name either mistaken in my MS. or in Godwin's Catalogue of those Bishops; for Ethelgar was Bishop ten Years, which was three Years after Alfric's Abbotskip; to which Ethelgar or Algar is said to succeed at Credyton; which Algar is undoubtedly the same with this Alfric or none; for Alfwold, Successor to Algar, died 972; so that Algar, i. e. Alfric, was elected Bishop after being three Years at Westminster, and sat ten Years, differing from my Author in three or four Years, both of Death and Government, who makes the latter 17 Years, and places the former Anno 956; whereas Godwin, and indeed Mat. Westminster, places Algar's Death Anno 952, and makes Ælfwold succeed him; but which is in the Mistake, my Author or Godwin is uncertain. This Prelate died Anno 972, and was buried in his Church at Credyton.

WLSINUS.

W L S I N U S.

980.

AFTER the Remove of Alfric or Alfwold to Kyrton, i. e. from the Year 942, this Church had no Head over it; and the Monks were scattered and dispersed abroad, and the Building and Place entirely deserted and neglected, occasioned, perhaps, by the Hatred Edwyn had conceived against the Monks, and placing Seculars in their Stead. At length, upon Edgar's gaining half his Kingdom, and the Death of Brithelm, Bishop of LONDON, Dunstan succeeded him, who instantly set about reforming this See, and influenced the King to do the same throughout his Dominion, which was by turning out the secular Clergy, and restoring his favourite Monks to their Convents. And this Abbey being in his Diocese, he began with that; and for the better Reception and Maintenance of them, he built twelve Cells, and gave Houses, and Gifts, influencing Edgar the King to do the same; which Gifts were at Paddington, Hendon, Hampstead, &c. The Monks thus translated, he nominated to them an Abbot, one U. Wlfinus, or, as Fleet calls him, Wlfinus, Ingulphus, Wltius, and Mat. Westminster, St. Wltius. He was born in the City of LONDON, much beloved by Dunstan the Bishop, was a Monk of this Convent, being shaved by the Hands of St. Dunstan himself, while he was Bishop of Worcester, says Fleet. The first Year of Dunstan's being made Bishop of LONDON, he received his Benediction, viz. Anno 958, or, as Diceto says, 662, two Years after Alfric or Algar's Death, in the See of Kyrton. Fleet says, at this Time he received the Government by Deputation, (ad hujus loci regimen deputatus) but it was some Time after, viz. in the Time of Ethelred, that he was made Abbot, (Abbas hujus loci ordinatus est); so that he was first shorn Monk by St. Dunstan, and governed as Prior only, till by Time and Acquaintance with a Monastick Life, he was qualified for a higher Station. And this appears plainly by an antient Charter of King Ethelred to this Monastery, in which he says, Hoc notum fore cupimus, quod beatæ memoriæ Dunstanus cuidam fideli & probato monacho Wlfo vocabulo, quam quasi filium pura dilectione amavit, illud monasterium ad regendum regulariter commisit, & nos postea Abbatem illum constituimus, i. e. "Be it known, that Dunstan of Blessed Memory committed the Care of that Monastery (i. e. Westminster) to a certain faithful and approved Monk named Wlfinus, whom he loved with a sincere Love, as though he were his Son." If so, the Doubt concerning Dunstan's naming an Abbot is over: But here is another Instance which contradicts Ethelred's constituting him Abbot; for Ingulphus produces a Charter, and likewise an Excommunication on Account of Nedekamstead, where this Monk signs by the Name of Wlfinus, and Wlfinus, Abbas Sancti Petri extra London: and this before Ethelred's Time, viz. 966, and in the Reign of Edgar: And Ralph de Diceto, Dean of St. Paul's, fixes Dunstan's Consecration to the See of LONDON, and Wlfinus's Benediction to the Abbey of Westminster, in the Year 962: So that among the various Accounts, the Matter is still doubtful. Fleet says, and so does the Charter itself, that after he had been a few Years Abbot, he was by the King made Bishop of Sherborn. And here again is a most surprising Contradiction, and a very intricate Knot to undo. Matthew Westminster makes Wlfinus succeed Alfred in the See of Sherborn, Anno 940, as does likewise Bishop Godwin; who, at the same Time, allows he was made Abbot of Westminster by Bishop Dunstan, then of LONDON; but by this Computation, Dunstan could be but 22 Years old, and consequently unfit for a Bishop; besides, in 940, Edmund the Elder was King, and Dunstan but a Youth in his Court 958. Eighteen Years after, Dunstan (according to some) was made Bishop of LONDON, or more likely, as Diceto says, in 962, which squares both with the History and Charter; and, indeed, Bishop Godwin seems quite out in his Succession of the Bishops of Sherborn, by following Matthew Westminster, or else all the Croyland Story seems to be forged; for the Successor of Alfred in that See, Alfwold is by them said to die 940; whereas Anno 966, he signs in Ingulphus a Charter for that Abbey; but the Charter, as well as Time, agreeing with the Charters and Time of Westminster, seems to reconcile all, (but the first of Wlfinus or Wlfinus, signing Abbot) and proves Matthew and Bishop Godwin mistaken beyond all Contradiction; the latter of which has forgot the Predecessor of Wlfinus in the See, i. e. Werstan, who signed (966) as Bishop of Sherborn, to the Croyland Charter: But waving any further Enquiry, the Time of his being Bishop here appears most evident, by the Constitutions of ordaining Monks in the Church of Sherborn, written by Wlfinus, Bishop thereof Anno 998, by King Ethelred's Order; which may be seen in the Cotton Library. To proceed then; this Wlfinus thus elected, after the Pattern of his Patron, having ejected the secular Clergy, and placed Monks in their Room, still governed both Monasteries, and kept so tender a Care over both, that his whole Time was spent in visiting them alternately; insomuch, says my Author, that both Monasteries seemed as one Flock under one Pastor. There was a close Friendship and Correspondence continued between this Prelate and all others of the Monastick Order, and particularly with Alfric, Abbot of St. Alban's, of which are remaining Proofs in a Letter of the former to the Abbot, subscribed Wlfinus, Bishop of Sherborn, which is now in the Cotton Library. He was remarkable for Sanctity of Life, as all are said to be of his Kind by the Monkish Writers; for defending them; and on his Death-bed, it is said, he cried out suddenly, I see the Heavens open, and Jesus Christ stand on the Right Hand of God; and instantly died, according to Bishop Godwin, 958, which was the Year he is said by Matt. Westminster to be made Abbot of this Church: So that Fleet, with much more Justice and Reason, as before proved, places his Death the 6th Id. January, Anno 1004, in the 26th Year of Ethelred's Reign; was buried in the Church at Sherborn; at whose Tomb was performed many Miracles, as is said. Here he rested 12 Years, at the End of which, he was elevated and enshrined with great Singing and Rejoicings in the Church of Sherborn: His Shrine was on the Right Side of the high Altar, where were put up daily Prayers. Malmsbury says, that in his Time they preserved his Staff and Vestments, signifying his Humility. See much of him and his Miracles in Tinmouth, Capgrave, &c.

VOL. II.

A L D S I U S.

UPON the Death of Wlfinus, Aldsius, an Englishman, succeeded by the general Choice of the Monks, in whose Time the Danes invaded and spoiled England, murdering Alphage, the Archbishop of Canterbury; and burning and plundering all the Monasteries in their Way. Kanute, or Cnute, likewise with a great Force besieged LONDON in the twelfth Year of his Time; when this Abbey, then too near a Neighbour to it, was miserably havock'd, but soon after relieved by King Edmund. This Aldsius purchased chased for 100 Mancuses of Gold two Houses of King Ethelred in Berwick; he died the Year after King Edmund, viz. Anno 1017, on the 4th Kal. of April, having been Abbot 14 Years.

WULNOTH.

AFTER the Death of Aldsius, which happened upon the Usurpation of Kanute or Cnute, the Dane, the Monks attempted not, at so dangerous a Juncture, to venture upon a fresh Choice, thinking it more adviseable to secure this new and foreign Monarch's Favour, by submitting the Election to him. Cnute, who was a wise and generous Prince, in Comparison to his Countrymen, selected to his Council many of the Clergy, and seemed, (together with his Marriage of Emma, Ethelred's Widow) much to fix his Security upon their Interest. Of these, says Westminster, the Benedictines were his Favourites. At which Time, in this Monastery was a Monk of great Wisdom and fine Elocution, called Wulnoth, to whom the King took an extraordinary Liking; this Man, therefore, the King recommended to the Convent, who unanimously elected him Abbot; and, pleased with the Man's Conversation, the King came frequently to visit him, and consulted him in all his Affairs, allowing him the utmost Freedom and Familiarity of Speech; for he was a Man of singular Sincerity. The King, upon his Account, presented this Church with many Reliques. In his Time Kanute died, and Harold his Son; the latter of which, as is before-mentioned, was buried in this Abbey, and the same Year dug up and thrown into the Thames, being first beheaded. This Abbot was in great Favour, not only with Cnute, but his two Successors; so that during the Danish Oppressions, he, by his Interest, preserved the Church and Monastery from any Fury that might endanger it, for which he was universally loved and esteemed. He lived to see King Edward, and in him the Saxons restored; of which Prince he gained Lands to this Abbey, in one of the Charters, for which he is called Fidelissimus Noster, &c. In his Time Ulfine the Monk is said to have his persuasive Vision of St. Peter, upon which King Edward undertook to rebuild the Church; but Wulnoth lived not to see its Splendor and Magnificence, for he died the Year the King was engaged in that Design, viz. the 19th of October, A. D. 1049, when he had sat Abbot 32 Years, whose Soul, says a Monk of this Convent, being endowed with such and so great Ornaments and Virtues, we presume to place among the College of Saints. He was buried in this Convent.

EDWYN.

UPON the Death of Wulnoth, the Monks, at the Request of Edward the Confessor, made Choice of Edwyn, an Englishman, and Brother of their Convent. He had been brought up there, and increased in Virtue and Learning as in Years, bore an extraordinary Character, and for his singular Piety was a Favourite of St. Edward, who frequently sent for him in his private Hours, and in his last, as say the before-quoted MSS. "And then he took him to Almighty God, and also he sent after the Abbot of Westminster, and toke him the Ringe in the Honour of God, and Seinte Marie, and of St. John the Evangeliste, and the Abbot underfonged the King with moche Reverence, and put hit among here Relikes at Westminstre, and there hit is unto this Time, and evermore shall be." In his Time the Church was rebuilt, solemnly consecrated, and plentifully enriched, at the Confirming Charter, of which he subscribes as Witness; and in his 17th Year, Edward the Confessor was buried in this Abbey, to whose Tomb this Edwyn went every Day out of Devotion to his Master's Memory. After Harold's short Reign, he lived to see the Norman Conquest and Slavery, but felt not the Rigour of the Conqueror, who paid his first Devotion after coming to LONDON, in this Church, and richly presented it with an Altar Cloth, &c. as aforementioned, among the Benefactions to this Abbey. This Edwyn exchanged Windsor with the Conqueror for Lands in Essex, which Matthew Paris alludes to, speaking of him, Multa ei (Regis) conferens donativa ejus coronatione apud West. and by such Actions stood perfectly well with the Conqueror, which occasions Matthew Paris to call him Curialis nimis & aulicus, novo regi familiaris, too much of a Courtier and Favourite to the new King. The same Author taxes him with making Use of that Power to withstand Justice, and bear out Oppression, and gives this Instance: "Some Time before the Norman Conquest, the Abbot of St. Alban's, at the earnest Request of the Abbot of Westminster, leased to him the Manner of Aldenham in Hertfordshire (a wobby Place and infested with Robbers) for 20 Years, upon Condition that he should secure the Road-Ways to Passengers, and make good what Losses they should sustain by Thieves; for which he was to pay as Rent 100 s. per Annum, and four Oxen; and, in Case of Neglect, to forfeit his Lease, or at the 20 Years End to resign it; but he, desirous to possess a Wood near Aldenham, which, for the Pleasantness of it, was called Brudette, quasi prudietti, moved Suits against the Abbot, claiming it as his own; and having tired him out, would not resign at the 20 Years End, and it continued long in the Hands of his Successors." This Edwyn signed to a Confirmation-Charter relating to the Abbey of Ramsay: He died the 2d Year of William the Conqueror's Reign, and of his Abbotship the 19th, on the 12th Day of June, 1068, and was buried in the Cloisters, where he rested till King Henry III. rebuilding this Monastery, removed his Body with three others, Athelgoda, Hugolin and Sulcardus, and buried them all together on the South Side, as you enter the old Chapter-House, and placed over them a Marble Tomb.

GALFRID.

UPON the Death of Edwyn succeeded Galfrid, or Geoffry, a Norman, who came with the Conqueror from Normandy, where he had been Abbot of St. Peter de Gyneges. Of this Man remains nothing but a bad Character, and Account of his ill Management; for which, after being corrected by William the Conqueror, and Lanfranc, the Archbishop of Canterbury, he still persisted in his irregular Courses, and therefore was deposed; whereupon, with great Shame and Dudgeon, he returned to Normandy to his former Monastery. When he died we know not; but he signed an Instrument relating to the Superiority of Canterbury over York, in the Year 1072.

VITALIS.

Galfrid thus deposed, King William put in another of his Creatures that attended him from Normandy, viz. Vitalis, who had been some Time Abbot of Berneges in Normandy, a Man of extraordinary Learning for that Age. The Annals of Waverly Abbey place his Nomination under the Year 1076, four Years after Galfrid's Deposition, but, perhaps, without any Rule for so doing. There is a Grant of William the Conqueror queror to the Abbot of the Lands in Worcestershire, such, as he can prove, Wulstan the Bishop, and the Abbot of Evesham, and Rambald the Chancellor, gave to the Church of Westminster; and now, speaking of Wulstan, brings to my Mind that famous Miracle wrought about this Time by St. Edward, upon Account of that Bishop, and his Digression will the better be, as happening the very Year Vitalis was chosen Abbot. This Wulstan, since for his Holiness canonized, was educated a Monk, and led so strict a Life, that in his early Years he was esteemed to be a holy Man; after being Abbot, and then Bishop of Glocester, he was removed to Worcester by Edward the Confessor, in which See he continued till after the Conquest, when a Synod was assembled, partly to punish the married Clergy, partly Symony, having an Eye upon Stygand, the Archbishop, and, in great Measure, to purge and sift the Ignorance of the English Clergy, which at this Time, indeed, was very great: But chiefly by ejecting Bishops and Abbots, to make room for preferring the new-come Normans; and among the rest was held one in this Church, Anno 1074, by Lanfrank the Archbishop; at which Synod Wulstan was summoned as a most illiterate and foolish Man, and unfit for the Station he held; a very Idiot, unacquainted with the French Language, and incapable either to instruct the Church, or Counsel the King; and therefore Lanfrank, by the King's Order, demanded his Pastoral Staff and Ring; but he, unmoved in Countenance, grasping his Staff, made answer: "I know, my Lord Archbishop, that I am entirely unfit for, and unworthy so high a Station, being undeserving of the Honour, and unequal to the Task; however, I think it unreasonable you should demand that Staff which I never received from you; yet in some Measure I submit to your Sentence, and will resign it; but think it just to make that Resignation to King Edward, who conferred it on me". This said, he went out of the Synod cross to the Church, to the Tomb lately erected over the Body of that Religious King, and standing before it said, "Thou knowest, O Holy King, how unwillingly I took this Office, and even by Force; for neither the Desire of the Prelates, the Petition of the Monks, nor the Voice of the Nobility prevailed, till your Commands obliged me; but see, a new King, new Laws; a new Bishop pronounces a new Sentence; thee they charge with a Fault for making me a Bishop, and me of Assurance for accepting it: Nevertheless to them I will not, but to thee I resign my Staff". This said, he raised his Arm, and laid the Staff upon the Tomb, which was of Stone, and leaving it, went arrayed as a Monk, and sat among them in the Chapter-House: In short, the Messenger who was sent for it, found it adhere to the Stone, and by no Means to be taken thence. The News brought, the King and Archbishop both went thither and found it true, nor could disengage it, till Wulstan being sent for, it readily submitted to his Touch. This remarkable Story had early Grounds, and no small Authority, if we may believe the Annals of Burton-Abbey; for King John urges it to Pandulphus, the Pope's Legate, as a Proof of the Right of the English Kings to nominate Bishops. The Story, thus related by Paris, is not mentioned by Florent. Worcester; and indeed that of his keeping his Bishoprick is very differently related; but enough of it, and to return: In the Time of this Abbot, Sulcardus, the famous Historian, flourished, and wrote his Book of the Foundation and Charters of this Church, which Book is dedicated to this Abbot as follows: "Venerabili viro & semper Dei servo, "Domino Abbati Vitali Monachorum minimus frater Sulcardus salutem, cum devoto famulata & obsequio, &c." Vitalis presided over this Abbey the Space of nine Years, and dying on the 19th Day of June, A. D. 1082, was buried in the South Cloister of the Church, where his Tomb was of white Marble, and plain, almost even with the Pavement; whereon, says Keep, have been Brass Plates, which are torn away, and so is the Tomb; on which Tomb, on his Anniversary was placed a rich Carpet worked with Gold, large Wax-Candles of two Pounds each, &c. In his Time, as is before-mentioned, lived the famous Chronographer Sulcardus, or more properly Sulgardus, a Man of excellent Character, and much esteemed by Edwyn the Abbot, Edward the Confessor, and Vitalis; he wrote a general Chronology, now lost, Chartularies of this Abbey, Sermons, Epistles, and other Tracts, in the Life of Edmyn before-mentioned.

GILBERT.

Gilbert or Gislebert, surnamed Crispinus or Crispin, was chosen Abbot upon the Death of Vitalis. This Gilbert had been formerly Monk of Beck-Harlewyn in Normandy, and was at the Mediation of William the Conqueror, the Archbishop Lanfrank, and several Norman Nobility, chosen by the Monks of this Convent. He was a Man of great Descent, being from one of the noblest and antientest Families in Normandy; to which Nobility, besides a considerable Acquisition of Learning, he had the added Character of a Person of excellent and great Piety; the Means of King William's Kindness for him, were not only in regard to his Ancestors, having been of nearest Place in Councils of the Dukes of Normandy; but William, the Father of this Gilbert, was a singular Favourite of his, of whom Walsingham makes particular Mention. Our Abbot was a Man of excellent Learning, a sound Theologist, and ready Disputant, having for his Instructor Anselm, the Archbishop of Canterbury. He travelled while a Monk here, and improved himself by that Means, visiting the Universities of France, seeing Italy, Rome and Germany; in which Country, at the City of Mentz, he met with a Jew, excellently versed in the old Law and Hebrew Language, with whom he had a long Disputation, which he afterwards reduced into Method, and published with this Title, Of the Faith of the Church against the Jews, dedicated to Archbishop Anselm; a Copy of which is in the Cotton lib. Titus D. XVI. 2. at which Time he was not Abbot, being styled in his Book, Procurator Cenobij. He was soon after elected Abbot, and having a great Reverence for the Memory of Edward the Confessor, he removed his Body into a more eminent Place; the Manner of which, with the Circumstances wherein he found the Body, being very curious, take from Alured Rival, as follows: "There being (says he) a Dispute held about this Time in the Convent, concerning the Incorruptibility of this Virgin King, the Abbot Gilbert Crispin appointed a Day wherein to expose those sacred Remains, and called together several honest and religious Persons; among whom was Gundulphus, Bishop of Rochester; and in the 36th Year after his Interment, they applied themselves to this Tomb, and opening the Sepulcher or Tomb-stone, in which his Coffin was closed, there issued out such Aromatick Odours as filled the Church with their Fragrance. In the first Place, the burial Cloths were clean and substantial; next, upholding his Vestments, they found his under Habit and Ornaments in the same State. They stretched out his Arms, bent his Fingers,

" and

“ and found the whole Body found and flexible ;
 “ they next examined the Flesh, which was “ firm and pure as Chryſtal, whiter than Snow ;
 “ but when, after a long Surprize, none durſt ven“ ture to touch his Face, the Biſhop Gundulphus “ laid his Hand upon the Forehead-Cloth, and “ ſtoking it over his Face, drew it over his Beard, “ which was as white as Froſt ; ſurprized at this,
 “ he attempted to draw a Hair from the Beard,
 “ but that adhered ſtrictly ; for which, being “ gently reprov'd by the Abbot, he owned the “ Fault, which Exceſs of Love occaſioned : Af“ ter this they preſerved the Grave-Dreſſes, and “ clothing him a-new, re-interred him.

IN the Time of this Abbot, William the Conqueror held a Council in this Monastery ; at which Council, Gilbert being preſent, he, with his Brothers, petitioned the King for a Charter of Liberties, which the King, at the further In-terceſſion of the Archbiſhop of Lanfrank, and for the Love he bore this Gilbert, (as the Words of the Charter are) granted. In which Prince's Time Mr. Dart ſays he finds him at Windſor ſigning as Witneſs to a Charter for Croyland. And in Anno 1118, he was ſent to Theobald, Earl of Blois, together with Geoffry, Abbot of Croyland.
 He likewiſe ſays, that he finds this Abbot viſiting the Hoſpital of St. James's, where is now the Palace, which of old Time was ſubject to this Convent. Which Viſitation was the Wednesday after St. John the Baptiſt, Anno 1100. This Giſlebert, after a long Life of Piety and good Deeds, died the 6th Day of December, Anno Dom. 1114, having governed this Church thirty-two Years. He was, ſays Fleet, of ſo great Sanctity and Humility, that no Prelate of that Age equalled him. His Anniverſary was celebrated the 7th Day of December. His Grave was in the South Walk of the Cloiſter, at the Feet of Abbot Vitalis aforeſaid, under a Black Marble Stone, the middlemoſt of the three in the Cloi-ſters, with his Image upon it, as if in a Stone Coffin, with his Paſtoral Staff, but no Mitre, that being acquired afterwards. Round which Tomb was a Latin Inſcription, not legible in Fleet's Time, much leſs now. He wrote Homilies on the Canticles, on Iſaiah, Jeremiah, on St. Je- rome's Prologues to the Bible, of the Fall of the Devil, of the State of the Church, Epistles to Anſelm, a Treatiſe againſt the Sins of Thought, Word and Deed. Theſe are what have been aſcribed to him ; beſides which, not mentioned, there are in Being, in the Cotton Library, ſome Epistles in MSS. of this Abbot's, by Way of Dialogue, to prove the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, from the Father and Son. His Anniverſary was 7th Id. December. In his Time (1092) flouriſhed Warnerus, or Warner, Monk of this Abbey, a Man of Piety, Learning and Eloquence ; his Works were theſe, Collections of the Times, Homilies (which Bosſon of Bury intitles moſt learned) and Flowers of the Holy Fathers, of which the latter is ſtill extant, and was printed at Baſil 1494.

HERBERT.

1114.

UPON the Death of Giſlebert, the Monks choſe
Herbert, a Norman, ſome Time Almoner of this Abbey, to ſucceed him ; which Election Simeon places 1121. This Herbert, Henry the Firſt names in his Charter for ſecuring the Abbey-Lands in LONDON. He confirmed the Nunnery of Kilburn, then lately erected, which had been an Hermitage of one Godwin, and placed therein three Nuns of Queen Maud's Bed-chamber, reſerving the Power of Jurisdiction and Viſitation. He died September 3, Anno 1140, the 5th of King Stephen, when he had governed the Church twenty-fix Years. He was buried in the South Walk of the Cloiſters, under the plain Pavement, before the ſecond Seat, (Scamnum) very likely the Reſting-seat round the Cloiſter, beyond the Belfrey-Door, i. e. in the old Cloiſter, before King Henry III. rebuilt it, towards the Door of the Reſectory, on the Eaſt Side of the Cloyſter, with this Epitaph :

Abbatis noſtri corpus jacet hic Hereberti
 Vivat poſt obitum ſpiritus ante Deum.

G E R V A I S E.

UPON Herbert's Death, King Stephen moved the Convent to make Choice of one Gervaiſe de Bloys, a Norman, and Baſtard Son of the King, being begotten on the Body of a Gentlewoman in Normandy, named Dameta : He is likewiſe called Gerum, by Matthew Paris. This Man, out of Devotion to St. Edward, endeavoured his Canonization, and ſent one Osbert de Clare, a learned Monk of this Convent, to Rome, to ſolicit it, but in vain. In his Time the Archbiſhop of Canterbury ſettled a Diſpute between him and one William of Winchendune, in Relation to ordaining Parſons to the Church of Win- chendune. This Abbot influenced his Father to do ſeveral good Deeds for his Abbey ; but then on the other hand, he himſelf miſerably impoveriſhed it, making away the Lands to his Mother and Relations : So that (ſays Paris) he left nothing for his Succeſſor. For his unjuſt Proceedings, the Monks complained to the Pope, who iſſued out a Bull for his regulating both his Life and Government : By which Writing it ſhould ſeem, that he had confiscated ſome of the Jewels of the Church, and had a Deſign to ſerve the Regalia in the ſame Manner. The ill Character he bore occaſioned the Pope to reſuſe his Deſire of Canonizing St. Edward, or elſe he was himſelf ſo greedy of Money, as to keep the prevailing Argument back. It plainly appears that he was an unjuſt, inſolent, arbitrary Man, preſuming too much upon his Birth, and miſerably oppreſſing the Monks ; keeping the Tithes due to the Abbey, and expelling ſeveral of the Convent ; exerciſing himſelf after a military Manner, not reſiding at his Abbey, but acting as a Soldier or fine Gentleman, herding among Laymen, and ſlighting his own Order. Fleet, ſpeaking of him, ſays, He acted very ill-becoming his Station.
 And Matthew Paris ſays, he was Clarior genere
quam moribus, and charges him with miſapplying his Church's Revenues, for which Reaſon (quia res loci illius juveniliter diſſipavit) he was depoſed, and dying Auguſt, Anno Dom. 1160, in the 6th Year of the Reign of King Henry II. was buried in the South Walk of the Cloiſter, under a little Black Marble Stone, (not under that great modern one, which Mr. Keep has ſuppoſed it to be) and at the Feet of Abbot de Humez ; it was a plain Stone, leſs at Feet than Head, and lay on the Left Side Giſlebert's. The Epitaph on it was thus :

De Regum genere Pater hic Gervafius ecce
 Monſtrat deſunctus, mors rapit omne genus.

THIS Gervaiſe was an Arbitrator, with others, in a Diſpute between the Biſhop of Rocheſter, and the Monks there, concerning the Manors of Lam- beth and Kendenham, which were adjudged to the Monks. In his Time flouriſhed Ralph, Alms-giver, and Monk of this Church. He wrote and left behind him Homilies on the Goſpel, Homilies on the Epistles, the End of the Sinner. He died the ſame Year with Gervaiſe.

Laurentius succeeded him, a Norman by Birth, and Doctor in Divinity, first Monk, and Prior of Durham (as some say) and afterwards Monk of St. Alban's, and lastly he was received here, (Monachatum in Capello Westm.) The Occasion of his leaving Durham, was a Difference about electing Hugh Pufar for their Bishop; upon which Election, Henry Murdac, Bishop of York, excommunicated the Convent concerned in the Election; and still persisting in an absolute Refusal to consecrate their Elect Hugh, they appealed to Rome with his Electors; among which was this Laurence, then Prior; but he, not caring for the Fatigue of such a Journey, dropped them when they came to St. Alban's, and betook himself to that Abbey; whence he was removed to Westminster, and preferred to be Abbot, which was three or four Years after his Excommunication: Thus the Continuer of Simeon. At the Time when Laurence took the Government of this Church, he found it miserably impoverished by his Predecessor Gervaise, who stripped not only the Abbot's House, but even made away with the Church Vestments: Upon which Laurence makes Application to Robert, the Abbot of St. Alban's, who lent him to the Value of 200 Marks, viz. in Horses, Furniture, Vestments, &c. upon which Occasion he is severely taxed with Ingratitude and Injustice, as wrongfully detaining Lands from that Abbey, and having Interest with the King, vexing the Convent by continual Suits. Those Lands were near the River Marford, and at Landrudge. The Abbot Laurence likewise engaged the King on his Side, alledging, that as Gerum, being of the Blood Royal, had sold his Lands, so the King ought, by his Favour and Support, to endeavour to make up those Losses to him. Another Difference was, concerning a Dispute for Aldenham, between one Robert Tailboys this Abbot, and the Abbot and Convent of St. Alban's; of which, see the Particulars in Matthew Paris, who warmly censures him.

He was a Favourite of Maud the Empress, and of King Henry II. by which Means he procured the Reparation of the Monastery, and new Leaded the Offices lately burnt and ruinous; and recovered the Possessions in Glocestershire and Worcestershire, taken from the Monastery in the Commotions between the Empress and King Stephen. To this Abbot, Alured, Abbot of Rivaux, dedicated his History of the Life of Edward the Confessor, which Dedication begins in this Manner: Dilecto ac diligendo & intimis visceribus amplectendo venerabili patri & domino dempno Laurentio Westmonasteriensis Abbati, frater Alridus fratrum qui sunt in Rivalle inutilis servus, debitam in Christo dilectionem. This Abbot was delegated, with three Bishops, to meet at the Castle of Winchester, to hear and settle a Dispute between the Bishop of Lincoln, and the Convent of St. Alban's, the former requiring solemn Procession and Visitation, which the others denied; at which Meeting, coming to no Resolution, a Synod was summoned by the King, to be held in the Chapel of St. Catharine in this Abbey, where Laurence opened the Affair in Latin, and vindicated the Privileges of the Abbey, the Success of which see in Matthew Paris's History of the Abbots of St. Alban's.

It was in this Abbot's Time, and upon his Application, that Edward the Confessor was enshrined; at which Ceremony the Abbot assisted, making Copes of his Burial-Clothes, and preserving the miraculous Ring, as mentioned in the Donations. He likewise, upon Application to Pope Alexander III. obtained for himself and his Successors, the Use of the Mitre, Ring and Gloves, but lived not to wear them. In the Time of Ralph, Abbot of St. Alban's, Mr. Dart says, he finds him giving Refuge to one Algumus, Prior of that Convent, being persecuted by that Abbot, under his Protection, who became a Monk here; where he lived comfortably some Time; for Laurence and he had been for many Years intimate at St. Alban's, and at length was preferred to be Prior of this Convent of Westminster. Not long after he was in hearing a Controversy between the Monks of St. Alban's; and the Bishop of Lincoln; and notwithstanding the Difference between that Convent and the Abbot with this Laurence, yet, upon some Exigencies, he is found espousing the Cause of that Abbey, and continuing his Visit and Familiarity there; for, on Sunday Night, in October 1166, he anointed at St. Alban's, the Abbot Robert, then dying of a Pleurisy; and at his Burial, with Gilbert Foliot, Bishop of LONDON. As to his Character, (setting aside what we have related) he was esteemed a Man of Piety, Generous, and much advantaged his Monastery: He is likewise said to have been of good Learning; but at present there remain not any Writings of his as a Proof; but 'tis highly probable, that he was eminent that Way, as appears by King Henry II's requesting him to write the Life of Edward the Confessor; which (says Matthew Paris) he accordingly performed, collecting it from ancient Tracts; and having written it in an elegant Style; presented it to the King; yet Knighton says, he intended it only. Fleet mentions Sermons and Homilies, which he published for the Saints-Days, and other Festivals, which were in Being in his Time, as appears by quoting one on St. Peter ad vincula, which begins thus: Misit Herodes rex manus ut affligeret quosdam ecclesia. Herodes hereditarium crudelitatis est nomen, solo auditu horrorem importat: And another on the Feasts of St. Mary Magdalen, beginning thus: Intravit Maria in domus Symonis, ibique se prostravit ad pedes Domini. De Maria Magdalena ipsa subveniente locutor verborum beati Gregorii immemor esse nequeo, &c. At length, having governed this Church for the Space of sixteen Years, he resigned it and his Life together, the 11th Day of Apr. 1176, in the twelfth Year of the Reign of King Henry II. and was buried in the South Walk of the Cloister. In his Time lived Osbert de Clare, Prior of this Church, who procured the Canonization of St. Edward; a Man remarkable for his Learning, of which his Epistle to Henry Bishop of Winchester, on that Occasion, and a Collection of others, some of which to Adelida, Abbess of Barking, of Chastity, now in the Cotton Library, are Proofs.

W A L T E R.

UPON the Death of Laurence, the Convent proceeded to Election, and made Choice of Walter, then Prior of Winchester, and had been for the Space of five Years. Of which new Abbot, our Historians take not much Notice, only that he, by Application to Pope Alexander III. procured to himself and Successors, the Use of a Dalmatick Pall and Sandals. Upon his Preference to this Place, he received the Mitre and Gloves from the Bishop of LONDON, his Predecessor Laurence had procured; and went Mitred into the Assembly of the Bishops; but not long after there grew Dudgeon between the Pope's Legate and this Walter, (the former not being received in suitable Manner to his Character) whereupon he suspended him from the Use of the Mitre, and the Prior William Postard, from entering into the Choir. He is said to have written the Lives of William and Henry, Bishops of of Lincoln, which Book Kudburn quotes in his Works. After having governed this Church for the Space of fourteen Years, he died on the 27th Day of September, being the Day of St. Cosmus and Damian, Anno 1191, according to Fleet; but more justly in the Year 1190, as Westm. and Paris say, and in the second Year of King Richard I. and was buried in the South Walk of the Cloister, under a plain Stone, near the first Bench, from the Steeple of which, as well as his Tomb-stone, there remains nothing. The Inscription on it was as follows:

Hic est qui passus Dicitur Walterus Abbas,
Ex aliis fueras nec alienus eras.

For whose Anniversary was assigned the Manor of Paddington, to find Torches at his Tomb, &c.

WILLIAM POSTARD,

By some called Poffard, Prior of this Convent, succeeded; but his Election was not till some Months after, though a late Writer computes it in November 1191; whereas his Election was on Wednesday the 23d of June, being the Vigil of St. John the Baptist; at which Election was present the King's Justices and Bishop of LONDON, who instantly gave him the Benediction before the High Altar in the Cathedral of St. Paul's, and the Convent received him in Procession, having a splendid Entertainment in the Refectory; at which was present the Bishop of LONDON, and others. He governed this Abbey ten Years, in the first of which Time he disburthened it of a Debt of 1500 Marks of Silver, for which the Convent were bound; and having done other good Offices to it, died on the 5th of May, Anno 1201, or according to Mat. Westm. 1200, in the second Year of the Reign of King John, and was buried in the South Walk of the old Cloister, before the Belfry, on whose Tomb was this Inscription:

Postarum Willielmus Jacet in tellure sepultus, Hic Pater & Pastor qui fuit ante Prior.

His Anniversary was observed the 2d Id. of May.

PAPILLON,

CALLED likewise by Matthew Westm. and Fleet, Ralph de Arundel, was born (says Diceto) in the City of LONDON; elected Abbot, the King and Archbishop present, on the 11th Kal. of September following his Predecessor's Death; of whose Character and Actions, Historians say little, but that he had Quarrels with the Court, and carried it with a high Hand over his Convent, which at length proved his Downfall; for (upon Application of the Court, it is likely) the Pope's Legate, Nicholas Bishop of Tusculum, came to the Convent, on the Thursday after Michaelmas 1213, and continued there eighteen Days, enquiring of, and consulting with the Convent, concerning their Grievances, and the Manner to redress them; and thence going to Evesham, he deposed the Abbot Norreys, who had governed there twenty-three Years; and the following Year he came again, and staid twenty-three Days, and then, by his Legantine Power, deposed this Papillon; in Order to execute which Power, Nicholas, Abbot of Waltham, was sent; who, on the Morrow after St. Vincent's Day, broke his Seal in the Chapter-House: In this, Fleet and Mat. Westm. differ; the first making the Deposition at the Legate's first Visit, viz. in 1213, the latter at his second, in 1214. His Seal thus broken, he was fourteen Days after degraded; but the Legate and Abbot of Waltham allowed him a Support, assigning to him for that Purpose, the Manors of Toddington and Sunbury; which Assignment was afterwards confirmed by the succeeding Abbot, reserving to the Convent the Church of Sunbury. Where this Papillon ended his Days, or how long he survived this, is uncertain, but he died the 14th of February, and was buried in the Nave of this Church, and it is thought without either Tomb or Inscription. This was the first Abbot who was buried in the Body of the Church.

HUMET.

Papillon deposed, on the Day after the Invent. of Holy Cross, was chosen in his Place, William de Humet, or de Humez, Prior of Fontain and Monk of Cadomen; who on the 4th Kal. of June, the Day of St. Urban, being Trinity Sunday following, received Benediction from the Hands of William de St. Mary, Bishop of LONDON; in the third Year of whose Time, King Henry III. began the new Chapel of St. Mary in this Church; and John Abbot of Fontain, was consecrated in it Bishop of Ely, and the year following Eustace de Fauconbridge, then Treasurer of the Exchequer, Bishop of LONDON; and the same Year Pandulphus, the turbulent Legate of Rome, laid by his Legantine Power in this Church, at the Command of Pope Honorius, Anno 1219. This Abbot Humet was appointed Arbitrator, together with the Abbot of Waltham, and Prior of the Holy Trinity, near LONDON, to settle a Dispute between the Bishop of LONDON, and the Abbot and Convent of St. Alban's, concerning the Jurisdiction of some Cells belonging to that Monastery, and ordaining the Vicar of Luiton; which Matter was the same Time compromised in the Chapter-House of this Abbey, Anno 1222. Fauconbridge, being possessed of the See of LONDON, began to have an Eye upon the Abbey of Westminster, intending to bring it into Subjection, and to that Purpose sends this Abbot and the Convent, requiring of them Procession, Procuration, Visitation, and all other Jurisdiction whatever; to which the Abbot replied, "That being by former Bulls, Royal (and other) Charters of his Predecessors exempted, they could shew no Submission to his Power; upon which, Fauconbridge appeals to the Pope, who referred the Matter to Stephen, Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of Winchester and Salisbury, Thomas, Prior of Merton, and Richard, Prior of Dunstable, who declared Westminster free from all Manner of Jurisdiction of the Bishop of LONDON; and ordained, that the Church of Stanes, with its Appurtenances, should belong to Westminster, and the Church and Manor of Sunbury to the Church of St. Paul". This Agreement made, Mat. Paris, (by Mistake) makes Anno 1223. This Abbot died on the 12th Kal. May 1222, in the 6th Year of King Henry III. after presiding here eight Years; and was buried in the South Walk of the Cloister, at the Head of Gervaise de Blois, under a Marble Tomb with his Image on it in Pontificals. The Tomb is still visible; it is the Westermost of the three, and has been hitherto said to be that of Vatalis; round it in Saxon Characters was this Inscription:

Ortus ab Humeto Will. hic venerando,
Prefuit iste loco nunc tumulatus humo.

BER.

1214.

BERKYNGE.

THE Successor to Humex was Richard de Berkynge, Prior of this Church, who the same Year, viz. on the 14th of the Kal. of October, received Benediction in this Church, from Peter, Bishop of Winchester: Soon after his Election happened a very tragical Affair, which Mat. Paris relates thus: "On St. James's Day the Citizens of "LONDON and Suburbians kept Sports of "Manhood, as Wrestling, &c. near Queen Matilda's Hospital, at which Place the Citizens "gained the better; whereupon, the Bayliff of "Westminster appointed another Trial of Skill "to be on the Feast of St. Peter ad Vincula, at "Westminster; Mat. West. at the Hospital of St. James's, whither the Citizens repaired. After "playing some Time, the Bailiff and others, "being privately armed, fell to fighting, and "wounded several of the Citizens; who, running into the City, rang the common Bell, assembling the Citizens, who all resolved to revenge the Fact; but Serle, the Mayor of "LONDON, being a discreet and prudent "Man, advised them to apply themselves to the Abbot, and if he would punish the Offenders, and procure the City Satisfaction, it would be sufficient. But one Constantine Fitz-Arnulf, being a hot fiery Man, advised them "to hear no Proposals, but instantly to revenge themselves by pulling down the Abbot's and "Bayliff's Houses. Upon which Word given, they all rush'd out of the City with a horrid Up-roar, pulling down many Houses, and crying "Constantine, the Joy of the Mountain! the Joy of the Mountain! God assist us and our Lord Lodowick! Berkynge, upon this, a few Days after, goes into the City, to Philip Dawbeney, one of the King's Council, to make Complaint of these Injuries; of which the Citizens having Intelligence, surrounded the House, took away twelve of the Abbot's Horses, and beat his Men unmercifully; Dawbeney endeavoured, but to no Purpose, to pacify them; while he was intent upon which, the Abbot got out at a Back-Door of a House, and made his Way to the Thames; where, taking Boat, he with much Difficulty escaped their Hands, who followed, and threw Stones at him in great Abundance. Hubert de Burgh, Chief Justice, hearing this, came to the Tower, and sent for the Mayor, &c. enquired into the Authors of this Tumult; upon which Constantine, and two others, were hanged, the first offering 15000 Marks for his Life, but to no Purpose: And then the Justice entering the City, after a barbarous Manner, caused the Feet or Hands of the Offenders to be cut off." Anno 1233, this Berkynge and his Convent withstood the Visitation of the Pope, when he sent to make Enquiry into the Abbies of the Benedictines, as did the Abbot of Bury and others. In his Time flourished one Robert de Gras, a Monk of this Convent, chosen Prior of Herley, a Cell to Westminster, in the County of Bucks.; afterwards Abbot of Evesham, and nominated to be Bishop of Litchfield and Coventry, but died in Gascony at Ryola, before Consecration; a discreet and wise Man, at whose Death (says West) the King grieved exceedingly. His Anniversary was observed in this Church, Anno 1242. There happened a Dispute between this Abbot Berkynge and Robert Bishop of Lincoln, a turbulent Man, concerning the Jurisdiction of the Church of Herwel; the Bishop turning out the Monk, who was Rector by Force, and denied the Abbot's Right of presenting; but the Abbot strenuously opposed him, till at length the King interposed in this Difference so, that it was agreed that the Church should belong to the Abbot, and the Vicarage to the Bishop. About the Year 1245, when the Pope called a general Council, he, upon the King's Intercession, excused this Berkynge from coming, for that he, with the Bishop of Carlisle, were the King's Deputies or Regents of England, when he went abroad. Which Letters of Excuse see in Mat. Paris, under that Year. Berkynge was a great Counsellor and Favourite to this King Henry III. and, 'tis not unlikely, put him upon his Benefactions to this Church, procuring from the King their Charter of Liberties: He is likewise a Witness to Magna Charta; and was a considerable Man in the State, being not only Privy-Counsellor to the King, but Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and Lord Treasurer of England. Take his Character from Matthew Paris, who says he was, Vir prudens, literatus, & religiosus, i. e. a discreet, learned, and good Man; and Matthew Westm. records him as of pious Memory, and calls him Vir prudens & competenter literatus & multis moribus Decoratus, i. e. a wise and learned Man, and embellished with excellent Qualifications. He much advanced this Church, and increased the Revenue to the additional Income of 300 Marks, enriching it with Presents, and procured many Advantages to it. At length having governed it the Space of 24 Years, he gave Way to Fate on the 23d of November, 1246, in the 13th Year of the Reign of King Henry III. and was buried in the Virgin Mary's Chapel, then newly erected, before the middle Altar, in a Tomb of Marble very neatly embellished; upon the Foot of which were continually burning two Wax-Tapers of one Pound and half each, for which he assigned 24 s. of Land called Egrave. His Tomb, when William de Colchester was Abbot, was taken down, perhaps being in the Way, and a flat Stone of Marble even with the Pavement laid in its Place, by Friar Comb, the Sacrist, which continuing till King Henry VII. pulled down that Chapel, it was removed and placed in the Area at the Foot of the Steps ascending to King Henry VII's Chapel, where it still continues, being a large and grey Stone, formerly plated with Brass, having a Ledge of Brass round it: The Tomb still shews the Form of a miter'd Abbot, but the Brass is stolen away, as also that round the Ledge.

In his Time lived Roger Black, Monk of this Convent, and D. D. of Oxford; he wrote several Sermons; and died Anno 1241.

CROCKESLEY.

UPON Berkynge's Death, King Henry III. having a great Respect for Richard de Crockesley, or Crofsley, Archdeacon of Westminster, recommended him to the Monks; who, fearful to disoblige the King, as being his Favourite, and lest he should desist from building their Church, elected him on the Day of St. Edmund the Archbishop, to which the King assented the 25th of March following. And for that his Election was on this Day, he built, in Honour of the said St. Edmund, a Chapel so called, at the North Porch of the Church, which has been since pulled down; and the King, 'pleased at his Favourite's Promotion, procured for him the Liberty that when he celebrated Mass in his Pontificals, he should, at singing Agnus Dei, give solemn Benediction to the People. The Year after his Election, the King sent him Ambassador with J. Mansel, who was then Prior of Beverley, to Almaine, to the Duke of Brabant, to treat of a Marriage between Edward the Prince, and the Duke's Daughter; but, for some secret Reasons, they returned back, having spent their Money and Labour to no Purpose. In 1235 he went to the the Lateran Council with William, Abbot of St. Alban's, Anno 1247. The King again sent this Crossley, together with Mansel, upon a second Embassy to the Duke of Brabant, concerning the aforesaid Marriage, but to no Effect.

Anno 1249, was a great Discord between this Abbot and his Convent, to the Scandal and Disgrace of all Black Monks, which, says Paris, infected the whole Kingdom, and Religion in general; the Reason of which was by him set down among others in lib. additament. But the Place being now lost, we must remain in the Dark. However, it was made up at the King's interposing the following Year, at the Feast of St. Edward. In the same Year, upon a Difference between the Bishop of Lincoln and the Sheriff of Rutland, on Account of a beneficed Clerk excommunicated, the King procured Papal Letters to restrain the Power of the Clergy, which Letters were directed to Crossley, and dated the 7th Id. of March. The same Year he entertained the Friars Predicants, then lately arrived in England. And about this Time Crossley had influenced the King to grant him and his Convent several Liberties which clashed with the Charters of LONDON; at which the Mayor and Commonalty waited to intercede with the King, but were sternly repulsed. After this, they went to Earl Richard, and the Earl of Leicester, with their Complaint, who sharply rebuked the King, and cursed and abused the Abbot in such a Manner as was a Shame, says Paris, to his Dignity, and a Scandal to repeat, and so the Abbot's Measures were frustrated. Another Instance of this Abbot's Influence over the King, was his procuring Charters for the Manor of Aldenham; which, says Paris, this Monastery had wrongfully detained from the Church of St. Alban's.

THE latter End of the same Year, viz. in Lent, Crossley went privately over Sea at the King's Commands; the King intending shortly to follow, to visit St. Edmund's Shrine at Pontiniae; and by that Means compensate in some Measure for his leaning to the Legate Otho, and vexing that good Archbishop out of his Kingdom and Life; but Earl Richard opposing it, Crossley, with a View of Pride, resolved not intirely to lose his Labour, and therefore attempts to be the Pope's Chaplain; of which the King hearing, he fell into great Wrath, and from that Time Crossley's Interest with him declined daily.

Crossley, thus abroad, continued a considerable Time at the Court of Rome, at great Expence, and by his Elocution and Address gained a great Influence over the Pope, and was made one of his Chaplains; at which Time he endeavoured to disannul the Grant of Berkynge, that the Abbot and Convent should have their Goods separately; which coming to the Ears of the Monks, they sent several of them to the King, who, with many Tears, laid their Usage before him. To whom the King, with an Oath answered, By G — he shall never have his Ends; and much enraged, pausing a little, he spake with the utmost Agony, in Allusion to the Text of Scripture, Pœnitent me fecisse hominem.

Crossley soon after comes over to England, being much involved with Debts he had contracted in his Stay there, which had been so long, and his Interest so great, that every one believed he would continue there altogether. However, he landed in England, and thence, with a large Retinue of armed Men, came to his Convent, thinking by Force to bring them to a Compliance with his Measures. Afterwards he went to Windsor, the Court being at that Time there, where he sung Mass on his Pontificals before the King; after Service he went to pay his Duty, and produced many Letters of Great Men abroad, to desire him, that he might have the sole and absolute Government of his Monastery, and re-unite the Estates thereof into one Right and Interest; at which the King, who had drank deep Aversion to him, returning a Side-Look, full of Scorn and Passion, bestowed upon him a plentiful Crowd of Names and Reproaches; adding, that he had promoted him without the least Merit, and unadvisedly had joined him in Council: And how, says he, can I rely upon your Fidelity, who endeavour to oppress and trouble your Brothers and antient social Commoners? Manuel, Prior of Beverley; a Man of great Power, and Crossley's Friend, with many others, endeavoured (but in vain) to moderate the King's Anger, for he instantly discharged him the Council, and forbade him his Presence, &c. The Abbot, fearing further Danger, agreed to leave the Affair to the Arbitration of Earl Richard and John Mansel; but the Affair ended not here. However, the King's Displeasure lasted not long at this Height, but abated in short Time; for, the same Year the King going his Northern Expedition, directs the Bishop of Ely and Crossley to keep St. Edward's Feast in a sumptuous Manner, both in the Church and his Palace; and the Year following he is found preaching a very moving and pathetic Sermon in this Church, before the King and Nobility, to incite them to a Cruisado; which Sermon was preached at the King's express Order. In which Year, the Difference between him and his Convent was adjusted, by Means of Earl Richard, and John Mansel; and three Manors which the Abbot had wrongfully kept in his Hands, were ordered to augment the Hospitality and Alms of the Convent. But this Award the Abbot complained of as unjust, and threatened to appeal from it; at which the King, even mad with Anger, poured out Oaths and Execrations, calling him opprobrious Names, not fit to be mentioned, and abused him in a most unseemly Manner, for that he immeasurably wronged and aggrieved that his Favourite Convent; and the King, to make some Amends for the Damages the Convent had sustained, granted them his Charters for disposing the Abbot's Goods on a Vacancy, which before Time were taken into the King's Hands. The King likewise fearing the Abbot should get a Trick of appealing to Rome, now so intimate there; in his Rage had it publicly proclaimed by a Cryer through LONDON, that no Person should lend the Abbot any Money, nor take his Note or Seal, which Proceedings made him look miserably despicable, and occasioned every one's Wonder, who heard of them, to think that the Abbot, late the King's greatest Favourite, should so suddenly be scandalized and estranged from him.

Anno 1252, King Henry III. granted his Charter of Returns of Writs and Fines, and Goods of Vagabonds and Criminals.

Anno 1256. The Abbot was in some Measure restored to Favour; for this Year, in the Beginning of June, he went over-Sea with Rufano, Elect of Salisbury, upon private Negotiations of the King's; and the same Year the continued Difference between this Convent and the Church of St. Alban's, concerning the Manor of Aldenham, was made up. The latter End of the following Year Crossley returns from his Embassy, which was to Rome, having suffered much by the Treachery of the French and Danger of the Way; and now the Secret of that Journey was found to be the mighty Affair of the Kingdom of Apulia: With much Bait the Court of Rome caught this shallow Prince, and his vain-glorious Son, who impoverished England for an airy Title, and made the King the same Time a Property and a Laughing-Stock to the whole World. The same Year he was sent a second Time to Rome with the Bishop

Bishop of Worcester, the Elect of Winchester, the Earl of Leicester, &c. to mediate the Affairs between France and England, at that Time ripe for a War; but the King of France deferred coming to Terms till his Parliament was ended; the rest therefore returning home, the Abbot went to France, to attend the King's Motions. Soon after his Return, the King calls a Parliament, to whom he repeated his usual Request for Money, who unanimously refused to raise him any Supplies; whereupon he sends for Crosley, and by fair and inveigling Arts, so infatuated the Man, that he set his, and the Convent's Seal, to a Writing obligatory for 2500 Marks, thereby giving a Precedent for other Monasteries, to be fleeced: For Passeleve, Archdeacon of Lewis, a Creature of the King's, and most avaricious Extortioner, taking this fair Handle, goes to Waltham, (where he had a Seat, and lies buried) and shewing the Abbot's and Convent of Westminster's Letters, required that Abbots Compliance in the same Manner; but was utterly refused the Abbot; alledging, "That Westminster had such peculiar Obligations to the King, as might perhaps carry them to so extravagant a Compliance with his Necessities: But for his Part, neither he, nor his Convent, would concern themselves with it." Thence he went to the Abbot of St. Alban's, who answered him in the same Manner: So that this Example of Crosley's had not its expected Influence. This, as it was one of the worst, so was it of the last Actions of his Life; for the same Year, the King calling a Parliament at Oxford, Crosley attended, and was, with others, named by the King to mediate the Difference between him and the Barons; whence attending the King to Winchester, he died of Poison, given to him, and others of the King's Friends; as William de Clare, who instantly died, and Gilbert Earl of Clare, who with the Loss of his Hair and Nails scarcely escaped Death. This happened on the 15th of the Kal. of August, 1258; Fleet says the 27th of July, (but falsely, as will appear) in the 47th Year of King Henry III. after he had governed this Convent twelve Years. Thus died this great Man, whose Life was a continual Hurry, and whose Station that of the highest; and yet, what is strange to think, so considerable an Actor as he was in that troublesome Time, so little has he been remembered, that none of the Historians, either of this Abbey, or his Order, seem to have known any Thing of him, mentioning barely the Time of his Election and Death, and one or two inconsiderable Incidents, not knowing even the Place of his Burial; and which, but for the MSS. of some of this Abbey not long after him, had still remained a Secret. He was carried from Winchester, and very honourably (says Paris) buried in his Conventual Church at Westminster. The Place of his Interment was, says Fleet, in the old Chapel of St. Edmund, near the North Door; but that Chapel being decayed, and pulled down, his Body was removed to the Chapel of St. Nicholas, and laid under a little plain Stone before the middle Altar: But, as if Fate had decreed the Man to have no Rest, even in his Grave, the Body some Years after, viz. in King Henry VI's Time, was taken up, upon what Occasion is not known; at which Time his Body was seen in a Stone Coffin by the Convent, firm and fresh, dressed in his Vestment in which he said Mass. Where he was repositied afterwards, is uncertain, though it is conjectured, that Flaccet's Tomb being finished and convenient for that Purpose, and being likewise one of his Successors, they placed it there, and that it is the Stone Coffin now visible, in which was not long since, they tell us, a Body found; but upon Search, there could nothing be found but the disjointed Boards of an inward Coffin. This Man was undoubtedly admirably qualified for the high and eminent Stations in which he appeared, being, to use the Words of one near his Time, Vir quidem elegans, facundus juris utrisque peritus, Canonici scilicet & Civilis, regi specialissimus, in cujus etiam obsequio magnos & multos, tam in transmarinis, quam in cismarinis partibus, labores libenter consumpserat sumptuosos; to which may be added, from the same Author, in another Place; Erat utique tam voce quam corporali elegantia vir desideriorum. And Knigton calls him, Vir utique nobilis & discretus.

His Anniversary was observed 16 Kal. Augusti; for which he assigned Lands. After his Death, a Demand was made by the Abbot of Chertsey, upon Richard de Ware, Abbot of this Church, for ten Marks, on the Anniversary of Richard de Crokeley, late Abbot, which was moderated by a Writing from the Abbot of Waltham, dated at Waltham in December 1267. The Epitaph on his Tomb was this:

Verfus Jam Wintoniæ polis de Crokeley
Richardo
Mortee amar, dedite & locus iste capit.

P. LEVESHAM.

UPON Crokeley's Death, the King four Days after, viz. 21 July, 1258, granted the Custody of the Barony to the Abbey of Westminster, to Adam de Easton; and two Days after, viz. July the 23d, granted his Licence to chuse another; upon which was chosen Philip de Levesham, or Lewsham, so called from a Village near Greenwich in Kent, his Birth-place, who at that Time was Prior of this Convent; but he being a very fat corpulent Man, desired to be excused, as chusing rather to continue in his former Station, than undertake a fatiguing and dangerous Journey to Rome for Honour or Dignity; but being prevailed upon to accept it, the Convent sent to Rome to have his personal Appearance excused; which, with much Application and more Money, they effected; and, returning home, found him dead: His Death happened the latter End of October. Fleet says, he went to Rome, and died in the Way; where he was buried, is uncertain.

R. WARE.

AFTER Levesham's Death, the Abbey (says Fleet) continued vacant for two Years, from 17th July 1258, i. e. from Crokeley's Death; for the last was but titular, in which he is right; for one Hubertus de Boreham, presented by the King to the Church of Stevenage, belonging to Westminster, in August 1259, the Abbey being vacant; and likewise in February following, the King presented another to the Church of Morden for the same Reason. But by this two Years Vacancy must be understood the Time the succeeding Abbot was at Rome for Confirmation; for the King, the first of December following Levesham's Death, granted his Licence to the Convent to choose; who thereupon made Choice of one Richard de Ware, or Warren, which the King confirmed the 15th of the same Month; whereupon, going to Rome, he continued there two Years, and in his Return purchased the fine Mosaick of St. Edward's Chapel and the Altar. Being established, he set about regulating this Monastery, and in order thereto directed William Halseley, who was then Sub-Prior of the Church, to draw up and collect the antient Customs and Usages of this Convent in four Volumes, which were finished Anno 1266; the three first are lost, but the fourth fourth Part being a fair MS. one Volume in Folio, is in the Cotton Library; it treats of the Duties of the Abbots and other Officers, and was kept as the most valuable, which appears by this Note prefixed, viz. Pars quarta & at tribus aliis partibus idcirco seperatur, & perse Igitur in conclavi ponitur, quia secretiora nostri ordinis in ipsa continentur: At the End of it are these Verses following:

Hoc opus accepit in cœlis qui dominatur
Et nomen præstat auctori quod mereatur
Secum regnare post fine mortis amare:

Vel sic,

Inter sanctorum turbas regnare suorum
Finito libro sit Laus & Gloria deo.

THIS Abbot was a considerable Favourite with the King, and was honoured with the Dignity of Lord Treasurer of England, and was, Anno 1271, sent by him Ambassador to the King of France. He was a good Patron to his Convent, disburthening it of a Debt of 600 Marks, procured to himself the full Jurisdiction of the Hospital at St. James's, &c. and dying the 2d of December, 1283, was buried before the high Altar, near his Mosaick Pavement, and at the Foot of Aymer de Valence's Tomb: For his Anniversary was assigned the Manor of Keldon; his Tomb-stone bare this Inscription, in Fleet's Time, (but was removed, upon setting up this new Altar-Piece, and the Place paved with Marble:)

Abbas Richardus de Ware, qui nunc requiescit
Hic portat lapides, quos hic portavit ab urbe.

WALTER WENLOCK.

AFTER Warren's Death, the King by his Grant, dated December 8, 1283, Regni 12^o, committed the Custody of the Barony of Westminster to Malcome de Harlaw, and the 11th of the same Month, granted Licence for the Convent to proceed to a new Election, who accordingly, on the Vigil of the Circumcision, elected Walter de Wenlock. This the King confirmed the 22d of January, and restored the Temporalities the 10th of June following, in whose Time, viz. Anno 1290, was a Dispute between this Abbot and the Prior of Winchester, with the See of Canterbury, concerning the Coronation; and the Abbey was upon that put under Interdiction, inasmuch that Anno 1290, when Queen Alianor was buried, the Archbishop would not officiate for that Reason: Upon the Death of which Queen, Edward I. assigned to this Wenlock for her Anniversary 12 Manors, as Stow says, and from him Weaver; but by Mistake, there being but six Manors and several Hamlets, viz. the Manors of Briddbroke in Essex, Westerham and Eulinebrugge in Kent, Turveston in Buckinghamshire, Knolle and Grafton, with the Hamlets of Alspathe, Buleys, Hulverlee, Wiltakesfield, Kynewaldskey, Notchurst, Langedon and Didington in Warwickshire: In which Year Abbot Wenlock was deputed by the Abbot of Glocester, to preside jointly with the Abbot of Chertsey at Abingdon, over a Convention of above 30 Abbots and Priors, met on Account of the Foundation of Glocester College in Oxford, by Gifford, of which see farther in Reynier; and about the same Time the Fryars Minors, who had now gained great Ground, miserably infested the Monks of Westminster and Worcester (as St. Hildegard had prophesied, says Matt. Westm.) the Pope, who had been of the Order supporting them, as did likewise the Archbishop of Canter- bury; but dying soon after, their Malice was frustrated. To this Abbot, and his Church and Convent, King Edward I. presented a large Piece of the Cross, adorned with Gold, Silver and Jewels, which was brought him by the Secretary of the Prince of Wales, and called St. Neot's Cross, being brought from the Holy Land into that Country, by a Priest so called. In Anno 1304, happened a sad Affair in Relation to the Monks; for a Thief breaking into the King's Treasury, which was in the Cloisters, stole thence a great Sum of Money, which being discovered, twelve Monks were cast into Prison upon Suspicion, where they continued some Time; but the Year following, viz. 1305, the King came on Lady-Day to Westminster to return Thanks to God and St. Edward for his Triumph over the Scots; and being concerned at his rash Confining them, gave Orders instantly to discharge them; but Walsingham observes, the Persons so directed to discharge them, detained them eight Days longer, out of pure Malice. The same Year Pope Clement V. granted to this Abbot and the Abbot of Waltham, the Appropriation of the Churches of Sturte and Kenyton. About which Time, viz. 1308, by Consent of the Abbot and Convent, the Body of King Sebert was translated into this Church, from the old one which himself had founded, (as Walsingham says,) and when they opened the Tomb, they found his Right Arm found in Flesh, Skin and Bones, to the Middle of his Arm, after almost 700 Years Burial. For this fashionable Miracle, we have only Walsingham's Authority, who lived long after. Some Authors fix this Removal in 1383, in King Richard II's Time; but be it when it would, none of the Legenders of that Time mention it, nor was it preserved, as undoubtedly it would have been, with the same Reverence as the Arms of his Contemporaries, King Oswald, &c. For then Sporley, the Monk, would undoubtedly have exhibited it in his Inventory of Relicks here, which he has not; but Walsingham wrote late, and had Room for Invention.

Nor long after this Miracle happened what the Monks call a Judgment in their Favour; for one Sir John Blackwell, who was a great Enemy to this Church, (on Account of some Law Differences between him and the Convent;) being present at the Coronation of King Edw. II. he was trampled or crowded to Death in this Church, without the Happiness of the last Viaticum. This Abbot was much favoured by King Edward I. to whom he was a Treasurer and Privy-Counsellor; for he is found soon after Wallie's Execution, convened in Council at the New Temple, LONDON, to consult the Affairs in Scotland, which Council lasted 20 Days, the Result of which was a Peace with that Kingdom. He governed this Convent with great Prudence, and much enriched it in his Life, by discreet Management, and at his Death by Legacies of his Plate, &c. and having sat 24 Years and six Days, he died at Midnight, in the Middle of second Mass on Christmas Eve, Anno 1307, in his Manor-House of Pirysford in Glocestershire; he was buried on the South Side of the Mosaick Pavement of the high Altar, near the Door going to St. Edward's Chapel, and at the Foot of Sebert's Tomb: His Tomb Fleet describes not, but in Weaver's Time it was visible, plated with Brass, and was lately removed at fixing this Altar-Piece; the Epitaph was this:

Abbas Walterus jacet hic sub marmore testus,
Non fuit austerus sed nirtis fame rectus.

To this Year 1307, we may justly fix the Time of Mat. Westm. commonly called Florilegus, though some make him to live 1377, his History concluding there; but that was continued tinued by other Hands. He was a Monk here, and collected his Flowers of History in three Books, of which those of his own Time are Copies of Paris (tho' some think they were both obliged to Wendover) Westm. seems to have taken great Pains in this Work; but when he treads on Paris's Heels, shews neither the Learning, Language, nor plain open Integrity of him. He is said likewise to have written a History of Westminster; and another of St. Edmund's-Bury; his History is continued down by Merimuth to 1330.

RICHARD SUDBURY, or DE KIDINGTON.

Richard de Kidington was, upon the Death of Wenlock, chosen; to which the King assented the 23d of Feb. following, and wrote to the Pope to confirm him. Thus elected, he went to Rome, during which Vacancy, viz. the 6th of November, 1308, the King presented John de Woodford to the Church of St. Bride, four Years after he returned; whereupon the King, by his Letters Patents, dated the 25th of April, 1311, restored him his Temporalities. This Abbot is, by Fleet, called Sudbury, from his Birth; but in the Deed for his Successor's Confirmation, he is called Kidington. There is nothing remarkable concerning him, the troublesome Times, perhaps, preventing it. He died the 9th of April, 1315, and was buried before the high Altar, under the Pavement, where the Paschal Wax-Candle stood; there was over him a Stone of grey Marble, formerly plated with his Effigies in Pontificals; of which Weaver makes no Mention; and at paving the Choir, intirely taken away.

W. DE CURTHINGTON.

THE King, certified of Kidington's Death, granted Leave for a new Election, by Letters dated April the 21st, whereupon they chose William de Curthington, called also Carthington and Curlington, and in an antient Writing Curtlington; to which the King assented, by Letters dated June the 11th, 1313, and recommended him to the Pope for Confirmation; whereupon taking with him Robert de Reby, and John de Wanteing, Monks, he went to Rome, but the Papacy being vacant, he applied himself to William Deacon, Cardinal of St. Nicholas in Julian, and laid his Vouchers of Election before him, and protested to the Validity of it: This was done in the City of Valentia, on the 12th of July, 1315, but his Stay must be a Year longer, for May 16, 1316, the King presented to Lalam and Peclesham Vicarage. This Abbot is nowhere mentioned but by Fleet, who tells us he built the Manor-House of Islip, where St. Edward the Confessor was born, and rebuilt the Church of Sutton in Glocester, and left Money for high Mass in this Church; and lastly, that he died on the 11th of September, 1331, Anno 7 Edward. III. and was buried in the South Cross, right fronting the Altar of St. Benedict, near the Tomb of Sir John Shoreditch, and under a Lamp that hung there as you go to the Vestry. His Tomb-stone had his Images in Pontificals, and is still to be discovered, being near Camden's Monument, in the Middle of the West Isle of the Cross, and has the Stone of Shoreditch near it, which is a large broken one, with the Places of two Escutcheons.

IN his Time lived Robert de Reading, a Monk of this Convent, who wrote Annals, from the 28th Year of King Edward I. i. e. ab Anno 1299, to the Year 1325; afterwards continued by others to 1369. There are two fair Copies of this, one in the Cotton Library; another in that excellent one of the Right Honourable the Lord Oxford. And Sir Richard Cirencester, Monk of Westminster, 1348, travelled to most of our Libraries; and collected a notable History, from the Coming of the Saxons to his Time, which was 1348; it is divided into two Parts, the first called, The Mirror of History; the other, A Second Part of the Chronicle of the English-Saxons; to which some add, An Epitome of Chronicles.

THOMAS HENLEY.

TWO Days after Curthington's Death, viz. the 13th of September, 1333, the King had Notice, and granted Licence to re-elect. The Convent therefore chose Thomas Henley, to which the King assented the 30th of the same Month, and restored his Temporalities the 29th of June, 1334. The Year following, viz. the 7th of June, 1335, he obtained Leave of the King to absent himself for seven Years, to ply his Studies in the University. There is nothing of him remarkable, but that he gave a fine Pastoral Staff to the Convent.

THIS Henley presided over a Provincial Chapter of the Benedictines, held at Northampton on Lady-Day, 1340, together with the Abbot of St. Mary's at York, at which Time he, according to Usage, declares the Abbots and Priors, who were absent, Contumacious, and enjoined them Penance; and in 1343, at the same Place, he sent his Prior as Protector; at which Chapter Henley was again named as President and Deputy: He died at Oxford in Glocester College, on the 29th of October, Anno 1344, and was brought hither and buried in the lower Pavement, before the high Altar.

SIMON DE BUCHESTON.

UPON Notice of Henley's Death, the King, on the 4th of November, 1344, granted Licence for a new Choice, which fell upon Simon de Bucheston; this the King assented to, Nov. the 15th, 1344, and restored his Temporalities on the 23d of March following; some Time after which, he made Application to the King, for Leave to absent himself from his Convent, and to study in the University for three Years; which the King granted him the 6th of August, 1345. There is nothing more of him, but that he was buried in the East Ambulatory of the Cloister, before the Interlocutory of the Chapter-House, under a little Stone of black Marble, the Stone is still visible, less at Feet than Head, and the Feet reaching cross the Cloister, towards the Door going to the Library.

SIMON LANGHAM.

TO Bucheston succeeded Simon Langham, or Lankam (according to Thorn) to whom the King restored his Temporalities on the 16th of Sept. 1349; of whom, although Mention has been already made, we shall repeat what is concerning him, except his Epitaph, that these may be intire and of a Piece. He was first Monk here, and afterwards Prior, and lastly Abbot, and after continuing so about 11 Years, was promoted to the See of LONDON, but (as some say, out of Covetousness) preferred to the less honourable See of Ely, to which he was elected before he received Consecration for that of LONDON; soon after which he was made Lord Treasurer, afterwards Lord Chancellor of England; by Means of which Advantages he grew wealthy; though others say, that he oppressed his Diocese, and extorted it from them. He was from this See promoted to the Archbishoprick of Canterbury, 1366, upon the Death of Simon mon Ysclep, to which he was elected on the Vigils of St. Nicholas, and received his Pall in St. Nicholas's Chapel, by the Hands of the Bishop of Bath, November the 4th, 1366, and was enthronized on the Feast of our Lady following: He composed a Difference in his Time between the Londoners and their Clergy, about their Tithes, allotting out of every Pound yearly Rent one Half-Penny, or out of every House of 10 s. a Year, a Farthing, besides Oblations and Tithes: Stow says he allowed every Priest but 3 l. 6 s. 8 d. which made many of them to steal. He sat Archbishop not much above two Years, being made Priest-Cardinal of St. Sextus, by Pope Urban VI. which being done without the King's Knowledge, he seized his Temporalities. The Archbishop resigned his See, lived privately at Oxford, till he had Leave to go over Sea; to possess which Title he left his See, and went to Avignon, where he was soon after made Bishop-Cardinal of Præneste by Pope Gregory XI. who likewise impowered him to receive the Profits of other vacant Promotions as Administrator, for so they intituled him; by which Power he was Archdeacon of Taunton, and Treasurer of Wells: He died at Avignon, July 22, 1376, of a Palsy, wherewith he was taken suddenly as he sat at Dinner, and was buried in the Church of the House of the Carthusians, whose House he had founded, and was (as he in his Will ordered) three Years after removed to this Church, and buried near the Altar of Benedict, under a Tomb of Alabaster, with an Epitaph old enough to be written for him; but it is thought it could never be on his Tomb, no Signs of Injury being round it, saving this, the antient wooden Canopy was beat down lately. He is said by Joceline to be a Man of great Knowledge, of a generous Spirit, and managed all his Stations with Judgment and Honour; he wrote a Book of Customs, and some Sermons, mentioned by Pits, of which no Judgment can be formed:

IN his Time lived John Wilton, Monk of this House, a Man said to be of great Learning and Piety; his Works are contemplative, as appears by their Title in Verse and Prose, viz. The Clock of Wisdom: Of God's Benefits: The Sting of Compassion, and some Homilies. He lived about 1360.

AND lastly, A Continuer of Reading's Annals after Meriomouth, to the Year 1367; he is written Johannes R. Mon. Westm.

NICHOLAS LITTLINGTON.

To Lanham succeeded Nicholas Littleington, at the same Time the former was named to the See of Ely; he was Executor or Trustee of his Predecessor's Will, and by that Means delivered to this Convent that vast Quantity of Plate that belonged to him. He built the Hall in the Abbey-House, the Jerusalem Chamber, the South and West Cloisters, the Kitchen-Buttery, Sacristan's House, the Cellarer's Office, with the Tower and Water-Mill, and a Granery, which was lately the College Dormitory, and new paved the Cloisters. There were many other Gifts of his, among the rest, two Books of the Coronations, marked N. L. the Letters of his Name, not unlikely prepared for that most splendid Coronation of King Richard II. at which he assisted: In his Time happened that Violence upon Schakell and Haule, who fled to Sanctuary. He died in November 1386, and was buried in the Chapel of St. Blaze in the South Cross of this Abbey.

WILLIAM of COLCHESTER.

William of Colchester was elected Abbot after the 12th of December, 1386, to which the King assented the 21st of January following: The Time he died is uncertain, but his Tomb is visible in St. John Baptist's Chapel, of white Marble; this is plain beyond all Conjecture; for though there is no Inscription, yet the Pillar he rests on and his Miter are thus powdered, W. de C. signifying William de Colchester: Other Inscription there is none.

RICHARD HAROUNDEN.

Richard Harounden is next named, of whom we know nothing certain; but during this Interval of Darknes, in the Year before the Deposition of King Richard II. we find the Abbot of Westminster attending King Richard II. into Ireland, and after his Return, appointed, with others, to go with him in the Tower, concerning his Resignation; and soon after, concerned at his Usage, joined with the Dukes of Exeter, Surrey and Anmarle, &c. The Bishop of Carlisle, and principally the Abbot of Westminster, had an uncommon Aversion to King Henry IV. for that, when Earl of Derby, he had declared the Clergy had too much, and the King too little; but some rather think it was out of true Loyalty to release their captiv'd Sovereign; but this being discovered, and several executed, the Abbot fled from his Monastery, and dying of an Apoplexy, escaped publick Execution. This Harounden is supposed to be the Man whom the Monks privately buried without Tomb or Inscription, nor do we know in what Part of the Church they laid him.

GEORGE FLACCET.

George Flaccet, who must necessarily succeed upon the Death of the former, viz. 1402, but this is doubtful, and yet very probable, for 'tis certain that an Abbot died at this Time, and Mr. Dart says, he takes Flaccet to be the Person who succeeded him. There is nothing very remarkable of this Flaccet, or in his Time, save that there was a Dispute, Anno 1410, between the Abbot and the Rector of Shiperton, which was adjusted by the Bishop of LONDON. King Henry IV. taken with an Apoplexy in the Church, was brought to his House, and died in the Jerusalem Chamber. This Man lived till 1414; and dying, was buried in a plain Tomb, but curiously arched over it with Free-stone, having the Letters G. F. in a Cypher upon it, in St. John Baptist's Chapel, which see in the Survey: The Writers say the Inscription is torn off for Lucre of Brass; but if they had looked again, they would find on the outer Ledge next the Area, in black Letters, this Inscription: Georgius Flaccet quondam Abbas Westmonasteriensis obiit Anno.

WILLIAM

AFTER the Death of Flaccet, which those who have touch'd lately on this Subject fix not the Time of, they have been so much in the Dark as to place Richard Sudbury for his Successor, who is no more than that Keddynton before mentioned, and at the same Time omit one William, Abbot at this Time, whose Sirname is not to be found, unless they have misplaced Colchester; and then Newcourt grossly mistook the King's Patent of Assent to his Election: But uncertain it is, that such a one there was who succeeded Flaccet; for, Anno 1414, William, Abbot of Westminster, was by King Henry VI. in the second Year of his Reign, appointed to go with the Bishops of Bath and Sarum to the known Council of Constance; from which Time there is no further Account of him, till his Death, which was was twelve Years after ; for Anno 1426, being appointed to preside over a general Chapter of Benedictines at Northampton, where, it seems, he and the Abbot of Reading always presided, or their Priors ; he being sick, could not appear, and died while the Chapter was held.

JOHN EASTNEY.

UPON the Death of William, John Eastney, Mr. Dart says, succeeded him, though by New-court, and others from him, he is placed lower ; of whose Character or Abilities nothing remains, except what appears by his publick Acts of Munificence to this Church, in which he caused to be made a Skreen to the Chapel of St. John the Evangelist, and likewise built the great West Window, or at least presented, to adorn it, a large Quantity of curious painted Glass, whereof little remains. He likewise built one of the lower Windows, and presented two Images gilt, for the Altar of St. Peter and Paul, which is supposed to have been near the Vestry Door ; and presented an Image for the Chapter-House, on the Vigils of those Saints. He paid the King 1000 l. upon Account of the Merchants of the Staple ; and, as some say, paid the Court of Rome 3070 l. due to it for Confirmation of Abbots. He died the Month before King Edward IV. viz. the 4th of May, 1438, having governed nine Years, and was buried in the Sacristarea, on the North Side, near Valence's Tomb, and has a Monument adjoining to the Skreen of St. John the Evangelist's Chapel, with his Effigies in Brass, in a Mass Habit, on a Label from his Mouth, In dno. confido Jehu meo. And round the Verge this broken Piece of Inscription, Mensis Maii. His Body was not long since, upon breaking up a Grave, discovered lying in a Chest quilted with yellow Satten ; he had on a Gown of Crimson Silk, girded to him with a Black Girdle ; on his Legs were white Silk Stockings, and over his Face, which was Black, a clean Napkin doubled up and laid Cornerwise ; the Legs and the other Parts of the Body firm and plump.

EDMOND KIRTON.

Edmond Kirton, D. D. descended from an ancient and illustrious Family of the Name of Codilbie, was educated probably at Glocester Hall in Oxford, then a College set a-part for the Benedictine Monasteries ; to the Library of which he after gave Books, of which some are now in the University, with his Name prefixed. In this College he was a B. D. in the Year 1426, at which Time he is found preaching before a general Chapter of Benedictines at Northampton ; for his Oratory was remarkable ; inasmuch that his Epitaph informs us he preached before Pope Martin. At the before-mentioned Chapter he is called Prior, Student at Oxford, and was appointed a Visitor of the Benedictine Monasteries ; here he likewise exhibited Letters from the Chancellor and Regent of Oxford, for a Subsidy for building new Divinity Schools ; and informed them, that the Abbot of St. Alban's had almost rebuilt the Monks' Vestry, near the Chapel at Oxford ; upon which they rose and thanked him ; and then, secondly, he moved them, that they would rebuild the Chapel there ; lastly, complained of Abbots not sending Students there. This Chapter, in Return, desire the Chancellor and Regent to create him Doctor. He died the 3d of October, 1466, and was buried there under a Free-stone in St. Andrew's Chapel.

THOMAS MILLING.

Thomas Milling succeeded, who, from his Youth, was of this Monastery, from whence he went to Glocester College or Hall, in Oxford, where he grew familiar with the Greek Tongue, (such as that Novelty then was) and expert in all Learning, for which he is mentioned in some Notes of a learned Student here, as an Ornament of, &c. Leland likewise commends him for his Literature, and says, that he wrote many Things, of which there are none extant at this Time. Returning to his Monastery, he became Abbot, and a Favourite at Court, by Reason, that when the Scales turned upon King Edward IV. after his Coronation, the Queen took Sanctuary here, and was by him handsomely received, and lodged in his House, where being delivered of her first Son, Edward V. the Abbot, though at so dangerous a Juncture, stood Godfather, which some have taken for an Honour done him ; whereas it was rather a Case of Exigence : However, this recommended him to the King's Favour, who honoured him with the Name of a Privy-Counsellor ; and after being Abbot there eight Years, he made him Bishop of Hereford, of which Temporalities he had Restitution the 15th of August, 1475, in which See having continued 17 Years, he died Anno 1492, and was buried in the Middle of the Chapel of St. John Baptist, in this Church, where, in Camden's Time, he lay ; and a slight Monument for him against the Wall, where Popham's stands ; but no Inscription having been there, Mr. Camden would have given it, though it was not his Business to remark Stone Coffins, as Mr. Keep supposes he would, had that upon Flaccet, by him, said to be this Abbot's, been visible there in his Time.

JOHN ISLIP,

Was next Abbot, who began his Government at a troublesome Juncture ; for, at the first he had the same dangerous Guest with his Predecessor, viz. Queen Elizabeth, who, with her younger Son and Daughters, fled to his House for a Sanctuary against the Protector's Malice ; which Flight gave him great Uneasiness ; yet so cautious was he, that he did not stir in Defence of Holy Church, when threatened so severely at that Time ; however, this recommended him to the Favour of the Queen and Princess, and consequently to that of Henry VII. for whose Cause, 'tis not unlikely, he assisted the Design of his Marriage with the Princess Elizabeth, being concerted in his House, though the weak-minded Queen was afterwards diverted from it. During the Queen's Stay here, this Church and Monastery was inclosed like a Camp, and strictly guarded by Soldiers, under one Nesfield ; and none were suffered to go in or out without special Permission, for Fear the Princes should convey themselves over the Sea, and baulk King Richard III's Designs. After King Henry VII. came to the Crown, he grew a Favourite and Counsellor ; and when the King founded his magnificent Chapel, he laid the first Stone of it, and by his Example repaired and beautified the Church, and added in Niches along the Buttresses, the Statues of Kings that had been Benefactors : He likewise designed a lofty Tower and Lantern, with a Chime of Bells, to be placed over the Middle of the Cross ; but the Pillars were too weak to support it, wherefore the Bells were hung in the Western Tower, where they remain. He founded the Chapel called by his Name, (and dedicated to St. Erasmus.) He likewise built the Dean's House, and Offices to the Monastery; and dying the 2d of January 1510, 2 Henry VIII. was buried in this Chapel.

WILLIAM BENSON, or BOSTON,

OF whom we know little; but that he, with seventeen Monks of this Convent, surrendered his Abbey to King Henry VIII. who converting it into a Deanery, made him Dean thereof. He died 1549, and was buried in the South Cross, as you go to the Revestry; his Tomb is remaining; but the Brass Plates, the Figure, Canopy and Inscription, torn away.

IN his Time flourished Thomas Gardener, Monk here, who wrote a brief Abstract of English History, from Brutus to his Time, which is now in the Cotton Library.

THOMAS THURLBY, Bishop.

DURING Boston's Deanery, viz. 1540, King Henry made Westminster a Bishop's See, and made Thomas Thirlby Bishop thereof. This Thirlby, whom Mr. Wood, by Mistake, calls John, was Doctor of Civil and Canon Laws; or, as others say, Divinity, and some Time Fellow of Trinity College in Cambridge, and afterwards Archdeacon of Ely. He was so extravagant a Dilapidator, that the Bishoprick was ten Years after dissolved by King Edward VI. and Thirlby removed to Norwich; and four Years after to Ely, by Queen Mary, who made him a Privy Counsellor: But being after her Death a Recusant, he was sent to the Tower, and displaced by Act of Parliament; soon after which, the Queen removed him to Lambeth House, where he, and Bishop Tonstall, were kindly and respectfully treated by the Archbishop; and there he spent his Life in Ease and Happiness for ten Years; and dying 1570, was buried in the Chapel of Lambeth Church, under a Stone of Marble, at the Head of Bishop Tonstall, with this Inscription:

Hic jacet Thomas Thirlby, olim Episcopus Eliensis, qui obiit 26 die Augusti, Anno Dom. 1570.

RICHARD COX.

Richard Cox (the Deanery being re-settled, became Dean after Tonstall's Remove) was born in Buckinghamshire, at a Place called Whaddon, educated at Eaton, thence elected to Cambridge, 1519, and was Scholar of King's College there, and commenced Master of Arts; thence he removed to Oxford, and was made junior Canon of the Cardinal College in December 1525. Hence, upon Suspicion of Lutheranism, he removed, and became one of the Masters of Eaton School; here he continued some Years; and in 1537 commenced Doctor in Divinity, and became Archdeacon of Ely. In 1543 he was made Dean of Osney, then newly erected a Cathedral, and upon removing that See to the Cathedral Church, became Dean there. In 1547, he was chosen Chancellor of Oxford, where his Wife resided with him, the first Instance of that Kind, which gave great Offence; of which Mr. Wood makes a sad Detail; before which, viz. 1544, he was Preceptor to King Edward VI. for Philosophy, Morality, and Divinity, at six Years of Age, who afterwards gave him a Canonary at Windfor, and made him one of his Privy Council; and, upon Thirlby's Remove, Dean of this Church, and Almoner. But, upon Queen Mary's coming to the Crown, he fled to Frankfort in Germany, where he vindicated the English Liturgy; in compiling which, he had a Part against John Knox and others. Upon Queen Elizabeth's Accession he came over, and was nominated for the Westminster Conference, and shortly after elected to the See of Norwich, the 22d of June 1553; but the Queen's Mind changing, made him Bishop of Ely, and consecrated the 21st of December 1559. Mr. Wood (unhappy enough in that Respect) gives him a mean Character, founded upon Trifles, as Feasting his Family with Potted Venison; but it appears he was a good Scholar, had a Hand in collecting the Grammar after Lilly, Robinson, &c. and published two Orations, printed in Peter Martin's Works. He is said to have been a good Poet; but unless he had left us better and larger Proofs of it than the Lord's Prayer in Meter, at the End of the Singing Psalms, we can form no very great Opinion of him; as such Leland praises his Faith and Integrity, in a Copy of Verses to Thomas Legh of Avington, published in Encomiis Tropheis. He sat Bishop twenty-two Years, in which Time it is strange he had no better Remove; and dying the 22d of July 1581, was buried in the Cathedral Church of Ely, near Bishop Goodrick's Monument.

HUGH WESTON.

Hugh Weston, upon Dr. Cox's Flight, was made Dean Anno primo Mary. He was born at Borton Noverly in Leicestershire, was Student at Baliol College in Oxford, and afterwards Fellow of Lincoln College, where he studied Physick; he was afterwards Protector of the University, and Rector of Lincoln College; and in 1540, Doctor in Divinity, Margaret Professor, Rector of St. Botolph's Bishopsgate, LONDON, Archdeacon of Colchester, and Rector of Cliff in Kent; afterwards Dean here, and Prolocutor of the Convocation; being removed from Westminster, he was made Dean of Windfor, 1556; but the Year following being taken (as it is said) in Adultery, he was deprived by Cardinal Pole, Archbishop of Canterbury; whereupon, endeavouring to go to Rome to clear himself, he was seized and imprisoned in the Tower of LONDON, where he died. He is much commended by Leland, and as scurrilously and ridiculously treated by Bale. He published an Oratio ad Clerum, 1553, and his Disputations with Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, in the Divinity School at Oxford. He died in the Tower in December 1586, and was buried before the Image of the Crucifix, in the Church of the Savoy Hospital in the Strand. By his Will he made in the Tower, the 26th of November 1558, he bestowed his Effects on Pious Uses; was very exact about his Funeral, and left Monies for his Dirige and Mass, by the Master and Fellows of Baliol College, by the Rector and Fellows of Lincoln College, by the Chaplain of the University of Oxford, by the Priest at Islip, near Oxford, and by the Priest of Borton Noverly in Lincolnshire.

JONH FECKENHAM.

John Feckenham, so called from his Birthplace, Feckenham Forest in Worcestershire, where his Parents, who were poor Cottagers, resided; his right Name being Howman. When a Boy, the Parish-Priest there discovering in him an Aptitude to Learning, instructed him much, and, with the Persuasions of some others, got him admitted into Feckenham Monastery at Evesham, an House of Benedictines; where having been some Time, he was at the Age of eighteen Years sent to study at Oxford, at Gloucester Hall, a College for that Order, where was an Apartment for this Abbey. Not long after, Evesham Abbey being among the small ones dissolved the 17th of November 1536, he subscribed among his Brethren Brethren to the Resignation, and had allowed him 10 l. per Ann. Pension; or, as others say, 100 Florins. After this Dissolution, he returned to his Studies at Oxford, where he was in 1537, and was then Senior Fellow there; and not long after, was entertained as Domestick Chaplain to the then Bishop of Worcester, Dr. Bell; who dying three Years after, Dr. Bonner, Bishop of LONDON, took him; with whom he continued ten Years, viz. to the Year 1549, who being then deprived, Feckenham was confined in the Tower of LONDON, as some say, by Mr. Holme's Means, whom Reyner calls Pseudo-Episcopus Wintoniensis; the Reason whereof was, his refusing to administer the Sacraments, according to the then Liturgy; though Stapleton, who is not much to be depended on, says, "Cranmer occasioned it, upon Account of Feckenham's defending the Observation of Lent, and his denying Justification by Faith only; and that Cranmer cited him to Lambeth on that Account, and appeals to the Register there." The same Stapleton mentions his solemn Disputation with Mr. Hooper, Bishop of Worcester, who says, he was thoroughly satisfied with his Reasoning, as himself owned; but by this we may justly doubt this Writer, for Hooper was a Man not easily satisfied in any Respect, much less with so direct an Opponent to that Opinion; for which, he afterwards suffered, and carries with it an Air of high Improbability. But notwithstanding Reyner takes it from him, Wood, in his Athenæ Oxon. from Reyner, and a late Plagiary from them both, without boggling at the Absurdity. However, Feckenham was remanded to the Tower, and continued there till Queen Mary came to the Crown, who not only discharged him, but made him her Chaplain, afterwards Dean of St. Paul's, in which he was succeeded by Dr. Cole, and lastly, Abbot of this Church. He was Disputant in 1559 against Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, at Oxford; and in 1556, had Doctor's Degrees at Oxford, without Exercise; and being absent, the Ensigns of his Degrees were sent him. During which Time, he was reckoned a Man of great Moderation, and no small Friend to the Princess Elizabeth, who did not forget it after she came to the Crown, by offering him any Church-Prefecture; but he refused it. His Disputation with Lady Jane Gray, you may see, but not depend on the Manner, in Mr. Fox, who is wonderfully civil in passing him by, without blackening; on the other Hand, Pitts is incredibly fond of, and lavish in his Character, and does not forget to give a plentiful Share of ill Language to Queen Elizabeth and her Ministers, with as much Reason, perhaps, as he commends Dr. Storey, whom, he says, Feckenham prepared to die for the Faith; but, as appears by the Execution, very lamely. But to return; upon the Death of Queen Mary, Queen Elizabeth sent for Feckenham, with Intent to consult and reward him; he was then planting those Elms which are now in the Prebends Garden, and (which they of his Church seem to commend him for) would not go till he had done what he was about. Saunders says, but perhaps without Authority, that he was, on that Interview, offered the Archbishoprick of Canterbury, but refused it. Stapleton is insufferably hot upon the Queen's Ingratitude, but has forgot to mention the Abbot's Heat in opposing her; for, in the Parliament called in the first Year of her Reign, he was the only Abbot present, and protested, and spoke expressly against every thing tending to that Reformation. On Thursday the 9th of March, 1559, Anno 1 Elizabeth, he was dissenting to a Bill for vesting the Lands in the Lord Richard. On Wednesday the 15th, to the Provost's concerning the first Fruits and Tenths.

On Saturday the 18th, to the Bill for restoring the Supremacy. On Wednesday the 22d, to the Bill for assuring Lands of the Bishoprick of Winchester to Patentees of King Edward VI. And on Wednesday the 5th of April he was named with the Duke of Norfolk, Earl of Rutland, Lord Rich. Lord North, and Lord Hastings of Loughborough, concerning a Bill for Leases, to be made by Spiritual Persons. Two Days after he dissented to the Bill for the Queen's taking Temporal Possessions upon Voidance of Archbishopricks, or Bishopricks. On Monday the 17th of April, to the Bill of Supremacy, a second Time; and likewise when it passed; at which Time he made an elaborate Speech against the Bill. He dissented likewise to the Bill for annexing Religious Houses to the Crown; during all which, he was the only Abbot that sat in Parliament, and took the lowest Place on the Bishop's Form. For this strong Opposition, in the second Year of the Queen's Reign, he was confined Prisoner in the Tower, where he wrote against the Oath of Supremacy; which Dr. Horn, Bishop of Winchester, answered; whose Book Reyner calls, Librum impium plenumque mendaciis. This Piece of Feckenham is printed in Reyner. From the Tower, he was removed to the Custody of Dr. Horn, where he was generously and handsomely treated; but, if we believe Stapleton, Reyner, &c. they tell us the contrary, a quo inciviliter & perfide more ministrorum novi evangelii tractatus fuit. He was again remitted to the Tower, and soon after, by the Queen's Indulgence, thence to the Marshalsea, where he had more Liberty and Air. Soon after he was discharged, and lived privately in Holbourn, where he built an Aqueduct: Some Time after, the frequent Attempts upon the Queen's Life, and the restless Spirit of some of that Church, obliged him to strict Confinement; and then (together with Dr. Oxenbridge, Dr. Watson, Bishop of Lincoln, Dr. Young, &c.) he was confined Prisoner to Wisbich Castle in Cambridgeshire, here he ended his Days, 1585, in great Piety and Devotion. Mr. Camden says, he was a learned and good Man, lived a long while, did a great deal of Good to the Poor, and always solicited the Minds of his Adversaries to Good. He built a Stone Cross at Wisbich, and did other publick Acts. He was a short Man, of a round Visage, fresh Colour, affable and pleasant; and though Reyner went too far in calling him Martyr, yet he was a good, mild, modest, charitable Man, and a devout Christian. He lies buried in Wisbich Church.

WILLIAM BILL.

William Bill, upon Feckenham's Remove, and the Alteration of this Church to a Deanery, was nominated Dean thereof, as appears by the Patent for that Purpose. This Dr. Bill, had in King Edward's Time, been Master of Trinity College in Cambridge; but by Queen Mary's being ejected, he was by Queen Elizabeth re-instated, to which he had additionally conferred on him, the Provostship of Eaton College, and was made great Almoner to the Queen.

RICHARD NEAL.

Richard Neal, D. D. Son of a Tallow Chandler, born in King-street, Westminster, and educated in this College; thence elected to St. John's in Cambridge; afterwards taught School, and became Chaplain to Sir William Cecil, Lord Burleigh, and his Son Sir Robert, afterwards Earl of Salisbury, who from some Steps, gave him, Anno 1590, the Vicarage of Chesbunt in Hertfordshire, where Theobalds, then the Seat of that Earl, and afterwards the Palace Royal, was situated situated. Afterwards he was D. D. both in Cambridge and Oxford, and made Master of the Savoy, Dean of this Church, and Clerk of the Closet to King James and King Charles I. which occasioned Burton's Envy with that of Prynne and Bastwick. In 1608, he was consecrated Bishop of Rocheſter, and kept this Deanery in Comendam two Years. After he was removed to Litchfield and Coventry; thence to Lincoln, in 1631; thence to Wincheſter, on Dr. Andrew's Death: While he was in which See, the Commons, and Oliver Cromwell among them, charged him with being a Papist, and encouraging Arminians, which occasioned great Disputes in the House: He was lastly made Archbishop of York, in which See he dy'd the 31st of October 1640, three Days before the Meeting of the Long Parliament, and was buried in his Cathedral of St. Peter's, as some say, or as Wood, in this Abbey-Church. He strongly opposed the Scots, who then struggled for Places, and was an affectionate Subject to his Prince, an indulgent Father to his Clergy, a bountiful Patron to his Chaplains, and a true Friend to all who relied on him.

GEORGE MOUNTIGNE.

George Mountigne, born at Carwood in Yorkshire, educated at Queen's-College in Cambridge, and Lecturer of Gresham-College in LONDON, followed Dr. Neal in his Preferment of Master of the Savoy, Dean of Westminster, of Litchfield and Coventry, in 1610; Bishop of Lincoln in 1617, thence translated to LONDON in 1621, to Durham 1627, and lastly to York 1628; after which Installation he lived not long; but dying aged 59 Years, six Months and two Days, was buried in the Chancel of Carwood Church in Yorkshire, where, against the North Wall is his Marble Buſto in Sleeves, imitative of his Habit, and a large Inſcription under it.

ROBERT TOUNSON.

Robert Tounson, D. D. educated at Cambridge, in Queen's-College, of which he was afterwards Fellow. He was, Anno 1620, made Bishop of Salisbury, dy'd within a Year after, viz. May 15, 1621, as Mr. Wood ſays, in a mean Condition, leaving a Wife named Margaret, and 15 Children behind him. He was buried on the South Side of the Sacristarea, over-against the Door of St. Edmund's Chapel in this Church, but without any Signal of the Place.

JOHN WILLIAMS.

John Williams, born at Aberconway in Caernarvonshire, educated in St. John's College in Cambridge, and Fellow of the ſame: Afterwards Chancellor Egerton entertained him as Chaplain: He was ſoon after Rector of Waldgrave in Northamptonshire, and of Dinan and Grafton, Reſidentiary in, and Prebend to the Church of Lincoln, and Chanter Prebend of Peterborough, and had a Donative in Wales, Priest-Rector of the Savoy, and Chaplain to King James I. and on September 10, 1619, preferred to the Deanery of Salisbury; upon which he reſigned the Savoy, which was given to the Archbishop of Spalato. Soon after this he grew a great Favourite of George Villars, Duke of Buckingham, who procured him to be made a Privy Counſellor, and Dean of this Church, 1620; the Year following he was made Bishop of Lincoln, and Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, and held his Deanery in comendam. After this Preferment, he behaved himſelf not ſo grateful to his Benefactor as was expected; ſo that ſoon after King Charles I's Acceſſion to the Throne, he was removed, and at the Coronation ſet aſide from that great Office due to the Deans of Westminster. Upon Archbishop Laud's Riſe, (which, ſay ſome, was through William's Intereſt) he daily declined, but not without very great Malice expreſſed to that Prelate, whom he ſeemed to contemn much. In the firſt Year of that Prince's Reign, viz. on the 25th of October, 1625, the Great Seal was taken from him, and he removed from the Council, and his Parliamentary Writ reſuſed; upon which he retired, and ſided with the Puritans, among whom he took upon him to talk of Things and Perſons, without a ſtrict Regard to Veracity; and wrote a Book againſt Innovations, as he ſtiled them, in which (ſays Chancellor Hyde) there was much good Learning, and too little Gravity for a Biſhop: He, during his Diſgrace, let fall ſome Expreſſions concerning the King; for which, being tried in the Star-Chamber, and endeavouring, by unfair Methods, to mend his Cauſe, which Biſhop Hacket, who, 'tis evident, writ for him, ſeems to deny, but the contrary is elſe undoubted: Upon this he was fined in the Star-Chamber 10,000 l. ſuſpended ab officio & beneficio, and imprifoned in the Tower during the King's Pleaſure. After this ſome Papers being found in his Seat, Bugden, ſent by Mr. Osbaldeſtone, Maſter of Westminster School, the Biſhop was again fined 8000 l. for divulging ſcandalous Libels againſt Privy-Counſellors. After a conſiderable Confinement, he was, upon the Archbishop of Canterbury's Fall, releaſed; (Ruſſworth mentions a very odd Dream this Prelate had in the Tower upon that Occaſion) the Party then thinking his ſevere Uſage would engage him in any Meaſures: But the Writer of his Life ſays they were diſappointed, for he was, on the contrary, very warm againſt their Proceedings; inſomuch that ſome ſaid, they had conjured up a Spirit they could not lay, and the King was ſo affected with this ſeeming Sincerity, that he gave him a private Audience, and reverſed all Orders made againſt him; by this Means did this artful Statesman enable himſelf to do the more Miſchief; for the Earl of Stratford being brought to his Trial, Biſhop Williams, without conſulting the Bench of his Order, waved their Privilege upon that Occaſion, as Lord Clarendon tells us, which Biſhop Hacket denies, and gives a learned and laborious Speech to defend their Right on that Occaſion, the Chancellor being of Character in the Houſe at that Time, is rather to be depended on; for Biſhop Hacket being then only a Pariſh Rector, ſeems to have had no other Way of knowing Things, but from the Biſhop himſelf, who is unhappily charged by the Chancellor of reporting Things of himſelf, and forming Diſcourſes with an Air of Confidence, which had not the leaſt Foundation in Reality. But to return, the Earl being ſhamefully and illegally condemned, the King's Averſion to ſign for his Execution, was palliated by a Piece of moſt unchriſtian Policy, that the King had a double Conſcience, and might charge the publick one, with what was a Sin againſt the private one; this is what has by ſome been charged upon Archbishop Uſher, but Biſhop Hacket ſays it was the joint Opinion of Uſher, Morton, Williams and Potter; and that the Diſtinction was the Matter of Fact, and that of Law; and that he ſhould leave the latter to his Judges, and the ſame Perſon tells us, that he, Williams, with the reſt, would have gone thro' Fire and Water to have ſaved him: How far this is to be depended on more than the Chancellor, who ſays he wrote his Hiſtory by the King's Order, and had his Materials from his Mouth or Letters, is left to the Publick: A few Weeks after this he was translated to the Archbiſhoprick of York, as ſome ſay, to oblige the Puritans, Puritans, as others to quiet his Spirit : Upon the Cry of No Bishops he was insulted by the Mob, to the House, his Robes tore off his Back, and he well-nigh murdered ; upon which, in Heat, he returned to the Dean's House : He here sent for what Bishops were in Town, and drew up a Protestation against the Proceedings of the House, till they could come safely thither ; upon which rash Proceeding, he, with them, was committed to the Tower ; afterwards, when the King was at Oxford, he repaired to him, where the King gave him a Commission ; and going into Wales, he repaired his Castle of Aberconwey, and fortified it for the King's Service ; but upon some Doubts of his Fidelity, or rather by ill concerted Councils, there was another Governor sent, and he, after a great Expence, in a Manner thrust out ; whereupon he retired to Penryn, where he had a House, and fortified that, and made it a Garrison for the Parliament ; and procuring some Forces from Milton, a Parliament Colonel in those Parts, he went against Aberconwey Castle, and took it from the King by Force, which he kept till his dying Day. After the King's Death he grew very melancholly, and retired at Night usually to an old Chapel to pray by himself ; and at last ended a Life of strange Vicissitude, in the House of the Lady Mostyn at Glodded, near Aberconwey, on the 25th of March, 1649.

JOHN EARL.

John Earl, born in the City of York, Anno 1601, educated at Merton College in Oxford, in 1631, became Chaplain to Philip Earl of Pembroke, who gave him the Rectory of Bishopston in Wiltshire, and Chaplain and Tutor to Charles Prince of Wales 1642 ; created Doctor of Divinity, and named one of the Assembly of Divines, but refused to sit with them. In 1643, he was made Chancellor of the Cathedral of Salisbury, but outed of all for his Loyalty. After the Battle of Worcester he was, at Roan in Normandy, made Chaplain and Clerk of the Closet ; after the Restoration, Dean of this Church ; and An. 1662, made Bishop of Worcester ; thence translated to Salisbury, Anno 1663. He was, in his early Years, reckoned a good Poet, and, in his latter, an excellent Preacher ; and, throughout the Whole, a most religious, mild, good Man. He, among other Pieces, translated the Εἰκὼν Βασιλικήν, and Mr. Hooker's Book of Ecclesiastical Polity into Latin ; which last Writer he resembled, in a pious, peaceable, and primitive Temper. He died at Oxford when the King and Parliament were there, in the Time of the Plague, being then lodged in University College, on the 17th of November, 1665, and was buried before the high Altar in Merton College Church, on the 25th, being attended to his Grave from the publick Schools, by an Herald at Arms, and the principal Persons of the Court and University.

JOHN DOLBEN.

John Dolben was born at Stanwick in Northamptonshire, of which his Father, Dr. William Dolben was Rector : He was educated at the School of this College, and thence elected Student of Christ-Church, Oxford, from Westminster School, Anno Dom. 1640, aged 15 Years. Here he was when King Charles I. was there, and bore Arms for him, and was made first an Ensign, and afterwards a Major in the King's Army. His Majesty's Cause declining, and Oxford being surrendered, he returned to Christ-Church, and took the Degree of A. M. but was the Year following ejected by the Parliament Visitors : He afterwards married a Niece of Dr. Gilbert Sheldon's, and Daughter of Ralph Sheldon, lately Warden of All-Souls College, with whom he lived during the Usurpation, and assisted Mr. John Fell, in his private Chapel. After the King's Restoration he was installed Canon of Christ-Church, afterwards Archdeacon of LONDON, Clerk of the Closet to the King, and Dean of Westminster, in 1662 ; afterwards (viz. 1666) he succeeded Dr. Warner, in the See of Rocheſter, and kept the Deanery in commendam. Afterwards he was made Almoner to the King ; and lastly, upon the Death of Dr. Stern, Archbishop of York, he succeeded in that See, Anno 1683. Lastly, He died at Bishop's-Thorp of the Small-Pox, on the 11th of April, in the Year 1686, and was buried in the Cathedral there.

THOMAS SPRAT.

THIS Gentleman was Son of a Clergyman, born in the County of Dorset, in the Year 1636 : His Education was in Wadham-College in Oxford, of which he was afterwards Fellow ; during his Residence here, he wrote many Pieces of Poetry, of which some were afterwards published, and going with the Tide then, one of them was, upon the Death of Cromwell, at the same Time that Mr. Waller and Mr. Dryden did the same. Soon after the Restoration, when the fine Letters were encouraged, he began to be distinguished for the Excellency of his Parts by George Villars, Duke of Buckingham, who was both a Master and Admirer of them ; by the Duke he was some Time entertained as Chaplain, where he had the Happiness to become acquainted with the Resort of learned Men, who were Visitors to the Duke ; and, amongst the rest, with Mr. Cowley, the Poet, whose Writings in the Pindarick Way (so called at that Time) he nearly imitated, in that excellent Poem on the Plague of Athens. This Friendship between them continued long, even in Mr. Cowley's Retirement at Chertsey, whither he frequently went to visit him, and was one of the Chief of those few Mr. Cowley admitted to his Leisure. Upon Mr. Cowley's Death, he wrote his Life in a very curious Style, which was the first Specimen he published of English Prose, to which he had then lately wholly applied himself, and for which he was afterwards so justly admired : And now his Character every Day grew more considerable, and reaching the Ears of King Charles II. to whom Mr. Sprat was recommended by the Duke of Buckingham's Means. The King, as a singular Instance of his Intentions to promote him, placed him immediately under his Eye, in this his Royal Collegiate Church of Westminster, wherein he was nominated on the 22d Day of February, Anno Dom. 1668 ; and very quickly after made him a Canon of his Royal Chapel of Windſor. At length he was, upon Dr. Dolben's Advance to the See of York, Anno 1683, made Dean of this Church, and soon after, viz. 1684, consecrated to the See of Rocheſter, with Liberty to hold his Deanery in commendam. Anno 1686, he was appointed to sit in the Ecclesiastical Commission upon the Bishop of LONDON ; but, convinced of the Illegality, he afterwards declined acting in it. Soon after the Revolution he fell under the Malice of some wretchedly designing Men, who made Use of the vilest Engines, and the darkeſt Means to take away his Life for High Treason. The Wretches that swore against him were Stephen Blackhead, and one Robert Young, a pretended Priest, but a common and most notorious Cheat, who counterfeited the Bishop's, and other Hands, to an Association, conveyed counterfeit Papers into his House to confirm it, which were miraculously discovered in a Flower-Pot in the Chimney, from whence whence it took its Name of the Flower-Pot-Plot. A Relation of this wicked Contrivance the Bishop wrote and published in two Parts, printed in the Savoy, Anno 1693, and lately reprinted, which low and intricate Subject, he has managed in a Manner that shews what a Command he had of Stile and Language, and could equally turn to masterly and low Subjects. He publish'd a History of the Royal Society, which for the Language and Manner, has been universally admir'd: And likewise an Account of the Ryehouse-Plot, with other Pieces, in which he has universally acquired the Character of the greatest Refiner and Master of our Language.

He was a Gentleman of no less Elegance of Life than Stile, which made his Conversation coveted and admired by our greatest and most polite Men. In his Conversation he had an easiness like that of his Writing, which at the same Time raised Respect and Love: He was a Gentleman of great Humanity, and no less Charity; the Channels of which prevented that Tide of Wealth to raise high, which continually flowed in upon him: He had a peculiar Regard to the College School, and was the Means of fixing Dr. Friend, the late Master and Ornament of it there, under whose happy Conduct, that Genius which always presided there, and produced so great and many Ornaments of our Church and Kingdom, still promises us continual Supplies; when Stations in either shall be ready to receive them: But to return, this excellent Prelate, after a long Life of 77 Years, died purely of Age, on the 20th of May, Anno Dom. 1713, and was buried in this Collegiate Church, in the Chapel dedicated to St. Nickolas, where has been since erected a handsome and curious Monument of veined Marble, affixed high, against the Wall, at the Charge of Dr. Friend, the Physician, and a curious Latin Inscription, shewing his Excellencies.

FRANCIS ATTERBURY.

THIS Gentleman was the Son of the Rev. Dr. Atterbury, Rector of Milton, near Newport-Pagnel in Buckinghamshire: He was educated at the Royal Grammar-School of Westminster, and from thence elected to Christ-Church College in Oxford, where he was soon distinguish'd for his fine Wit, and polite Erudition, and gave the Publick a remarkable Instance of the Excellency of his Poetick Vein, in an admirable Latin Version of Mr. Dryden's Absalom and Achitophel; and an equal Elegance is shewn in his English poetical Compositions.

WHILE he continu'd in the University, there happen'd, upon a slight Occasion, a very famous Controversy of Wit and Learning, wherein he is said to have borne no inconsiderable Part, tho' it was thought proper at that Time to have the Honour of it devolv'd upon another.

THE Occasion of the Dispute was this: "The Hon. Mr. Boyle, late Lord Orrery, was a Student in Christ-Church, and under the Tuition of Dr. Atterbury, when about the Year 1695, he oblig'd the World with a new Edition of Phalaris's Epistles; but complains in the Preface, of Dr. Bentley, the King's Library-keeper, upon the Account of a certain Copy, that might have assisted the Edition, had he not deny'd him the Inspection of it, pro sua singulari Humanitate." These Words so exasperated the Doctor, that he instantly thought upon Revenge, and finding a Passage in Sir William Temple's Miscellanies, wherein he gives vast Commendation to Æsop and Phalaris, as two Antients that had excell'd, in their Way, all that ever was wrote by Moderns: He hereupon founds a long Letter to his Friend Dr. Wotton, who had the State of Antient and Modern Learning then under his Pen, telling him, "That the Epistles, which went under Phalaris's Name, were not to be rank'd among antient Compositions, that they were of much later Date than their pretended Author, and probably the Work of some Modern Sophist.

THIS he does with a great Shew of recondite Learning, but not so much to convince the World of Sir William's Mistake, as to disparage the Oxford Edition, and represent the honourable Person concerned in it, as insufficient for the Work, devoid of all critical Knowledge, and unacquainted with the Author he pretended to publish. It was not long however, before there came out an Answer to this Elaborate Piece of Dr. Bentley's, but such an Answer as perhaps never appear'd in any Language before. It may be justly call'd the Pride and Glory of the Moderns, and a Confutation of all that can be said in Preference of the Antients. There is such an Eloquence of Stile, and Justness of Expression, exact Method, tierce Wit, fine Raillery and genteel Satyr thro' the Whole, that whoever is minded to be curiously entertained for a While, let him read it; whoever desires to overcome in the Philological Way, let him make it his Pattern, and learn to imitate it: He will soon perceive therein, such a Strength of Genius, and Warmth of Invention, guided by Art, and kept in by the Laws of correct Writing; such an easy Display of Learning, happy Declension of his Adversary's Force, and foiling him frequently at his own Weapon, as will induce him to be of Opinion, viz. that Dr. Bentley was certainly cut down by some eminent Master, however decent it might be thought at that Time for a young Gentleman to give him the Coup de Grace, and sharpen it with this Sarcastm, Pallas te hoc vulnere Pallas immolat.

WHAT may convince the World of the Truth of this common Conjecture, is the Figure that he makes in another fam'd Controversy, wherein he avowdly stands alone, and treats his Adversary, (no less an Adversary than the Rev. Dr. Wake, present Archbishop of Canterbury) in the same keen Manner.

To give the Reader a small Insight into the Grounds of this Controversy, it may not be improper to set before him the Source from whence the Dispute arose.

ABOUT the Year 1696, there came out a Pamphlet supposed to be written by the Reverend Dr. Binckes, occasioned by the Interruption of Convocations, and intitl'd, A Letter to a Convocation Man, concerning the Rights, Powers, and Privileges of that Body. The Principal Matters which that Author insisted on, were, First, The Clergy's Right to frequent Synods, according to the Canons of the Christian Church, and Constitution of this Realm. Secondly, Their Right of Meeting and Sitting in Convocation, as often as a new Parliament meets and sits. And Thirdly, A Right of Treating and Deliberating about such Affairs as lie within their proper Sphere, and of coming to fit Resolutions upon them, without being necessitated antecedently to qualify themselves for such Acts and Debates, by a Licence under the Broad Seal of England. The Opinions of Men in both Houses of Convocation, were strangely divided about these Questions; some thought them Rights intirely due to the Clergy, and essential to the Being of Ecclesiastical Synods; others, introductive of too bold an Independancy, and Encroachments upon Regal Authority, not to be borne; among those of the latter Opinion, appear'd Dr. Wake, and in the Year 1697, published his Book intitl'd, The Authority of Christian Princes over their Ecclesiastical Synods asserted; with particular Respect to their Convocations of the Clergy of the Church of their

England. The Design of which Work, was, as he declared in his Appeal, &c. no other than to defend the King's Supremacy. "I was not so little acquainted, says he, with the Tempers and Designs of a certain Party among us, as not to know that my Undertaking would be likely to displease those, who think any the last Authority that is given to his present Majesty, to be an Encroachment either upon the Civil or Ecclesiastical Rights." And in another Place, "Thus far, 'tis plain, (adds he) they have gone towards it, that as they have before shewn the Church to be out of the Protection of the Prince, so they will by and by declare the Prince to be out of the Bosom of the Church, &c. The World seemed to be satisfied with Dr. Wake's Sentiments, 'till in the Year 1700, Dr. Atterbury publish'd, (without his Name) an Answer to his Treatise, and thus accosts the Reader in his Preface, "I confess I came to Dr. Wake's Book, with Expectations of finding there, whatever was necessary to set this Matter in a clear Light: The Bulk of the Work, the Appearance of Learning it carry'd, and the great Authority by which it endeavour'd to recommend itself, all seem'd to promise Exactness: But upon perusing it, to my Surprise, I found that it was a shallow empty Performance, written without any Knowledge of our Constitution, any Skill in the particular Subject of Debate, upon such Principles as are destructive of all our Civil, as well as Ecclesiastical Liberties, and with such Aspersions on the Clergy, both dead and living, as were no less injurious to the Body, than his Doctrine.

THE very best Construction, continues he, that has been put upon Dr. Wake's Attempt by candid Readers, is, that it was an Endeavour to advance the Prerogative of the Prince in Church Matters as high, and to depress the Interest of the Subject-Spiritual as low as ever he could, with any Colour of Truth: But, surely, this itself is no very creditable Account of it: Those Casuists that have taken Pains to instruct Men how near they may possibly come to a Sin without actually sinning, have not been reckon'd the honest Part of their Profession; and those Divines, who read Lessons to Princes, how to strain their Ecclesiastical Power to the utmost without exceeding it, and oppress their Clergy legally, are not surely the best Men of their Order; they are Church Empsons and Dudleys, and usually find the Fate of such wretched Instruments to be detested by the one Side, and at last abandoned by the other.

WERE all that Dr. Wake says strictly true and justifiable, yet whether the labouring the Point so heartily as he does, and shewing himself so willing to prove the Church to have no Rights and Privileges, be a very decent Part in a Clergyman, he leaves his Friends to consider. The World, I fear, is so ill-natur'd as to believe that seldom any Man is over-busy in lessening the Publick Interests of that Body to which he belongs, who does not hope to find his private Account in it. But, when all a Man advances is not only ill-designed, but ill-grounded, and his Principles are as false as they are scandalous, (as I have evidently proved his to be) there are no Names and Censures too bad to be bestowed on such Writers and their Writings.

It was the Abhorrence I had of this unworthy Treatment which the Reputation and Rights of the Order have found from Dr. Wake, and of the Slavish Tendency of his Principles, in Respect both to the Church and State, that gave Resolutions of exposing the Weakness and Insincerity of his Attempt, and of doing Right to Truth and an injured Constitution.

To this Book of Dr. Atterbury's, Dr. Wake, in the Year 1703, published a Reply in Folio, entitled, The State of the Church and Clergy of England, &c. In the Preface whereof, he makes this Complaint: "Upon my first Perusal (of what Dr. Atterbury had wrote) I saw a Spirit of Wrath and Uncharitableness, accompanied with such an Assurance of the then unknown Author's Abilities for such an Undertaking, as I had hardly ever met with in the like Degree before: I perceived that he desired, in the direct Reverse of what I had professed, to be looked upon to have written with Care and Deliberation, to have fully searched into his Subject, and to have been no less plentifully stored with Materials of all Kinds for the perfect clearing of it. And though I do not think a Man of Pride and Arrogance, full of himself, and a Despiser of all others, to be generally best qualified to know either himself or the Truth, yet I hoped I should here find some-what to clear the one, and thereby to atone for, if not justify, the other.

IN my Examination of the whole Book, I found in it enough to commend the Wit, tho' not the Spirit of him who wrote it. To pay what is due even to an Adversary, it must be allowed that Dr. Atterbury has done all that a Man of forward Parts, and a hearty Zeal could do, to defend the Cause which he had espoused; he has chosen the most plausible Topics of Argumentation; he has given them all the Advantage that either a sprightly Wit, or a good Assurance, could afford them. But he wanted one Thing; he had no Truth on his Side: And Error, though it may be paliated by an artificial Manager, such as Dr. Atterbury, without Controversy is to be disguised so as to deceive, sometimes, even a wary Reader; yet it will not bear a strict Examination: And accordingly I have shewn him, notwithstanding all his other Endowments (in which, if he pleases, he shall have my free Consent to stand above me) to have deluded the World with a meer Romance, and, from the one End of his Discourse to the other, to have delivered a History, not of what was really, but of what it was his Interest to make it believe had been done. — This I can with great Sincerity profess, and having said it, I shall have done; I have not willingly mistaken, much less have I misrepresented, any Matter of Fact; I have not knowingly concealed any Thing that made against me; I have asserted nothing but what I verily believe to be the Truth; and I have defended it with nothing but what, after a diligent Examination, I take to be true. Under this Assurance I cheerfully commit myself, and my Cause, to the Judgment of all wise and charitable, and indifferent Persons; for the rest, and particularly for Dr. Atterbury, they have their Liberty; let them think, let them speak, let them write as they please of me.

THESE Passages are related by the Author of his Life, to let the Reader know with what Spirit and Resolution these two Disputants entered the Lists; how they behaved, and to whom the Victory fell, is not so well decided. Men speak variously, and accordingly as they are affected: But the general Opinion is, that however Truth may be on Dr. Wake's Side, yet the Appearance of it was certainly with Dr. Atterbury; and that whatever he might want in Point of Argument and Fact, he abundantly supply'd by the Elegance of his Style, his fine Turn of Thought, and Copiousness of Invention; so that, from a dry and intricate Subject, he has furnished out a very curious Entertainment for his Reader. The Consequence of the Debate, however, proved very advantageous to them both. Dr. Wake was soon promoted to the Bench of Bishops, and Dr. Atterbury had instantly his Doctor of Divinity's Degree presented him by the University, and some honorary Preferments, not long after, conferred upon him for his Performance.

SOME Time before the Death of his Father, he made Application to the late Earl of Nottingham to succeed in the Rectory of Milton; but being disappointed of what he then called the Height of his Ambition, he betook himself to Town, where, in a short Time, he distinguished himself in such a Manner, that he was made Chaplain to their Majesties, King William and Queen Mary, and Preacher at Bridewell; the Governors of which Hospital afterwards recommended him to the Lectureship of St. Bridget's.

WHILE he continued in this Station, the Convocation-Controversy sprung up, and his Vindication of the Rights, Powers, and Privileges of that Venerable Body, (which he published in 1700) gained him great Applause among his Brethren, and proved a successful Step to his Preferment afterwards.

IN the Year 1701, he preached before the Honourable House of Commons, and gave such an accurate Description of our Constitution, both Civil and Ecclesiastical, and such a fine Commendation of King William, as was a great Means to continue him Chaplain. After the King's Decease, and when others were removed from that honourable Office, Queen Anne, upon her Accession to the Throne, made him her Chaplain, and advanced him afterwards to the Deanery of Carlisle, very probably for the amiable Character he had given her in his Sermon before the House of Commons, on the 8th of March 1703-4.

SIR Jonathan Trelawney, the Lord Bishop of Exeter, made him Archdeacon of Totness, and Canon-Residentary of Exeter, 1707.

SIR John Trevor, a great Discerner of Men and their Abilities, was so struck with his Fame, and charmed with his Eloquence, that he made him Preacher of the Rolls Chapel in 1709.

THE Convocation of the Clergy chose him unanimously their Prolocutor 1710, in thankful Remembrance of what Honour he had done them, when he magnified their Office, and evinc'd the Dignity of the Priesthood in a florid Discourse before the Sons of the Clergy, not many Months before.

IT is certain that his elegant and pathetick Sermon upon the Death of Prince George, designed to move the Passions, and calculated for the Consolation of the Queen, had this Effect, that it gained him the Deanery of Christ-Church in 1711; notwithstanding the Competition of Dr. Smallridge, no contemptible Candidate, and the warm Applications that, by Men of Power and Authority, were made in his Behalf; and 'tis not unlikely that the Remembrance of the same Sermon pleaded in his Favour, and mightily befriended the Earl of Oxford's Recommendation of him: When the Queen was pleased, in the Year 1713, to promote him to the Bishoprick of Rochester, the Height of his Preferment, but not of his Ambition, for it was the Primacy of all England that he aimed at, and, had not the Queen died as she did, 'twas very likely he would have obtained it.

AFTER the Accession of his Majesty King George I. most of the Party with whom the Bishop of Rochester had joined himself, made Tenders of their Services to him; which, when they found not so well received as they imagined they would have been, and being destitute of all Hopes of attaining their Employments again, resolved upon other Measures, and betook themselves to another Master. The Earl of Mar went into the Highlands of Scotland, and there began a formal Rebellion. Foster in Northumberland was actually in Arms, and many more Conspirators were ripe for an Insurrection: The Pretender's Declaration, artfully penned enough, and adapted to the prevailing Discontents of the Nation, was posted up in most Market-Towns, and in some Places his Title proclaimed. In this Juncture of Affairs, 'twas thought needful, by most Bodies of Men, to give the Government all possible Assurance of their Fidelity and Allegiance; and accordingly there was published a Declaration of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Bishops in and near LONDON, testifying their Abhorrence of the present Rebellion, and an Exhortation to the Clergy and People under their Care, to be zealous in the Discharge of their Duties to his Majesty King George.

BUT this Declaration the Bishop of Rochester refused to sign, and drew a very worthy and well-affected Prelate, Bishop Smallridge, into the same Refusal. "What! shall I sign a Paper, says he with himself, for the Benefit of those that will do nothing for me? Shall I recognize the Title of him that has already discarded me from his Favour and good Esteem? Shall I discountenance an Undertaking that may, perhaps, turn up Trump for me at last? What will my good Friend the D. of Or—d say, if he should come and see my Hand to this infamous Libel? How will he upbraid my Pusillanimity and Want of Gratitude, to enter into any Combination against him? And how must the Pretender look upon those that do all this, that pray against him, that address against him, that swear against him, and abjure him upon every Turn? At other Times there may be a Dispensation for these Things; but this is a Critical Juncture, and none knows who may be uppermost, and therefore e'en fight Dog fight Bear". Ergo propria in pelle quiescam. This certainly was the hidden Language of the Man, and the true Reason of his not coming into the Declaration, though the pretended one was, a just Offence taken at some unbecoming Reflections cast upon a Party that were not inferior to any in Point of Loyalty, as he said. The Passage is this: We are the more concerned, that both the Clergy and People of our Communion should shew themselves hearty Friends to the Government upon this Occasion, to vindicate the Honour of the Church of England, because the chief Hopes of our Enemies seem to arise from Discontents artfully raised amongst us, and because "some who have valued themselves, and have been too much valued by others, for a pretended Zeal for the Church, have joined with the Papists in these wicked Attempts"; which, as they must ruin the Church if they succeed, so they cannot well end without great Reproach to it, if the rest of us do not clearly and heartily declare our Detestation of such Practices.

THE Reader may judge, whether there be any Thing in these Words so exceptionable, as to countenance such a Behaviour, at such a Time; had there not been some other Purposes to be served by such an Act of Disloyalty?

THAT Rebellion, however, was happily quelled by his Majesty's wife Counsels, and successful Arms, after which the Land was for some Time at rest; but in the Year 1722, a Discovery was made of a black and dangerous Conspiracy, carried on by Persons of Figure and Distinction here at home, in Conjunction with Traitors abroad, in order to place the Pretender on the Throne of these Kingdoms. The Government had sufficient Reason to suspect Dr. Atterbury, who had been at the Head of the Protesters, to be no small Agent in this Conspiracy, and did therefore order him to be be apprehended. To this Purpose two Officers, the Under-Secretary and a Messenger, (as we have the Matter recounted in a Letter to Paris, supposed to be wrote by Kelly) on August 24, 1722, went, about Two o'Clock in the Afternoon, to the Bishop's House at Westminster, where he then was, with Orders to bring him and his Papers before the Council. He happened to be in his Night-Gown when they came in; and being made acquainted with their Business, he desired Time to dress himself: In the mean Time his Secretary came in, and the Officers, &c. went to search for his Papers; in the sealing of which, the Messenger brought a Paper which he pretended to have found in his Close-Stool; and desired that it might be sealed up with the rest. His Lordship observing it, and believing it to be a forged one desired the Officers not to do it, and to bear Witness, that the Paper was not caught with him; but notwithstanding they did it; and though they behaved themselves with some Respect to him, yet they allowed the Messengers to treat him with the utmost Insolence, who pulled and hauled him about, and said, if he did not make more haste, and put on his Shirt, &c. they would carry him away naked as he was: Upon which, he desired his Secretary to see his Papers all sealed up, and went himself directly to the Cock-Pit, where the Council waited for him. How this agrees with what the Author of the Letter to the Clergy of the Church of England tells us, is not to be conceived, unless we can imagine that those who were appointed to secure him and his Papers, and at the same Time commanded to treat him with all the Respect he treats of, forgot the Orders of their Superiors, and fell into unwarrantable ill Usage of him, of their own Accord. However this was, when he before came the Council he behaved with a great deal of Calmness, and they with much Civility towards him: He had Liberty to speak for himself as much as he pleased, and they listened to his Defence with a great deal of Attention; and, what is more than ordinary in such Cases, after he had withdrawn he had twice Liberty to re-enter the Council-Chamber, to make for himself such Representations and Requests as he thought proper. 'Tis said, that while he was under Examination, he chanced to make Use of our Saviour's Answer to the Jewish Council, while he stood before them: If I tell you, you will not believe me; and if I also ask you, you will not answer me, nor let me go, Luke xxii. v. 67, 68. which some accounted an arrogant Assumption in him, and a Kind of Indignity put upon the Council. After three Quarters of an Hour's Stay at the Cock-Pit, he was sent to the Tower privately, in his own Coach, and without any Manner of Noise or Observation: But if his Account may be credited, the Usage he met with was not so commendable as might be wished, for his Complaint to the House of Lords is this ——— "I have been under a very long and close Confinement, and have been treated with such Severity, and so great Indignity, as, I believe, no Prisoner in the Tower of my Age and Function, and Rank, ever was; by which Means, what Strength and Use of my Limbs I had when I was first committed in August last, is now so far declined, that I am very unfit to make my Defence against a Bill of such an extraordinary Nature: The great Weakness of Body and Mind under which I labour, such Usage, such Hardship, such Insults, as I have undergone, might have broken a more resolute Spirit, and much stronger Constitution than falls to my Share". And, in that Letter of his, which was intercepted 25 February, 1722-3, there is a Passage of very dark and ambiguous Import: "You may, says he

"to his Friend, when you see Br———", impart the Story of that Villany to him, and desire his Advice upon it; at what Time, and in what Manner it may be proper for me to bring that Matter on the Stage, and shew what extraordinary Methods are taken to get at me, and beg the Lord's Protection in the Case against such Practice. I hope William has not given in to it, and then my Way will (some Time or other) be clearer towards a Complaint, whenever it is proper; I think the Rascal, my Neighbour, may be summoned before the Lords, and made to tell who employed him to proffer such Sums, and be punished by them for such Practices". Who the Person is that he stigmatizes with this odious Character, is not so apparent; no one, certainly, that the Government employed or authorized to use him ill, much less to oppress, by Methods of Violence and Corruption, as he, in the Warmth of his Resentment seems to insinuate; that Thought is abhorrent to Men of Honour and Integrity; however, an unhappy Misunderstanding between him and Colonel Williamson, the Deputy-Lieutenant of the Tower, from his very first Commitment, might foment a Jealousy and Suspicion in him of I know not what; but let that pass. The Commitment of a Bishop upon a Suspicion of High Treason, as it was a Thing rarely practised since the Reformation, so it occasioned various Speculations among the People. Those that were the Bishop's Friends, and pretended to the greatest Intimacy with him, laid the whole Odium of the Matter upon the Ministry. They knew the Bishop so well, they said, his Love to our Constitution, and Attachment to the Protestant Succession, his professed Abhorrence of Popery, and settled Contempt of the Pretender, such Caution and Prudence, and Circumspection in all his Actions, would never allow him to engage in any Attempt of subverting the Government, so hazardous in itself, and so repugnant to his Principles, and therefore they imputed all to the Malice and Management of a great Minister of State or two, who were resolved to remove him, on Account of some Personal Prejudices, as well as the constant Molestation he gave them in Parliament, and the particular Influence and Activity he had shewn in the late Election; and in this Persuasion they continue still, obstinate, and more confirmed, since Kelly, at the Bar of the House of Lords, has solemnly acquitted him from any Knowledge of the Conspiracy, or criminal Correspondence with him, and resolved all into pure Invention and Contrivance of Neynoe, a Wretch bribed with Money and fair Promises to devise a Plot, and supposititious Letters, that others might have a Handle to pull down the Pride of that haughty Prelate, and squeeze other innocent Persons, as he expresses it. Those that were Friends to the Ministry, were of a contrary Opinion, that the Bishop was secretly a Favourer of the Pretender's Cause, and had formerly been tampering with Things of that Nature, even in the Queen's Time, and while his Party was excluded Power; but, upon their Re-admission, relinquished that Pursuit, and his Confederates therein, and became a good Subject again: They urged, that the Influence which the late Duke of Ormond had over him, assisted with his own private Ambition and Revenge, might prompt him to many Things, contrary to his declared Sentiments, and inconsistent with the Cunning and Caution, which, in other Cases, he was Master of: And, to obviate the Difficulty of the Pretender's Bigottry, and his Aversion to Popery, they talked of a certain new-invented Scheme of his, not to receive the Pretender, whose Principles were incurable, but his Son only, into the Kingdom; that he was to be educated a Protestant in the Church of England, and the Bishop made Guardian and Lord Protector during his Minority; a prodigious Design, and not unlike the ambitious Spirit of the Man, though he had not the Luck to accomplish it!

THESE, and many more Speculations, amused the World at that Time, and Men judged according as their Affections ran, till a Report from the Committee of the House of Commons was published, which set the Conspiracy in a right Light. What the Bishop is chiefly charged with in that Report, is, carrying on a traiterous Correspondence Abroad, in order to raise an Insurrection in the Kingdom, and to procure foreign Forces to invade it; and, to support this Accusation, there are three Letters produced, to General Dillon, the late Lord Mar, and the Pretender himself, under the feigned Names of Chivers, Musgrave, and Jackson, which are of a dangerous Nature. These Letters themselves may be seen in the Report of the Secret Committee, and were the chief Foundation of the Resolution taken in the House of Commons on March 11. That Francis Lord Bishop of Rochester was principally concerned in forming, directing, and carrying on a wicked and detestable Conspiracy, for invading these Kingdoms with a Foreign Force, and for raising Insurrections and a Rebellion at Home, in order to subvert our present Happy Establishment in Church and State, by placing a Popish Pretender upon the Throne.

THIS Procedure, to punish by Way of Bill, occasioned many warm Debates in the House of Commons: Those that opposed it, made use of such Arguments as these: — That, by the Rules of natural Justice, Laws should be first made for the Direction of Men's Obedience, before they can be deemed guilty; that where there is no antecedent Law, there is properly no Transgression; and to punish therefore by a Law, made after the Offence committed, was repugnant to Reason, and contrary to Justice. That Bills of Attainder were always Blemishes to the Reigns wherein they passed, and might be detrimental to the Interest and Security of his Majesty's Government; that they were injurious to the Judicial Power of the House of Lords, and destructive of the Use of Juries, the distinguishing Privilege of the People of this Nation; prejudicial to the known Liberty and Safety of an English Subject, and never to be used but in Cases of extreme Necessity, and where the Preservation of the State plainly required; as, in the present Case, there was not that Call and Necessity: That the greater the Crime and Accusation against any Person was, the clearer and more convincing should the Evidence against him be: That anonymous and decyphered Letter, forced Constructions, Hear-says, and Inuendo's, were no Conviction of the Bishop's Guilt; no Grounds to support the Allegations in the Preamble of the Bill, For inflicting Pains and Penalties upon him; no Evidence that could be accepted in any other Court of Judicature; but a Case, which if admitted, would be a fatal Precedent, such as might in Time come home to them all, and make their latest Posterity rue.

THOSE that argued for the Bill, alledged, That this was a Case of the utmost Necessity, and wherein the Security of the Government was highly concerned. That the Conspiracy in itself was dangerous, as well as detestable; big with Mischiefs of all Kinds, and destructive of every Thing that was valuable among us. That the Conspirators had carried it on with the utmost Cunning as well as Wickedness, and skreened and secured themselves under the Shelter of the Law. That tho' there appeared no legal Evidence against them, yet there was such a Complication of Criminal Circumstances, as amounted to the Force, though not the Formality of Evidence; and such, as in the Judgment of the Legislature (which was not tied down to the common Rules of other Courts) might be reputed a reasonable Conviction; that, in short, there was no other Way of bringing Offenders, notoriously guilty, though artfully disguised, to condign Punishment; and yet to let them escape, would be giving Comfort and Encouragement to such Practices for the future, and promising Indemnity to Clandestine Treason. That this Way of proceeding has always been allowed in Cases of the like Nature; in the Case of Sir John Fenwick; in the Case of the intended Assassins of King William III. and, if used, cannot fail of having more Advantages to the State, than pernicious Consequences attending it. That, if ever it was needful, now is the Time to appear strenuous in the Cause of the present Establishment, and to defeat the Designs of the Pretender and his Agents for ever, by letting them see that there is no Design, though never so deeply laid, and covertly carried on, that can escape the Vigilance of the Ministry, or any Person, though never so high in Station, or sacred in Function, (let him hide his Deeds of Darkness in what Obscurity he pleases) but must expect to be punished, when once he is detected. That the Bishop, in particular, who had been so troublesome to the Government and turbulent in his Proceedings, who had added Perjury and Perfidy to his undutiful Behaviour, and by his ill Example impaired in others a due Sense and Consideration of Publick Oaths, ought least of all to expect Favour and Indulgence, but rather more Rigour and Unrelenting Severity, as his Guilt had been more heinous, his Example more pernicious, and his Obligations to act otherwise more numerous and coercive.

THESE were the Arguments, which, at that Time, prevailed both in the House and elsewhere; and accordingly a Bill was brought in on April the 4th, to inflict certain Pains and Penalties on Francis Lord Bishop of Rochester, and a Copy of the Preamble, wherein all the Chief Charges against him were contained: "As
" that he had been deeply concerned in forming, &c. a wicked and detestable Conspiracy,
" and had been a principal Actor therein; that " he had done this, by traiterously consulting
" and corresponding with divers Persons here, to " raise an Insurrection in this Kingdom, and " procure Foreign Forces to invade it: That he " had done this, by traiterously corresponding " with the same wicked Intent, with the Pretender himself, and other Persons Abroad employed by him, knowing them to be so employed: That his Design in all this was to " depose his Majesty King George; to subvert
" our present Constitution both in Church and " State, and to place a Popish Pretender upon " the Throne; in Consequence to deprive us of " our Religion, Laws and Liberties; to involve " us in Blood and Ruin, and to subject us to " the Bondage and Oppression of Romish Superstition and arbitrary Power.

THESE Charges and Accusations against him were sent by the Serjeant at Arms, and Notice withal given him, that he had the Liberty of Counsel and Solicitors granted him, and all other Things necessary for his Defence.

THE Bishop, 'tis plain, both by his intercepted Letter at the Tower, and his own Acknowledgment to the Lords, expected nothing more than an Impeachment to be lodged against him, but never prosecuted, as in the Cases of the Lord Danby, and the Earl of Oxford; but when he perceived that the Commons intended to proceed against him by Bill, and to treat him with with a more unavoidable and expeditious Severity than he imagined, he was a little surprized at first, and seemed to express the Symptoms of such a Fear, as may, in some sudden and unexpected Cases, be incident to the boldest Man. He recovered himself, in a short Time, and, with a Resolution to make the best Defence he could, but such as was consistent with his Honour and Dignity, he sent his Petition to the House of Lords March the 29th, praying for their Direction and Advice, as to his Conduct in that Conjunction, and what their Lordships Opinion might be, in Relation to a standing Order, Prohibiting, on a Penalty, any Lord to appear, either in Person, or by his Counsel, before the House of Commons, to answer any Accusation there,

THE Debates among the Lords, upon this Occasion, were many; the Privileges peculiar to their House were largely insisted on, and the late Intrenchments made upon them, by the Commons, loudly complained of; but, at last, it was carried by a great Majority, that the Bishop, being only a Lord in Parliament, and no Peer, might, without any Diminution to the Honour of that House, appear in the House of Commons, if he thought fit, and in what Manner he thought fit, to make the best Defence and Vindication that he could. The Bishop, however, was not well pleased with this Concession, nor willing to try his Fate where he thought himself injured and pre-judged already, and therefore sent a Letter on April the 4th to the Speaker of the House of Commons, acquainting him with the Reasons that had determined him, not to give that House any Trouble concerning a Bill therein depending against him, but he should be ready to make his Defence and Plea against it, when it came to be argued in another House, whereof he had the Honour to be a Member. It so happened, that a Letter, which fell into the Ministry's Hands, was sealed with the Seal of an Impression very much like, if not the very same, with the Seal which had been observed on a certain criminal Letter, for which he was accused. This was a Circumstance not to be neglected, because it might conduce to ascertain those Letters to be his, as well as confirm some other Instances that pointed at his Guilt; and thereupon Orders were immediately sent to the Tower, to seize all the Seals that were found about him or his Servants, and to bring them instantly away, to have their Impressions compared. Col. Williamson, in this, did no more than he was commanded; but, on the 5th of April, the Bishop sent a Petition to the House of Lords, complaining, That the said Williamson, assisted by Persons under his Authority, had, by Violence, searched him, carried away two Seals, and seized a Paper in his Pocket, which was a Letter to his Solicitor; searched his two Servants likewise, and taken away a Seal from one of them; and thereupon praying, that, as a Lord of Parliament, and Member of that House, he might have Relief and Protection.

WHAT made this Complaint the more remarkable, was, his having a Bill depending against him in the House of Commons at this Time, and the Benefit of Counsel and Solicitors allowed him for making his Defence. It seemed a little hard, therefore, and unreasonable, that his Letter to his Solicitor should be seized, or any Thing forcibly wrested from him, that related to his Vindication: A Violation of the Rules of natural Justice, as well as the fundamental and known Laws of the Realm, some called it, that any Person, and more especially a Lord of Parliament, being under Imprisonment and Accusation of High Treason, should, by Terror, or other Violence, be, in any Degree, disturbed in, or disabled from making his Defence; but the Thing being judged necessary at that Time, and directed by the Ministry, to enable them to make a farther Discovery, the Petition was dismissed by a great Majority, and the Commons proceeded with their usual Zeal and Vigour, till, on the 9th of April, they passed the Bill against him, which enacts, "That after the first of June 1723, he "shall be deprived of all his Offices, Dignities, "Promotions, and Benefices Ecclesiastical whatsoever; and that, from thenceforth, the same "shall be actually void, as if he were naturally "dead; and that he shall, for ever, be disabled, "and rendered incapable from holding or enjoying any Office, Dignity or Emolument, within this Realm, or any other his Majesty's Dominions; as also from exercising any Office, Ecclesiastical or Spiritual whatever; that he "shall suffer perpetual Exile, and be for ever "banished this Realm, and all other his Majesty's Dominions; that he shall depart out of "the same by the 25th of June next; and if he "return into, or be found within the Realm, "or any other his Majesty's Dominions, after the "said 25th of June, he, being thereof lawfully "convicted, shall suffer as a Felon, without "Benefit of Clergy, and shall be utterly incapable of any Pardon from his Majesty, his Heirs or Successors. That all Persons who shall be "aiding and assisting to his Return into this "Realm, or any other his Majesty's Dominions, "or shall conceal him within the same, being "lawfully convicted thereof, shall be adjudged "guilty of Felony, without Benefit of Clergy. "That if any of his Majesty's Subjects (except "such Persons as shall be licensed for that Purpose under the Sign Manual) shall, after the "25th of June, hold any Correspondence in "Person with him, within this Realm, or without; or by Letters, Messages, or otherwise, "or with any Person employed by him, knowing such Person to be so employed, they shall, "on Conviction, be adjudged Felons without "Benefit of Clergy: And, lastly, That Offences against this Act, committed out of this "Realm, may be tried in any County within "Great Britain.

THESE were the several Pains and Penalties which passed into an Act against Dr. Atterbury, the 9th of April; and the same Day Mr. Yonge was ordered to carry it to the Lords, and desire their Concurrence. After many long and earnest Debates on both Sides, the Lords, on the 16th of May, 1723, passed the Bill by a great Majority of Voices, viz. 83 to 43; and on the 27th of the same Month the King came to the House and gave the Royal Assent.

'Tis reported the King passed this Bill with some Regret, being much concerned, as he said; that there should be any just Occasion of dooming to perpetual Banishment, a Bishop of the Church of England; a Man of such eminent Parts and Learning, and one who had been so nearly attendant on him at his Coronation. To alleviate however, in some Measure, the Severity of this Sentence, and that he might not be entirely cut off from the Comforts of his Children, and Conversation of his Friends, he permitted his Daughter to attend him in his Travels; and thro' the Hands of her Husband, allowed him a Correspondence and Intercourse with his native Country.

DR. Atterbury had now nothing else to do but to settle his Affairs, and dispose of his Effects and prepare for his Departure. This Indulgence of the King had made him easy; and though it was thought proper, for some Reasons, to detain him in Custody, during his Stay, yet his Friends, from the Time that his Hearing before the House of Lords was over, had free free Access to him; and their Liberality on this Occasion was profusely great, supplying the Defects of his Fortune, and enabling him to live in a strange Country, without any Danger of Distress: So that when the two great Stings of Banishment, Want of Money, and Want of Intercourse with the World, were happily removed, he took Leave of his Friends (who, the Day before, came in great Numbers to bid him their last Adieu) with a great deal of Serenity and seeming Resignation; and, on June the 18th, between Twelve and One at Noon, was carried in a Chair from his Apartment in the Tower to the Water Side; and thence in a Barge appointed to wait on him (wherein were Mr. Morrice and his Wife, Col. Williamson, and Capt. Lawrence, Commander of the Man of War that was to carry him over) he fell down with the Tide, and, going on board the aforesaid Ship, was conveyed to France, where here remained till the Time of his Death, which was A. D. 1733.

SAMUEL BRADFORD.

THIS Gentleman, upon the Deprivation of Dr. Atterbury, was translated from the Bishoprick of Carlisle to that of Rochester, and made also Dean of Westminster; he was accounted a Man of good Learning and great Moderation, was Master of Corpus Christi College in Cambridge, and Rector of St. Mary le Bow in Cheapside, before he was consecrated Bishop of Carlisle. On the Revival of the most Honourable Order of the Bath, he was Dean of that Order, as being Dean of Westminster. He died on the 17th of May, 1731.

JOSEPH WILCOX,

THEN Bishop of Gloucester, succeeded, and is at present Bishop of Rochester, and Dean of this Collegiate Church.

The PARISH of St. MARGARET.

THE Parish Church of St. Margaret, some Time within the Abbey, was, by Edward the Confessor, removed and built without for the Ease of the Monks.

THIS Church continued till the Days of King Edward I. at which Time the Merchants of the Staple, and Parishioners of Westminster, built all a-new, the great Chancel excepted, which was built by the Abbots of Westminster.

It was likewise re-edified, for the most Part, in the Reign of King Edward IV. especially the South Isle, by the Piety of the Lady Mary Billing; and her second Husband, Sir Thomas Billing, Chief Justice of England, in that King's Time; in which Isle there is a fair Marble Monument of the said Dame Mary Billing, who was first married to William Cotton, then to the said Sir Thomas Billing, and lastly to Thomas Lacy, and erected this Monument to the Memory of her three Husbands, with whose Arms she hath adorned it; and for her own Burial, wherein she was interred in the Year 1499.

In the Controversy which happened in the Year 1222, between Eustace, Bishop of LONDON, and the Chapter of St. Paul's on the one Part, and William the Abbot, and the Convent of Westminster on the other, about the Matter of Jurisdiction in Westminster, and other Places in the County of Middlesex; and it being referred to Stephen, Archbishop of Canterbury, and others, as Arbitrators, to put a final End and Determination to that Controversy, as you may read in what is written by Newcourt of the said Bishop Eustace; they declared, inter alia, that this Church of St. Margaret, and the whole Parish, particularly describing the Limits thereof, and all the Chapels with the same, with the Tythes and Appurtenances; as also all the Clergy and Laity therein dwelling, were free from all Episcopal Jurisdiction of the Bishop of LONDON, and his Officials, and the Church of St. Paul, without any Exception. The declaratory Sentence may be seen at large in Wharton de Episcopis LONDON, p. 247, &c.

THIS Church is a Gothick Building upon Stone Arches, it was repaired and beautified Anno 1651; and again, being altered mostly at the Charge of Persons of Quality, and others, in the Year 1682. The North Gallery was built Anno Domini 1641, and the South Gallery at the sole Charge of Sir John Cutler, Knt. and Bar. Anno 1682, who gave the same for the Benefit of the Poor of this Parish. The Steeple is now rebuilding, upon a Report being spread that the Tower was in Danger of falling; but it is the Opinion of a very ingenious Architect, that this was without any Foundation; and that the Materials were as sound as the first Day they were laid, except some Decay in the Montins to the Bell Windows, and the Battlements of the Tower, which a small Expence would have repaired; and if the Surface of the Tower had been sculp'd, by taking off the Outward half an Inch, or thereabouts, it would not only have appeared with the same Beauty, and been as strong as the Day it was first finished, but would, in all Probability, have remained so for as many Years to come, as it hath done already.

MONUMENTS.

ON an antient Monument in Brass, at the upper End of the North Isle, is thus written:

Sacrum doloris.

Shall Teares, the silent Messengers of Death,
Dissolve their Streames into a Sea of Moane?
No, no, in vain you sacrifice Reliefe,
Over his Tombe, with Eyes, with Voice with Groane.

For Cole (assign'd by God the Poore to pity,
The Widow's Comfort, and eke the Orphan's Sire)

Who tun'd each String of Hate to Love's sweet Ditty,

Is dead. Ah me! will Death the Best desire?
Remorselesse Death, thy Wrath in him is ended,
Maugre thy Darts, his Praises cannot dye;
Thou has his Body, but his Soul ascended Into the Place of Joy's Eternity.

And tho' his Corps interr'd lies dead in Grave, Yet still his Virtues Life and Being have.

An. Dom. 1597.

In Parliament, a Burgess Cole was placed,
In Westminster the like for many Years,
But now with Saints above his Soul is graced,
And lives a Burgess with Heaven's Royal Peers.

O blessed Change! from Earth, where Death is King,

To be united there where Angels sing.

Ejusdem in eundem

Terra tegit Corpus, meus scandit ad Æthera Cœli, Fama virens floret, Cætera mors rapuit.

Thus in English:

The Grave my Body, Heaven my Soule doth keepe,

The World my Fame, the rest in Death doth sleep.

MARGA-

MARGARET COLE posuit.

IN another Column of the same Table :

This Monument unites two constant Lovers;
He that is dead, and her that lives in Death :
His Body she, his Spouse, in Honour covers;
Wishing her Days were shorten'd with his Breath.
But she must live, yet living shall be mated,
With him in Death, while Death her Life hath dated.

Full twenty Years and odde, their League was firm,

Witness the World, their Children and their Love ;
Nothing but Death by Death should give the Tearme

Of Farewel to their Faith by false Remove.
Of Breach of Concord no Tongue can accuse them,

Unless base Envy by her Saints abuse them.
O envy not the Dead, but die to Sin,
Expect the Harvest of this dead Man's Bliss,
Desire the Crown which Envy cannot winne,
Amend in you, not others, what's amiss ;

Sad Death shall be your Herald to procure Rest to your Soules, with Christ for to endure.

Margaret in Woe, distill those Tears to Comfort,

And in thy Childrens Love redress thy Anguish :
Three live with thee, then love their Consort,
No longer in thy Husband's Sorrow languish.

But imitate thy Cole in Virtue's Laws,
That thou may'st live where Virtue pleads her Cause.

THIS Monument is in the North Isle, and hath this Inscription :

Here lyeth the Lady Dorothy Stafford Knight, Daughter-in-Law to Henry Lord Stafford, the only Son of Edward the last Duke of Buckingham : Her Mother was Ursula, Daughter to the Countesse of Salisbury, the only Daughter to George Duke of Clarence, Brother to King Edward the Fourth. Shee continued a true Widow from the Age of 27 till her Death. She served Queen Elizabeth 40 Years, lying in the Bed-Chamber, esteemed of her, loved of all, doing Good, all she could, to every Body, never hurted any ; a continual Remembrance of the Suits of the Poor. As she lived a religious Life, in great Reputation of Honour and Virtue in the World, so she ended in continual fervent Meditation and hearty Prayer to God ; at which Instant, as all her Life, so after her Death, she gave liberally to the Poor, and died aged 78, the 22d of September, 1604 ; in whose Remembrance Sir Edward Stafford, her Son, hath caused this Memorial of her to be in the same Forme and Place as she herselfe long since required him.

ON a Monument on the North Side of the Chancel is this Inscription :

To the Memory of Robert Peter, Esquire, Auditor of the Receipt, her first Husband, who gave to the Use of the Poor of this Parish, one hundred Pounds : And of Edward English, her second Husband, a Gentleman, kind, courteous, and of great Hospitality, who gave twelve Pounds in Annuity for ever to the same Use.

Margaret their loving Wife, Daughter of Sir John Tyrill of Gipping, Knight, who likewise hath bequeathed one hundred Pounds for the purchasing of one Yearly Annuity of twenty Nobles for ever to the foresaid Poor ; lamenting their Death, and for Testification of her dutiful Love, hath erected this Monument.

ANOTHER Monument in the same Isle, with this Inscription :

Here lieth the Body of Thomas Arneway, buried the 8th of September, Anno Dom. 1603. And Margaret Arneway, his Wife, who was buried the 9th of August, Anno Dom. 1596. near the other.

IN a fair Plate is this following Epitaph :

A Memorial on the Death of John Varnam, Gardiner, who deceased the xi. Day of December, 1586, Ætatis suæ 46.

O mortal Man that lives on Earth,
consider well thy End ;
Remember that thou must depart when God for thee doth send ;
This Life is but a Pilgrimage,
so soon it doth decay,
And all the Riches of this World shall fade and pass away.

As by Example daily shew'd before our Eyes we see,
That Rich and Poor to Earth are brought for their Iniquity.
Let us that live on Earth behind to God for Mercy call,
With woeful Heart and wringing Hands and he will blese us all.

And now to speak of this good Man,
John Varnam called by Name,
Who in his Life he lived well
by Labour, Travaile, and Paine :
In helping of the Fatherless and Widows very poor,
And setting ever them on Worke which went from Door to Door.

A Gardiner by Art he was,
great Skill he had therein,
And prospered well in all his Life,
with every living Thing
That he at all Times took in Hand, to God be given all Praise,
That did increase this honest Man with Riches many Ways.

The Poor they had great Work of him,
by weeding of his Ground,
And he to them was well content to leave Assurance sound
Of Land and living to releave
The Fatherless in Need,
So he confirmed this his Mind
by Will it was decreed.

Agnes Varnam left behind his loving Wife most sure,
By her he had four Sons likewise four Daughters, Virgins pure, Who all being dead, and none alive,
by Elizabeth by Name,
And, in Remembrance of his Life,
they have set up this fame.

He willingly did yeeld himselfe,
in God was all his Trust ;
And in the last Houre of his Death,
he shew'd his Faith most just,
To leave this World most cheerefully,
desirous to depart ;
Asking Forgiveness of the World, and forgiving with his Heart,

To those which he at any Time in Deed or Word offended :
Most joyfully his Soule was then unto the Lord commended.
And thus he left his mortal Life,
in Briefe, to tell you plaine ;
Hoping in Heav'n to be receiv'd,
for ever to remaine.

 Vana, brevis, fragilis, fluxus, temeraria, mollis,
 Fumus, bulla, iris, fax, ventus, dulce venenum,
 Vanescit, perit, arefcit, liquefit, fugit, angit.
 Orbe nihil toto stabile est, cito corrueat orbis,
 Et vasti in nihilum vanescet fabrica mundi.
 Sola fides firmam parit, æternamque Coronam,
 Sola fides Christi meritis, sunt cætera nugæ.

Hæc vixi, hæc morior fide, mihi Christus in vita,

ON the same Wall, in a Table, is this Epitaph :

In the Memory of the late deceased Virgin,
 Mrs. Elizabeth Hereicke.

Sweet Virgin, that I do not set Thy Grave Verse up in mournful Jet,
 Or dappled Marble, let thy Shade
 Not wrathful seem, or fright the Maid,
 Who hither at her weeping Howres,
 Shall come to strew thy Earth with Flowers :
 No, know, blest Soule, when there's not one Remainder left of Brasse or Stone ;
 Thy living Epitaph shall be Though lost in them, yet found in me :
 Deare, in thy Bed of Roses then,
 Till this World shall dissolve (as Men)
 Sleepe, while we hide thee from the Light,
 Drawing thy Curtains round ——— Good night.

ON a Table, hanging at the upper End of the South Isle, is thus written :

IN Memory of the right vertuous and beautiffull Gentlewoman Mistresse Margaret Radcliffe, Daughter to Sir John Radcliffe, Knight, one of the Maids of Honour to Queen Elizabeth, who died at Richmond the 10th of November, and was here buried with Solemnity the 22d of the same Month, Anno Dom. 1599.

An. Reg. Eliz. 41.

Tell thou my wailing Verse, and mourning Show,
 What beauteous Frame lies here interred below,

Here underneath entomb'd a Dazie lies,
 The Pride of Nature, with Perfection fill'd ;

O Woe, whom Zephyres blasts can ne'er make rise,

Being by Death's black Storms untimely kill'd.

Ratcliffe's thy Name ; the Glory of the Court ;
 Vertue and Beauty strove t'adorn thee most ;

Though here inclos'd, yet Fame shall still report

Thy Virtue's Praise, thy Grace's Time shall boast ;

Thou dy'd'st a Virgin pure, and spotless Liver ; Grief caus'd thy Death, Death makes thee live for ever.

If any ask, who sigh'd this sad Complaint ?

Say, one that liv'd, that lov'd, that joy'd, now faint.

THE Land which is here granted, is said to be against the Church of St. Innocent's, and runs down to the Thames, and in Westminster-street: So that the Church must have stood not on the East Side of King-street, but on the West.

Alius Finis levat. anno 3tio Reg. Henrici 3tii in Com. Midd. in Vico Innocentium: Et alius, in Parochia Sanctorum Innocentium eodem anno. Finis terrarum ex opposito Ecclie. Sanctorum Innocentium ibidem.

THIS Church (as is guessed) now is defecrated, and made Use of for a Wine-Cellar, belonging to the Quaker's Tavern in Thieving-lane. The Front is at the farther End of the Great Sanctuary, the whole Cross being the Form of the oldest Churches.

NEXT to the famous Monastery of St. Peter was the King's Palace.

THE Grandeur of the Royal British Court and Palace, in ancient Times, may appear in the Quality as well as the Number of the Officers and Persons, Ecclesiastical, Civil and Military, belonging to it, viz. a Lord High Almoner, a Dean of the Royal Chapel, a Clerk of the Closet, Chaplains in Ordinary forty-eight, four waiting each Month in their Turns; Lords and other of his Majesty's Privy Council; to which belong several Clerks, ordinary and extraordinary; Lord High Steward of his Majesty's Houthold, Treasurer surer of the Household, Comptroller of the Household, Cofferer, Master of the Household, Clerks of the Green-Cloth, two; Clerks Comptrollers, two; Knight-Marshal, Serjeant-Porter, Lord Chamberlain of the Household, Vice-Chamberlain, Secretary to the Chamberlain, Clerk to the Lord Chamberlain, Lords of the Bed-chamber, Groom of the Stole, and First Gentleman of the Bed-chamber, Grooms of the Bed-chamber, Pages of the Back-stairs, Cup-bearers, four Carvers, four Gentlemen Sewers, Gentlemen-Ushers, Daily Waiters, Grooms of the Privy Chambers, Gentlemen-Ushers, Quarterly Waiters, Yeomen of the Removing Wardrobe, Clerks of the Wardrobe, Master of the Robes, Treasurer of the Chamber, Master of the Jewel-house, Historiographer, Poet-Laureat, Principal Painter, Surveyor of the Royal Gardens and Water-Works, Keeper of the Library, Master of the Ceremonies, Assistant Master, and Master Groom-Porter; Master of the Revels, Master of the Tennis-Court, Knight-Harbinger, Master of the Musick, Physicians in Ordinary, Apothecary to the Person, Apothecary to the House, Serjeant-Surgeons, Surgeons to the House, Chief Justice in Eyre North of Trent, Chief Justice in Eyre South of Trent, Chief Ranger of St. James's Park, Chief Ranger of Hyde-Park, Out-Ranger of Windsor-Forest, Keepers of Windsor Park, Great and Little Greenwich Park, Hampton-Court Park, New Forest, and Sherwood Forest; Surveyor-General of his Majesty's Houses, Castles and Lordships, and Surveyor of his Works; Pay-master of the Works, Comptroller of the Works, House-keepers at White-hall, Windsor, New-market, Palaces of Westminster, St. James's, Hampton-Court, and Kensington. Servants to the King in the Way of Trade; Goldsmith, Jeweller, Serjeant-Painter, Perfumer, Hatter, Druggist, Distiller, Perspective and Optick Glass-maker, Master Bricklayer, Locksmith, Printer, Book-feller, Binder and Stationer, Watch and Clock-Maker, Joiner of the Privy Chamber, Commissioner for executing the Office of Master of the Horse, Gentleman of the Horse-Equerries, Master of the Great Wardrobe, his Deputy, Captain of the Band of Gentlemen-Pensioners, Lieutenant, Standard-Bearer, Clerk of the Check, Pay-master, Gentleman-Harbinger, Ensign, Principal Secretaries of State, three; Under-Secretaries, five; Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, Clerks of the Privy Seal, Clerks of the Signet, Commissioners of the Treasury, Secretaries of the Treasury, Chief Clerks, Solicitor of the Treasury, Chancellor, and Under Treasurer of the Exchequer, Auditor, his Deputy, Clerk of the Pells, Tellers of the Exchequer. All these are Officers of the King's principal Palace, which was anciently situated in Westminster.

OF what Antiquity, it is uncertain: But Edward the Confessor held his Court here, as appears by the Testimony of sundry; namely, of Ingulphus, as hath been said before. The said King had his Palace, and for the most Part remained there; where he also ended his Life, and was buried in the Monastery which he had built. It is not to be doubted, but that King William I. as he was crowned there, so he built much at this Palace, for he found it far inferior to the Building of princely Palaces in France.

AND it is manifest, by the Testimony of many Authors, that William Rufus built the great Hall there about the Year of Christ 1097. Amongst others, Roger of Windover, and Matthew Paris, do write, that King William, being returned out of Normandy into England, kept his Feast of Whitsontide very Royally at Westminster, in the new Hall which he had lately built; the Length whereof (say some) is 270 Feet, and 74 Feet in Breadth.

AND when he heard Men say, that this Hall was too great, he answered and said, This Hall is not big enough by the one half, and is but a Bed-chamber, in Comparison of what I mean to make.

A diligent Searcher (saith Matthew Paris) might find out the Foundation of the Hall which he was supposed to have built, stretching forth from the River of Thames even to the Common Highway.

THIS Palace was repaired about the Year 1163, by Thomas Becket, Chancellor of England, with exceeding great Celerity and Speed, which before was ready to have fallen down.

It seems to have gone to Decay in the Times of King Edward IV. King Richard III. began the Repairs of it, and gave for an Order to Thomas Tyrrel, Keeper of the Park of Wildegolet in Essex, to suffer no manner of Person to embezel or purloin, or carry away out of the said Park, any Timber, Boards, Laths, Shingles, or any other Stuff, ordained for the Works at Westminster, and other Places; but suffer such as they should send thither, to fell and carry away as much Stuff as they shall think behoveful for the said Work, Anno 2do, 16 March, Westminster.

THIS hath been the principal Seat and Palace of all the Kings of England since the Conquest; for here they have, in the great Hall, kept their Feasts, of Coronation especially, and other solemn Feasts, as at Christmas, and other Times. For Proof whereof, Stow says he finds it recorded, that in the Year 1236, and the 20th of King Henry III. on the 29th of December, William de Haverbull, the King's Treasurer, is commanded, that, upon the Day of the Circumcision of our Lord, he should cause 6000 poor People to be fed at Westminster, for the State of the King, the Queen, and their Children. The Weak and Aged to be placed in the great Hall; and, in the lesser, those that were more strong and in reasonable Plight. The Children, in the King's and Queen's Chambers: And when the King knew the Charge, he would allow it in the Accounts.

IN the Year 1238, the same King Henry kept his Feast of Christmas at Westminster, in the great Hall; so did he in the Year 1241, where he placed the Legate in the most honourable Place of the Table, viz. in the Middle, which the Noblemen took in evil Part.

THE King sat on the Right Hand, and the Archbishop on the Left, and then all the Prelates and Nobles, according to their Estates; for the King himself did set the Guests.

THE Year 1242, he likewise kept his Christmas in the Hall.

ALSO in the Year 1243, Richard Earl of Cornwall, the King's Brother, married Cincia, Daughter to Beatrice, Countess of Province, and kept his Marriage Feast in the great Hall at Westminster, with great Royalty and Company of Noblemen, insomuch that there were told (triginta Millia) 30,000 Dishes of Meat at that Dinner.

IN the Year 1256, King Henry sat in the Exchequer of this Hall, and there set down Order for the Appearance of Sheriffs, and bringing in of their Accounts; there was five Marks set on every Sheriff's Head for a Fine, because they had not distrained every Person that might dispend 15 l. Land by the Year, to receive the Order of Knighthood, according as the same Sheriffs were commanded.

ALSO the Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs of LONDON, being accused of Oppression and Wrongs done by them, and submitting themselves in this Place, before the King sitting then in Judgment upon that Matter, they were condemned to pay their Fines for their Offences committed;

committed ; and farther, every one of them discharged of Assize and Ward.

IN the Years 1268 and 1269, the same King kept his Christmas Feasts at Westminster, as before ; and also in the same Year 1269, he translated (with great Solemnity) the Body of King Edward the Confessor, into a new Chapel at the Back of the high Altar ; which Chapel he had prepared of a marvellous Workmanship, bestowing a new Tomb or Shrine of Gold.

AND on the Day of his Translation, he kept a Royal Feast in the great Hall of the Palace. Thus much for the Feasts of old Time in this Hall.

WE read also, that in the Year 1236, the River Thames overflowing the Banks, caused the Marshes about Woolwich to be all on a Sea, wherein Boats and other Vessels were carried by the Stream ; so that, besides Cattel, the greatest Number of Men, Women, and Children, Inhabitants there, were drowned. And in the great Palace of Westminster, Men did row with Wherries in the Middle of the Hall, being forced to ride to their Chambers.

MOREOVER, in the Year 1242, the Thames overflowing the Banks about Lambeth, drowned Houses and Fields, by the Space of six Miles ; so that, in the great Hall at Westminster, Men took their Horses, because the Water ran over all.

A great Fire happened on the King's House at Westminster, An. 1263, in the King's Absence ; of which Henry de Sandwich, Elect of LONDON, sent him Word in Condolance, viz. " That hearing of the Burning of his Houses " at Westminster, he much grieved, as knew the " most High, fearing lest it might disturb his " Mind, when it should be made known to him ; " and might change the State of his Body, and " make it worse than it was ; which he prayed " God to mend and preserve". King Henry was now, it seems, abroad, perhaps in France, and not current in the Health of his Body, no more than in his Mind, by Reason of the Disturbance made by his Barons.

This Palace was (in the Year 1299, the 27th of King Edward I.) burnt by a vehement Fire, kindled in the lesser Hall of the King's House, the same with many other Houses adjoining, and with the Queen's Chamber, were consumed, but after that repaired.

IN the Year 1313, the 31st of King Edw. I. the King's Treasury at Westminster was robbed ; for which, Walter, Abbot of Westminster, with 49 of his Brethren, and 32 others, were thrown into the Tower of LONDON, and indicted of the Robbery of 100,000 l. but they affirming themselves to be clear of the Fact, and desiring of the King speedy Justice, a Commission was directed for Enquiry of the Truth, and they were freed.

IN the Year 1316, King Edward II. did solemnize his Feast of Pentecost at Westminster, in the great Hall, where, sitting Royally at the Table, with his Peers about him, there entered a Woman adorned like a Minstrel, sitting on a great Horse, trapped as Minstrels then used ; who rode round about the Tables, shewing Pastime, and, at length came up to the King's Table, and laid before him a Letter ; and forthwith turning her Horse, saluted every one, and departed. The Letter being opened, had these Contents :

" Our Sovereign Lord the King hath nothing " courteously respected his Knights, that in his " Father's Time, and also in his own, have put " forth their Persons to divers Perils, and have " utterly lost, or greatly diminished their Substance, for the Honour of the said King ; and " hath enriched abundantly such as have not " borne the Weight (as yet) of the Business, &c.

THIS great Hall was begun to be repaired in the Year 1397, by King Richard II. who caused the Wall, Windows, and Roof, to be taken down, and new made, with a stately Porch, and divers Lodgings of a marvellous Work, and with great Costs ; all which he levied on Strangers banished, or flying out of their Countries, who obtained Licence to remain in this Land by the King's Charters, which they had purchased with great Sums of Money, (John Boterell being then Clerk of the Works.)

THIS Hall being finished in the Year 1399, the same King kept a most Royal Christmas there, with daily Justings and Runnings at Tilt ; whereunto resorted such a Number of People, that there were every Day spent 28 or 26 Oxen, and 300 Sheep, beside Fowl without Number. He caused a Gown for himself to be made of Gold, garnished with Pearl and precious Stones, to the Value of 3000 Marks. He was guarded by Che-shiremen, and had about him commonly 13 Bishops, besides Barons, Knights, Esquires, and others, more than needed ; inasmuch, that to the Household came every Day to Meat, 10,000 People, as appears by the Messes told out of the Kitchen to 300 Servitors.

THUS was this great Hall, for the Honour of the Prince, oftentimes furnished with Guests, not only in this King's Life-Time, (a prodigal Prince) but in the Time of others also, both before and since, though not so usually noted. For when it was said, the King held his Feast of Christmas, or such a Feast at Westminster, it may well be supposed to be kept in this great Hall, as most sufficient for such a Purpose.

IT is noted by Robert Fabian, the Chronicler, (some Time a Citizen and an Alderman of LONDON) that King Henry VII. in the 9th of his Reign, holding his Royal Feast of Christmas at Westminster, on the Twelfth-Day, feasted Ralph Austrey, then Mayor of LONDON, and his Brethren the Aldermen, with other Commoners in great Number : And, after Dinner, dubbing the Mayor Knight, caused him, with his Brethren, to stay and behold the Disguisings, and other Disports, in the Night following, shewed in the great Hall, which was richly hanged with Arras, and staged about on both Sides ; which Disports being ended in the Morning, the King, the Queen, the Ambassadors, and other Estates, being set at a Table of Stone, 60 Knights and Esquires served 60 Dishes to the King's Mess, and as many to the Queen's, (neither Flesh nor Fish) and served the Mayor with 24 Dishes to his Mess, of the same Manner, with sundry Wines in most plenteous wise : And finally, the King and Queen being conveyed, with great Lights, into the Palace, the Mayor, with his Company in Barges, returned, and came to LONDON by Break of the next Day. Thus much for the building this great Hall, and feasting therein.

AT the upper End of this Hall was a long Marble Stone of 12 Feet in Length, and three Feet in Breadth. And there also was a Marble Chair, where the Kings of England formerly sat at their Coronation-Dinners, and at other solemn Times, the Lord Chancellor ; but now not to be seen, being built over by the two Courts of Chancery and King's-Bench. At this Marble Stone divers Matters used to be transacted. Here Henry de Cliff, Clerk of the Rolls, took his Oath in the Presence of the Lord Chancellor.

IT moreover appeared, that many Parliaments have been kept there ; for it is noted, that in the the Year 1397, the great Hall at Westminster being out of Repair, and therefore, as it were, new built by King Richard II. (as it is afore shewed;) the same King Richard, in the mean Time, having Occasion to hold a Parliament, caused (for that Purpose) a large House to be built in the Middle of the Palace-Court, betwixt the Clock-Tower and the Gate of the old great Hall. This House was very large and long, made of Timber, covered with Tile, open on both Sides, and at both Ends, that all Men might see and hear what was both said and done. The King's Archers, in Number 4000 Cheshire Men, compassed the House about with their Bows bent, and Arrows nocked in their Hands, always ready to shoot; they had Bouch of Court (viz. Meat and Drink) and great Wages of Six-Pence by the Day.

THE old great Hall being new built, Parliaments were again there kept as before; namely, one in the Year 1399, for deposing of King Richard II.

AND now, of a long Time, the Place of the Sitting of the Parliament remains at the King's said antient Palace; the Lords in a fair Room, and the Commons in that which was formerly St. Stephen's Chapel.

THE Parliament is the highest and most absolute Court of Record in the Kingdom; the Power and Authority thereof, a great Statesman in former Times, as well as of excellent Learning and Knowledge in the Manner of the Government of England, thus sets down: That which is done by this Consent (viz. of the two Houses, and the Prince himself, in Presence of both Parties) is firm, stable, and sanctum. It abrogates old Laws and makes new; gives Order for Things past, and for Things hereafter to be followed; changes Rights and Possessions of private Men; legitimates Bastards; establishes Forms of Religion; alters Weights and Measures; gives Forms of Succession to the Crown; defines doubtful Rights, whereof is no Law already made; appoints Subsidies, Tailles, Taxes, and Impositions; gives most free Pardons and Absolutions; restores in Blood and Name; and as the highest Court, condemns or absolves them whom the Prince will put to that Trial. And, to be short, all that the People of Rome might do, either in Centuriatis Comitibus, or Tributis, the same may be done by the Parliament of England, which represents and has the Power of the whole Realm, both the Head and the Body.

THE Acts of Parliament, publick or private, are kept and remain in the Custody of the Clerks of the Parliament.

A great Part of this Palace at Westminster was once again burnt in the Year 1512, the 4th of Henry VIII. since which Time it has not been re-edified: Only the great Hall, with the Offices near adjoining, are kept in good Reparations, and serves, as afore it did, for Feasts at Coronations, Arraignments of great Persons charged with Treasons, keeping of the Courts of Justice; but the Princes have been lodged in other Places about the City, as at Baynard's Castle, at Bridewell, and Whitehall (some Time called York-Place) and some Time at St. James's.

THIS Royal Hall has, of later Times, been used for the hanging up Trophies taken from the Enemy, in Sign of Victory. A noted Author says, he remembers when he was a Boy, that he saw the great Hall hung full on one Side with Colours and Standards taken from the Scots at Worcester Fight; but upon King Charles II's coming to his just Right, all taken down.

ON Wednesday the 3d of January, 1704, were brought from the Tower, through the City, and passed by the Exchange about 'Change-Time, 34 Standards and 128 Colours, taken from the French at the Battle of Bleinheim in Bavaria, attended by Horse-Grenadiers, one Troop, a Detachment of the Troop of Horse-Guards, and many other Soldiers.

THEY were brought through Pall-Mall, and so through St. James's Park, where the Queen and his Royal Highness took a View of them, and so conveyed to Westminster Hall, where they were hung up, and do fill both Sides of the Hall: The Motto's of some of them shewing the boasting and somewhat blasphemous French Spirit, were these:

Ingenito solem veneratur amore.

Jovis obruit Hostes.

Vittoria pinget.

Arduus ad solem.

Alter post Fulmina Terror.

In Regnum pugnas.

Pugnatur pro Deo & Rege.

In lillii fortior.

THIS great Hall has been the usual Place of Pleadings and Administration of Justice, whereof somewhat is to be noted.

IN Times past, the Courts and Benches followed the King, wheresoever he went, as well since the Conquest as before, which Thing at length being thought cumbersome, painful, and chargeable to the People, it was in the Year 1224, the 9th of King Henry III. agreed that there should be a Standing, or common Place appointed, where Matters should be heard and judged, which was in the great Hall at Westminster.

IN this Hall he ordained three Judgment-Seats, viz. at the Entry on the Right Hand, the Common-Pleas, where Civil Matters are to be pleaded, especially such as touch Lands or Contracts. At the Upper End of the Hall, on the Left Hand, or South East Corner, the King's-Bench, where Pleas of the Crown have their Hearing: And on the Right Hand, or South West Corner, sits the Lord Chancellor, accompanied with the Master of the Rolls, and with certain other of the eleven Men (learned for the most Part in the Civil Law, and called Masters of the Chancery) who have the King's Fee.

THE Times of Pleading in the Courts are four in the Year, which are called Terms.

THE first is Hilary Term, which begins the 23d of January, if it be not Sunday, and ends the 12th of February.

THE second is Easter Term, and begins 17 Days after Easter Day, and ends four Days after Ascension Day.

THE third Term begins six or seven Days after Trinity Sunday, and ends the Wednesday Fortnight after.

THE fourth is Michaelmas Term, which begins the 23d of October, if it be not Sunday, and ends the 28th of November.

AND here it is to be noted, that the Kings of this Realm have used sometimes to sit in Person in the King's-Bench, namely, King Edward IV. in the Year 1462, in Michaelmas Term, sat in the King's-Bench three Days together, in the open Court, to understand how his Laws were ministered and executed.

WITHIN the Port or Entry into the Hall, on either Side, are Ascendings up into large Chambers, without the Hall adjoining thereunto; wherein certain Courts are kept, namely, on the Right Hand is the Court of the Exchequer; a Place of Account for the Revenues of the Crown: The Hearers of the Account have Auditors under them; but they which are the Chief for Accounts of the Prince, are called Barons of the Exchequer, exchequer, whereof one is called the Chief Baron; the greatest Officer of all is called the High Treasurer of England. In this Court are heard those that are Delators (or Informers) in popular and penal Actions, having thereby Part of the Profit by the Law signed to them.

THE great Officers and Judges, and other Ministers of this Court, are thus set down by that great Lawyer Coke, in his Institutes.

I. The Lord Treasurer of England; which Office he has by the Delivery of a White Staff, at the King's Will and Pleasure; formerly by Delivery of Golden Keys. II. The Treasurer of the Exchequer; this Office he has by Letters Parents. III. Chancellor of the Exchequer, that keeps the Seals. IV. Capital Baron, and the other Barons. V. The Under-Treasurer; he names the two Praisers of all Goods, seized, or not customed, and orders whether the Party shall have them at the Praise, or not: He appoints the Steward, Cook, and Butler, for the Provision of the Star-Chamber; and in the Vacancy of the Treasurer, does all Things in the Receipt that the Treasurer does.

THE Office of the Lord Treasurer appears by his Oath, that stands in eight Articles. I. That well and truly he shall serve the King and his People, in the Office of Treasurer. II. That he shall do Right to all Manner of People, Poor and Rich, of such Things as concern his Office. III. The King's Treasure he shall surely keep and dispend. IV. He shall truly counsel the King. V. The King's Council he shall layn (an old French Word, to hide) and keep. VI. He shall neither know nor suffer the King's Hurt, nor his Disheriting, nor that the Rights of the Crown be decreased by any Means. VII. That he may not let it, he shall make Knowledge thereof clearly and expressly to the King. VIII. He shall do and purchase the King's Profit in all that he may reasonably do.

OTHER Officers of this Court are these: I. The Chamberlains of the Exchequer: To this Office belongs one of the Door-Keepers of the Receipt. II. Comptroller of the Exchequer. III. Remembrancer of the King, of the Treasury, of the First-Fruits. IV. Clerk of the Pipe. V. Five Auditors of the King's Revenue; with many other Officers.

THERE is a Court of Equity in the Exchequer-Chamber; the Judges of this Court are, the Lord Treasurer, the Chancellor, and the Barons of the Exchequer.

IN this Court of Exchequer, if any Question be, it is determined after the Order of the Common Law of England, by twelve Men; and all Subsidies, Taxes, and Customs, by Account; for in this Office the Sheriffs of the Shire do attend upon the Execution of the Commandments of the Judges, which the Earl should do, if he were not attending upon the Prince in the Wars, or otherwise about him; for the chief Office of the Earl was to see the King's Justice to have Course, and to be well executed in the Shire, and the Prince's Revenues to be well answered, and brought into the Treasury.

IF any Fines and Amerciaments be extracted out of any of the said Courts upon any Man, or any Arrearages of Accounts of such Things as is of Customs, Taxes, and Subsidies, or other such like Occasions, the same Sheriff of the Shire does gather, and is answerable therefore in the Exchequer.

As for other ordinary Rents of Patrimonial Lands, and most commonly of Taxes, Customs, and Subsidies, there are particular Receivers and Collectors, which do answer it into the Exchequer.

THIS Court of Exchequer has, of old Time, (and since the Conquest) been kept at Westmin- ster; notwithstanding sometimes removed thence by Commandment of the King for a Time, and after restored again; as namely, in the Year 1209, King John commanded the Exchequer to be removed from Westminster to Northampton, &c.

ON the Left Hand, above the Stairs, is the Dutchy Chamber, wherein is kept the Court for the Dutchy of Lancaster, by a Chancellor of that Dutchy, and other Officers under him.

THE Chancellor is assisted by his Majesty's Attorney of that Court; and two Judges of the Common-Pleas advise them for Matter of Question of Law. The Rolls and Records of this Court's Proceedings are in the Custody of the Clerk of the same, to whose Office they do appertain; but the King's Evidences, Leases, and Grants of the Dutchy Land, as well his Possession and Copyhold, as Fee-Simple and Fee-Farm, are in the Keeping of the Auditors, who are divers, but two most principal; one whereof for the Lands of the Dutchy on this Side Trent, and another for the Lands beyond Trent. There are divers Surveyors also of the Dutchy Lands, for the Survey of them.

THEN is there in another Chamber, the Office of the Receipts of the King's Revenue for the Crown.

THEN was there also the Star-Chamber, where, The Star-Chamber. in Term-Time, once every Week at least, which was commonly on Friday, and sometimes also on Wednesday, and on the next Day after the Term ends, the Lord Chancellor, and the Lords and other of the Privy-Council, and the two Chief Justices of England, from Nine o'Clock till Eleven did sit, (but this Court is now dissolved.)

THIS Place was called the Star-Chamber, because the Roof thereof was decked with the Likeness of Stars gilt. There were Plaints heard of Riots, Routs, and other Misdemeanors, which, if they were found by the King's Council, the Party Offender was censured by these Persons, which spoke one after another, and he was both fined and commanded to Prison.

IT was so called, either by Derivation from the old English Word Steoran, which signifies to steer, or rule, as doth the Pilot of a Ship; because the King and Council did sit here, as it were, at the Stern, and did govern in the Ship of the Commonwealth: Some derive it from Stellio, which signifies that starry and subtil Beast so called; from which comes the Word Stellionatus, that signifies Cousenage; because that Crime was chiefly punishable in this Court by an extraordinary Power, as it was in the Civil Law; or, because the Roof of this Court was garnished with gilded Stars, as the Room itself was starry, or full of Windows and Lights: In which Respect, some of the Latin Records name it Camera Stellata; the French, Le Chambre Des Estoilles; and the English, The Starred Chamber.

THIS Starred Chamber antiently was the Council-Chamber, within the King's Palace of Westminster, where the King's Council sat; and here the Kings used to sit personally in Council, being the ordinary Council-Chamber, whensoever he did lie and sojourn at his Palace at Westminster, with Deliberation, as well of Matters of State, as for decreeing extraordinary Suits and Causes of Complaint.

THIS Court was of much antienter Erection than the Beginning of King Henry VII. in which some Men being much deceived, have asserted to be the first Original of it, because of his Statue in his third Year concerning it.

IN former Time it was of great Use for punishing of Riots; and they were often committed by Noblemens or Gentlemens Servants, too common in those Days, by Reason of Quarrels begun by their Lords and Masters. For the remedying dying of which, Orders were made in this Court, in the Beginning of King Henry VII. by the King, and the Lords Spiritual and Temporal here assembled, which was thus as it stood in the Record.

In Camera Stellata, An. 1^o & 2^o Regn. Reg. Henrici Septimi.

IT is concluded and agreed, That every Lord and Gentleman, if any of his Servants make a Riot, or other Excess, the Master of the same Trespasser shall have in Commandment to bring forth the same Servant: And if he so do not, to abide such Direction and Punition, as by the King and his Council shall be thought convenient. And over that, if the same Riot, or Excess arise by Cause or Occasion of any Quarrel or Displeasure concerning the Master of him that so exceedeth, the same Master shall answer for the same Excess suchwise as shall be thought to the King and his said Council expedient.

A NO TH ER Order to the same Purpose was made under Queen Elizabeth, thus:

In Cam. Stellat. coram Concil. ibm xxix^o die Jan. An. xvi. Dne. ure. Elizabeth. Rne.

IT is ordered, That in all Matters of Riot hereafter, where the same is committed by the Servant by the Master's Procurement, or by any other principal Rioter, the Fine taxed upon the Servant, or him so procured, shall be paid by the Master, or principal Rioter; or else the Master or Principal shall bring forth the Servant, or Persons so procured, to be committed to the Fleet for their Offence; which doing, they shall be discharged of the said Fines, and the Servant or Person procured, shall remain in the Fleet, till he have found Sureties for his Fine so taxed into the Exchequer. And all Rioters convict not to be enlarged before their Fines paid, or Sureties put in for the Payment thereof, as before, into the Court of Exchequer.

AN D as Cognizance was taken of Riots here, so also of Forgeries. Several Instances there were of the Punishment of Pillorizing Inflicted for this Crime by the Star-Chamber, in the Times of King Henry VIII. Queen Mary, and Queen Elizabeth.

TH IS Court was held in the Terms, and the Star-Chamber Days in Hilary Term, were six; in Easter Term, eight; in Midsummer Term, six; and in Michaelmas Term, sixteen.

WH EN this Court sat, the Nobility, and Persons of Quality, Judges of it, used commonly to dine together at the Prince's Cost. In the Year 1587, the Queen's Charge for the Dinners were,

TH ES E Expenses were paid by the Under-Treasurer, who appointed a Steward of the Star-Chamber; and he, among other Duties incumbent, had a Right to the Lord's Diet here, as belonging to his Office; and his Fee was payable out of the Receipt. The Names of some of these Stewards were:

*Sebastian Hilary, an. 14 H. 8.
Richard Brown, an. 28 H. 8.
William Staunton, an. ult. Edw. 6.
John Dodington, an. 14 Eliz.
Francis Guilpin, an. 27 Eliz.*

TH E*V had a Right to be continued in their Places, however the Under-Treasurer was changed: Concerning which, when some Doubt was raised while Guilpin was Steward, a Prescription was shewn of seventy Years in his Behalf. Let this suffice for this antient Court of Star-Chamber, now dissolved.

TH EN, at the upper End of the great Hall, by the King's Bench, going up to a great Chamber, called the Whitehall, was kept the Court of Wards and Liveries. This Court was founded 32 H. 8. and called, The Court of the King's Wards. The Office of the Livery was annexed to the Court of Wards, 33 H. 8. and adjoining thereto was the Court of Requests.

BO TH these are now dissolved: But we shall say a few Words concerning this last named Court. In this, all Suits made to the King or Queen, by Way of Petition, were heard and ended. This was called also, The Poor Man's Court, because there he should have Right without paying any Money. And it was likewise called, The Court of Conscience. The Judges of this Court were called, The Masters of Requests, one for the Common Laws, and the other for the Civil Laws. Stow says, that he finds it was a Court of Equity, after the Nature of the Chancery, but inferior to it. There were Judges of it; commonly the Lord Privy Seal was Chief: And there were Masters of Requests that were ordinary Judges. The Judges were commonly Divines, Civilians, Knights, and Gentlemen. This Court began 8 H. 7. For the Hearing of Causes in this Court, from the eighth Year of that King, and so downwards, some of the first were these:

The Bishop of Bath ,
Privy Seal.	Warham , afterwards
The Bishop of Roff .	Archbishop.

Blyth .

In the Ninth of Henry VII.

Lord Privy Seal.	Warham .
Dean of the Chapel.	Richard Bray , Knt.

Lord Privy Seal.	Lord Steward.
Bishop of Sarum .	Bray .
Bishop of Roff .	Lovel .

Bishop of Rockester .	Lovel .

COMMONLY the Court-Bishops and Chaplains, and other great Courtiers, were these Judges and Masters.

HERE is now the House of Lords, where the Lords Spiritual and Temporal meet and sit in Parliament-Time.

ADJOINING to the House of Lords are the Princes Chambers. Here was the first Meeting of the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty for the Augmentation of poor Livings. Who these Governors are, appears from the said Queen's Letters Patents, dated Nov. 3, 1704, whereby she incorporated all the Lords of her Privy Council, the Lords Lieutenants, and Custodes Rotulorum, the Bishops, and all Deans of Cathedrals in the Kingdom of England, the Judges, and Queen's Council learned in Law, the Chancellors and Vice-Chancellors of both Universities, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of LONDON, and all Mayors of Cities in the Kingdom of England, by the Name and Title of, The Governors of the Bounty of Queen Anne, for the Augmentation of the Maintenance of the poor Clergy.

UNDER the Hall are certain subterraneous Apartments, which are called, one Paradise, and another Hell; consisting of Tenements, Houses, and Mansions: Which, with other Tenements and Lands, were held in King Edward VI's Days by one William Fryes. These were given by that King to Sir Andrew Dudley, Brother to the Great Duke of Northumberland, with other Lands and Tenements in Westminster, to him, for the Term of his Life, An. Regn. 3. in Consideration of Services.

BESIDES this Treasury for Money, there was within the Palace another Treasury of Records, relating to the Kingdom's publick Affairs, preserved in certain Chambers and Rooms. Here are repositied many antient and precious Records. As within the Place called particularly, The Treasury, where once the Court of Wards was kept, are the Records of Leagues with the Realms of Arragon, Flanders, Germany, and some of France, and other Places. Also, there are many Records relating to the casting off the Bishop of Rome's Authority in this Kingdom of England; and the Subscriptions of almost all the Priests of the Realm to the King's Supremacy: And the Books of the Orders of St. George and St. Michael: The Covenants of Marriage between King Philip and Queen Mary; and sundry Books of foreign Accounts, and other Matters of State.

ALSO, within the Abbey of Westminster (that we may lay these Things together) there was an older Treasury than that of the Palace, which was called, The Old Treasury, a Place always designed for the Custody of the Leagues of the Kingdom. It was vaulted with Stone, and had Chests and Presses that were empty.

THERE is also another Treasury within the Abbey of Westminster, vaulted also with Stone, and so out of Danger of Fire, but it wanted Reparation both in Glass and Lead. Here were kept all, or the most Part of the Records of the King's Bench and Common-Pleas, Fines, Writs, and Affizes, of all the Kings since the Conquest, until the most Part of the Reign of King Henry VII. fairly arrayed up in Chests for that Purpose.

ALSO in the Custody of the Lord Treasurer and the Chamberlain of the Exchequer, were abundance of Records in Bags; as Records of Pleas and Preambulations, and Inquisitions of Forests; Records of many Mens Lands in the Realm of England and Wales; as namely, Court Rolls, Auditors Accounts, Accounts of sundry French Counties; also Deeds of Purchase, made by sundry of Queen Elizabeth's Progenitors, for sundry their Honours, Manors, and Lands.

CONCERNING these Records, &c. it was moved for the Lord Treasurer Burghley, by some certain Person well versed in them, that whereas these were put up in Bags together confusedly, whereby, when a Search was made among them, it was an easy Matter for a Stranger, finding a Roll, or Leaf, inconvenient and against them, to convey it away, as it seemed the like had been done; which could not be missed, because there was no certain Note how many Rolls there be: And furthermore, the often tossing, ruffling, searching, and lapping up of the same Rolls, had so soiled and worn many of them, as they could not be well read: For avoiding of which Inconveniencies, it might please his Lordship to appoint one to peruse the same Rolls, and to array them into Shires and certain Forests; and the same to put into Bags severally, writing thereon the Country, the Forest, and the Number of Rolls, and how many Leaves every Roll contains; that this would be a great Preservation of them, and a ready Help to find any Thing, upon Commandment of the Court of Exchequer, or otherwise upon Occasion: The same Person advised, that the old Records remaining in the Palace Treasury, being a Place subject to Danger of Fire, might be removed thence into the old Treasury within the Palace of Westminster, a Place designed for the Custody of the same, and where they might be more secure, being vaulted with Stone.

THE Original Paper, wherein the aforesaid Motion was made to the Treasurer (which was Anno 1573) may deserve to be here inserted, viz.

Matters moost necessary to move the Right Honorable my Lord Theasaurour, and the Chamberleyne of Theſchequier in, for the reducyng of her Majesties Records, being in theire Custodie, into muche better Suretie, and speedier Redynes in search, upon Commandment, &c.

IMprimis, That the Records of Leagues with the Realmes of Arragon, Flanders, Germany, some of Fraunce, with others now remeyng in the Theasaurie within the Pallace of Westminster (where the Courte of Wardes was) beinge subjecte to the Daunger of Fyre, maye be removed into th' olde Theasaurye within the Abbaye

Abbaye of Westminster, a Place always designed for the Custodie of the same Leagues, and vaulted with Stone, whereby that semithe (yf it so please God) that theye be without Danger of Fire, and where there is Rome enough for them in Chests and Presses that be now emptye.

Also, there are in the same Theaurie in the Pallace, sundrye Records, mentyoning the deposinge of the Bishop of Rome; and Bookes, of Subscription of the mooste Part of the Preestes thorough the Realme to the Kinges Supremacye, &c. Also Bookes of the Order of St. George and St. Michael. The Covenantes of Marriage betwixt Kinge Philip and Queen Marie, with other Mattres of States, which weere very needfull to be calendred, and to be layed up in the Theaurie among the Leagues, for their better Suertye.

Also, there are certeyne old Fynes in the Custodie of Cirographer at Bridewel Church, there kept secreatlie, where in Righte the same Fynes ought to be in the keeping of the Lorde Thesaurour, and the Chamberlynes of Theschequier: In which Respect yt myght please your Lordship to call the said Cirographer before you; and to know by what Righte he keapeth the same; and thereupon to geve Order for their Removings, if it shall so seme convenient and lawfull.

Also, it appeareth by Indentures and Writtes, remeyninge in the Custodie of the said Lord Thesaurour and Chamberlynes Deputies, that the Records of the King's-Bench and Common-Pleas, Fynes, Writtes and Assize, ought to be in the Custodie of the said L. Thesaurour and Chamberlynes; and according to the same, are all, or the mooste Parte of the last said Records of all the Kings since the Conquest, untill the moost Part of the Reigne of King Henry VII. in the keaping aforesaid, in another Theaurie, within the Abbaye of Westminster, faire arrayed up in Chestes for that Purpose, where there is Rome enough in Chestes provyded for the reste, if they might be brought in. The same Theaurie is also vaulted with Stone, whereby the said Records should be in gretter Saifetie. It wanteth Reparatyons both in Glasse and Leade. It may please your Lordship to have spedie Regarde thereunto.

Also, where the Recordes of Pleas, Perambulations, and Inquicyons of Forrestes, are presentlie put al up together into Bagges, confusedlie, whereby when a Search is made amongste them, it is an easy Thing for a Straunger, fynding a Role or Leaf, inconvenynt, and agaynst him, to conveye yt awaye, (as yt semethe the like hath bene done) which cannot be missed, because there is no certen Note how many Roles there bee, &c.

And furthermore, the often tossing, rufflynge, searching, and lappinge up of the same Roles, hath, in Effect, so obfusked and worne many of them, as they cannot be well red: For avoiding of which Inconveniences, if yt please your Lordship to appointe one to peruse the same Roles, and to araye them into Shires and certen Forrestes; and the same to be put into Bagges severallye, wrytynge thereon the Countye, the Forreste, and Nombre of the Roles, and how manye Leaves every Role conteyneth: This (we saye) would not only bee a great Preservacyon of the same Records, when no mo Roles should bee opened than concerned the Forrestes, which should be searched, but also would be a redye Helpe to fynde any Thing upon Commaundemente of the Courte of the Eschequier, or otherwyse upon Occacyon.

Also, there are foundrye Records of many Mens Lands in the Realme of England and Wales, as namelye, Court Roles, Auditors Accompts and Parcos, Mises, Accomptes of foundrye Frenche Counties; and also Deeds of Purchase, made by foundrye the Queens Majestie Progenitours, for foundrye their Honours, Manours and Lands, which were very convenient to be perused, and a Repertorie thereof to be made for the spedie fynding thereof upon Commaundement.

The lyke to be donne with foundrye Bookes of Forreyne Accompts, remeyninge in the foresaid Theaurie in the Pallayce.

Also, it appeareth by foundrye Recordes, remeyninge in the said Theaurie, that there hath bene geven Allowance unto the Clerkes and Deputies of the said Lord Thesaurour and Chamberlynes, for the arrayinge and removing of the Recoordes of the Tower, and now latelye in Queen Marie's Tyme, the old Lord Stafforde (beyng one of the Chamberlynes of Theschequier) complained unto the Councell, that in Mr. Boyer's Time certen of the same Records in the Tower were imbecelled, alledging how dangerous a Thing it is to the Queen and to the Realme, that the same were under one Kaye; whereupon the said Lord Stafforde had a Kaye appointed him with Mr. Boyer, which he kept a longe Tyme.

WITHIN this Palace also, towards the South West Side of it, was the Augmentation Office, occasioned by a Court of Augmentations, which was set up by Act of Parliament, upon the Dissolution of Monasteries, whereby those religious Houses, and the Revenues of them were granted to the King. In this Office, being an antient capacious Place, are kept all the Deeds, Instruments and original Writings belonging to the Abbeyes, Priories, &c. and the several Surrenders and Resignations of the respective Abbots and Priors, with the Values of the Lands and Rents of those Foundations; whence much Light may be given into Church Lands, Vicarages, and such like.

THIS Court of Augmentations was erected by Authority of Parliament, 27 Henry VIII. consisting of a Chancellor, Treasurer, Attorney and Solicitor, and all Lands, &c. belonging to the Monasteries, and purchased Lands, were within the Survey and Governance of this Court. This was dissolved, and a new Court of Augmentations was erected by the Letters Patents of the King, 38 H. VIII. Q. Mary, in the first of her Reign, did, by Letters Patents dated Jan. 23, dissolve the said Court, according to Power given her by Act of Parliament holden the same Year: And the next Day, by other Letters Patents, united the same to the Exchequer; which was utterly void, because she had dissolved the same before: And so resolved all the Judges, Dier. 4. Eliz. 16.

St. STEPHEN's Chapel.

THEN for St. Stephen's Chapel, of old Time founded by King Stephen; King John, in the seventh of his Reign, granted to Baldwinus de London, Clerk of his Exchequer, the Chapelship of St. Stephen's at Westminster, &c.

This Chapel was againe since, of a far more curious Workmanship, new built by King Edward III. in the Year 1347, for thirty eight Persons, in that Church, to serve God; to wit, a Dean, twelve secular Canons, thirteen Vicars, four Clerks, five Choristers, two Servitors; to wit, a Verger, and a Keeper of the Chapel. He built [Lodgings] for them from the House of Receipt, along nigh to the Thames, within the same Palace, there to inhabit. And since that, there were also Building for them, betwixt the Clock-House and the Wool-staple, called the Wey-House, still called Chanon-Row.

[Philip, Wife of this King; also was a great Benefactor to the Chanons of this Chapel.]

HE also built to the Use of this Chapel (tho' out of the Palace Court) some Distance West, in the little Sanctuary, a strong Clochard of Stone and Timber, covered with Lead, and placed therein three great Bells, since usually rung at Coronations, Triumphs, Funeral of Princes, and their Obits. Of those Bells Men fabuled, that their Ringing fowed all the Drink in the Town. More, that about the biggest of which was written;

King Edward made mee thirty thousand and three Take me down and weigh mee, and more shall ye find mee.

BUT these Bells being taken down indeed, were found all three not to weigh twenty Thousand.

THE said King Edward endowed this Chapel with Lands to the yearly Value of five hundred Pounds. Doctor John Chambers, the King's Physician, the last Dean of this College, built thereunto a Cloister of curious Workmanship, to the Charges of eleven thousand Marks. This Chapel, or College, at the Suppression, was valued to dispend, in Lands, by the Year, One thousand eighty five Pounds, ten Shillings, five Pence, and was surrendered to King Edward VI.
